Graduation

"In 1901, Indiana Fletcher Williams conceived and began this great institution. How I would like for her to be able to see this today... All of us, parents, teachers, administrators, board members and friends gathered at this ceremony to celebrate your accomplishments...to give you a last measure of guidance...to bid you farewell. Everyone here has been a part of the unique and grand preparation for the independence you are about to experience. Now — it is your turn. You soon will have a new more substantial role in the world. From this time forward Sweet Briar would like you to live your life in a way that vindicates the faith, love and effort that have been invested in you."

Women's Colleges — Seven Decades of Women Achievers

By Dr. M. Elizabeth Tidball
Professor of Physiology
George Washington University
Medical Center

I share space in this issue with two of the finest and brightest women I have been privileged to know, Sister Kathleen Feeley and Nenah Fry. I am always delighted to be in their midst, whether in person (which I obviously prefer) or on the printed page. I have known each of them for many years during which time they have been among that small but feisty band of those who are the most articulate and outspoken advocates of women's colleges. Readers, you are in for a special treat!

Often I am asked to describe "my study". Since I have devoted the majority of my research energies to studying environments for the higher education of women for almost 20 years, it is somewhat disheartening to be asked in the singular! Yet I realize that one study of mine, published in 1973, was in fact a pioneering publication, not only because of its content but also for the very fact of its having gained the editor's nod of acceptance. Recently it was selected as a "Citation Classic" by the Institute for Scientific Information based on the number of times other researchers have referred to it in their scholarly writings and the fact that it has been cited more frequently than any other article ever published in the Educational Record. Still, as experts on women's colleges and the education of women — which you all are — you should be aware that I have performed a number of interrelated research studies which have, in turn, generated some 60 publications.

Because I believe that alumnae of women's colleges should be among the most knowledgeable people in the society with respect to women's education and women's colleges, I have prepared a short piece about my research at the request of your editor. Along with Sister Kathleen's superb article on the continuing role of women's colleges, and President Fry's reaffirmation of SBC's commitment, you will have, all in one place, a mini-seminar which might be called "Women's Colleges: what they have done, why they must prevail, and how Sweet Briar is an ongoing part of the action."

Read, mark and inwardly digest what follows. Carry it around with you in your town bag. Sleep with it under your pillow. Put it next to your checkbook when it's time for annual giving. Reread it regularly and often. And be proud with good reason that you are an alumna of a women's college. Be doubly proud that you are a part of Sweet Briar!

Since the late 1960s, I have been designing and carrying out large scale studies of the baccalaureate origins of women (and sometimes men) who have attained a substantive intellectual or career accomplishment. In doing so I have found that graduates of women's colleges are far more likely than women graduates of coeducational colleges to be cited in Who's Who of American Women for their career achievements, to have earned a research doctorate in the arts and humanities, social sciences and natural sciences, and to have entered an American medical school. It is important to appreciate that these results obtain when institutions of comparable selectivity are compared; thus it is not an apples-and-oranges situation.

In order for me to do this kind of work, it is necessary to have information sources that are national in scope and encompass several years. Such databases must list women and men separately ("students" or "graduates" won't do), and must include the baccalaureate institution of origin, the year of graduation, and the record of some generally accepted accomplishment. Such databases are very rare, but they are very important. When you have constructed lists that include the graduates of all institutions that meet some general criteria established at the outset of the research (for example, all institutions with at least 10 women graduates during a given decade who subsequently earned a science doctorate), you have what is called the universe of all such defined institutions rather than merely a sample. This allows you to say what is the actual situation rather than to state what might be the case based on the behavior of a sample. In addition to using universe data for determining institutional productivities, certain methodological characteristics also assure objectivity and validity: only studying outcomes of women who have actually graduated from college (thereby setting some minimal limits on motivation, academic ability, financial resources, persistence, commitment and the like); including all women graduates for the particular years covered by the study; studying several different kinds of outcomes for differing time periods. When all of these conditions and precautions obtain, the likelihood of biasing the results by some factor always operating in the same direction and to the same extent is truly negligible.

During the seven decades analysed (1910-1979), more than nine million women received baccalaureate degrees. All have figured somewhere in my calculations, and many in more than one study. They, and the colleges and universities from which they have graduated, have been the objects of my inquiries. I call them "my women" and "my schools". It is important to note that the focus of my research has not been upon women's colleges and their graduates; rather, the focus has been upon the baccalaureate origins of achievers. Nonetheless, women's colleges appear and reappear throughout the seven decades and by every measure available as the institutional type most productive of achieving women. This record is unmatched by any other category of educational institution for either women or men.

One might imagine that, knowing of this impressive and unique record, women and parents and higher education professionals would be ardent supporters of women's colleges. One might imagine, but in so doing one would be in error. Over and over again, the communication of the basic finding — that graduates of women's colleges are more than twice as likely as women graduates of coeducational institutions to become achievers — is met with one of two typical responses: Surely that can't be true, you must have done something wrong; or Of course, so what? I suspect that those who refuse to believe have difficulty crediting women or women's institutions or women's research with any kind of positive attributions; while those who off-handedly acknowledge women's colleges' productivity do so in ways that belittle the accomplishment. Both situations bespeak a kind of hostility not only to women's colleges but also to women.

For women's colleges, in their splendid range of sizes and geographies and traditions and particular specializations, are the very essence of what women are all about, that is to say, diversity. Women's colleges personify women in all their wonderful strengths and foibles and certainties and confusions. Thus to deprecate or ignore women's colleges is, in effect, to deprecate or ignore women.

It is in this sense that the continued health of the women's colleges is important to all women who participate in higher education, whether or not they choose to teach or study in the environment of a women's college. For as the women's colleges go, so too goes the education of women wherever they may be. It is well to remember that throughout history and across all cultures, women have regularly and consistently been the chief and often only supporters and sustainers of girls and women in whatever tasks are assigned or undertaken. The women's colleges continue this legacy by being institutional models for the education of women and by providing the most nurturant environment in all of higher education for developing, testing and rewarding women's talents. The treatment of women's colleges — by women, academic professionals, the press, the wider society — is thus a bellwether for what can be the expected societal concept and treatment of women generally. Understanding and affirming the contributions of women's colleges is thus an important responsibility of all, both women and men, who would join together in building an equitable and humane society. It is that complex. It is that simple.

A Continuing Role for Women's Colleges

By Sister Kathleen Feeley,
S.S.N.D.

President and Professor of English
The College of Notre Dame of Maryland

When an excellent women's college opts for coeducation, the academic community of which I am a member pauses for reflection and introspection. Is the fact that fewer girls are choosing women's colleges a commentary on the innate value of such an education, or a reaction to cultural forces in this post-women's-lib era? Do young girls think that women's colleges are shrill proponents of feminism? Or cultural anachronisms in a unisex society? How can we address such misconceptions?

Let's look at the facts. To this day, strong evidence proves that a women's college has a positive, permanent effect on its graduates that is quite unlike that of a coed institution. How is this so?

Women's colleges counteract life

conditions which have negative impact on girls growing up, and on women as adults. We all understand, and most of us deplore, the cultural weight of centuries which has kept women less educated, less motivated, less self-actualized, and therefore less influential in the corporate, political, educational, and church worlds.

Women's colleges are counter-cultural. They counteract a society which assumes that girls and women will settle for less: less star-gazing, less salary, less serious attention. How do they do this? In such colleges, women lead; the curriculum recognizes women's achievements; the faculty single-mindedly works at creating a campus environment which inspires, supports, and challenges women.

Being devoted exclusively to women's futures enables a women's college to teach expectation and aspiration just as directly as it teaches any course in the curriculum. The students themselves are an integral part of the teaching plan. Low aspirations and insecurity are replaced by a realization that ability and potential are not limited by a person's sex.

A coed institution is forced to educate with the assumption that self-confidence and ambition have been sufficiently developed in a student's personality. Since it cannot create a different teaching climate for male and female students, it must concentrate on addressing their shared needs.

A subtle barrier to women's self-realization is the female tendency to defer. Tradition still influences women, even those with self-confidence, to defer to men; many men expect it. Centuries of living with two sets of standards — one for women and another for men — have restricted both sexes.

A coed institution is a microcosm of society; therefore, it reflects current sociological mores. In coed classes, as a general rule, young women continue to defer to young men, often unconsciously. Despite its awareness of this problem, the coed college is obligated to its total student body and not to correcting the sociological obstacles in the paths of one segment of that student body.

A women's college does not permit outdated mores to exist in the classroom or on the campus. Women learn by experience and example that deference is not a prerequisite in working with men; that they can take the lead without fear of alienation; that men have the right to defer without fear of losing status.

As a society, let us not abandon lightly what has served us so well in the past. The positive, permanent effect of their education on the graduates of women's colleges has been researched and is documented. Such graduates are more likely to succeed in careers than their counterparts with degrees from coeducational institutions.

They are twice as likely to continue education in professional schools and seek higher degrees. They are two or three times more likely to choose non-traditional fields — mathematics, chemistry, and biology. Such accomplishments as these are logical outcomes when self-confidence, leadership, ability, and high aspirations have been developed during the years at a women's college.

At this time in history when our world needs a new vision of peacemaking; a new determination that technology will be servant, not master; and a new appreciation of the values of family life, the mission of women's colleges to educate and inspire women to be effective leaders is more vital than ever.

I call on the opinion-makers of our society to inform themselves about this valuable educational option and to influence others.

When Kathleen Beres, Maryland's teacher-astronaut finalist, accepted the President's Medal from her alma mater, the College of Notre Dame, she credited her high aspirations, and her success in achieving them to her education in a women's college. College-bound girls will find that women's colleges are as relevant to them today as they were to countless women in the past. They need society's encouragement to explore this educational option.

Sweet Briar: A Liberal Arts College for Women

By Nenah E. Fry
President and Professor of History
Sweet Briar College

When asked about Sweet Briar, we quickly respond, "Sweet Briar is a liberal arts college for women."

How smoothly these familiar words glide from the tongue. Printed on a page, how easily they are assimilated by the eye and how quickly our minds comprehend their meaning. Beyond this, we immediately realize that these words connote more than a simple description. We understand them as defining.

Though the descriptive power of these words remains unchanged from decade to decade, their definition necessarily must be changed as the times change. Inevitably, each generation must reinterpret the meaning and meaningfulness of a liberal arts education for women. This has been true in the past, and it is a valid task for us today — especially now, when some assert that society's need for women's colleges has waned.

Before addressing the issue of Sweet Briar as a college "for women," I shall comment upon three major difficulties posed by being a "liberal arts" college in 1986.

Various national studies make us aware that greater numbers of college-age men and women are more pragmatic than ever before: many pursue a college education simply to enhance their standing in the "job market." Thus, they prize a narrow, rather than a liberal, education.

Often cited as evidence for this trend is an annual survey of our nation's entering freshmen which asks them about their goals. The percentage of freshmen who have chosen "being well-off financially" as an important or very important goal has increased from 40% in 1967 to 70% in 1983. On the other hand, the percentage of freshmen who selected "developing a meaningful philosophy of life" as a significant goal has dropped from over 80% in 1967 to less than 45% in 1983.

Thus, liberal arts colleges such as Sweet Briar, whose raison d'être is to help students formulate their own means of meeting life and of becoming useful members of society, must give attention to conflicting priorities. On the one hand, our program must attract students who may not be in full sympathy with our goals. On the other, we must be sure that those students who attend the College are encouraged or challenged to develop altruism and a meaningful philosophy of life, regardless of their predisposition. Finally, we must continue to find ways to support "careerism" which are compatible with our educational philosophy.

In addition to working with students whose values may be significantly different is the challenge posed by their changed preparation for academic work at the college level.

Professor Franklin L. Ford has delineated the problem forcefully:

"Some students...arrive seriously underprepared in English, foreign languages, history or mathematics, and not infrequently in all those subjects. The Committee on Admissions and Financial Aids, rightly impressed by these individuals' motivation and promise, simply has to gamble on their ability, once in college, to make up for lost time; and the gamble pays off in a gratifyingly large percentage of cases. Nevertheless, the diversion of effort into essentially remedial learning and the resultant foreclosing or at least postponement of other curricular possibilities imposes a tax one can't help feeling sorry to see levied against the progress of undergraduates."

All institutions, from the most selective to the relatively nonselective, are feeling the effects mentioned by Ford, a professor at Harvard and dean, from 1962-70, of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. His remarks, written two years ago, refer to Harvard undergraduates.

Although there has always been a learning gap between student and teacher, I fear that its character has changed: it is a qualitative gap, a cultural discontinuity, of sorts. We no longer can count on young people to read books! This does not mean that students possess less innate intelligence than before, but it does mean that Sweet Briar must acculturate them to a world which prizes the printed word. Even as we ask students to bridge the gap, we must seek ways of meeting them halfway. We must consider changing our methods of teaching, especially in entry-level courses. We must become more aware of the implications for learning and teaching held by the culture gap between student and teacher.

Liberal arts colleges also are concerned about the changed attitudes of faculty who bring with them the values and emphases of the highly selective research institutions in which they have been trained.

Truly great teachers always have been rare. Today is no different from the past in that respect. In the past, there always have been individuals who found the teaching environment of the small liberal arts college preferable to that of the university. I am grateful that the same can be said today. However, we may face a situation in which fewer instructors teaching in liberal arts colleges have had the benefit of a genuinely liberal education themselves. Graduate schools encourage them to fragment knowledge into specialties within disciplines. Without integrated and cohesive curricula, liberal arts colleges are in danger of becoming impoverished universities offering a paltry smorgasbord of courses when compared with universities. Far from "upgrading" the liberal arts curriculum or making it more "serious," increased specialization can damage the quality of teaching and learning which takes place.

Michael O'Keefe, president of the Consortium for the Advancement of Private Higher Education, well articulates the potential problem:

"Not only does teaching lose importance, but the whole manner and content of that teaching becomes dominated by the values of the research model...As a result, the undergraduate experience becomes one of being force-fed the "basics." Information, definitions, and fundamental concepts are emphasized.

Broader insights and most of the exciting and unresolved research questions of a given field are postponed until graduate school... The overloading of undergraduate courses with information, as well as the emphasis on academic specialization, works against integrated curricula that emphasize the broader concepts and skills needed by the well-educated person. Our colleges themselves often play right into the hands of students who clamor for highly specialized training rather than a broad liberal education."

Concerns such as these three must occupy our attention. We need to assess the effect of such national trends upon Sweet Briar — the fact of our being "idiosyncratic" is no surety that we are immune from them. Often, we have a tendency to grapple with tangible problems, especially those having clear financial implications, such as coping with the decreased number of traditional-aged students, or protecting the purchasing power of the endowment, or remodeling campus facilities. Of course, we must devise strategies to address this class of concerns, but we should not allow ourselves to become preoccupied with them to the exclusion of recognizing subtle changes in attitudes and values brought by our students and faculty. We must take stock of cultural and societal changes, and either be "in synch" with them or assert, forcefully and persuasively, why we stand "out of synch."

I am very optimistic that we at Sweet Briar have both the energy and the visceral fortitude to embark successfully upon the process of introspection and self-assessment needed for this task. In that light, we have begun a comprehensive planning process which will be in its intensive phase next year. Matters that are both tangible and intangible, financial and attitudinal, comprise the agenda. The purpose of the study will be to set directions for Sweet Briar during the next three to five years. Though the road ahead is challenging, I am looking forward to the prospect of setting our course.

Chief among the issues to be studied is what it means today to be a college for women. This question would be of the most urgent concern to us even if Goucher College's decision had not cast it into bold relief. While I cannot judge the appropriateness of Goucher's decision, I do certainly quarrel with one of the stated arguments on which it was made: that opportunities for advancement now are open equally to men and women; thus, women's colleges are passé. Such a rationale simply does not square with the evidence.

In fact, very recent evidence, compiled by NOW's Legal Defense and Education Fund, indicates that the unfair stereotyping of girls' and boys' roles continues to be widespread in our nation's elementary schools (80% of which are administered by male principals), despite the good intentions of teachers:

"Teachers ask boys complex, open-ended questions requiring abstract reasoning, creative thought, and extended answers. Girls, on the other hand, are more often asked basic memory-type questions requiring docile absorption of material. ...Boys emerge from this environment ready to move ahead and surpass their female classmates. Girls bring to their further education and their career plans a habit of playing it safe and a collection of nagging doubts about their own abilities which often persist in contradiction to their exceptional grades."

A very depressing statistic which results, in part, from this environment is that of the most promising and brightest high school graduates who do not go on to attend college, the great majority — 75 to 90 percent — are women. Clearly, even in the waning years of the twentieth century, our schools have not overcome society's bias against the educational development of girls and young women. Colleges for women still have a role.

We know that women still are disadvantaged in the workplace, and they earn less than their male counterparts. Though greater numbers of girls and young women are entering managerial, technical and professional careers, their salaries are not yet commensurate with men's. Moreover, there is evidence that just as young women have been discouraged, in the past, from the serious study of science and mathematics, so are they being discouraged now from the serious study of computing. Even in higher education, which likes to think of itself as egalitarian, women do not fare well: nationally, they comprise only 17% of all tenured or tenure track positions. Today, at Yale University, where I did my graduate study, only 17 (5.3%) of the 320 tenured arts and science faculty are women. Using another index, female college presidents are increasing in number at only 14 each year, and, at the rate we are going, there will not be an equal number of women and men presidents in U.S. colleges and universities until the year 2070!

Though the picture certainly is getting brighter, by no means have we arrived at a golden age for women. There still is a need for women's colleges to address, and redress, the inequities which women face. We have a long way to go.

And what of Sweet Briar, "a liberal arts college for women," in all of this?

It is my firm belief that the traditional claims and benefits of a liberal arts education, for women and for men, are valid still today. Likewise, I believe that colleges for women are needed in today's world — they are powerful institutions that dramatically change the lives of most of the young women who attend them. What Sweet Briar must do is to ensure that the promised claims and benefits of the liberal arts college for women actually are realized. I am confident that the process of self-study, which I mentioned earlier, will enable us more nearly to reach this goal. Although I shall not offer a "blueprint" to be followed by the College, I am pleased to share with you some thoughts and views which I, too, shall test and refine next year as we make plans for the future.

I firmly believe that the College must pay greater attention to the freshman year so that it functions more effectively as a "buffer" between what has been expected of a student in high school and what will be expected, academically and socially, during the college years. We should think about the skills and attitudes we wish freshmen to develop, assess the level relative to those at which the typical freshman enters college, and fashion entry-level courses and co-curricular programs which will increase their sensitivity in the areas specified. In addition, we must look at the senior year and evaluate the recently devised senior "exercise," such as a seminar, colloquium, or special research project, which asks a student to make a synthesis of her course work in the major field. We should evaluate the nature and quality of that synthesizing experience and make needed adjustments or refinements.

We should examine life outside the classroom with the purpose of finding opportunities to support teaching and learning. Perhaps we can devise activities that will bridge the gap between academic work and what was once "club" activities. For example, it might be feasible to begin a student-run business that would attract students whose interests are far-ranging — economics, design, writing, marketing. In addition, we should study the opportunities and the limitations which our society asks women to face and then create appropriate campus experiences allowing our students to preview them.

Given the fact that society has begun to value women's social contribution outside the home, colleges for women must develop more systematically their students' capacity for public leadership. Now, more than ever, young women need to assume greater responsibility for their own actions, in the classroom and in the social aspects of life at a residential college. A college is a community, and it represents a microcosm of the social and political world in which adults live. We must use its environment to the fullest advantage to help young women learn how to live wisely and maturely in a community.

In the last 40 years, the options open to women have indeed grown. That is good. Yet, along with the greater variety and even richness, perhaps, have come greater complexity and a tension between sometimes conflicting priorities. The decades ahead will be no less complex than those past. I have no doubt, then, that our society will need the liberal arts college that truly "delivers on its promises." Moreover, I am certain that women, as in the past, will achieve parity with men gradually.

Thus, we shall continue to need colleges that consistently and deliberately support the aspirations of young women. Although women's progress has been impressive, the road ahead is still long and steep.

Motivated by these beliefs and aware of the human and financial resources enjoyed by Sweet Briar, I look forward to the challenge of helping the institution to be the finest "liberal arts college for women" that it can be.

Finding the Woman of the '90s in the Girl of the '80s

By Alice H. Love
Director of Admissions
Sweet Briar College

The freshmen entering Sweet Briar this September represent the Class of 1990. For those of us who just recently have gotten the hang of writing 198__ on our checks, the dawning of yet another decade comes as something of a shock.

As we move into the next decade, a great challenge to colleges and universities is to recognize that the students who are currently college-bound have been exposed to societal norms and expectations which are substantially different than those which were faced by their predecessors as little as 10 years ago. We must respond to these dramatic differences with appropriate changes in the way we approach and work with students. While the demographic studies show us that there will be a decline of up to 40% (depending on geographic region) in the number of 18-year-olds in the population between now and the early 1990s, we also are informed that this group is mostly nonwhite, and often represents the first generation to attend college in a given family. In order to carry out responsibly our charge to identify, recruit and educate young women at Sweet Briar College, we constantly must evaluate our information about who these students are, what they seek, and what, reasonably, they can expect from Sweet Briar and the world at large. Ultimately, the ability of those in the Admissions Office to understand the priorities, goals and concerns of these young women will determine the viability of the College's admissions policies. As the competition among colleges to attract capable students increases, the role of admissions staff member as counselor becomes even more crucial.

At Sweet Briar, the Admissions Office always has taken the time to get to know the individual applicants well. Typically, a young woman will request information from Sweet Briar during her junior year in high school. From that point onward, she will receive a minimum of nine, and sometimes as many as 20, letters and hand-written notes from members of the admissions staff. We encourage a visit to campus and a personal interview or, if that is not possible, a meeting with an Alumnae Admissions Representative in the student's local area. Also there may be phone calls from students and parents directly to the Admissions Office, which we encourage by having a toll-free number. Our intention is to achieve a sense of the individual, so that when we read that young woman's application, she is a very real human being to us.

Sweet Briar is a small college and, as such, is affected substantially by the character of each incoming class. It is for this reason that our admissions policies must be more accurate and thoughtful than those of a larger institution. Each class we welcome to campus in the fall will leave its mark on the College in the priorities of its members, and the activities each one chooses to pursue. Think for a moment of the impact of a decision to recruit and admit exclusively cellists, or tennis players. It would not take long to alter radically the character of the College, making it either a music school or a college known solely for its athletic program. So we take direction from the faculty, alumnae and administration of the College, and attempt to attract the proper balance of individuals, a lively and interesting conglomerate of young women who will add new dimensions to the College's mission while revering the traditions of the past.

The relationship between a student and her college should be one of mutual enlightenment and fulfillment, so the process which leads to college choice needs to be introspective on the part of both the student and the college. We expect a young woman to research each college option carefully, but also to think seriously about her needs and expectations. In the Admissions Office, we must be careful not to lose our perspective on what Sweet Briar really offers; continual contact with faculty and current students helps keep us informed and in tune with the College. But beyond this, we must know the girl of the '80s: What motivates her? What are her dreams? Her priorities? Her fears? It is important that we not be bound to a quickly receding past in our attempts to evaluate the contemporary student.

Let us consider the girl of the late '80s. She is a young woman who has been exposed to a rapidly changing array of facts and social mores, and who must look forward to a future which will continue to besiege her with new information. While pundits bemoan the fact that students today will watch more television in a year than their parents will watch in a lifetime, the students must contemplate a world in which errors on the part of national leaders no longer lead just to war, but to mutual, and perhaps global destruction. There are very few "givens" for the girl of the 1980s, and there will be even fewer for the woman of the 1990s.

In 1897, Emile Durkheim proposed the concept of anomie, which he described as a state of normlessness, caused by radical changes in social norms, or "social deregulation". It is indeed a quicksand world which students today must confront; a high incidence of divorce, lack of absolutes in virtually any form of knowledge, changing attitudes toward sexual activity and drug use, and the shift from the tactile permanency of books to the fleeting images of video, all have conspired to give the young person of the '80s the sense that nothing is definite and all things change. As they look toward the future, they are promised only an acceleration in the rate of change.

Institutions of higher education have an opportunity and a responsibility to help young people make some sense out of this miasma of change. Liberal education always has been, and will continue to be, the framework within which even the most startling innovations may be comprehended. For women in particular, the 1990s will bring heavy burdens of responsibility, as they attempt to redefine value in home life and forge ahead as productive members of a society which cannot survive without their wisdom and labor. To them will fall the task of defining the role of women in the 21st century; solidifying the gains in independence and respect for which the women of the 20th century labored so hard, and moving on toward an honest balance of influence in the areas of science, politics, and management. They will have more choices about the direction and content of their lives than any preceding generation. Above all, these young women must have an extraordinary level of confidence in themselves.

In our quest for the "right" Sweet Briar students, it is important that we not be influenced by the shriekings of media hype. Although we are aware of the implications of the demographic decline, we have no intention of being railroaded into some of the wildly inappropriate recruiting techniques we have seen in the wake of the media blitz. Nor will we stray from our commitment to know our applicants well, making admissions decisions on the students' full merits, and not only on the basis of facile statistics which are the object of rampant misuse by the uninformed and unethical. We know the strengths and virtues of Sweet Briar, and will continue to offer them to the young women who are best able to capitalize on them.

I believe that the girl of the '80s is aware of the importance of her role in the '90s and the 21st century, but we also know from research that she doubts the capability of a liberal arts education and, more specifically, a women's college education, to prepare her for these responsibilities. Our most difficult task is to convince these young women and their parents that Sweet Briar is an intelligent choice for college. For all that we publish information about our programs and opportunities for internships, leadership positions, and personal growth through independent work with faculty members, we know that the most convincing argument for the effectiveness of Sweet Briar in producing intelligent, dynamic, successful women is the alumnae. A prominent or respected alumna is living proof that there is value in a Sweet Briar education, proof that has a measurable impact on parents and students alike. It is for this reason that the Admissions Office recently has sought to increase the role of the alumnae in the recruitment effort. We welcome those who feel they can give time to being Alumnae Admissions Representatives, but we ask also that each Sweet Briar alumna remember that there are occasions when you may help our effort simply by virtue of letting it be known that you attended Sweet Briar. We must never underestimate the influence of the role model on a young woman who is about to make her first major independent decision — which college to attend.

The author, Alice H. Love

I look forward to working with the intrepid young women who will be the scientists, mothers, politicians, humanists, professionals and visionaries of the 21st century. Sweet Briar is especially well suited to the task of preparing these young women to comprehend their futures and to make the hard choices that lie there. Our joy will be to see that our belief in women's education will be reinforced by their deeds as future alumnae, in keeping with the fine traditions of the past.

To the Class of '86 from the Class of '72 with Love

By Trish Neale Van Clief '72

As I arrived with my family to celebrate my sister Corinne's graduation from Sweet Briar, remembering my own experiences there brought to mind an old Sweet Tone's tune:

"We've got a song that is all our own...

We sing what we choose
Be it ballad, rock or blues..."

We walked into the Quad and I remembered when the campus had been "our" own, had belonged to the class of '72. Around me were the excited young women of the class of '86, full of memories and accomplishments of their own. I wondered — would I know their song? The ballad, rock and blues of Sweet Briar 1986? Or were the girls, the campus, the faculty now characterized by a different tune, unfamiliar and alien to this returning alum?

I listened, part of the swirl of parents and friends, siblings and boyfriends all moving in the quick excited rhythm that signifies a momentous occasion approaching.

"Come to my room, I want you to meet Pam!"

"The yearbook is great — come see it!"

"Pray it doesn't rain — I can't pack my whole family into Babcock."

"I want you to meet Professor so-and-so."

"We gotta get out of this place!"

"Mom — look — that's the dairy. I won't miss those cows, that's for sure!"

"No, this is the east dell, that's the west dell."

"I have to pay my bookstore bill or I can't graduate!"

"Can I borrow some safety pins? My hem's coming out of my robe."

"Which way do we move the tassel on our hats? Right or left?"

We took our seats and looked and listened. The graduates processed down the steps from Benedict, past the old Refectory (now the Anne Gary Pannell Center), past Gray and Randolph, turning in front of the Chapel to head up the center aisle between rows of folding chairs. They walked slowly, heads proudly bearing caps so eagerly placed and pinned a few minutes ago. The black robes, plain and uniform, covered the unseen colors of distinctive personalities. Gone were the decorative buttons and slogans worn throughout the senior year. Smooth splashes of orange and green, red and blue (ribbons denoting a junior year abroad) and the pale pink and green of the hoods of the BA candidates added simple elegance. Family members strained their necks to find their graduate among the sea of caps and gowns. Commencement had begun.

As The Reverend Susan Lehman read the lovely invocation, thanking God for the safe arrival of family and friends, I thought I had never seen a prettier campus. How many times must I have had that thought when I lived here? Sarah Porter Boehmler '65 addressed the graduates, exhorting them "from this day forward" to work harder than ever before, overcoming setbacks, maintaining friendships, being "winners." Hadn't Julia de Coligny '34 said these things to us when she addressed us in May of '72? Dean Robin Bowers read each graduate's name and President Nenah Fry's smile was broad and proud when she handed each graduate her diploma. I remembered the fondness and pride in President Whiteman's face as the class of '72 received theirs. In her address, Class President '86 Harriet McNair commented on the changes at Sweet Briar, both physical and "within ourselves." Sweet Briar has "imbedded in us an individuality" that has allowed us to develop our own talents, but also as a class, "as a whole, we have given." Student Government President Beth Conner called to mind the Sweet Briar traditions that bind us together. Beth and her classmates, my youngest sister among them, not only "survived" but "thrived" at Sweet Briar as they developed their individual potential. I listened to Beth and thought that surely Georgie Vairo and I must have reminded our class that the class of 1972 had been, in Beth's words, the "full force" initiator of dramatic results at Sweet Briar, that our class, "as a whole," had made a difference. When, emotion finally straining their earnest voices, Beth and Harriet thanked their parents, their friends, their teachers, I remembered the full hearts my classmates and I shared as we recounted the blessings and privileges of a Sweet Briar education. Sarah Boehmler had called on the class of '86 to "meet the obligation of the educated." President Fry bid them farewell asking them to face the task of freedom of responsibility, "For unto whom much is given, of him shall much be required." I thought of my classmates — now committed wives and mothers, civic volunteers, dedicated doctors, lawyers, social workers, educators. Applauding the Sweet Briar women of the class of 1986 I knew they, too, were equal to the task.

Commencement was ending. The graduates stood to follow the faculty out. The professors formed two lines, one facing the other. Through this channel walked the graduates of the class of '86, receiving handshakes and congratulations from the people who first opened the doors that would lead to this new beginning. It was time to find my sister — to embrace, to celebrate, to share! I searched for a blond head wearing a fourteen year old cap, my old cap, now hers.

Dear sisters of the class of '86, you came to Sweet Briar and made it YOUR Sweet Briar. You've "got a song and it's all (your) own" and we are proud to hear you sing it. It is the strong, sweet melody of confidence. It is the exciting counterpart of individuals simultaneously discovering and nurturing different talents. It is the full harmony of involvement with diverse and loving friends. It is the strong, steady rhythm of determination as disappointments and setbacks are faced and vanquished. It is a song known to any Sweet Briar graduate, and now you know it too. Be it ballad, rock or blues, we sing it together.

Congratulations! And welcome — Sweet Briar Alums.

Renew, Revive, and Remember: Reunion '86

By Byrd W. Stone '56

They're gone. I really can't believe it. I had been in a state ranging from wild anticipation to downright dread for a solid year, and now the moment had come and gone, and I was left standing in the Quadrangle in a light drizzle as the last of the "reunioners" (reunionettes?) packed up their cars and prepared for the trip home. I knew from past experience that within a few hours it would seem as though they had never been here. I would drive around the campus later in the evening, and the look and feel of it would be no different than it had been two days earlier. It wouldn't seem possible that 500 women from all stages and walks of life would have come and gone and nothing would have visibly changed. It would be as if it had never happened, except for the memories, and even those already were beginning to have an unreal quality about them.

Reunion 1986. My 30th — that ordinal being the cause of much of my aforementioned dread. I never would have come if I hadn't already been here. Then I wouldn't have had to admit that I had been out of college for 30 years. Even my own mother gasped when I mentioned which reunion it was. Now that hurt!

Reunion 1986, with the largest number of alumnae returning in the College's history. Our class, 1956, had 30 return...certainly an appropriate number for the reunion we were celebrating. That was better than when we graduated. The class of '56 had 59 seniors. I was all for killing three off (no particular ones, mind you), but I couldn't get any cooperation. The class of '36, celebrating their 50th (and I thought 30 was traumatic!), had 22 class members present, and they all looked terrific. If someone would promise me that we would look like that 20 years from now, maybe I could cope. The only trouble is, I don't look as great as they did NOW! What hope is there for me in 20 years? The classes of '41, '61 and '81 had 36 return, '76 had 53 returnees and the class of '71 had 62 members here! Why, I wondered, did so many alumnae come back this particular year? Were classes ending in "1" and "6" more gung ho than others?...more needful of a trip away from home, back to where one knew with a relative degree of certainty what each day would bring? Or were some afraid that Sweet Briar was changing, as so many other colleges have changed, and they wanted to return just one more time to see it and remember before it becomes too painful to do so?

Whatever the reason, come they did, à la Lewis Carroll... "And thick and fast they came at last, and more, and more, and more." From Alaska, from Amherst, from Denver and Dedham, from Savannah and Seattle, by train, plane and car they rolled in, ready to experience the ultimate reunion — one of the best planned and executed the College has ever had. It opened with an Alumna Lecture, which I might have attended if it hadn't been titled, "Older Women: Expectations and Challenges in the 21st Century." I heard it was excellent, but really, who under 85 is going to admit they are an "older woman"? The "other woman", maybe, but never an OLDER woman! Next on the program, a well-received administrative panel commenting on "Sweet Briar Today", and then on to class picnics. I had invited my class to my house in Amherst for cocktails before the picnic and as I looked in the mirror (something I do as little as possible), I couldn't help but think that while my classmates were out buying new clothes and hairdos to ameliorate those 30 years, I frantically was buying mulch to cover a multitude of yardly sins and sweating over the lawnmower. I do have my priorities. Unfortunately they don't do much to enhance my great beauty or cover the wrinkles. At 5:00 I was still pasting photos in the class scrapbook which I hadn't started organizing until the night before. Thankfully a thoughtful early arrival came in and relieved me of the difficult job of deciding who was who, since I had mixed them up in my frantic efforts to get the house looking presentable. Since she had transferred into SBC she had a bit of trouble, but I figured after 30 years who would know the difference anyway?

The picnic itself this year was gorgeous! Since ours was off campus, Ann Reams delivered it herself. Now that's dedication! Everything arrived in bright green market baskets adorned with big pink ribbons. Aside from a delicious repast, there were bright green plates and eating utensils, lovely pink napkins and a pink tablecloth. I mean, anything would have tasted good with school spirit like this! While those of us young things celebrating reunions of less than 50 years picnicked from market baskets, the class of '36 was entertained in style at Sweet Briar House, and everyone celebrating reunions beyond their 50th at the Deanery. This latter group has been dubbed the "Daisy Chain Association". Certainly they deserve a special name...I can hardly wait...

Saturday dawned another beautiful day, clear and cool, without any of the Amherstian humidity which always seems to arrive for anything important, or unimportant for that matter. This was the day of the Alumnae Convocation where reports of Reunion Gifts and class skits were presented. Babcock Auditorium was festive, with sections for the classes to sit together marked by bunches of brightly colored balloons. The skits were varied, as were the amounts of the Reunion Gifts. Our class thought we were pretty clever. As we were sitting in my living room at 11:00 the night before with no prospect of a skit, our able president just happened to have in her possession a poem that we had composed for our 25th. I'm told I was the author, but I had little recollection of it. No, I'll never make the 50th, at least not mentally! However, if I didn't remember writing it, we were relatively sure that no one else would remember hearing it, so with a few brilliant revisions (like 30th for 25th), we were ready to go. Actually we figured that this can become rather like a tradition...every five years we'll just change the numbers.

The Reunion Gifts announcements were for the most part spectacular. Although our class pointed out that it was not in line with "good taste and good judgment" and furthermore "tacky" to talk about money (ours was not one of the spectacular gifts), we had to admit a grudging admiration for the class of '46 which raised the largest unrestricted class gift in the College's history, $102,900! We even quietly admired the class of '36 with the largest 50th Reunion gift in the College's history, $76,586 in unrestricted gifts and $57,749 in capital and endowment gifts. After all, they had had 50 years to save all that money. The 25th Reunion gift of $79,686, the largest 25th Reunion gift ever, brought sickly smiles to our faces. This was a little too close to home. Maybe one of them won the New York State Lottery or the Publisher's Clearinghouse Sweepstakes or some such thing. However it was the class of '71 that really brought us to our knees, with a 15th Reunion gift of $20,265, a record for a 15th Reunion class. I mean, these children are still in their thirties, and have to go and produce something like this. I guess we really were the "silent generation", financially as well as otherwise!

At any rate, the festive air prevailed, as we picked up our balloons and paraded (to the accompaniment of bagpipes) to Prothro Commons for a luncheon honoring the Reunion classes, and spiced with a tribute to retiring Vice President and Treasurer Peter V. Daniel, by Nancy Godwin Baldwin '57. Her reminiscences of Peter's first year at Sweet Briar, when a major drought caused him to limit our showers to three a week, brought giggles from many of us who remembered those "aromatic" times all too well. After lunch a variety of options was offered, and classmates scattered to take part in many of the same types of activities they had enjoyed as students — horseback riding at the Riding Center, browsing at the Book Shop or visiting with faculty members in the area.

Saturday evening, dressed in our finery, we attended a cocktail party in the Quad for alumnae and faculty. I never know which I am at these functions for faculty and alums. Should I wear a name tag on each side? Actually when I'm wearing an alumnae name tag and talking with colleagues, I usually "gracefully" hold my hand over the '56 so as not to advertise that I'm on my way over the hill. My age is safe. As yet I have not perfected doing this without looking deformed, but I shall continue to practice. The candlelight dinner in Prothro was lovely, and afterwards, back to the Quad, where a surprisingly good band played for the rest of the evening, as we all wandered from group to group sitting and talking. Actually, some of us were wandering because we couldn't find the rest of our classmates, who turned out to be only a few tables away. It was dark, and these new glasses...

Although by Sunday morning the ranks had dwindled due to plane schedules and family commitments, the Chapel was full for a lovely service led by Sweet Briar's chaplain, The Reverend Susan Lehman. Her sermon, tying in Trinity Sunday with Reunion was so very appropriate, and the choir made up of members of classes from '36 to '81 sounded as though they had rehearsed for weeks. I still cannot believe how professional they sounded. After the service, and a lecture on "Greek and Roman Coins in the Sweet Briar Collection", Reunion 1986 came to a close with luncheon in Sweet Briar Gardens. Thanks to a resourceful (and quick-moving) husband of one of my classmates, the remaining members of the class of '56 settled on the porch of Sweet Briar House, just as the clouds opened up and a steady drizzle began. We hardly felt any guilt at all as we sat and watched other classes try to eat with one hand and protect their reunion hairdos with the other...and I only had to knock down two members of the Daisy Chain Association to get my nice dry seat!

Reunion 1986. As I look back over this review of the weekend, I realize that I haven't even mentioned so many activities that were made available to us...bird and wildflower walks, swimming, bus tours, alumnae art and book exhibits, to mention but a few. But most important of all, and yet the most difficult to describe, is always the renewal of old friendships, and the strengthening of those which have developed after graduating. Time brings changes in values and interests as well as bodies, and traits in classmates we didn't necessarily appreciate as undergraduates become very important to us as we grow older. Each Reunion I find more common meeting grounds with those I was unlikely to "socialize" with 30 some years ago. I suppose it is this, as well as the shared memories, that makes us keep returning to the always beautiful Sweet Briar.

Reunion 1986 or 1996 or 2001. Whatever the year, whatever the individual reasons for returning, let's hope that all of us, 5th year reunioners or Daisy Chain members, will keep coming back to the one place where for a brief time we can forget our worries, and just Renew, Revive, and Remember, some of the happiest moments in our lives.

Reunion Wedding Bells

By Martha Mansfield Clement '48

The west parlor of Sweet Briar House was the scene on Thursday evening, May 22, 1986 of a very special occasion! Florence Woelfel Elston, Class of 1921, of Chicago, Illinois and Gordon Beemer of Crawfordsville, Indiana were united in marriage by Chaplain Susan C. Lehman.

Florence and Gordon had decided to get married but had not determined where the ceremony would take place. The ring had been purchased in Palm Beach, Florida and the groom said he was "tired of carrying it around". Once they knew they were coming to Sweet Briar for Florence's 65th Reunion, they decided to combine these two very important events.

When Gordon called to inquire about getting a wedding license, he discovered that the only requirement is $20 if both bride and groom are from out-of-state and over 18 years of age. Gordon was intrigued. He concluded that the blood test is not required in Virginia because "they're all bluebloods".

Edith Durrell Marshall '21 arrived early on campus for Reunion also and was one of the invited guests for the ceremony. If you remember, Edith and Florence were pictured together in the Winter '85 issue of the Alumnae Magazine at the dedication of the Anne Gary Pannell Center.

Florence will be remembered by many friends and members of Sweet Briar's Boards of Directors and Overseers as one of the few people to attend all five Recognition Dinners that have been held in conjunction with off-campus meetings of Sweet Briar's Boards.

Perhaps Edith Marshall and Betty Morris Coleman '21 were thinking during Reunion, "Wedding bells are breaking up this ole gang of mine."

Reunion '86

The New York Times carries a great number of articles about the problems of the private colleges today. Some of the problems it talks about are demographic or social. Will there be a large enough supply of promising students to populate all the colleges or will the smaller colleges have to settle for the lesser achievers? Are women's colleges the victims of their own good work; have they been too successful at training young women for competitive careers; have the younger women who are coming along gotten the idea now that all the equal-opportunity goals have been achieved, so that they don't need the training to be competitive?

Many more of the problems relate to money. These include: the struggle to keep tuitions at levels that families can pay... the squeeze between income and expenses... faculty salaries that have to be kept competitive, and funding that has to be found to match. The Times sees a lot of problems, and it raises alarms.

But, today, on this campus we get the feeling that the problems at Sweet Briar, at least, are under control. We have a choice population of students, a lively, scholarly, stimulating president and dean, faculty and staff, and a crowd of supportive alumnae.

We, the alumnae, are the best part of all. We are the spirit, the tradition, the personality of Sweet Briar. We are also the financial backbone. Over $1 million a year of the essential annual funding of Sweet Briar College comes from the outright gifts of alumnae. Almost half of that comes from the gifts of these Reunion classes.

All of the classes here today have done remarkable things. All of you have achieved goals that you never dreamed you could reach. Sweet Briar thrives because of you. The gifts — and the emotional support — of its alumnae are Sweet Briar's strength, the source of its future.

—From a speech by Helen Sanford '42, National Reunion Gifts Chairman, at Reunion Convocation, May 24, 1986.

Over the past six years, Sweet Briar's Reunion Giving Program has blossomed into a major source of funding for Sweet Briar. For 1985-86, the cumulative total for unrestricted gifts raised from Reunion classes was $413,114. Direct thanks for this achievement go to two of Sweet Briar's most devoted and hard-working alumnae — Helen J. Sanford '42, National Reunion Gifts Chairman, and Ginger Newman Blanchard '60, National Reunion Gifts Chairman-Elect. These two women have guided the Reunion Giving Program over the past year, putting in countless hours of volunteer service for their College.

Under the leadership of Charlotte Kent Pinckney, Fund Agent, the Class of 1931 raised $20,831 in annual and capital gifts for all purposes in honor of their 55th Reunion. Nine class members returned for this special reunion.

Class of 1936

Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott and Katie Niles Parker, Fund Agent, shared responsibility for the class's 50th Reunion campaign as Reunion Gifts Co-Chairmen. Joined by a stellar class committee, they succeeded in raising the largest 50th Reunion gift in the history of the College with $76,586 for the Alumnae Fund and $57,749 in capital and endowment funding, a total of $134,335. Blazing a new trail, the Class of 1936 carried out a two-part effort to raise capital and endowment funds while at the same time trying to attract more unrestricted dollars than they had ever raised. This opportunity to use a two-part approach, counting all gifts for all purposes, is the exclusive province of those who are celebrating, or already have celebrated, a 50th Reunion.

Class of 1946

Caroline (Rudy) Rudolph Sellers led her committee of 21 class members to raise the largest unrestricted Reunion gift in the history of Sweet Briar College — $102,900. This was a bittersweet accomplishment, as they did so in memory of their devoted classmate, Nancy Dowd Burton, the first National Chairman of Reunion Giving, who died September 12, 1985. As a result, the Class of '46 was presented with the first annual Nancy Dowd Burton Award for the largest unrestricted class gift.

Class of 1961

FLASH! Class of 1961 raises largest 25th Reunion Gift in Sweet Briar's history! So read the headlines after the Class of 1961 presented their gift of $79,686. Bee Newman Thayer, Reunion Gifts Chairman, guided the committee of 23 who communicated with every member of their class to encourage participation in the Reunion gift and attendance in May. Celia Williams Dunn, Class President, Catherine Caldwell Cabaniss and Judith Atkins Wall, Co-Fund Agents, and Janna Staley Fitzgerald and Ann Worboys Buske, Co-Secretaries, were there providing support and help whenever called. Participation and enthusiasm were high throughout the year, and 25 percent of the class returned for Reunion.

With strains of "Hey, look us over, lend us an ear..." sounding over the dell, 40 members of the Class of 1966, husbands, and children returned to Sweet Briar for Reunion. Class President Grace Butler Johnson and Fund Agent Nancy Conkle Swann announced that their class had raised $17,220 for their 20th Reunion gift. Thanks to all those committee members who wrote and called!

Class of 1971

For their 15th Reunion, the Class of '71 did everything in high style. Dubbed "the little chill," 109 returned for Reunion, counting husbands and children, filling all of Dew dormitory, and then some! To top off this tremendous turnout, Reunion Gifts Co-Chairmen Jacque Penny Goldstone and Bev Van Zandt Steele announced that their class had raised $20,265 as their special gift in honor of Reunion.

The Older Woman: Expectations and Challenges in the 21st Century

By Milbrey Sebring Raney '65

Milbrey Raney received her Master's Degree in Social Gerontology from the University of Pennsylvania and trained in the Hospice Program at the Pennsylvania Hospital. She has established a consulting business for senior citizens (Elder Options) in Charlottesville, Virginia and lectures in gerontology at Piedmont Virginia Community College. Her Reunion '86 presentation was co-sponsored by SBC's Lifetimes Center and the Alumnae Association.

"The Older Woman: Expectations and Challenges in the 21st Century" is a timely and appropriate topic for reunions at women's colleges. To gain your immediate attention and to avoid controversy, let me state that experts tell us we age from the moment of conception, rather than beginning the process at an arbitrary age of 18 or 21, whenever physical maturity is attained and society decrees that we have become adults.

What is new in the late 20th century is the phenomenon of large numbers of women surviving into old age. In 1900 life expectancy for women was 48 years. Women died young, in childbirth, from infectious diseases or from hardships of living. For better or worse, menopause was not a problem, and diseases that we have come to dread in old age (heart disease, stroke, cancer) were uncommon at the turn of the century simply because most women did not live long enough to become susceptible to them.

Until recently American society has not focused on the issue of aging, especially concerns affecting older women, who are an undervalued and underused national resource. Increased longevity has produced special needs and problems for older women, setting them apart from younger women and from men of their own age. Since large numbers of older women have not faced these problems before, they can be considered the pioneer generation for those of us middle-aged and younger.

Probably you are wondering what I mean by "older". In trepidation, I struggled with that question several years ago as I designed a course on "The Older Woman". Having just passed an important marker (my 40th birthday), I thought 45 much too young to start such a course! Then I attended a talk by a famous specialist on osteoporosis. He stated that the median age of menopause is 50 years. With a sigh of relief, my denial mechanism switched into high gear: I arbitrarily began my course at age 50.

In order to gain a clear idea of progress women have made since 1900, it is necessary to examine briefly several generations of older women. You may see yourself, your sister, mother, grandmother, aunt or niece. If you were born between 1916 and 1926 you are presently 60 to 70 years old. You are too young to remember World War I, but you were a child or adolescent in the Depression. Those of you close to 65 may have had marriage plans affected by World War II. Those who had children after that war started what demographers call the Baby Boom. In your midlife you have witnessed the atomic, space and electronic ages, political assassinations, the civil rights movement, the feminist movement and the Vietnam War. Perhaps you personally struggled with raising children through the turbulent sixties and early seventies, trying to cope with antiwar sentiment and the rigors of the drug culture...and you know that Miss Muncy's predictions in the early sixties of guerilla warfare and the spread of international terrorism have become a horrifying truth.

If you were born between 1906 and 1916, when Sweet Briar College was being established, you are presently 70 to 80. Perhaps some of you remember your father, uncles and friends going off to fight the "war to end all wars". The Great Depression was the single most outstanding event of your youth and you were strongly influenced by poverty or the fear of it. World War II may have left you widowed or childless because of the lack of available men during peak childbearing years. "Rosie the Riveter" joined the work force to fuel a wartime economy and reaped the economic benefits. After the war the country enjoyed a long period of peace and prosperity.

If you were born between 1896 and 1906, you are between 80 to 90 years old. Your mores were shaped by the strong influence of Queen Victoria's standards and by our own country's puritan ethic. Everyone knew her place and that place was in the home for most women. Relatively few young women had the privilege of a college education.

In discussing the contemporary older woman I will use the "editorial we", as we all are becoming older. We are experiencing major life changes in personal and work lives. Statisticians give us dry numbers indicating that we will live into our early 80s. If we are married, we will outlive our spouse by approximately eight years. Unfortunately these years often are wasted and empty ones.

Sometimes we choose our transitions; other times fate forces them upon us. Some changes can be good, adding to our lives, such as returning to school, entering the work force, or becoming a grandmother. Sometimes a transition causes a void in our lives, most often caused by a separation, divorce or widowhood. Children may leave home (this is not necessarily a total loss!). We may experience an economic loss: it is well known that women are the last hired, first fired and that the older woman faces real job discrimination in the work force.

Whenever transition occurs, it involves reevaluation and readjustment of lifestyle; "old" ways of living don't apply. We may be envious (or at least wistful) of the social stability our mothers or grandmothers had, born into an era of more stratified social codes, but our wistfulness is tempered with the knowledge that the rigidity of society governing a woman's place at that time would deny us the freedom we value. We must struggle with choices and understand that our traditional roles are in flux. There are no easy answers. We have matured enough to learn that we can't "have it all", but at least we can be thankful that the Superwoman myth has been laid to rest.

The longevity factor is throwing a curve ball at us; as we carefully try to catch it, we try to absorb the prediction that we will live over a quarter of a century longer than women did at the turn of the century. Four generations are common now and five generations will become increasingly so in the near future. Demographers say that the fastest growing segment of our population is those 85 and older. Willard Scott treats us to another centenarian's birthday wish after the weather forecast each morning. Yet this celebration of life can carry burdens for all of us: particularly alarming for older women is the scenario of the woman in her 70s, recently retired on a fixed income, with some health problems of her own, who now must assume the grave responsibility of caring for her frail, homebound mother who is in her 90s.

Those of us in midlife can get caught in intergenerational ethics, for we are the "sandwich" generation, trying to raise our children while simultaneously our parents require more support. As "kin-keepers" of the family, we face emotional burnout as we nurture adolescent or adult children, spouse and parent(s). There is little time or energy left over for our own growth and development, and we struggle with frustration, anger and guilt as we have no guide on this solitary journey.

Our married status may change, as it does for over 50% of women in mid and later life. Through divorce or widowhood one can lose one's "significant other". This is a tremendous loss in a coupled society. Older women, constricted by housing and transportation patterns, tend to become an invisible element in our society; the greatest concentration of older women in public may occur at Sunday morning worship service. Up to now, it has been better to be male and to be young: the older woman has two strikes against her. She may find herself asking such questions as "Who needs me?"; "What is my future?"; "Will I be alone?"; "Who will care for me?"; "Am I employable?"; "Do I need new skills?"; "Can I learn them?"

There are social, economic and health expectations and challenges that need to be addressed by each of us as we age. The prediction is that almost half of us over 40 will live alone, either by choice or event. In March, 1974, 4.5 million older women lived alone. By 1990 it is estimated that this number will increase by almost two-thirds. Some married women have the false expectation that their marriages will last forever. While the probability of golden wedding anniversaries has increased with longer life expectancy, many women do not realize that they must plan for economic and social independence. Widowhood, a major life change which happens to almost half of older married women, occurs at an average age of 56. Sixty-eight percent of all married women will be widowed by age 75.

Each of us needs to live a life of some meaning. If married, we must plan to cope with being alone. Realistically we should strive for a certain amount of independence and cultivate the ability to spend time with ourselves. Keeping a checkbook, paying bills, owning and maintaining a car, establishing credit in one's own name are important objectives for an older woman. An annual review of a will, general finances and retirement benefits with one's spouse is important, as is an awareness of insurance coverage. There are too many widows in their 70s and 80s whose husbands "protected" them from coping with money matters. As a result they have seldom seen the inside of a checkbook and are rendered helpless when attempting to settle the affairs of their late husbands. All too often they are vulnerable to fraud.

Formerly married women face different expectations and challenges. Divorcées and widows are not a homogeneous group, although society tends to lump all single older women together. Society treats the older widow with compassion (so long as she doesn't wear her widow's weeds too ostentatiously), but the older divorcée is treated with disdain. We need to challenge ourselves as individuals to include our "sisters" in our social lives. Did you omit a single woman friend the last time you gave a dinner party? We must work to rid ourselves of the cultural hang-up that an even number of gentlemen and ladies is required at the dinner table.

Since many of us will be single in our later years, we should shed the outdated assumption of the "Old Maid" syndrome. The single life may or may not be the preferred way a woman can maintain her identity. Ellen Goodman, columnist for the Boston Globe, recently quoted a sociologist from Berkeley who said: "When you look at men who don't marry, you're often looking at the bottom of the barrel. When you look at the women who don't marry, you're looking at the cream of the crop."

With divorce rates so high today, marriage no longer guarantees the security it once did. The collective challenge for us as older women is to disregard our expectation that the single woman's life is necessarily a dreary one. Jane Porcino, in her excellent book Growing Older, Getting Better: A Handbook for Women in the Second Half of Life, discusses studies which show that never-married women are happier in their later years than their counterparts who have been widowed or divorced.

These single women have attained a high educational and career status, are more likely to be assertive and goal-oriented and have a high level of self-esteem. Most important, they have cultivated family and non-family ties and developed a strong circle of friends to support them.

The issue of housing is closely tied to our status as single older women, for 3/5 of all widows either live alone or with nonrelatives. We must work creatively to amend zoning laws to augment existing housing choices and to allow for new ideas to develop. One innovative plan, imported from Australia and working in California is the advent of "Granny Flats". Single, detached, easily installed units that are moderately priced, these dwellings can be built on an adult child's property, allowing the older parent/relative to live on the same land in close proximity but independently, certainly the best choice for all generations involved. Amendments to suburban zoning codes will need to be passed before these become common. Another idea which addresses the housing problem is "home equity conversion". Because so many older people are "house rich, cash poor", this plan allows the older homeowner to convert her equity into cash payments while remaining in the home. Check with a local banker or mortgage lender to see if this is being done in your area. Home sharing is a solution for some: another person (usually younger) receives bed and board and sometimes a modest stipend in exchange for services difficult for an older person, such as yard work and home maintenance.

Economic expectations dictate that because we will live longer we need to save more. Poverty traditionally has been an older woman's issue. Lack of a pension, interrupted work schedules, the differential in earnings between men and women, job discrimination and displaced homemakers contribute to the poverty of women in their old age. According to Betty Booker '66, staff writer for the Richmond Times Dispatch, older black women are significantly worse off due to lower earning rates while working.

Since we face two decades of retirement, it is vital that we save for it. The Retirement Equity Act of 1984 improved retirement provisions for older women. It is easier to draw retirement benefits under employee pension plans now (either one's husband's or one's own). Geraldine Ferraro said this legislation "means a more secure old age for thousands of American women who are deprived of pension benefits by loopholes which do not recognize their contributions to our economy" (New York Times, August 7, 1984). Pension rights now are negotiable in divorce and it is imperative for an older woman to check her state's marital and property laws before divorce. A safeguard for both older women and adult children is a prenuptial agreement before a remarriage; a written agreement based on a percentage of an estate ensures a fair division of property to all parties and can prevent major emotional and financial disasters.

A bright side to aging, economically speaking, is that companies are waking up to the potential the gray market holds. With increasing numbers of older women retiring, the preretirement industry is paying attention. Formerly catering to men, the industry is changing to meet the needs of women, selling a variety of investment services to them. An Investment Company Institute survey shows women becoming more knowledgeable about saving for retirement: 55% said they were saving and 43% would be willing to assume a moderate to substantial risk to obtain higher yields.

Finally, the expectation of living longer challenges us to take better care of ourselves: to learn how to handle stress in our lives, to exercise properly, eat wisely, give up smoking and drink in moderation. One wag suggested (but it really isn't funny) that you can hear the sherry decanters coming out of sideboards all across America at 3:00 every afternoon. For older women sherry is a socially acceptable apéritif, yet if used to excess it is an improper method to relieve stress. An older woman who has been a social drinker may become dependent on liquor to relieve stress during a long-term crisis such as nursing a husband or parent through a terminal illness; it doesn't take long to become addicted. There is a similar pattern for women whose doctors prescribe sleeping pills or anti-depressants. If a woman becomes dependent on these she may be addicted by the time the crisis has ended. In my experience these two types of addicts are the saddest and most difficult clients with whom to deal because in many cases they are depressed, have given up hope and don't want to be helped. It is important to be aware of the dangers of alcohol and/or drugs, to prevent them from taking over one's life.

Whatever hobby relaxes you, whether gardening, walking, swimming, flower arranging, listening to music, playing bridge, needlepointing, keeping a journal, biofeedback, yoga: do it. Whatever your hobby, cultivate it. It may preserve your sanity and your life.

The challenge nationally is for our country to develop a comprehensive health care policy to cover a spectrum of sites and services, enabling us to access help from the hospital to the rehabilitation center, the nursing home or the hospice and hopefully back to our homes again. The good news comes from the insurance carriers, who realize there are profits to be made. Long-term-care insurance is a new form of protection against the ravaging costs of later-life disability, usually in a nursing home. Many assume that Medicare will pick up the tab, but Medicare pays only 2% of all nursing home costs. These costs presently average $65 a day: one can be impoverished in a very short time. Twenty-two states are investigating this new insurance, the premiums of which vary according to one's age, finances and health. Check with your local insurance agent or with your State Department of Insurance for more information.

Women are living longer. Much longer. We need to discover ways to live better in our later years. Use your local resources — your church, women's club, network group — and your alma mater. Sweet Briar's Lifetimes Center can open avenues to pursue and help develop a network. The Elderhostel Program on campus in summertime is a wonderful, inexpensive way to have a superb vacation.

We cannot control fate, but to a certain extent the future is in our hands. We do have control over the way we care for our bodies, save for our later years and reach out to our friends who are single.

Association Perspective

By Mary K. Lee McDonald '65
President, Alumnae Association

This message is my thank-you to all alumnae for the opportunity to serve as president of your association. One of my favorite quotes is: "You are young at any age if you are planning for tomorrow." Those of you who work for Sweet Briar really must have eternal youth because tomorrow is our business! Always we are looking at tomorrow for prospective students, for future resources and for new volunteers.

During the past three years I have pushed the Board of the Alumnae Association quite hard at "planning for tomorrow" — the time was right, the talent available and much has been accomplished. We have achieved great success in the areas that I identified as needing our immediate attention:

- ☐ Spread the base of volunteers — involve more alumnae across the country and abroad in significant activities to enhance Sweet Briar College.
- ☐ Increase alumnae/student contact — enhance students' understanding of the Alumnae Association and the privileges and responsibilities of alumnae.
- ☐ Take a critical look at the structure and functions of the Alumnae Association and the Board of the Association — members, committees, jobs, meetings.

- ☐ Develop a usable Board Manual with accurate job descriptions and reference notes.

The first two items are ongoing priority commitments for our association. The latter two items have been done and many changes have been made, but we must continue to evaluate these changes and make additional ones as needed. Our activities in any of these areas must not become static.

In addition to addressing the workings of the Alumnae Association I have had the privilege and pleasure of traveling thousands of miles throughout this country, meeting with many hundreds of Sweet Briar alumnae. I am most grateful for the opportunities that my volunteer position has presented, and for the experience. Our alumnae are a wonderfully diverse, accomplished and exciting group of women who have great pride in Sweet Briar.

The single most sustaining factor in the survival of private colleges is alumnae involvement. Whatever the reasons for this involvement — pride; affection; appreciation for an excellent education; responsibility to "give something in return"; realization that those who don't work shouldn't criticize; because somebody asked; or a combination of these — the assistance of all alumnae is needed for Sweet Briar's success. The opportunities are numerous, the rewards are many. Whatever your interests, there is a place for you. Your involvement will make the difference in Sweet Briar's "Tomorrow"!

It's been fun, it's been hard work — and, Judy Schulz, you will love the job!

Jacqueline Strickland Dwelle '35 with grandchildren Jacqueline and Edward Bates in 1971.

Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle Dies

Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle began her lifelong love affair with Sweet Briar College in the autumn of 1931 when she was elected president of her freshman class. By the time she graduated she had been house president for two years, vice president of student government, chairman of the social committee, a member of Aints and Asses and Tau Phi, the recipient of the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award and chosen as the Manson Scholar.

From her student days she continued in the spirit of service of the Manson Scholar in her home city of Jacksonville, Florida. A few, and only a few of her civic responsibilities included presidency of the Junior League, chairman of the Symphony Board, Board of Trustees of Jacksonville Episcopal High School and member of Davidson College's Board of Visitors. Above all was her continuing dedication to and work for Saint Mark's Episcopal Church.

At Founders' Day 1977, when President Harold Whiteman presented "Jackie" with the Alumnae Distinguished Service Award, he said: "As busy as she has been at home she has always found time and energy for her beloved college. She has been head of her local alumnae club many times, was a member of the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association and then became its president and has just completed two terms as a member of the College's Board of Overseers. Each year she is a member of the Boxwood Circle and there is a fund at Sweet Briar established in her honor by her husband and three children, one of whom is a Sweet Briar graduate."

When she retired as president of the Alumnae Association a friend wrote, "You have been a splendid example of what a president should be: a person of humor and understanding, a person wedded to her job and knowledgeable of it. You have made us all feel that we could do great things for Sweet Briar and that is the mark of a genuine leader."

"Jackie's" devotion to her church, her city and her college was deep and abiding but, unquestionably, her family was first in her heart — her husband, Ned, until his tragic death in 1965, her daughters, Jacquelyn and Susan '64, her son, Edward, and her four grandchildren in whom she unabashedly rejoiced.

This mere listing of her accomplishments and interests fails to convey the essence which made Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle a special person — indeed an unique one. What made her so? Perhaps it was her ineffable joie de vivre despite the pain of arthritis and cancer which ended her golfing days but not her skilled bridge playing; perhaps it was her contagious giggle as she pounded out on the piano all 50 verses of her favorite song, "Love, oh Careless Love"; perhaps it was the caring spirit of this lady about whom her friend Kay Booker wrote: "This joyous person, this 'Sweet Bird of Youth' as she was affectionately called by many alumnae, shared her joy of living with many college friends who received letters of good humor, friendship, encouragement and affection.

Among her sterling gifts was her art of appreciation. It was that art of strong, true praise for other people and for Sweet Briar that endeared her to us from her freshman college year until her death this April."

Not long before, "Jackie" had written: "Long after you and I are gone, Sweet Briar will continue to flourish. Keep her close to your heart."

This she always did in full measure.

Thomas N. Connors Joins Staff

Thomas Neel Connors joined the staff as Vice President for Business Affairs and Treasurer of Sweet Briar College on July 1, 1986.

Mr. Connors brings to the position broad experience in financial and business matters. He holds the B.A. degree from Colby College, has participated in programs of the American Institute of Banking and the American Management Association, and has served in the classroom at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Hollins College where he taught accounting and business law. He has been an officer in the North Carolina Bank and with J. W. Burrell, Inc. Prior to accepting the position at Sweet Briar, he was President, Chief Executive Officer, and part-owner of the Jet-away Corporation in Roanoke.

Mr. Connors also has been active in community service. In addition to his recent service as a Director and Overseer of Sweet Briar College, he is currently a Director and member of the Executive Committee, Colonial American National Bank in Roanoke, and Chairman of the Long Range Planning Council of the Episcopal Diocese of Southwestern Virginia. His prior civic responsibilities include service as director and member of the executive committee of Blue Ridge Public Television, director of The United Way, and Parent's Fund chairman of North Cross School (Roanoke).

Sweet Briar has long occupied an important place in Mr. Connors' life. Jocelyn Palmer Connors '62, his wife, is a leader in the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association. His daughters, Kaky '86 and Dede '87, are well-known to the community.

Sweet Briar Alumnae Staff Member Nationally Recognized

Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80, Assistant to the Director of the Alumnae Association, has been named an Outstanding Young Woman of America.

Graduating from Sweet Briar with distinction in International Affairs, she received a scholarship from the Kosciuszko Foundation during her senior year for study in Poland.

She is also a recipient of Oneida National Bank's John P. Sheehan Memorial Scholarship, the Elmira College Key from Elmira College and the John F. Kennedy High School's Top Scholar and Stagliano Speaker Awards.

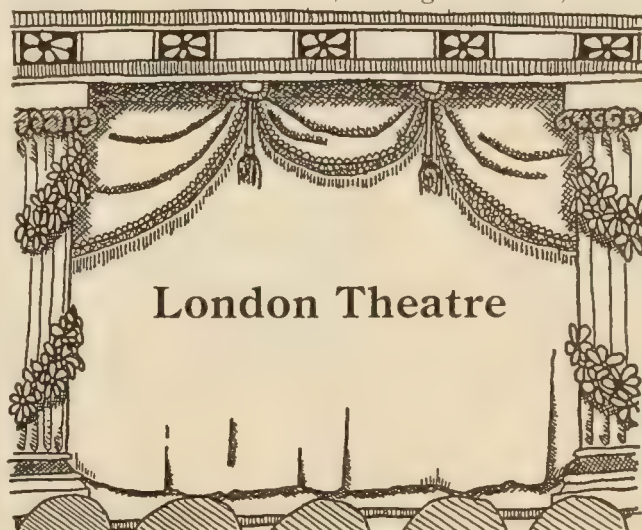

As an undergraduate, Louise was a member of the Intercollegiate Equestrian Team, the International Club and worked as a staff reporter for the Sweet Briar News.

Her responsibilities as Assistant to the Director of the Alumnae Association include managing Sweet Briar's Bulb Project and coordinating Reunion, Council and other special events.

Congratulations, Louise!

Alumnae, members of their families and friends are invited to join Sweet Briar's Winter Term course in the London Theatre January 4-25, 1987. Participants will see 12-15 productions by the National Theatre, the Royal Shakespeare Company (both in London and at Stratford) and the Royal Ballet, as well as others in the West End, and will meet with actors, dancers, writers, critics and other professionals in the theatre in a series of seminars. Housing: the new Mountbatten, a first-class, three-star hotel two blocks from Covent Garden. Program fee: about $1800 excluding airfare, lunches, dinners and incidental expenses in London. Anyone interested should contact Ralph Aiken at Sweet Briar as soon as possible.

Silver Medallion Honorees 1986, NCCJ

Dorothy (Dolly) Nicholson Tate '38 and husband Jack, longtime civic leaders in Charlotte, NC, were honored jointly with Humanitarian Awards by Charlotte's chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews (NCCJ) at the annual Awards Banquet on May 1, 1986. The Awards Banquet Program briefly described Dolly's community involvement: Dolly Tate has spent most of her adult life working to improve the lives of children. Her goal is to insure that every child has the understanding, help, and guidance to grow into a healthy adult and to discover his or her individual potential. Her concern about teen pregnancies led her to help organize Teen-Age Parents Services (TAPS) and to work tirelessly for other youth-related agencies.

Her expertise in youth care merited her appointment to state planning agencies for children; and she has been recognized with the first "Dolly" award, the "Governor's Award", and Charlotte's "Woman Of The Year" award. Dolly promotes human welfare and social reform while maintaining a keen sensitivity to the uniqueness and dignity of the people she serves.

Dear Editor:

I write in response to Ms. Coleman's piece, Turning Point Plus One, in your Summer 1986 issue.

First, I always addressed the author as Ms., not Mrs., Coleman. In her defense, however, I should admit that in my dialect the distinction is not clear.

Second, Ms. Coleman might have left your readers with the impression that I abuse only old ladies. Not true! I abuse all students without regard to age or gender.

Sincerely,

Godzilla

Ruth Stevens Morrow died on March 26, 1984 at age 90. She had been living in a nursing home in Asheville, NC, since shortly after her husband, Roger's death in 1982. Ruth and Roger were active members of the Carolina Mountain Club for over 30 years, and, for over 20 years, Ruth was treasurer of St. Anne's Circle at Calvary Episcopal Church in Fletcher, NC, where the graveside services were held. Ruth had no children community in Southold, L.I. There she found to her delight Woodis Finch Hudson '25 living in the same complex. Francese's family are travelers. Her son is in Saudi Arabia. His 14-year-old son goes from a New England boarding-school to visit his parents three times a year. One granddaughter, just back from her art studies in India, flew to Austria for a Christmas skiing vacation. Another one is working in CA and her grandson, a budding young journalist, covered the election in the Philippines. Frances herself traveled to Texas to be with her brother for Christmas

Edith (Betty to us) Morris Coleman is an enthusiastic ham operator out of St. Cloud. She takes time for bridge, church work, her sorority and membership in the "Wines of Nobles." She is loyal to SBC, sends greetings to us, and wants to make our 65th. (Ed's note: She did!)

Mary "Lette" McLemore Matthews says she stays "on the go" every day and is blessed with good health. She has compassion on those who don't and makes numerous calls on "shut-ins." She enjoys bridge, mah-jongg and other "sociabilities." Because Norfolk is near Suffolk, she sees the other "Lette" frequently and says she looks fine.

Elizabeth "Lette" Shoop Dixon says she is thankful to be one of the 20 living graduates of the class of '21 and her days at SBC were "enjoyable, much fun, and hard work." She would have loved to have got back for our 65th but it is just too far.

Florence Woelfel Elston has moved from Chicago to Florida. She is still our travelling classmate, having spent a glorious month in France on a gourmet tour. Two days after her return she fell on a curb and landed in the hospital but she was soon going places and doing things as usual. (Ed's note: Florence and Gordon Beemer were married in Sweet Briar House on the eve of Reunion '86 — see Martha Clement's article in this issue.)

Gertrude Pauley Crawford, who lives in Grosse Point, MI, writes from Florida where she winters that her life is a happy one. She spends much time in Wisconsin where many of her family live and finds her grandchildren and great-grandchildren one of her greatest joys.

Catherine Hanitch again writes happily about her contentment in a church-related nursing home in Hopkins, MN.

Edith Durrell Marshall can't be held down. She is living in a delightful retirement home in Cincinnati, and still drives. She recently took a 10-day jaunt to Washington DC to see the "Treasures of Britain" exhibit at the National Gallery. Her daughter Ann, and Libby Whitley, both SBC grads, wheelchaired her through the 30 rooms that held the fabulous display, collected over a period of 500 years. Edith plans to return to her summer place in Michigan. No one has done more than she to keep '21 together.

Hildegard Flanner Monhoff, our poet from Calistoga, CA tells us of additions to her long list of published poems: "Poems" in the Paris Review and a book, Brief Cherishing, a collection from the Napa Valley

Florence Dowden Wood, who lived most of her married life in Cape May, NJ and, with her husband, traveled worldwide in search of anthropological fossils, is now living in the Lutheran House in Ocean View, NJ. According to her niece, she is reasonably well after recovering from two strokes and has maintained her wonderful sense of humor. We all remember her as an extremely intelligent and active person

Nell McCaa Cole, is thrilled after living in Shreveport, LA for 11 years that she is going back to visit her sister, Mary McCaa Deal '19, in her home state. She adds, "My heart will always be in Virginia." She made a recent contact with "Lib" Claxton, her roommate at SBC

Gertrude Anderson considers herself very fortunate to be living in her own home in Findlay, OH and still driving and traveling. This year she took a boat cruise on the Hudson River, stopping at West Point and Hyde Park; she also cruised along the Connecticut River and around Long Island and Manhattan. Added to this is a projected trip to South Carolina and a family reunion at the wedding of a great nephew. She expressed appreciation for the news of her classmates in the Alumnae Magazine.

Ruth Geer Boice comments that her traveling days are over; many of us are about to reach that plateau. Ruth is content in her place of residence at the Crest View Club in Sylvania, OH. Her son is in Pakistan in business; she'll be glad when he returns to American soil

Shelly Rouse Aageson's husband was mugged a few months ago; her recent card says that he has not fully recovered from his hospital experience with neurologist, masseuses and prolonged nursing care. Shelly says, "Shall miss yall!" at our 65th and remembers so happily the 60th

Your sec., Florence Ives Hathaway has also changed her residency after 55 years in Abington, MA to Needham, MA, 15 miles from Boston. My daughter added a sunshiny apartment to her home for me. She has four daughters and holds two parttime jobs. It's a merry household and I feel fortunate to be here. I spent two months in Florida in the winter, and visited my younger son in PA; now

Mary Bissell Ridler died in Dec. '85 in Tequesta, FL where she and her husband, Earl Ridler, had been living in their own apartment. Seventeen members of her family had gathered for her 90th birthday on Thanksgiving Day, '85. At Sweet Briar, where she spent two years in the Academy and four in the College, Mary majored in Chemistry and Math. She became one of the first women in industry, working in the analytical lab of the Grasselli Chemical Co. in Cleveland. One of Mary and Earl's four children, Jean Ridler Fahrenbach, graduated from SBC in '45

I will tackle the 1985 news before going on to 1986

I was the only one back for our 60th. I was the oldest one and had come the farthest of all returning alumnae. I was housed in Grammar. The Class of 1930 "adopted me"; since then I have heard from Carolyn Martindale Blouin (1930) and Marion Walker Alcaro (1935). Carolyn's husband was with her. They both were so good to me. Carolyn brought down the house with her witty report on her class's activities and the money it gave to Sweet Briar. I gave a little talk and reported about the money we gave which amounted to over $2,000.00. I believe our class has diminished to 42; sad, but true

There were over 500 on campus consisting of alumnae and husbands. I made up a scrap book which was left along with the one I made for 1980, in the alumnae office. You might enjoy seeing them, if ever on campus. I spent hours on them so I feel it was a case of "Love's Labor Lost."

All of you should be proud of your college. There was such enthusiasm shown, not only in verbal accolades, but in monetary gifts.

We had such a fun and cultural time. Everything was so well planned and executed without a hitch. Even the weather cooperated so we could enjoy even more the beauty of the campus and surroundings. It was a real treat to visit the home of Sweet Briar's President, Nenah Fry. The upstairs has now been opened. The whole home exudes warmth and hospitality.

After leaving Sweet Briar my life-long friend, Lucile Carpenter Jacobs entertained me in her gorgeous retirement home, Westminster-Canterbury in Lynchburg. I saw classmate Ione McKenzie Walker, and also saw Lydia Purcell Wilmer (1923), who is still fortunate to have her husband, Frederic. All residents are enjoying this type of retirement living.

Lucile was good enough to drive me to Amherst to see Gertrude Kinsley (Giddy) Whitehead. Giddy can't get about, but her keen mind rallied to our great reminiscences. She lives in the old Whitehead home, all restored and enlarged beautifully, and is surrounded by the love of her daughter and family who live with her.

Besides the joy of reunion I had joy in June and July with the visit of two granddaughters and one of their husbands. The other husband stayed home in Pasco, Washington, to take care of their two children. Chores, duties and pleasures are always on my agenda at the Towers. Twice a year we have a fashion show, and I'm in as a "stylish stout," size 12 or 14. Margaret Hogue Plautz modeled, too. We think that is pretty good recognition at 83. I wore a costume for Halloween decorated with shells and went as "The Shell Game."

Thanksgiving and Christmas found me in California enjoying my local family. Sorry I missed the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in San Francisco in December

Before going on to 1986 I want to make a correction in my 1985 column. It concerned Ruth Pratt Jones's news. Ruth has eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. I wrote that Mary Hampton Martin Dempster had this family, and, alas! Mary Hampton had no children. Sorry about this, but I know I won't be fired from this volunteer job

Louise Wolf Arnold lives in Palm Beach, Florida, in the winter, and Nantucket in the summer. Her son, Bob, lives in Nantucket all year and is an artist, selling his pictures for as much as $7,000.00 each. Louise is an artist, too, and sells her pictures, but for less. Bob has four children, two in college and two in boarding school. Another son, Fritz, lives in Mallorca, Spain. He visited the Arnolds in Palm Beach and all went to Charleston, South Carolina, to do some sightseeing of the lovely homes and their furnishings. Mollie, the daughter, lives in Long Island. She has a daughter in her senior year in college and a son in business in Providence, RI. Mollie loves her three horses and rides a lot. George, Louise's husband, is doing fine and Louise writes she is surviving

Mary Reed Hartshorn remembers me well after all these years. She is still living in Bradford Terrace Apartments in Milwaukee. Her dear husband Ted died a year ago, peacefully in his sleep. Her daughter lives in Milwaukee and stops to see Mary almost every day. She lives in a wonderful place with many good friends, bridge, cocktail parties, fine dinners, etc. She is grateful to be there and to have good health.

Margaret Hogue Plautz writes she has four "great-grands" — two boys and two girls. All of her children are doing well. Her oldest son is still at NBC. Her #2 son is retired as a Major General and is heading a commission for the government. One granddaughter leaves for the Mid East soon, which worries all the family.

Virginia Burks Miller is still in a nursing home in Aurora, Colorado. She cannot see well enough to write but still can read for short times the large-print books. She will watch anything on television if it involves the University of Michigan and has become a Denver Bronco fan. She enjoys having her daughter read the Sweet Briar notes in the magazine. She has three children, 14 grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

Dora Hancock Williams has lived a quiet life since moving to Cape Cod in 1980. Their daughter wanted her parents nearby, and they built a house near them. Dora's husband died last August. She has her family next door and friends nearby so it is not too lonesome. She wishes she could get back to SBC but her eyes are bad so she can't drive and traveling any other way is too difficult for her with her arthritis

Lucille Smith Lindner writes no news is good news, what? Five maintenance men (A.K.A. doctors) are keeping her on her feet and doing well for her. She wishes she would come to S.B., but travels vicariously thru friends and relatives

Woodis Finch Hudson has moved to Colonial Village, Southold, New York, near her summer place. She expects her sister's, Helen Halford's, son, John Halford, and her sister's daughter, Helen Elida for a visit. She also says she thinks Dot Keller's idea for reunion is a good one — also the questionnaire — but she's too old to want any more material

Gertrude McGiffert MacLennan writes that of the 10 grandchildren only two are still in college. Two have become lawyers, one granddaughter is in law school. One teaches French in Alaska. One is a speech therapist and will work for a Ph.D., and his wife is working on her masters. One is an electrical engineer, so is his wife. Gertrude is expecting her fifth great-grandchild by summer. They have a fine happy family and have lots of loving family parties. She says they have had about a dozen guests and expect more, and they are all fun. They still play bridge and the time flies with their garden and yard work, reading and TV, church, dinners and guests.

If you have any information about Dorothy Leatham (Mrs. Tom Nelson), please send it to the Alumnae Office

Elsie Haller says that nature on the barrier islands off the coast of Florida can be both pleasant and vicious. She suffered damage from a hurricane and is trying to find a smaller place on the mainland. Elsie has no living relatives and her dog is a great solace to her.

The following deaths will sadden you. Ione McKenzie Walker, Catherine Mienecks Crawford, and Mary Dowd Houck. Thanks for writing. I surely am far beyond retirement age. Who wants the job? My sweet daughter-in-law does the typing.

Accolades to our many classmates who responded to my plea for news to present in our annual letter. Jane Wilkinson Banyard reports "my main news is a great-great granddaughter's arrival on my birthday, September 28, 1985". Jane is just home from a month in England. Natalie Sidman Smith had a summer trip to France, Belgium, Holland and Copenhagen. Lee writes "we had lectures in art and architecture en route. Highlight was Monet's house and garden at Giverny." Last winter in Florida she spent one night with Gudrun Eskensen Chase '26, who lives in Del Ray Beach. Lee has two grandchildren graduating from college, Cindy from Ohio Wesleyan and Gordon from the University of Maine. Rosa Heath Bridges writes "this past fall I went with two of my children on a cruise to the Caribbean which was delightful in all ways, particularly in convenience not too long ago I went on a S.B. trip to London which was well organized." Dorothea Paddock Seeber is the executive director of "Independent Citizens Research Foundation for the Study of Degenerative Diseases, Inc." This group takes a preventive holistic approach to disease, feels that much illness is caused by the stress of modern life styles and advocates research into the causes of this stress. It also studies environmental factors, especially radiation. Martha Dabney Jones writes "the friend who had shared my home for twenty years died in August and I am now living alone. Fortunately I am very active and my time is fully occupied with volunteer work — especially as senior warden of my parish, between reactors."

Mary Eunice Allen writes "we are living quietly and happily in Huntington with all old friends, playing bridge, taking an occasional trip (shorter every year)." Julia Harrison Watt's husband, James, is a very noted neurological surgeon, now retired. They came for a special dinner at Sweet Briar last fall and were impressed with the many changes. They have moved to a lovely condominium at the Winchester, near the National Cathedral. They are planning to go to some special medical meetings in Europe this spring. Elizabeth Hilton writes "all I have to report for news is — I fell in my kitchen and broke my hip. It took most of the summer to recover from the operation."

Claire Hoyt Gaver writes "my husband died suddenly in November, 1983. I went back to work for the Fairlawn Board of Education shortly thereafter and I am still working. I have three sons (an engineer, a banker and a lawyer) and five assorted grandchildren, ages 5 to 21. Sweet Briar seems very distant but the memories have not faded." Edith R. Tollefsen writes "my interests are mostly in preservation and colonial furniture, history also. Since my husband died in '63 I have traveled pretty extensively in England, Scotland, Scandinavia, Italy, Greece and Turkey I am going to Alaska this year. My only volunteer work is as a docent at Wilton House Museum, the state colonial dames headquarters for Virginia." Adelaide Henderson Cabaniss and Bill flew out to Albuquerque to visit their son and his wife. Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins is spending the winter at Del Ray Beach as usual. She went to the Hillsboro Club to have lunch with Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott '36 and her lovely children and grandchildren. Sally Callison Jamison reports they had a good winter in Naples and saw several Sweet Briar gals. Her sister, Jane Smith, '30, visited them. Her daughter, Jane Callison Smith '59, came down to Naples to drive them back to Indiana. The last night before reaching home they went to Louisville to pay their yearly visit to Ruth Meredith Ferguson and her husband Fred Smythe who had just returned from Portugal. Jo Tatman Mason reports, "In Naples, Florida, this February Mace and I had several grand visits with Sally and Jamie Jamison. They both look wonderful, Sally the same as in school, full of fun and enthusiasm. Then we went to Del Ray Beach where we had a delightful evening with Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins and Louise Harned Ross, '28. Belle's apartment is beautiful, and so is she! Now we are leaving in a few days for the Orient and are very excited about the trip!" Ella Parr Phillips Hotchkiss writes "with my new husband as of 1983 we have had wonderful trips to Canada and Hawaii and this summer we go to Alaska. It is great fun! My daughter is doing a good job as PR Director at Barnard College in NYC. I hope sometime we can stop at SBC on trips from wintering in Florida and spending our summers in Connecticut. I would love to see the campus again."

Katherine Whaley Willey writes "I have lived in Cambridge, MA, for the past 35 years, where my husband is a professor in Archeology at Harvard. I have been on "digs" with him in Peru, Honduras and Guatemala. We have also spent two separate years in Cambridge, England, where he taught at Cambridge University. We have two daughters and five grandchildren. Louise Chapman Plamp says she is sorry she can't write more legibly, but due to a broken hip she is writing on her lap. She has three children and the twins graduated from SBC in '55. Barbara's husband is the Bishop of

Rhode Island. Louise has eight grandchildren, scattered from St. Louis to California. Kathleen Firestone Carruthers says "Frank and I have spent every winter on the east coast of Florida. However this winter we are in Naples on the west coast and like it very much. We have four granddaughters, the newest one Colby Elizabeth 7 mos, daughter of Mike and Linda Carruthers. Mike is a Tennis Pro and they live in Columbus. Grandson David, Jr. is an attorney, is married and lives in Columbus. Our son David and Bonnie also live in Columbus, so we see our family often. David is president of his own real estate company. Frank plays a lot of golf. He is active in Rotary." Sarah Dodgen Gordon writes, "So much has happened since that time we had together at our 50th Reunion. I lost Russ 2½ years ago and have been trying to adjust to a life without him. My children have been wonderfully helpful. Sallie, her husband Alfred Page and their daughter live in Tryon, N.C., only 10 miles away. Bill and his two children, Kathy and Billy, are with me while they are completing their education. Bill, after being a college professor for more than 20 years, has just acquired a law degree. At present he is in Botswana, Africa, on a teaching assignment at the University there. I'm still living on our lovely lake in these beautiful mountains."

Adeline Hoffman Allen writes, "We moved to Clearwater, Florida in 1962. I love Florida. Dick passed away in March, 1978. In October 1980 I moved into a retirement complex in downtown Clearwater. We had one son, Col. Richard H. Allen, who works in Washington and lives in Annandale, Virginia, with his wife Karen and two children, Seth 9 and Trent 12. I travel a lot — cruises especially. Janet Bruce Bailey moved into Stonegate, Greenville, Delaware, last April. She calls it a beautiful retirement facility, very close to where her daughter lives, "a different life but a pleasant way to live. Of my eight grandchildren three are married and one is the mother of my two great grandchildren — a boy and a girl. All the grandchildren are through college except one and he will be going to college next year (1986). I spent two weeks this winter with a friend from Nyack where I grew up at Deerfield Beach — weather was cold, not like St. Thomas or Florida."

Margaret Kneedler Fellows advises she will be leaving her home in August and moving to a Life Care Retirement Community called "Granite Farms Estates" — Apt. C-212, 1343 W. Baltimore Pike, WaWa, Pa. Margaret Walton McLester writes "Last year I sold my home of 43 years and came to the Lakewood Manor Retirement Community to spend the rest of my life, or better stated, the rest of my pilgrimage en route to heaven. Entering here is like a one way ticket on a cruise vessel steaming toward one port of debarkation." Isabelle North Wright says "The best thing I can tell you is that I'm alive and going strong. My ten grands keep me jumping. The oldest is getting his MBA from Emory in May. One girl a junior at Agnes Scott, one a junior at Converse — then going on down to one in kindergarten! I play bridge often...looking forward to seeing Sarah Dodgen Gordon in April when I can leave town during 'the Masters'. I stay busy with Garden Club, church — and Mary Warren Home. Sustainer in the Junior League..." Eleanor Duval Spruill hopes to get back to painting after a summer cruise from Fort Lauderdale to the Western Mediterranean. Last summer she and her husband went to England. Later in the summer she went with a cousin on a canal boat that goes up the Hudson and then by canals and rivers to Montreal and Quebec. They came home through Vermont where her daughter and her family have an old farmhouse near Burlington. The oldest grandchild graduates from Mary Baldwin in June. Two younger brothers are at the College of Charleston.

"Libber" Lankford Miles and John moved in Sept. '85 from an old 9-room house in Maine to the Westminster-Canterbury in Lynchburg. Libber writes, "We have settled in nicely here. There are lots of SBC gals here but none from '29. Amelia Scott Hollis lives in Lynchburg and I see her now and then. Gert Prior has been sick — gallstones operation in the hospital just across from us — but is home again and doing well. Martha von Briesen I see every day, and she is a real inspiration to us all. Ruth Johnston Bowen, '26, has joined us here. Lucy Harrison Miller Baber, '30, and Elizabeth Eggleston, '19, along with two former professors, Bertha Wailes and Marion Benedict, make up our SBC contingent. It is a joy to be near enough to campus to buzz over whenever I feel like it. John likes it too.

In March Jimmy and I enjoyed a week on Sanibel Island in Florida visiting our doctor son, Bennett, his wife Cynthia and our three granddaughters who were there on various vacation breaks. We drove over to Naples to visit Virginia Chaffee Gwynn in her delightful home. Jinney has written to me as follows: "My husband Bill died in February at the age of 81. We had been married 56 years. I plan to remain in Naples and keep my house. My son John lives in Clearwater, Florida. He has four children. The oldest, Lisa, has been married for three years, son Bill is in college in Tampa, son Richard is in his second year at Georgia Tech and the youngest son is ready for college this fall. My daughter died in 1961, leaving two granddaughters who now live in Philadelphia. The oldest is 29 and will be married on June 28th. I play a lot of bridge, do hospital, cancer and church work, and travel — the Caribbean over Xmas, Alaska last spring and Hong Kong, China and Japan next month."

Frances Guthrie remembers rooming with Lib Ferguson in Reid but was only at SBC one year as the Depression hit the coal industry before the '29 stock crash. Frances (Peg) worked with the Army in San Juan and Puerto Rico all during WWII, went to Japan with the International Military Tribunal in 1945-50, and went to work for the CIA from 1950-68 in Japan, Washington and Manila. Upon retirement in 1968 she returned to Charleston, WV. Her nephew married Epsie Tyler Campbell's daughter, Tia (also SBC) in Norfolk, in the 60's. Libber Lankford was there. Frances says the Dec. '84 Sweet Briar Day in Charleston was great but Dec. '85 fizzled because of dreadful weather so they're thinking of changing it to early Sept. She loves reading about you all in the magazine.

Ann Gochnauer has just written about the wonderful time she and her sister, Kitty G. Slater, '33, had on a spring trip to visit SBC friends in Richmond. She says, "It was my first trip after several bouts in the hospital — one for open heart surgery with quadruple bypass. I am now able to be in my Upperville, Virginia, antique shop which mother started in 1929. This area is preparing for Garden week and my sister Kitty's home is open this year." Ruth Abell Bear, '26, and I belong to the same AAUW Literature Study Group in Bethlehem. We usually have the first fall meeting at my house and our last spring meeting at the Bear's lovely stone farmhouse.

Over the past two years Jimmy and I have made frequent trips (almost on a commuting basis) to Richmond, Virginia to visit Jimmy's sister, Elise Eppes Cutchin, who has moved to the Westminster-Canterbury retirement center. Recently Elise had a luncheon for us at the Virginia Art Museum. Among the guests were Nora Lee Antrim, Maria Bemiss Hoar and Patty Moncure Drewry, '39. We see Margaret Moncure Johnson from time to time, as well as Lisa Guigon Shinberger who has many diversified interests and enjoys living in her charming childhood home on Franklin St. Maria Bemiss Hoar recently has been elected to the Vestry of St Paul's Church.

Last fall I was fortunate to be able to attend the SBC Council meetings. I was very much impressed by the active participation of both students and the faculty in the various group discussions and forums that were devoted to evaluating past accomplishments and making plans for the future.

Once again it is time for our class news. Thank you to all who responded. All others please join the crowd. By the way, who is our scrapbook chairman? Whoever it is, please write me so that we can plan ahead

Elena Doty Angus sent a post card from Pompano Beach, FL where she and Bruce were vacationing. I, Jean van Horne Baber, have been writing for my local Philadelphia newspaper and also for our Hilton Head Island, S.C. newspaper and magazine. Mary and Margaret Imbrie '33 visited me there for two weeks in February '86. I had a telephone visit with Susalee Belser Norris. June 1985 Gail Shepherd Bean came to call in Philadelphia. In July '85 I was in Colorado. August, I visited Gerry Mallory Lees, in Tenafly, NJ. In October, Nancy Coe '31 and I returned to Sweet Briar for the celebration of the conclusion of the college's three-year fund drive. We were given an all-day tour of Charlottesville where I met Bruce and Elena Doty Angus

Blanche Davies Barloon spent September in Paris. She attended the opening of the Picasso Museum and saw Christo wrapping the Pont Neuf

Gail Shepherd Bean was in Philadelphia in June, the occasion being an honorary degree award to her husband. They went on to visit a son in Blairstown, N.J.

Mary Kate Patton Bromfield and husband, Bing, were in Hawaii March '86 for a golf and bridge visit with her brother and his wife. "Our oldest grandchild, Katie Anderson, graduates from Miami U. this May, sister Susan is a junior at Hamilton. The other six, spread among our three children, follow right along down to 8-year-old Mark. Of these two more will be in college in the east."

Janet Blood Brown and her husband spend three months on the Florida Keys, three months at NJ seashore, 6 months in PA. There is a grandson, 16.

Janet McGregor Curtin and husband spend summers in Canandaigua, NY and winters on Sanibel Island, FL where she volunteers for FISH and Sanibel Library.

Jeannette Shambaugh Elliott continues her hobby of collecting 19th and 20th century Chinese paintings and calligraphies. Her collection has been given to the Phoenix, AZ Art Museum. She takes an occasional course at the University of Arizona, plays tennis, hikes and likes to cook

Marjorie Morse Emling's older daughter has been in Haiti since February '85. November '85 Marjorie and Ralph had a three-week tour to Japan, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Penang, Singapore and Bali. Last year we mistakenly said that Marjorie had spent a month with her brother in Australia; it should have been "with her daughter"

Marjorie Gubelman Hastert had a happy Christmas holiday when her daughter and family from Australia spent a month with her. Another daughter, son and family live in Hawaii. Her oldest grandson, Peter Cannon, from Australia, is coming to U. of Hawaii next fall

Elizabeth Stuart Gray is another classmate who travelled in 1985. It was Ireland in May, an APVA tour in consort with Dublin Georgian Society June it was Maine to visit a nephew's family. August it was WA State to be with sister, Ellen Douglas Wilson '44 and husband at retirement home on Lopez Island. September saw her in Wisconsin and Illinois seeing relatives and friends. The big trip, Nov 18-December 18 took her to New Zealand and Australia via Tahiti, Honolulu and L. A. It meant taking 23 plane flights

Nevil Crute Holmes and husband have moved to Florida where she is learning about swimming pools, solar heat, lawn sprinklers, camellias, rattlesnakes and tree frogs. Summers will be in Asheville, NC. Elizabeth Clary Treadwell, '32/'33 and husband Ben came to visit

Marjorie Ris Hyland and husband en route south to their summer home in Highlands, SC. stopped at Sweet Briar, her first visit since graduation. She was stunned by the riding facilities and the beauty of the campus. January '86 they had a Trans Panama Canal Cruise.

Ella Jesse Latham sees Sue Graves Stubbs and Susalee Belser Norris regularly. They were all distressed by the death of Martin Burks. Rose Beverley's husband, Ella took her two daughters to Woodstock, England again this year. In March, for another gardening course. They had a delightful time

Cotton Skinner Shepherd writes that her husband died last year. "I have moved to a smaller house after 30 years in our other one. I am gradually getting adjusted and making a new life pattern. I still play tennis."

Mary Nelson Neville Sieman took a tour to Germany and France in July '85 with daughter, Mary Ann Strasheim and her son, Fred. All the family went to Bradenton Beach, FL to wedding of nephew, Bill Bystrom and Jeanne Holmes. Fall and Christmas were spent at home in Omaha. January '86 she visited sister, Frances Newberry, in AZ. When at home Mary Nelson is Regent of

NSDAR, Seaux Lookout Chapter, and V.P. of Episcopal Church Women of North Platte

Katharine Gochbauer Slater has two granddaughters, prospects for Sweet Briar. Meg, who graduates this year from St. Margaret's, Tappahannock, VA is making application. "Grandmother K.K.", as I'm called, is still a tennis player. My partner and I made the semi-finals in a recent club tournament and not for fifty and older."

Margaret Wayland Taylor and her husband spent a Colonial Christmas in Williamsburg. March '86 they visited their son and family in Tuscaloosa, AL. Dr. George is on faculty of U. AL in Spanish Department. Peggy and Robert plan to join a UVA Alumni trip to France this October Virginia Vesey Woodward sees Anne Brooke and her sister from time to time in Virginia Beach. Vesey's daughter and family came for Christmas with grandchildren, 6 and 4

Betty Workman Wright spent one week in '85 at Epcot. "I still laugh at those silly fountains jumping all over the place. This year I go to California to visit my daughter who plans a horseback trek into the hills. Considering I haven't been on a horse in 40 years, I hope I survive this as well as I did the '85 river raft trip"

Editor's note: 37'ers, remember your 50th reunion, May 22-24, 1987. We need a class secretary for 1937, please contact the Alumnae Office if you are interested. The following news was received in the Office:

Last July, Margaret Merritt Haskell and her husband moved into the one-story house they built themselves — it's as big as the one they sold! They had hoped to see Dottie Price Roberts on their way to Florida but couldn't because Dottie's husband was in hospital.

Mary Agnew Merrill and John spent several days with Turnie (Mary Turnbull Barfield) last year after returning from a Caribbean cruise. Mary sees Kate Shaffer Hardy fairly often. The Merrills have ten grandchildren. Mary's main interest is her garden and their Labrador retrievers. She hopes to make the 50th

Margaret Miller had a marvelous visit to Sweet Briar last October for the dedication of the Anne Gary Pan-nell Center. The Millers stay very busy and are well and happy. Their first grandson graduated from high school last week

(The above were the class officers up to Reunion '86)

By the time you read this, our glorious 45th will have come and gone, but here are items you may have missed. Martha Jean Brooks Miller recently lost her husband Tommy, and as he was almost a grad of Sweet Briar, the whole class sorrows with her. She is staying busy with real estate and golf tournaments. Chee-Chee Brown-Serman Hayes and her husband live in St. Michaels Eastern Shore Md. surrounded by swans and geese but now have a condo in Alexandria too. Wilma Cavett Bird teaches English and Latin in Oklahoma City. Margaret Craighill Price and Karl had an interesting visit with his brother, a professor at Oxford. "Craigy" and Betty Doucett Neill and Anita Loving Lewis are doing a superb job on our 45th. Ellie Damgard Firth and Malcolm, having bought a condo in Homestead, Va., are enjoying furnishing it. Judy Davidson Walker and her husband are missing reunion due to a trip to Scotland and England, but Judy is going "great guns" on our scrapbook. Joan Devore Roth saw Halley's Comet on their Caribbean cruise after seeing The British Treasure Houses in Washington, D.C. "Doucit" and family had a husband and wife reunion at Decca Gilmer Frackelton and Bob's anniversary — many Briarites! Doucit and Jack had an exciting afternoon at Pinehurst, NC in April, watching the eight SB riders walk away with most of the honors in the National Intercollegiate Riding Championships. Said Doucit, "You won't believe the people I met: Claire Parker who taught riding at SBC and her daughter, Kim Parker, class of '84, who works with the NRA in Washington; Liz Stevenson Tate, class of '30 who lives in Wilmington, NC; Liz introduced me to a gal who turned out to be Charlotte Sprunt Murchison, class of '46 who said, 'you must know our daughter in Wilmington, Mary Murchison Gornto, class of '69' — and so it went. It was like old home week, and fun..." P. Dowling von Wellsheim is doing well with her heart problem. I regret to tell you of Louise Kirk Edwards' death in March. She will be missed by many. Marie Gaffney Barry and Ted went to a beautiful memorial service in New York City given for Louise by her QE2 friends with whom she traveled. Betty Fawcett Collier had a stroke from which she is recovering nicely. Lillian Fowlkes Taylor and Tyler are exhausted from their many Senior Golf tournaments but are planning to stop by Charlotte N.C. to see Martha Jean Brooks Miller, then on to Richmond, Va. to join us for a day with Lossie Taylor Noell before reunion. Marie Gaffney Barry is expecting Pat Potter Duncan in New Canaan, Conn. on their way to Tides Inn Va. then onto the reunion. Helen Gwinn Wallace and John wintered in Punta Gorda, FL where they met Lacy Parten Miller, Pat Sorenson Ackard, Edge Cardamone O'Donnell, Helen Ann Littleton White, Eunice Foss Sneed and Helen Watson Hill. Helen Hamilton Bixby travels as an officer of the Garden Club of America and winters in Fla. She met Ann Teall Carrington and Dicky in Switzerland and Italy. Ruth Hemphill Debuys loved attending Alumnae Council at Sweet Briar last fall. Nelle Hudgens Levis is traveling-attending childrens weddings and births of grandchildren but hopes that their "Snowbird" friends will stop by Mt. Dora, Fla. when they pass through. Joanne Lilly Abbott writes of seeing Eunice Foss Sneed at their Denver Sweet Briar meeting. Joannie is a docent at the Colorado Historic Society and also works at a pre-school for the blind. Anita Loving Lewis and Bill travel widely to raise money for their son's Memorial Fund at the Hill School plus being active on the Alumnae Board with our reunion. Gertrude Marilli Stanchfield loves Washington, D.C. — is working as a clinical psychologist in an alcoholic clinic. Piney Martin Patterson golfed with Butch Gurney Betz at the Mountain Lake Club in Fla., and with Lillian Fowlkes Taylor and Tyler, and Ellie Damgard Firth and Swede in Stuart, Fla.

Lin Boyle Richardson had a lovely scenic trip through Switzerland. Betty Blount Kempson is expecting her 11th grandchild only to be surpassed by Jane Clark Hartrich's 18th! Adele Diaz

Eads is a Conn. state senator and chairman of the Education Committee and also chairman of the Kent Board of Education

Cynthia Falkner Day and husband are moving to warmer climes in England

Jean Nehring Bichsel works as a secretary to a vice pres. of a handtool manufacturing co. in Rochester, N.Y. Her husband founded the Dept. of Church Music at Eastman School. Olivia Rhodes Woodin is working on a "can can" for our reunion.

Jean Ruggles Hall is still wintering in Naples Fla. Betsy Tower Bennett writes of their sons who are outstanding in religious education. Frances Watkins Centilli is still "piddling with her ceramics shop in Texas and struggling with a new computer."

In Punta Gorda, Fla. Helen Watson Hill sees many Briarites. Helen couldn't come to reunion because they had planned a trip to Scandinavia at that time. Wilma Zeisler Lee teaches Latin at Heritage Hall in Oklahoma City.

There has been declared in Texarkana, Texas a "Margaret Dickey Day" in honor of Margaret Stuart Wilson Dickey's work at the Battered Women's Shelter, the YWCA, the Garden Club, the Chamber of Commerce, Boy Scouts, and Asian Refugee Center. She is the only woman ever to serve on the Texarkana Board of Directors. What an outstanding alumna!

This will be my last newsletter. I've loved hearing from all of you

Thanks to you all for your news Reunion last year was marvelous. We are still a good-looking class

Anne Mary (Chickie) Chidester Heywood and Bill were here in Brevard in April for a few hours. They are enjoying retirement and travelling in their mini-van.

Lyn Dillard Grones is having a reunion of her own this summer in the Cotswolds, England. Joining her there in her rented house will be Perk Traugott Brown, Leila Barnes Cheatham and Jake, Lyn's daughters, Kathie ('79) and Keedie ('76) and Sarah Longstreth ('77).

Anne Dickson Jordan took a Sweet Briar Alumna trip to Paris last year, her first trip back since living there in 1946-'47. Daughter, Mittie ('74), recently added another girl to the family and a fourth grandchild for Dickie

Sarah Temple Moore, most gorgeous at reunion, keeps busy visiting her five sons and running two art galleries. Hilda Hude Chapin and Ed were in Australia-New Zealand this spring and then to Africa.

Mary Haskins King was with Jodie Morgan Hartman in Charleston in April and saw Adie Jones Voorhees ('46) who was looking forward to her 40th reunion. Mary also saw Joan Stover Kemper in Pasadena, CA in December, and she and Betty Avery Duff visited Tutti Hall Peckham in Asheville, NC.

One of the many enjoying grandchildren is Jane McJunkin Nelson. Needless to say, so is Hedy Edwards Davenport who wrote a quick note on her way to hearing Pavarotti at the Met.

Lovah Wilcox Gearhart and her family have been busy building a retirement house in Centreville, MD. Lovah ran into Tutti Hall Peckham at the National Gallery in Washington. She also saw Steve Nicholson McIlvaine who was sailing the Inland waterway. Steve and Bob will be in London for the month of June as well as France and Ireland. Their son is graduating from U.Va. in East Asian Studies and spent six months in China, while their daughter, also in college, had a six-month biology trip to Kenya.

Betty Healy Cutler also had a visit with Steve as well as a good golfing vacation on the French Riviera before undergoing surgery. No golf for a while but she is slowly improving Cappy Price Bass is happily ensconced in a new home in Delray, FL where she has seen Kathryn Agee Atkins (Kagee) and Norma Bradley Arnold ('44) as well as Steve Nicolson McIlvaine.

Peggy Jones Wyllie has been in England and Capetown. Tavish, her four-legged companion at reunion, was again a father.

Anne Carter Walker Somerville has a son on the staff of nearby Warren Wilson College and we hope to get together on one of her visits there

Dale Bogert Baldwin is looking forward to the Sweet Briar Alumna Danube and Istanbul trip in June, and Spain for the month of September

Ann McLeen Loomis (Slug) writes of cancelling a trip to Europe because of fear of terrorist attacks. She was going to take her two granddaughters and now wonders if she'll be too old to travel when things settle down

Carol Cox MacKinnon has moved to a condominium in Alexandria, VA and retires in June from St. Agnes School where she has been teaching kindergarten and has been Alumnae Director for twenty one years

Marty Holton Glesser has been back and forth to Florida this winter on business and hopes to get away to the Caribbean for a few weeks. She enjoyed reunion too!

Joyce Livermore Foust also took a Sweet Briar Alumna trip. This was on the Delta Queen, beautifully planned and she enjoyed exchanging SBC memories. She had dinner with Edie Page Breakell in Roanoke, her freshman roommate whom she hadn't seen for thirty years. Edie Page Breakell stayed with her sister, Betty Byron Gill Ware ('55) in Richmond recently and had a visit with Frances Bickers Pinnell. Frances is manager and buyer for the Children's Shop at the Virginia Museum.

Catherine Waddell Spencer is an organist and harpsichordist in Richmond, VA. Her husband is a physician and professor at the Medical College of VA. One daughter is a veterinarian and another is an Animal Behaviorist working on a Psychology degree at UNCG. They have one grandchild.

Julie Mills Jacobsen still commutes to SBC for the 18th year. But this summer she will be campaigning for reelection to Bethany Beach, Delaware Board of Commissioners. After reunion the Jacobsens' boat burned to a cinder but no one was hurt.

Jean Portmann Allen has moved to a condominium in Washington, DC awaiting her husband's retirement. They also bought a condo-cottage in Dennis, Cape Cod where they expect to spend five months of each year. She is president of her Garden Club and on the Board of Directors of the Aged Woman's Home of Georgetown. She keeps up with her social work training in a small way there.

Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill is thrilled with her first grandchild. She has been elected to the Board of the Frye Regional Medical Center in Hickory, NC, is active in the Catawba County Council for the Arts and enjoys singing with the Hickory Choral Society. She talked to Lib Hicks Pollack when in Washington, DC. Lib is also active in volunteer work with her church and Hospice.

Audrey Teal Betts divides her time between North Carolina and the west coast with trips to Kentucky and Sweet Briar in between. Betty Zulick Reuter had another reunion last fall with Did-dy Gaylor Thompson and Alice Gearhart Stinson on Long Island. Shades of Aints and Asses! A golfing friend of Zu's has moved to Brevard and we hope to see her here for a visit soon.

Alice and Bill have retired to Whispering Pines, NC, where Alice has been honored for her volunteer work with the arts council.

Wylene Chapman Sayler and Henry just had their 8th grandchild; now each of their four boys has a child. Wylene is a consultant for Carlisle Collection clothes and two of her daughters-in-law are partners in the business with her. The three of them were planning to attend a business meeting in NYC in June.

It was fun hearing news from all of you. Herb and I will go to China and Tibet on Sweet Briar Alumna trip in the fall. Come to see us in western NC and keep the news coming.

(Ed's note: The Alumnae Office has just heard the sad news that Helen's husband, Herb Wohlers, died suddenly in his sleep in early August.)

Dear Alice — Oh, to be witty And possibly smart And send in a note That was state of the art. If my hair were dark-brown And my figure, still roll-a-roid I'd pluck up my nerve And send you a Polaroid. Or, if you would swear Not to check for errata I could just guarantee Some delectable data. But here is one fact — and I say what I mean. Life's more interesting now, than it was at eighteen.

Sally Melcher Jarvis

That, followed soon afterwards, by this — from Sneek, Holland — signed Beth Gorter-Jansma.

Sally Melcher Jarvis and I exchanged kids when they were in high-school. Mine just loved the U.S. This year it's 40 years since I returned to Holland from SBC, worked, got married (30 years ago) to neurologist. Raised daughter (28) who has degrees in Arabic and business administration, married, living in London. Son (27) has degree in law, now serving in Royal Navy as 3rd Lieutenant (military service camp in Netherlands). I keep busy giving lectures on various topics in history and/or history of art. I also paint, with hope and joy. Husband has lectures on research. We have just returned from Santiago, Chile; topic of research: Strokes and ways to make fast recovery. We'd love to come to the states, but value of dollar was too high up until now. And when we were young we had to keep working. Our whole family loves sailing on North Sea to England, France, Denmark and Sweden in 34-foot boat. Best wishes to Class of '49! I still love you all. It was one of the best years of my life, back in '45-'46.

Jacquelin Jacobs Buttram's daughter, Jacquelyn, was married in December to Barry Wright III at the family home in Roswell, GA. Immediately after the wedding the home was sold and Jacquelin's parents moved to a retirement home in Chattanooga, where Jacquelin herself has bought a condo only 50 yards from the Tennessee River. The highlight of Jackie's summer was the mini-reunion with Grammar hallmates Jaclyn Tappan Kern (at whose beautiful home on Long Island the gathering was held), Pattie Levi Barnett, Betty Wellford Bennett, Nancy Lake, Mimi Powell Leonard and Jean Taylor. Also in Chattanooga are Zo Garrison Ware and Jim, who is head of the maths. dept.

at U.T.N. Their only child, Amy, is married to the Director of Evangelism for the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission in Brazil and they are living in Teresina, Brazil, where the Wares have visited them four times in the last two years. Zo bets she's the only 49'er who gave her child an electric milk pasteurizer for Christmas.

Alice Dulaney Sheridan's fall trip (in real estate, that's the best time to be gone from Florida) in '85 was to the Scandinavian countries and Russia. "How much sympathy I now feel for the Russian people who see all that wealth in the neighboring countries to the west, when they have so little. But their hearts are big."

Sweden is decorating Bunny Barnett Brown's husband, Walter in May for his contributions to Swedish-American relations, a recognition second only to his being made an SBC Overseer for his contribution of editor Bunny for the last five years. The Browns have been sliding around between Madison, N.J., Bayhead, N.J. and John's Island, Fla. — with a spring trip to Scotland thrown in. Last summer, Bunny and 2 visiting English girls had a delightful 24-hour visit with Bertie Pew Baker's family in Nova Scotia. Bunny and Walter plan to spend the 4th of July on a boat in New York Harbor, celebrating the two girls' birthdays — Bunny's and the high-handed torchbearer's. (Ed's note: Comments received in the Alumnae Office from Bunny: "Our class secretary could compose a whole column for the magazine — a la Tennessee Williams — about her own social life, ranging from chickens in Roanoke to Episcopal bishops in Washington, D.C., to decadent Yankee relatives and exclusive Southern dynasties in Charleston, SC.")

The Nature Conservancy reports that Dorothy Bottom Duffy has been elected a trustee of its Va. Chapter. Dot is currently working on her graduate degree in English history from Columbia University. Liz Hancock Fritzsche writes that she "is now plugging along, creaming away her wrinkles in Chicago, but, come fall, I will be cramming away at a CIPA review class, prepping for the exam in Nov. Mary Fran Brown Ballard is practicing law part time (almost full) in Wayne, PA. Daughter, Annie, is teaching at the Brown School for emotionally-disturbed children in Austin TX; son, Charles, is assistant Prof. in Economics at Michigan State. Mary Fran and Don went out to Michigan last fall to help her mother, Marie Brede Brown Zimmerman, '24, celebrate her 85th birthday. While there, the Ballards drove over to Holland MI for a visit with Marilyn Hopkins Bamorough who wrote me that she and Jim have both retired and are moving in May to a resort area on Lake Michigan, near Holland.

And, from Winnetka, Ill. come reports from our two class-mates

there. Joan McCarthy Whiteman and Wes are off to the capitals of Northern Europe, while still savoring last fall's trip to China, Hong-Kong, and Japan, and keeping busy at home with enjoying grandchildren, playing golf, tennis, and duplicate bridge — doing some volunteer work and serving on some charitable boards. Fritzie Duncombe Millard continues to cheer us along with "Guess What? Only three more years until we reunite!"

Anne-Barrett Holmes Bryan and Bob spent a lovely week, steamboating up the Mississippi on the SBC Alumnae "Delta Queen" trip in March. Your secretary was there too, at the same table with the Bryans' and Marilyn Fisher Hanford '50, and John next to Martha Frye Nye '48 and Bill. It was lots of fun! The Bryan's son, Jeff, lives in D.C., and is director of staffing and training for Guest Services, Inc. — a catering-type company that services many of the government's dining rooms and facilities. He has been head swim-team coach for Georgetown Univ. for five years and is the father of 4-year-old, Samantha. Their daughter, Leslie is professor of Dance at the Univ. of Honduras. Ann does docent work at the zoo, where she gives tours, does live animal demonstrations at schools, and, recently had a display of her animal photography; all this while serving as vice-president of the N.J. Zoological Society, and editor of the newsletter. This was the 5th SBC Alumnae trip the Bryans have taken, having had Lindsay Coon Robinson with them on an Italian jaunt.

Kitty Hart Belew wrote of attending a really delightful "welcome aboard" party given in Charlottesville for our other Anne Bryan — Anne Fiery Bryan — and Dick who have bought a home in Charlottesville, VA., where they will move in May. The party was full of SB people. Kitty's son, Chip, was, at the time of writing, in the hospital for a lower back disc problem, received while working in the snow at Tahoe City, CA. He will have a six week convalescence with "dear old mom." She enclosed a newspaper clipping of the wedding of Brantley Lamberd Bolling's daughter in Richmond.

The Richmond social scene also included a luncheon given by Caroline Casey McGehee for SBC '49er's — Kitty, Marie Musgrove McCrone, Ann Doar Jones, Betty Wellford Bennett, Margaret Towers Talman, and missing Libby Trueheart Harris, who was out of town. The McGehees' have a second grandson, whose picture was featured at the luncheon. They were anticipating a trip to Europe and Scandinavia in late spring. Caroline urged our support of the SBC Friends of the Library. Marie wrote "that the party was a lovely, noisy time and Caroline's casserole (newspaper recipe never tried before) was delicious, as was all the food." She urged everyone to send something to the Alumnae Fund, as percentage of giving is important. Ann's big news is that "Frank took early retirement and we're moving to our renovated river home in Northumberland County, and daughter, Bev, and family are moving from Massachusetts to Maryland — putting the 2 grandchildren within car distance." Libby wrote that the Harris children continue to be on the move with Mary going to Baltimore for a 3-year fellowship in gastro-enterology, young Hiter at the end of his first year at Harvard Business School, with a summer job in Charlotte, NC with First Union Corp., and Whiz's working hard in commercial banking in Richmond, where she has been made a vice-pres. at the Bank of Va. Margaret wrote that "in Sept. Ruthie Garrett Preucel and Polly Plummer Mackie made their annual pilgrimage from Philadelphia to Sandbridge, on the Outer Banks. Because Ruthie still knows how to talk, she told Carter Van Deventer Slatery that the Talmans were going to Savannah in Oct., precipitating an overnight visit with the Slaterys at Hilton Head. We also had the good fortune to attend a gathering at the home of Majorie Christian Schley '46, in Savannah Sweet Briar is a good network!" The Talmans are planning a 2-week trip to Greece in May. Carter writes that they have a new grand-child in Memphis, so had a great time with Ellen Ramsay Clark and Ken. Then on to Ft. Worth to see son, Hugh, then a trip to Philadelphia to see Ruthie and Polly and swing by the British Treasure Houses in D.C. "Where the time goes, I don't know, but I have stopped all volunteer work — 30 years is enough and we do spend considerable time on Hilton Head." The Clarks just returned from their annual ski trip in Aspen with all four children and 2 new spouses. Children came from Dallas, New York, Winston-Salem and Charlottesville

"Our youngest son, Andy was married on my birthday," writes Sally Ayres Shroyer, "to a darling girl who is a veterinarian in a local clinic. His dog introduced them! Son Lou's children, ages 2 and 5 continue to make being a grandmother such fun

Peggy Quynn Maples says "Sam retired from the school system, as of Jan. '86, volunteering in an elementary school the same days I have my nursing school, and the rest of the time, we play." Their 2 sons and families live just an hour away. Their daughter, Maggie, and husband, are at Sawyer Air Force Base in Michigan, and Peggy and Sam plan to visit them in mid-summer

In Baltimore, June Eager Finney and Bill are still trying to do something about liability reform, not only in the medical world, but also in the fields of day care centers, municipalities, mid-wives, engineers, etc. Maryland has just passed a law putting a $350,000 cap on all personal injury awards for non-economic (pain and suffering) cases, and June urges your support of this cause in your state. She has enrolled in the Baltimore Pastoral Care Institute for a one-year program

Peggy Cromwell Taliaferro and Austin "are spending about 75% of our time in our new-old (100 yrs. old) house in Queenstown on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. One of our sons married last June, and another will be, this June. Judy Baldwin Waxter and I still play tennis (singles!) once a week in Baltimore." Judy writes that she and Bill "hiked Britain's Cotswolds for 100 miles, taking 10 days and spending nights at bed-and-breakfasts which ranged from stables to local pubs to restored ancient homes and gardens, with appropriately colorful hosts."

Kay Bryan Edwards has been elected chairwoman of the Board of Trustees of Sacred Heart College. She has also had an unpaid full-time job this year as Pres. of the Greensboro Opera Company, to say nothing of being "C.O." of her tribe: Bryan, commuting between Charlotte and Durham; Kathleen, transferred back from London by TIME, Inc., living on the "yuppier" west side of NYC, while sister, Laura, is in Greenwich Village; Piney, celebrating her law-school graduation with a six month trip through Asia; Melanie, producing third granddaughter last April; and Susan and husband in passage "between Washington, D.C. and Winston-Salem

Mary Virginia Grigsby Mallett and Gordon hope to visit their son, Bill, and family, again this year in Germany. Frances Pope Evans wrote from Houston. "Now that my daughter is married and living in Dallas, I am enjoying travelling — just back from New Zealand — unique in its beauty, diversity, friendliness, and difficult trout fishing (only big ones)."

Anne Henderson Bannard is about to install another of her creations — a 10 foot wall-hanging sculpture, speaking of enabling women and their strengths, in a national center for the YWCA. She and Yorke will move in May, to a townhouse near Tucson, with an incredible mountain view. Their #2 son (16 years old) is working for NBC, with his own weekly segment on high school issues and #1 son is attending law school (Boston) — especially interested, as a musician (as is his wife) in Law and the Arts.

My formerly Charleston-based son is moving to Indianapolis in July, to do a fellowship in hand surgery. But I hope to continue going to Charleston from Litchfield Beach — to see Mary Louis Stevens Webb and Rutledge Stevie says that "as of now, both children are home with us: Mary is an attorney at the Charlotte County Public Defender's office, and Rutledge, Jr. is working at a video store"

Patsy Davin Robinson saw Liz Fritzsche in Chicago, when the Robinsons' daughter received her master's degree in public policy from the Univ. of Chicago. Patsy and Sandy now have a granddaughter, Rebecca, born June '85, giving them one of each gender They had a mini-reunion with Sue Corning Mana and Maria Tucker Bowerlind '47 in MA where all were gathered for the wedding of Posey Bryan (Anne and Dick's daughter)

Katie Cox Reynolds's new business of importing furnishings from Latin America enables her to take trips with her partner, who is a decorator, and speaks fluent Spanish. Their shop in West Hartford center is named Catmina, a combination of the partners' names

Preston Hodges Hill's daughter, Margaret was married in Sept. Another highlight has been watching grandchild, David, Gene III's child, grow. Daughter, Ginny, has embarked on her doctorate in geology at the Univ. of Wyoming. After 27 years with Ideal Cement, Gene is now working as a consultant in cement and concrete for the Openaka Corp. The Hills enjoyed a 35th anniversary trip to 3 Hawaiian islands, and Preston and Margaret had a superb mother-daughter week in Bermuda to celebrate Margaret's MBA completion.

Larry Lawrence Simmons is delighted with her job as head of Trinity School in Midland, TX and Charles is teaching at the local college. Two of their children are now in Texas, only 5 to go

Our '86 question for the '89 questionnaire is "Are any of your children 'free spirits'?" If so, list area of endeavor. Only three years left for research on this — and "emptying garbage"

And — Sally — Don't fear for your wits, or your smarts, Your poem eclipsed all the arts. You provided my lead Which I really did need And, thanks, from our 49 hearts —

What a fantastic response to my plea for news. I looked forward to the mail each day and enjoyed reading all about you. Now it is your turn

From the south we hear from Anne Kirksey Ervin who feels blessed to have all her family close by. Her husband, Tate, is in real estate, her daughter, Dolly (named for Dolly Wallace Hartman) is an artist who hand-paints pottery and has two little girls. Son, Dan, is a CPA in Morganton and other son, David, is working as an assistant physical therapist while awaiting entrance to physical therapy school. Her youngest, Amy, is at UNCG majoring in therapeutic recreation. All have recently discovered the reality of Christ in the world and feel the difference He has made in their lives

Gloria Rawls Askew and Hank went out to the northwest and then on an Alaskan cruise a year ago to escape the New Orleans heat. Their oldest daughter, Allyson, is now in her fourth year of a general surgery residence at N.Y. Hospital, Cornell Medical Center. Next June, she will go on to do a fellowship in pediatric surgery in Oklahoma City. Their other daughter is in Houston teaching special ed. Gloria keeps busy volunteering at Tulane Univ. Hosp. and is on the Board of that Auxilliary.

Jane Yoe Duggan and John travel, play tennis, fish, hunt, and raise veggies in their backyard. Her daughter, Wendi Wood Thomas '81 and resident husband, Neal, live in Jacksonville where she works for Delta Airlines and her other daughter, Randi Wood completed a paralegal course and is working in Atlanta

Dolly Wallace Hartman continues to practice portrait painting while Jack practices medicine. Their son, John, graduated from Davidson in 1982 and is working in house construction in Winston-Salem. Elisabeth graduated magna cum laude from Princeton last year and is now working for Japan Times in Tokyo. Bill is a freshman at Davidson and Mary is in ninth grade.

Edie Norman Wombwell writes that our class is doing a little better donation-wise this year. We passed one of the eighteen classes that is always ahead of us, however, we need to keep plugging towards the biggy in 1988. Edie's oldest son, David, was married last summer and is a banker living in Louisville. Van graduates from Colorado College this year and Andy is a freshman at Northwestern. Van went to Africa a year ago on a geological grant. Edie and George ran into Ann Collins Teachout '54 and her husband in Boston last fall while attending George's Harvard Business School reunion

Jane Dawson Mudwilder traveled to England last fall and had a wonderful time. Her daughter, Tarrie, was married in January and her son, David, will graduate from college in June. Her other two sons are in business together. She saw Mary Kimball Grier during the summer of '85 and it was like old times. Mary's oldest son is working in NYC and her daughter in Boston. Her youngest son just graduated from college so Mary and her husband have more time to travel to Prague, Budapest, Vienna and London. At home she works with literacy volunteers both teaching students to read and tutors to teach

For all you soap fans, Eleanor Johnson Ashby's son, Linden plays

Curtis Alden in "Loving" and his wife, Susan, plays Lorna. Her two daughters are married, one living at Taft where her husband teaches English and the other planning to make Eleanor a grandmother this fall. The Ashbys have already been to England this year and plan a month this summer in France and Spain. Virginia Dunlap Shelton spent August 1985 in China and this year went to Mexico and England. Two of her sons are out of college and the youngest is a senior at UNC.

Now that Isabel Grayson Parish and Hav have retired from urology and have moved to a country French house outside Chapel Hill, they have time to travel — New Zealand and Australia last spring — and play lots of tennis and golf. Isabel's sons are all in Virginia, four married with three daughters, and the last just graduated from Univ. of Ga.

It was good to hear from Eleanor Hirsch Baer whose son, Ben III, was married July '85. She and Ben traveled to China and then on to Japan to attend a traditional Japanese wedding. They have broken ground on their almost-dream-house but did take time off to visit France and to celebrate Ben's birthday aboard the Sea Goddess. Eleanor stays busy sewing, boning up on her French and making tiles for their entry floor.

Kirk Tucker Clarkson and Jack went to London and Paris. While in Paris, Kirk saw her French family and looked up old haunts from her junior year in France. They will be in the tall ships parade on a 60' Chinese junk for the unveiling of the Statue of Liberty. They have a year old granddaughter compliments of their daughter, Polly. Kirk enjoys seeing Katty Turner Mears at functions of the Garden Club of Virginia of which Katty is president while Kirk is on the board. Katty is also president of the Association for the Preservation of Va Antiquities. Her youngest just graduated from UVA.

Janie Pieper Meredith is recovering from her move down the street and around the corner in order to gain a larger kitchen that she has always wanted. Thirty-four years plus 3 cats and 3 dogs made this move never to be repeated. Her big news is the birth of their grandson W.M.M. III. His parents are son, Massie and his wife who live a few blocks away. Her other son, Chris, and his wife live in Savannah where he is a stockbroker like his brother. Her daughter, Clair, is in real estate in Florida when not pursuing skydiving and her youngest daughter, Molly, is working in Richmond after graduating from Hollins. Bill continues his cattle farming operation at a distance from home but manages time for hunting when possible. They visited Europe for three weeks and Calif. for one week. Janie also mentioned the lovely wedding of Anne Elliot Caskie and Challen's daughter, Trudy, in Richmond in March. Anne and Challen are presently living in New Orleans but will return to Richmond when Challen retires the end of the year. Kitty Guerrant Fields and Lou and Nan Locke Rosa and Frank were on hand for the festivities. Nan and Frank enjoyed a mini reunion with Nan O'Keeffe and Anne and Challen in New Orleans in July '85. Nan is still a travel agent and on the side is remodeling their house.

Another lovely wedding was that of Katzy Baily Nager and C.J.'s son, Bailey, to Elizabeth Carr in Raleigh, Aug. '85. Both Elizabeth and Baily are in law school at UCLA and Katzy and C.J. are delighted to have them close by. Those of us at the wedding were M.A. Mellen Root and John, Kitty Guerrant Fields and Lou, Jane Perry Liles and George, Joan Brophy Tyree and Tom, Maggie Graves McClung and David, and Bob and I. M.A. is still very involved with the Greenville Humane Society and also works at Briar Patch Design which is owned by two SBC gals. M.A.'s daughter, Francie, is working in NYC and her son, Randy, is married and living in Houston. Her other son, David, is a lifeguard at Hilton Head. M.A. and her mother spent last Jan. on So. Padre Is., Tx. Kitty and Lou love their life in Alexandria and have more friends dropping in on them now that they are centrally located. Lou is off on many speaking engagements and Kitty is busy entertaining out-of-town friends who are happy. The Fields are back to stay. Jane and George travel between Concord and the beach which they love. They are raising 2 puppies from a litter of 10 they had last Xmas-Jane said best they can do since no grandchildren yet. Their son, Jock, is building custom houses and daughter, Perry, is working for a travel agency. Joan and Tom are preparing to move from their home in Albany to NYC. Johnny is at West Point and went to London with the squash team and David is at Trinity Pawling and went to Fla. with the tennis team. Katzy and C.J. spent two weeks in Spain to celebrate their 30th. Lots of sightseeing but time to enjoy the Costa del Sol and just relax. Their son, George, is at college in Santa Barbara and their youngest, Dwight, is at Yale.

Nan O'Keeffe is busy with her job at the Texas Medical Center but finds enough time to get involved in Republican politics. She was running for Republican Precinct Chairman.

Another who enjoys the political scene is Liz Ray Hessler who works for her congressman three days a week in Charlotte. The last of her four sons is a senior at Duke. Liz and Orm had been cross-country skiing in New Hampshire, a sport she had to learn being married to a "Yankee".

Ann Leonard Hodges writes from Texas that the year has been filled with travel. Skiing in Colorado then to Switzerland and France and trips to Alaska for fishing and Denmark for pheasant shooting.

Shirley Rankin Dumesnil's dream of having your children all employed has become a reality. Her daughter is married, living in Hoboken and nursing in Brooklyn. Son, Harry, is an architect in Phila. and other son, Ranklin, is helping on a thoroughbred farm in Goshen, Ky.

A newcomer to the South is Joan Arey Harrison who moved from Winnetka, Ill. to Greenville, S.C. last Dec. Her daughter, Stephanie, is in the interior design business in Corpus Christi and her other daughter, Tracy, just graduated from the Univ. of Arizona.

What fun to hear from Janet Martin Birney after all these years. Janet transferred from SBC our junior year but has remained active in alumnae groups. With three grown children living away from home, she and her husband have bought a book store which has proved to be a challenging, exciting and rewarding adventure.

Another transferee is Joan MacCoy Woolley Dean who writes that she hardly remembers a soul from UNC where she graduated but fondly remembers our class. Her oldest daughter, Jacqui Woolley, is working toward her doctorate in psychology at the Univ. of Mich., Lisa Woolley is working and attending night school in business, and Suzi Woolley graduated from Dickinson and is in corporate communications. Joan continues toward her goal of hiking the entire Appalachian Trail-only Virginia left to do. She also writes nature stories and poetry and has her own secretarial business. She would like to know if there are any "P.E.O.'s" in our class.

Ann Vlerebome Sorenson is doing everything she can to stop the nuclear arms race and would love to hear from others who are doing the same. She had a marvelous sabbatical last year going to two archeology field schools and visiting many ruins.

Mary Stagg Hamblett and Ken celebrated their 25th in Bermuda where they met. Mary is a part-time secretary at the Simbury Dept. of Continuing Educ. and Ken is still in the insurance business. Their oldest son, John, is a trader's assistant for First Boston in Phila., Marion is a senior at Trinity and coxswains the women's varsity crew, and Brooks is a soph. in high school interested in sports.

Jackie Lowe Young's two sons live 2 miles from each other in Decatur, Ga. Her daughter, Cameron, was awaiting college acceptance notices but definitely wants to go south. Jackie was chairman for PBS Ch 39's annual on-air auction a year ago and then recuperated by touring favorite spots along the east coast.

Betty Moore Baker is no longer teaching and wishes her three sons would marry so she could have little ones around. They are all back within shouting distance — Rex III in Bucks Co. working as a graphic designer, Mike a right-a-way agent for Buckeye Pipeline Co. and Jim in the investment business with "Pops". Betty has joined a literary group within AAUW and thoroughly enjoys it. She has to add that she had been to Stowe, Vt and Bermuda and hoped that looked impressive.

Margaret Johannessen Molstad and Gil have traveled from Geneva to Oslo where they have an apartment. When not in Europe or in Chatham, N.J., they spend their time at their home in Vt. Their oldest son is married, living nearby, and is an Asst. VP at Commercial Trust of N.J. Their other son is back from 5 months in Belgium and 6 months in Norway. He is now working for his father (ship brokers) in NYC.

Europe has seen a great deal of Anne Joyce Wyman and Joseph during the past year. They just returned from a spring vacation in Paris, Barcelona, Puerto de la Cruz and Tenerife in the Canary Is. Their daughter, Anneke, was trying to decide whether to go to Yale or Stanford. They are in the process of selling their apartment and moving back to where Anne's mother lived before her death. Joseph is Director of Commodity Research for Shearson-Lehman and Anne keeps busy at home.

Lynn Kerwin Byron and Jamie recently had dinner with Kitty and Lou Fields at Ann King Dietrich and Beau's new home in Great Falls. Va. Lynn has an internship at Shepard College completing an archeological sites survey in Shepherdstown and does volunteer work for the C&O Canal Library, local pony club and their historical society.

Sue Allison Bercaw and her family sailed through the British Virgin Is. stopping by Puerto Rico to see old friends. Her daughter, Nancy, has a fellowship at Univ. of Penn. to study for her doctorate in history. Her son, John, teaches at St. Albans in D.C. and her other son, Woodson, is a mathematician with an aerospace company in Colo.

Sallie Gayle Beck visited us last summer while in NYC for a jewelry show. She does a lot of business traveling to the south and midwest in addition to twice a year to Providence and NYC. She hopes to return to Mexico and the Maya archeological sites soon.

From the far west we heard from Kim Green Stone who still lives in Carson City, NV, and is very involved with Arabian horses. They have a small herd and Kim has been mentioned in several national Arab horse magazines for her part in a youth seminar in Reno. She also attended the International Arab Convention as a delegate for the third year. She is on an ad hoc citizens committee to build an Equestrian Convention Center in Carson City and in her spare time she and John are managing the Class A spring Arab show in Reno. Their daughter, Sara, is a sophomore at SBC and Kim, visiting her for parents'.

weekend, found SBC still lovely but much changed since our days.

Betty Boone Lewis wondered if anyone remembered her after all these years. Of course we do and it was wonderful to hear from her. Her husband, Hal, is director for Computer Sciences Corp. and they enjoy the aerospace, flight test, space shuttle community where they live which is near Edwards AFB north of LA. They have six children and two grandchildren. They recently purchased an English Tudor home on 2½ acres — a true fixer-upper

Ginger Timmons Ludwick and her mother spent five weeks seeing the world from Singapore to Suez on a small Greek chartered ship. They used planes to cover the inland routes plus elephant, camel and foot power. Her husband, Dave, met them in Piraeus. Their son, Wick, graduated from American Univ. last May. Ginger is still very involved in real estate and loving their Calif. life

Patti Tighe Walden now divorced, still loves teaching kindergarden. Her last child, Emily, starts Trenton State College this year.

Our overseas classmate, Nancy Goldie McTaggart, gave up teaching and was pensioned for health reasons in 1983. Last year was her first full 12 months without operations since 1980. Her first grandson was born to her daughter, Kate, who was a St Andrews exchange student at SBC 1977-78. She and Kate are working on her granddaughter, Isobel, so that they can become the first grandmother-daughter trio of foreign students at SBC. Her younger daughter, Isobel, was married a year ago and both she and her husband work for a US company. Nancy is planning on coming in '88, as I hope you are, for she said our 25th was such a super experience. She sends good wishes to all plus her address as she would love to have us visit — 2 Lightfoot Grove, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 3HU, England. Telephone Basingstoke (0256) 21998

Our year ended on a sad note with the death of my mother in December. Our son, David, is a 2nd Lt. in the Marines and has been assigned to El Toro, Calif. Thank you for all your news — please keep in touch.

Reunion is coming — are you? The dates are May 22-24, 1987, so clear your calendars, start your diets, and call your best friends to make sure you'll all be there together. Several of us will begin planning this month, so any suggestions for activities or officers, or what to include in the questionnaire for the scrapbook, will be appreciated. Send to me or Duffy

Some of you have moved and most of you have not. Linda Falvey Rowland went from Washington, DC to Austin, TX. Louisa Morton Ordahl moved from Annapolis to Portland, ME. Does anyone have current addresses for Muriel Murphy Waterman, Carolyn Swift Fleming, or Virginia Weed Brown?

You read something about Chips Chao Pai's trip to China in the spring issue, but they also had a private trip afterward to Kweilin, Hong Kong and Taiwan. It had been 35 years since either she or David had been in the country of their birth. It was followed by a week in Florida with their sons, and almost immediately by symptoms which led to David having quintuple bypass surgery. Chips used the remainder of her sabbatical to tend to him, postponing her plans to learn some computer programming skills. Now that he's recovering nicely, it's computer time

Fran Childress Lee and Lewis still commute weekends to their Florida ranch from Jacksonville. They enjoyed a Baltic cruise last summer and found Leningrad fascinating, then took children and new grandchild born May 1, 1985 to Zermatt, Switzerland for two weeks at Christmas

Jane Campbell Englert, Manorville, PA, has an "Apple" computer in her schoolroom which she enjoys and uses for reading remediation and the school newspaper as well. She teaches seven different reading and English classes in grades 7-12. A three-week trip last year to the British Isles yielded slides for her English lit class. John took early retirement and is now writing a history of his home town, Ford City, PA, producing piles of papers, pictures, microfilm etc. all over the house

Diane Duffield Wood has grey hairs popping out in Oak Brook, IL now that Kay, married in October 85, is expecting this October and Pam was expecting in May. Chip was to graduate from Hillsdale C. in May — no more tuition, says Sandy. Duffy says we should all "Think 30th in '87."

Dot Duncan Hodges, Charlotte, NC, asks what to do about our middles, our hair, our brains! Babs Falge Openshaw, Rockville, MD, has two sons who've bought houses nearby, a daughter who graduated from UVA in History of Architecture and is working nearby, and a son who pulled a six-month tour of duty in the Persian Gulf and does not recommend it as an A#1 resort. Jeanne Fenrick Bedell teaches at Virginia Commonwealth U. in Richmond, VA, and is president-elect of the Popular Culture Assoc. of the South, having served last year as program chair. Becky is getting her Ph.D from Yale in American art history, spending a year as a fellow at the Smithsonian. Matthew is a real estate developer in Cambridge, and John is in graduate school at Indiana U., studying late medieval and early modern history

We extend sincere sympathy to Nancy Fink Leeds who wrote in December that her husband Alan had passed away very unexpectedly last summer (85). Her children are no longer at home but were very helpful. She's in NYC

Jane Fitzgerald Treherne-Thomas's garden club in Sewickley, PA, was helping prepare for the annual meeting of the Garden Club of America in Pittsburgh in May 86. So that her 50th wouldn't count, she and Jeremy celebrated it out of the country, in England, Scotland and Wales in summer 1985. She was hoping for a repeat visit to Nantucket to see Stella Moore McClintock and Jock, whom they visited last summer

Hope you noticed that Nancy Godwin Baldwin is now back on the (part-time) job at SBC, as editor of this publication! Congratulations, Nancy! Spring was her first issue, and she said it was lots of fun. We are invited to send ideas for articles or to submit articles ourselves, and to be here for reunion in '87

Dagmar Halmagyi Yon is working for the San Diego Dept. of Social Services managing about 150 families of welfare recipients, with hundreds of changing situations each month, and feels more useful than when she supervised 48 paper boys! She camps, travels, and does cultural things. Joe and his wife were soon to return from a year in England and the continent; Steven is a graduate student in Planetary Science at Brown U and Laura married last summer and lives nearby

Lee Haskell Vest is an hour from NYC in New Canaan, CT and was going to Paris for Easter for the dedication of a statue at the American Cathedral done by her cousin Beverly Benson Seamans SBC '50. Graham is in grad school at Columbia Teachers Coll. Sallie graduated from Franklin and Marshall last May and is in grad school at Oregon State. Lee and George visited and loved the Northwest

Char Heuer DeSerio and Fran, Bryn Mawr, PA, went to Buenos Aires and Rio and saw Halley's Comet. Small world dept: Her son Bill was best man for Jane Pinckney Hannahan's nephew in Charleston in January, so they had a nice visit. Saynor Johnson Ponder sends word from Macon, GA, that they are halfway through educating their children. Bert graduated from W&L, and Eleanor from Hollins, and both are working in Atlanta. Saynor and Bill are both still at home

petro-chemical disaster area near Lakes Charles, LA, where lines get longer and longer at their church's food center — 200 bags of groceries are distributed every week to anyone in line — no questions asked. She still teaches a little Latin at the local U. and enjoys volunteer work, especially with the Altar Guild and Symphony Board. Husband Sam was to attend an NEH seminar in Rome this summer, with George (12) and Elizabeth (14) and Elaine joining him for a few weeks, and having a stop in London to see Clare Harrison Greenman.

Ninie Laing's niece Noel Laing was a freshman at SBC last year and gave Ninie fresh insight into dorm life. Noel plans to follow her father to veterinary school. Ninie's bed and breakfast business is an hour from Dulles, open weekends during the year and anytime during summer. Her big frazzle is that her business and her SBC life are geographically separated, but she loves them both, and encourages visitors

From Kilmarnock, VA, Peggy Liebert Dobbins writes that son Blair finished law school May '85 and will marry this November. Her husband Gene commutes one week out of six to Philadelphia and Long Island for his own advertising business, and they both work with the youth in their local Baptist church

The Alumnae Office sent a note last fall that Nannette McBurney Crowdus would be on a one year assignment in Washington, DC, commuting there every week from Chicago for the National Assoc. of Realtors

Marguerite McDaniel Wood sends word from Montgomery, AL that her daughter Marguertie (15) is now at St. Catherine's in Richmond, which allows good visits with Anne Gwinn Fox and Mary Ann Vandervoort Large. Beth McMahon Tolbert and Jim think it important that their children go to school where their parents want to visit. Accordingly, their youngest is in boarding school on Cape Cod; a daughter is at Duke U.; a son is at Stanford; and one married son is in Oklahoma City, OK, where they are. They have lots of free time since her husband's decision to liquidate his business, with the kids all away. Kim McMurtry Fowler writes from Austin TX (but not all that legibly). I think they go on world cruises from January to April, operate two riverboats May to October, breed golden retrievers, and she works as an investigator for a local law firm specializing in defense employment discrimination.

At long last, Barbara Medert Sylvester writes to say they have been in Houston, TX 15 years. She and George had a cruise through the Panama Canal and live on a golf course. He's with Merrill Lynch wrestling the bond market; Barbie has done massive volunteering with Jr League, PTA, "played tennis until crippled," and now substitute teaches at Jr. High John (24) is a computer programmer with Crown Oil; Andy (19) is a first-year student at Texas Tech in Lubbock and a varsity golfer; and Doug is a high school junior planning to study engineering at U. Texas

Suzy Neblett Stephens' daughter Nell, Mrs. Richard May SBC 81, had baby Elynor Lee May on Sept. 30, 1985. Joy Peebles Massie, Goochland, VA, had just returned from England and Scotland where they visited their daughter, who is taking a break from UVA and spending a year at St. Andrews where one of her best friends is an exchange student from SBC. Joy is halfway through a master's at U. Richmond, and was looking forward to a first grandchild in June

Jane Pinckney Hanahan has lived in her house in Charleston longer than she's lived anywhere in her life, and she enjoys the harbor view. Her great interest now is preservation through the Historic Charleston Foundation and the Robert E. Lee Memorial Assoc., owner of Stratford Hall Plantation. Carlisle clothes keep her busy part time. Bill was to graduate from UVA in June; Maria works in Washington DC; and Anne finished Charleston Day School (8th grade) in May

Her new job as Director of Corporate Relations at the new National Rehabilitation Hospital in Washington, DC keeps Susan Ragland Lewis busy and traveling. Her youngest is getting married and will live on Long Island; Jenny works for Izod Lacoste in NYC and lives in Darien CT; and Jim Jr. at Nat'l Bank of NC lives in Tampa, FL. Jenny and Jim Jr. are already married

Dee Robin had a wonderful sabatinal — loved Chicago and the Newberry Library — but it's back to work this fall at UNM. She's looking forward to seeing everyone at reunion Carolyn Scott Arnold loves living in Honolulu, where Mark was transferred by Gannett in April 85. She expected to see Virginia Marks Paget in May at her son Steve's graduation from Miami U. in Oxford, OH.

Chris Smith Lowry has retired to play a bit after 10 years of managing the Equestrian Center for Seabrook Island, the resort near Charleston, SC where she and Britt live. He continues to run the Episcopal Church's St. Christopher Camp & Conference Center there. Their daughter Tina was to be married June 1st, with some classmates coming to the wedding. Chris left SBC after junior year and was expecting Tina when she came back for our graduation. Son Brink is home after 4 years of computer work in the army

Mary Landon Smith Brugh works two days at the local weekly paper in Clifford, VA, and still does substitute teaching. Carter lives in Richmond and works for Investors; Spencer lives in Norfolk and teaches 2nd grade at Va. Beach; Lynn IV was to graduate from UVA in May; Mason is a first year student at U. Richmond; and Mary

Eliza Stevens writes: "I am certain I hold 2 class honors — the youngest grandmother (my grandson will be 6 in June) and the most married — John Herbert Burton is my 4th husband. I also have something to crow about. Ross, my youngest, was accepted by both U. California at Berkeley and San Diego. He has been quadriplegic since birth and is in a wheelchair. I am proud of his accomplishments. I just moved to (Canoga Park) CA and I miss Denver dreadfully — especially the skiing."

Word from Carol Turner Crosthwait in Waco, TX is that they have two in grad school and two weddings coming up. She lists her occupation as ex-teacher and volunteer. Carol was with us only our first year; it's nice to have her news.

Mary Anne Van Dervoort Large, Richmond, VA, says Anne is a first year student at W&L. Elizabeth (15) used her life savings to buy an organ and fills the house with lovely music, and Mary Catherine (13) is an enthusiastic 8th grader and basketball player.

Cynnie Wilson Ottoway is in Grosse Point Farms, MI and was co-chair of Jr. League of Detroit Show House in May. Her kids and step-kids keep her and John busy: Amy played varsity hockey and lacrosse at SBC in her first year here; Elizabeth SBC 82 was to be married June 21; John III was to marry Sept. 13 in Philadelphia; Michael was to graduate from U. Michigan in May; Andrew finished sophomore year at Miami of Ohio; Allison lives in Helena, Montana with husband Emerson Scott and two children, Nicole age 2 and Emerson IV born Oct. 28, 1985; Otto is a First Lt. in the Marines at Camp Pendleton, CA.

Lee Wittich Morrow, Dodgeville, WI, planned to visit SBC in August and see Helene Perry and Betty Murden Michelson, then see her mother in New Jersey. She and Paul expected to check out Frances May Burton's craft shop in a resort area of Wisconsin at the end of May. Margery Johnson was elected chairman of the North Carolina Symphony Board of Trustees. A nice article about her volunteer work appeared in the Raleigh News and Observer

Fritz and I expect a second grandchild in August. Our oldest, Laurie, is studying for the ministry at McCormick Seminary in Chicago (which was something of a culture shock after leaving the mountains of North Carolina). Lois was elected to Phi Beta Kappa at U. Rochester, NY as an optics major in her junior year, and has already been accepted for graduate study. Two other girls are married, and we have two boys in high school. We continue our church activities and western square dancing. Hope to see many of you at reunion, and write my last column!

to Reunion '86)

Jan and I have thoroughly enjoyed being class secretaries for the last six years. We have now turned the job over to Louise Cobb Boggs, selected at reunion. We hope she will have the same support and enthusiasm which we have received.

Anne Semmes Stauroopoulos still lives in Athens. Her older son is at the U. of Oregon and the younger at Embury-Riddle in Arizona.

Sally Mathiasen Prince has opened her 8th shop, The Lemon Twist, in Richmond. Her daughter lives in Boston and one son is at Yale, while the other is at Landon School

Mandy Moltz Funkhouser spent 15 years working in the mental health and psychiatric rehabilitation field but is now working at home and enjoying being with her six-year-old daughter. Mandy's husband, Rob, is an internist with the Rutgers Community Health Plan

Alicia Laing Salisbury is serving a 4-year term in the Kansas Senate

Dale Cooper lines in W. Bloomfield, MI, a Detroit suburb and has worked for General Motors for 21 years. She is in charge of stockholder relations

Holly Chaikowski Davis still lives in Lebanon, Pa., where her husband Rick, is an attorney. Their older daughter, after graduating from Wellesley, is doing graduate work in philosophy at the University of Toronto. The younger one is a freshman at Johns Hopkins University Willouby Applegate Ansell now lives in Charlotte since her husband was transferred from NYC with Royal Ins. Willouby spends a great deal of time riding.

Janna Staley Fitzgerald and husband Bob spent a week in Killington, VT last winter discovering what "real" skiing is all about. Their son Scott was with them and they were joined by their older son, Robert.

Robert lives and works in Brookfield Ctr., Conn., and attends Western Connecticut University.

Sally Hamilton Staub and Richard also live in Charlotte. Sally is still Special Arrangements Manager for the Science Museums of Charlotte

Lucy Israel Oliver was sorry to have missed reunion. At the time, she was on a business trip with her husband who is a senior V.P. with Mellon Bank. Lucy works at Merrill Lynch Realty in Fox Chapel, Pa., as a real estate agent. Their daughter, Margie, is at Davidson College and son, Trip, at Vanderbilt

Fran Brackenridge Neumann is in charge of marketing and P.R. for a chemical dependency rehabilitation unit in California

Anne Farnum has been president of the Essex Institute in Salem, Mass. since the fall of 1984. She is the first woman to be president of the Institute, which consists of a museum, library and several historic houses in the city of Salem

Annabelle Ansley Sharp lives in San Antonio, TX, where she rides, raises and breeds quarter horses. She and husband, Thomas, an attorney, have three daughters

Julia Chapin Johnson has moved to Contoocook, NH. She is a registered nurse and has two daughters and one son

Nancy Coppedge Lynn lives in Atlanta and is an interior designer and owner of an antique shop

Ann Sinwell Gabor is the assistant to the controller of a food broker company. She and John have two children, both attending Michigan State University

Rosalie Owings Grant volunteers in a hospital gift shop and works on an administrative level in a social work agency

Winifred Storey Davis is V.P. of Storey Theatres, Inc. in Atlanta. She and Trade, an attorney, have three sons: Frank III, Frederick and Jordan

Sarah Finnegan Lycett lives in Pennsylvania and is president of an international medical publisher's

Patti Birge Tyson is an attorney and a member of the U.S. Postal Rate Commission

Deeda Hill Bradford lives in Winter Haven, FL, with her husband and three sons. She is involved in volunteer work and traveling

Judith Rohrer Davis is a volunteer with the local ambulance service and at a center for victims of violent crime. She has three sons: Jonathan, Frederick and Timothy

Carolyn Foster Meredith lives in Baltimore with her husband and four sons. In 1984 she completed her R.N. degree but is now at home. Carolyn is involved in volunteer work and finds that her work with the elderly is what she prefers. She helps people learn to survive with a shrinking budget and to obtain the maximum benefit of community services

Sheila Haskell Smith has spent many years working for the Cleveland Orchestra, Cleveland Opera and Northern Ohio Opera Assoc. She and her husband have two children in college and a 13-year-old daughter.

Polly Chapman Herring is in Houston where she is a "sometime" interior designer and a volunteer at St. John's School. She and husband Fred have three children

Faith Bullis Sebring has 4 teenagers — a daughter at Villanova and 3 boys in high school. Faith is still teaching H.S. math. She had 2 discs removed from her back last summer but is now playing tennis and riding again

Penny Stanton Meyer had a good reunion with Bee Newman Thayer in Hanover, NH, in March. Son, David, graduates from Deerfield Academy and goes to Bowdoin College this year; daughter, Susannah, is a sophomore at Loomis Chaffee in Windsor, CT. Penny is still teaching first grade

Claiborne Smith Jones holds down the homefront while husband, Bobby, travels constantly designing golf courses. Son, Trent, is a freshman at Wesleyan U. and daughter, Tolly, is a 5th grader. Claiborne edits Tolly's school newsletter; volunteers at Filoli, a National Historic Trust home; acts in local theatre productions and takes creative writing courses at the community college

With memories of our 20th reunion now a year old, it was wonderful to receive more news from so many cards. Our past secretary, Whitney Jester Rantstrom has moved to Boca Raton, FL. I thank her for her good advice and the fine job she did with past news.

At reunion Kay Knopf Kaplan and husband, Bob, had moved from California to San Antonio, TX. Last September they moved back — same city, same house. Bob's 2 teenage sons and Kay's 15 yr. old son, Tag, live with them. They are starting a new business to market new products, and Kay is again working in the community to raise funds for local public education

Alice Virginia Dodd, who was at reunion, was named outstanding school media librarian in Jefferson Co., KY, last year

A very sad topic at reunion was the death of Liz Currey Foster on December 9th, 1984. She fought a long battle with leukemia and handled her life with great intelligence and deep sensitivity

Magda Salvesen is no longer teaching at the Berlitz School of Languages but is working as executive administrator for a peace group — Architects/Designers/Planners for Social Responsibility. Its aim is to prevent destruction of our civilization by nuclear war

Saralyn McAfee Smith, Hamp and children, Laura, 3, and Robbie, 2, will be traveling from Dodge City, KS this summer to visit family in Georgia, South Carolina and New Jersey. She enjoys needlework, reading and aerobics.

I had lengthy and exciting news from Brooke Patterson Mahlstedt. She, Paul and sons Doug, 14, and Andrew, 10, will be returning from Panama this summer to the USA and their old address in Annadale, VA. Brooke led a tour to Peru; had a family trip to Ecuador; led a tour to Guatemala where she saw Alice Perry Parks; and then led a tour to Ecuador. Once settled in Annadale, she plans to organize a tour to Guatemala from the west and east coasts; if interested, write her

Another classmate abroad, Bonnie Chapman McClure wrote: "Still in Paris living on a barge at Pont Neuf. Saw Polly Jose Earl and darling son this summer in England."

Some of us had exciting travels. Belle Williams Smith wrote she had an interesting tour of South Africa and military bases along the Angolan and Namibian borders in Nov. Her oldest daughter is to visit SBC as a prospective student. She is also deciding on a career, as her youngest enters first grade this fall in Roanoke

Sherry Bradford Christhill had a great trip to Ireland in the Fall of '85. Her four kids are doing well. Skiing in Aspen in '86. Spent the summer skiing (2 oldest girls with Chris Kilcullen Thurlow's children) in Switzerland on Swiss Challenge Program. Sherry is still designing needlepoint and is taking painting lessons at MIA in Baltimore

Steve and I celebrated our 20th anniversary touring England and Scotland last summer. The highlight was a week's walking tour through Yorkshire. Mike, 17, Alix, 15, and Katie, 12, joined us when we flew to Washington and Oregon for a family reunion. I am still enjoying my pre-school job — teaching 4 yr. olds

Mary K. Lee McDonald's eldest, John III (15½) has become an Eagle Scout! Bryan (11½) has earned his Webelos Arrow of Light and is just starting in the Boy Scouts. The whole family will be in New Mexico again this summer at the Philmont Boy Scout Ranch from a trip to Israel in March on the day of the Libyan crisis! She still teaches pre-school, art classes and aerobics, sings in the choir and helps with a Jr. Activity Group at church. Son Marcus, 17, is at the School of Science and Mathematics in Durham, NC; Rebecca, 14, is a cheerleader; Damantha, 12, is a ballerina. Husband Jim is "still lawyering and dabbling with building a steel-hull boat"

After settling in Grand Rapids, MI Dryden Childs Murck and her family have been transferred to Whippany, NJ. They'll move this summer, though next fall her daughter will board at Interlocken Arts Academy in N. Michigan and her son will be at school in Ohio

Sallie Mullins Thompson is enjoying her 11 yr. old daughter Kathryn, who loves reading, ballet and tennis. Sallie is very challenged by her job with IBM in Houston. Her territory now includes large banks

Traylor Rucker is enjoying life in New Orleans — but the Navy may be transferring her in January

Congratulations are due Pryor Hale, associate professor of Psychology and executive director of the Piedmont Virginia Community College Foundation. She has been named winner of the Chancellor's Fellowship for study at UVA's Curry School of Education

Mibs Sebring Raney and family are happily settled in Charlottesville, VA. With her field in Gerontology she is marketing herself to area businesses. Mibs taught a course at Piedmont Va Community College under Pryor Hale this fall and will be speaking on the problems older women face at SBC reunion in May

After 15 years with the USDA, Genie Dickey Caldwell has moved to the Oschner Medical Foundation, a very large hospital in New Orleans, to establish their data base management function. She now feels able to plan and manage her work the way she thinks it should be done

Stating it as: "a truly delightful season in my lifetime," Kathleen Watson Taylor is enjoying her family in Washington, NC. Her husband, Marshall, is a radiologist. Carney, 16, Ann, 12, and Selden, 8, are all active in school and sports. She continues to be active in church, Bible Study and physical activities

After receiving her masters in Gifted Education from the Univ. of S. Florida, Betsy Knode Newton has been teaching gifted 6th-8th graders in Fort Myers, FL for 6 years. Her daughter Laura is a freshman at U.Va. in the School of Architecture. She and husband Jim also keep busy with a 16-year-old son, 14-year-old step-daughter and an old house with a rambling yard.

Trudy Dowd Hatch will finish her masters degree program June 6th. She will rest a bit and continue with counseling couples and families at a church agency in Seattle

In Boston, Bunny Sutton Healy is having a wonderful and busy time with son Eben, 3, and his sister Elizabeth, nearly 2

Sally McCrady Hubbard's two children are at the University of Texas in Austin — daughter, Anne, studying art and archaeology and son, Hayne in computer science

Carol Reitsnyder Rhoads feels "right in the forefront of scientific research" from the immunology lab in Lexington, KY where she does research with AIDS and cancer. Her oldest daughter, 17, is looking at colleges; Richard, 14, is into soccer and piano, and Benjamin, 10, is enjoying Boy Scouts. In 1987 her husband, Bob will be on sabbatical in Vienna, so Carol must start studying German

Director of Research for the National Restaurant Association, Susan Fedeler Mills addressed the 66th annual convention of the NRA with findings of a 1985 Gallup Survey which measured the popularity of 15 specialty restaurants, including pizza delivery

Dabney Williams McCoy has an 11th grade son looking at colleges, an 8th grade son going on an exchange program to France this spring, and a 1st grade daughter. Dabney is in charge of her 25th reunion at St Catharines. She enjoyed seeing Jane Merkle Borden and family in Maine and Richmond last summer

This past year was the first taste of "an empty nest" for Merrily Austin Teasley. Her daughters are all away in school — Christi, 20, is a junior at RI School of Design; Angy, 19, is a freshman at the School of Visual Arts, NYC; and Bettie, 15, is a sophomore at Phillips Academy in Andover, MA. She and her husband, Charlie are still innkeeping at "Edgeworth Inn" their 1896 Victorian Bed & Breakfast in Monteagle, TN. Merrily is also Rental Manager for the Monteagle Assembly (Southern Chautauqua) and welcomes any SBC visitors

Libba Hanger Luther also welcomes classmates on their way to Disney World now that she and Steve have moved to the Orlando area (Fern Park, FL). They love the Christian School there and the church where she has a part-time job be typical of our class. She works parttime for Urban Development Action Grant Program, is active in the PTA as VP and editor of newsletter, and secretary of the neighborhood civic association. Husband Dan is busy with his graphic design business in Washington and coaching Amanda (7½)'s soccer team. Patrick (9) is also an avid soccer player. Their "sparetime" is spent working on the second year of an addition to their house

Lynn Pearson Russell writes from Chevy Chase, MD. Daughter Emily was born in December, joining Edward (4). Lynn is back at the National Gallery and is busier than ever. Bill is in his last year of pediatric residency so they will be looking at various locales

Melinda Koester Lopez has begun a new job as marketing executive, working with the director of the US Chamber of Commerce. She had a serious bout of mono so got a trip to Rio as part of her recuperation. She also went to Alumnae Council in Oct. and spent the Christmas season purchasing then selling Christmas trees for her daughter's school

From the beautiful north Georgia mountains, Helen Willingham Hildreth writes of her weaving studio and contemporary crafts and folk art gallery. She has a 2-year-old son, Frank. She is involved with an environmental group working to preserve the national forests

Martha Brewer continues working hard in her private practice in OB-Gyn in New Orleans. In addition to practicing medicine, she's struggling with malpractice rates and alternative health delivery systems

Another physician dealing with government red tape is Claudette Harloe Dalton who has established a solo private practice in Charlotte. She was recently elected to UVA Medical School Alumni Board. She does volunteer work with medical students, scouts, and church. Her son Myson has become a good golfer and an aviation buff

Elizabeth Wyatt travels to Europe several times a year for business and had a nice visit last spring in London with Kathy Kibbee Paterson. Elizabeth and husband John have finished renovating a second townhouse in Park Slope, Brooklyn

Mary Nelson Wade divides her time between 2 different schools for DeeDee (9) and Mary Fall (7) and her office at Wade & Egbert Inc. The challenge is remembering which place she's supposed to be.

Our First Lady of Arizona, Hattie Coons Babbitt writes that Bruce will not run for re-election. He has been traveling for the National Democratic Party. Hattie's had a great year with Christopher (10) and T.J. (8) bicycling and skiing

Jan Holt wrote of a wonderful trip to Kenya/Tanzania in Jan. She remarked it was better than the movie except for the absence of Robert Redford. Having grown up in Florida, Jan still loves Denver and the West

In Florida, Mimi Stockover Hull writes that son Todd is a freshman at Emory & Henry. She's talking SBC to her 9th grade daughter who's thinking Hawaii. Mimi is an instructor/counselor with the Displaced Homemaker program at Florida Jr College

Win Waterman Lundy sent her Christmas card with a Happy Easter greeting. Her 2 boys are really growing. She's involved with a Festival of Trees in Bettendorf and reported seeing my name on some material from the Festival in Atlanta

Blair Josephs Rohrer and Ivon spend a lot of time at their mountain home with their children, Anna Blair (7) and Ivon (8). Blair is taking a course in computer literacy to keep up with the children, plays tennis and is involved with drug education

Marney Millan Upson is alive and well, still living in Cincinnati. She's president of the Parents Association at her daughter's school and in charge of the Junior League of Cincinnati's involvement with their city's bi-centennial celebration

Ginny Stanford Perdue's challenge is caring for her 92-year-old grandmother who lives with them while at the same time keeping up with the many activities of a 6, 10, and 13 year old

Congratulations to Beth Beckner Henke who is finishing the course work for her doctorate in international health training. She plans to try freelance consulting in third world countries, primarily Africa

Kathy Blythe Southerland is returning to her role of wife, mother, cook and chauffeur for Liza (14) and J.J. (10) after a year as president of the Charlotte Jr. League. Her husband Bill is in the construction business and they had a fabulous trip to Japan in the fall

Mary Chesnutt Hunt and husband are planning a summer trip to Vancouver. A nice break from the routine of a 2-career family with 4 children. All 4 children are doing well in school

Yet another traveller is Cynthia Mays who is planning a trip to Amsterdam for a Billy Graham Conference and some extra days in Germany, Austria and Switzerland. She continues her work with Trinity Presbyterian Church in Charlottesville

Betsy Blackwell Laundon's family was planning a 10 day Panama Canal cruise to celebrate some big birthdays in her family. Betsy keeps busy with Girl Scouts, Bible study, SBC board work and teaching a knitting class

Joan Adriance Mickelson described herself as a college graduate torn between being a "housewife" and needing more outside stimulation. She gets that coaching and teaching tennis as well as playing. Husband Charlie heads up an English program at Ohio University, and 3 busy children do many sports, music, church, scouts and 4-H projects

A new experience for Elizabeth Lewis Thier is mothering Matthew born June 1985. Elizabeth is back at her psychiatric practice 3 days a week while finishing one part of her psychoanalytic training at the C.G. Jung Institute. She was looking forward to a trip to Scotland, and to staying in castles and inns

Fran Robinson Boyer and family moved to Muttentz, Switzerland last summer when Parke's company was bought by a Swiss outfit. They would love to see any SBC friends travelling their way. Her children attend an English school and Fran is taking German classes

Hope that by the time this is printed Jane Banks Petrey has moved to Austin, Texas. She and her 2 children Banks (7) and McRae (4) are staying in Ala. till their house sells (8 months at the time of her postcard). Her husband moved in Sept. to begin work with a redwood lumber company and the family is anxious to join him

Bryan Alphin Bente is in her 2nd year of adjusting to life in Calif. She knows about earthquakes and was missing springtime in Virginia. Daughter Katharine was born in Nov and has slept 3 nights in her life. After 10 weeks, Bryan returned to work in the biotechnology field. Her other challenge is a busy 4 year old son

Tessa Predmore Gaddis loves living in Oakland and, like many, balances a job and mothering. Her newest job is information systems broker for her husband Michael's architectural firm and others. She also sells fine art and reproductions as a sideline. Her favorite job is mothering 3 children — dancing, gardening, painting, reading and laughing with them

Jan Huguenin Assmus was anxiously awaiting spring after a long Vermont winter. She reports the skiing was great but she can't keep up with her daughters Marion and Julie. Gert is still the associate dean at the Tuck School

Another 69er in Vermont is Meny Hill Brooks who is about to finish her graduate program. Her friends in Atlanta hope she will return here for a job but there may be some reasons to stay up there

Mabry Chambliss DeBuys wrote of learning the lesson of enjoying each day after a serious bout of pneumonia and being on a respirator for 2½ months. She is the only woman partner in a 40-person law firm in Seattle and has married an attorney whom she met there who is from Birmingham and whose mother went to SBC

Sue Scanlan is still battling for us for women's rights. Her husband Jared has acquired a growing reputation as a gourmet cook. They have survived a redecorating project of their townhouse in Alexandria which Sue described as humbling and slightly

Jane Merriam Hildt comments that her lifestyle is hectic, which seems to

bankrupting

Mary Mahan Marco is teaching math at Bucks County Community College using computer labs which she described as a great step from punching computer cards at SBC. She sees Sue Roessel Gibson and Phyllis Girard for lunch at least once a year.

Michael Nexsen Robertson had a son last July and was busy as treasurer of the Richmond Jr. League trying to collect dues from 1200 members. She also is very involved with the older children's schools. She sees Sherry Irving Titus sometimes

Atlee Walker Wolf has retired from teaching after 13 years and is studying to be certified as a sign language interpreter. She and John still love Baltimore where they have a new home which they are still decorating. She was planning a New York shopping spree for daughter Jessica (12) for spring break

Another busy classmate is Liz Beach Baker who has 3 children going in opposite directions. She chaired a benefit for Le Bonheur Children's Medical Center which featured the Four Tops and will be VP of the Junior League of Memphis next year. She and Tom are planning a Europe trip in Sept. and hope to go by SBC on their way to Tom's reunion in May at W&L

Our class seems to enjoy traveling a lot. Jean Rushin Brown told of "adult" trips to Hawaii and Phoenix and family trips to Disney World, Colorado, and New Hampshire. When she's home, she's busy on the nursery school board, Jr. League nominating committee, and Family & Childrens Aid

Pat Winton Schlingmann and her husband Rick are franchisees with Jiffy Lube—a fast oil change business. Pat runs the day-to-day operations of 10 stores and they hope to open 10 more. She reported a wonderful trip taking 3 children from LA to San Francisco then to Denver by train Darlene Pierro was in the middle of rehearsals of Camelot for 75 5th-12th graders. That did take me back to our May Day theme a mere 19 years ago. Darlene is head of the middle school at Maret School in DC and also teaches math and geometry. She has taken groups of high school students to study in France and visited the family she lived with during Sweet Briar's Junior Year in France. Her "spare" time is spent working on her house.

Kay Hutton Eadie is busy working for Coldwell Banker leasing downtown office space in Nashville. Both boys, Hutton (7) and Baker (11) are busy and growing too fast

Carol Osborn works as an administrative assistant to a VP of Human Resources and holds 2 church soloist positions while studying opera. She has 2 red dachshunds

Ann Tremain Lee wrote that she and Saint are enjoying watching their girls grow up. Maria is 13 and babysits so her parents can get out. Cameron is 10 and can't wait to start a new school; and Allison is 8

Liz Medaglia wrote the most romantic news of the class. While on a trip to Paris and Geneva, she was proposed to in a little park just off the Pont Neuf by Joseph Sinnott — and she accepted. They will be married in the fall. Her law practice takes her to New York quite a bit.

Edna Ann Cunningham White enjoys her work as a reference librarian for the South Carolina State Library

I had lunch about 2 weeks ago with Haden Ridley Winborne, Missy Summer Huggins, and Nancy Wendling Peacock. It was as pleasant as coffee and cinnamon toast at Boxwood Inn. It's a joy to have SBC friends close by Missy's cooking business, Missy's Madness, keeps her very busy. She is very popular as a caterer and her friends always enjoy a sample. Tennis and carpooling fill her other time. Daughter Samantha (9½) enjoys horseback riding and Drew (5½) is just plain busy. Bob is head of the government unit at Salomon Brothers.

Haden and Nancy have run the Admissions/Provisional program for the Atlanta Jr. League this year. Haden chaired the committee and Nancy coordinated one of the courses. Haden survived a major redecorating and adding on to her home and hopes to find time now for sewing and keeping up with John and their 9½-year-old twin girls

Nancy stays busy constantly. Her husband Tom is still traveling to Saudi Arabia and now Holland. She is still involved as secretary of the High Museum of Art Members Guild, serves on several Jr. League committees, and the mothers' club at school. She's looking forward to a fun summer of tennis, swimming, and the beach

As for me, I'm too busy and tired. My mother became ill after Christmas and died last week so I've logged some miles between Ky. and Ga. I've been involved as treasurer of the Festival of Trees which raised $500,000 for the Egleston Children's Hospital and as Vice President for Career Interests for the Jr. League and also as Ginny's room mother and a Sunday School teacher. Next year I'll be a co-chairman for the Festival of Trees and treasurer-elect for the Jr. League. I've promised Kent and Ginny (9½) that the years after that are for them. Ginny is into soccer, ballet, brownies, piano and chorus so I spend my spare time in my car. I'm still working for Nancy's husband Tom keeping the company books. My jogging and my housekeeping have definitely suffered this year.

Talk about a dedicated class secretary! Here I am on vacation in Naples, FL writing our class notes. As always it has been fun getting mail every day for the past couple of months. And now it's your turn to learn all the news

Abigail Allen Rennekamp had her third girl, Rachel Alexandra, on Jan 23. She has been galloping two-year-old thoroughbreds to prepare them for a two year training sale at the end of April. She and Nick, three daughters under four, two dogs and all the horses spent a month in Louisiana in preparation for the sale

Rita Anselmo and husband John Whittler had a daughter in August, Melissa Kay Anselmo. Rita and John moved the month before Melissa's birth into a house bought at auction and are in the throes of renovation. Rita is with the Navy working on the Internal Control Program, and John is now an attorney with Brad and Leckie specializing in electrical utilities, having left the Justice Department last August

Residing in Mobile but living in her car, Gypsie Bear Van Antwerp finds that her two children and their activities keep her busy. She has been successful in getting her cerebral juices flowing again by taking an art history course at her local museum. Through the Mobile YWCA Gypsie is very involved in an after-school program for latch-key children.

When Cindy Bekins wrote from Omaha, she was on her way to Sanibel Island for a two-week vacation from her job as the referral director for her real estate company. She was looking forward to another break in June for the Bekins family reunion in Monterey and Carmel, CA

Anne Billings McDougall, Ed, Maggie, 4, and Jimmy 1, moved last June from Coral Gables to Orlando where Ed was transferred by Coldwell Banker Commercial Real Estate. Anne's family is her priority, but she does find time for church activities, parent/child seminars, gardening and yard landscaping with Ed and will probably affiliate with the Orlando Jr. League in the fall

Weezie Blakeslee Gilpin is finishing her graduate work in May and will celebrate this landmark event with visits to Atlanta and Mount Pleasant, SC. This is as much a graduation present, from Bob to me as it is to Weezie. Bob will stay behind at Milton Academy to look after Alexa, 9, Blake, 7, and Christopher, 4. The five Gilpins are looking forward to summer in their house on Martha's Vineyard

Pascale Boulard Dutilleul extends a warm invitation to all Parisian travelers. She, Pierre, Damien, 2, Carole, 8, Isabelle, 6½ and Laure, 4½, live 45 miles west of Paris. In February Pascale met President Fry and some Junior Year Abroad students. Pierre is a controller for NCR Company. Pascale is the president of "Le Troc-Temps," a volunteer "skills bank"; members earn credits by the hour for tending gardens, babysitting, washing dishes, book-keeping, auto repairs, health care, etc., and spend the credits for other skills in the bank

Michelle Brown Badcock, a resident of the UK for 14 years now, is looking forward to a two-week visit in New England in June with husband Michael. After having spent nine years at home with her three children, Simon, 10, Douglas, 6, and Heather, 4, Michelle has started working as a part-time volunteer with an advice bureau in her local market town

Dorsie Buck Harrison will be moving in June from Miami back to San Antonio when her husband finishes his oncology fellowship. She stays busy with her job teaching three-year-olds at her children's Christian school in Miami

Barbara Cain Hegarty and John have some exciting news — the birth of Ryan Charles on March 29

Among the brave in our class is Betsy Cann Akers who, with the help of husband Scotty took Scotty, 6, Morgan, 3½, and William, 1, on an overnight train ride from Atlanta to Washington, DC to visit Winton Smoot Holladay '74. Betsy is expecting child #4 in August Freida Carpenter Tucker is in her 12th year of teaching at Amherst County High School. This year she has an SBC student teacher, Louanne Woody. Heather is 7, and Jarrod is 2. From Thomaston, CT Creigh Casey Krin writes that her twins Lindsey and Heather were 4 in February. Creigh also looks after the 2-year-old son of a teacher-friend. She and John are remodeling their house themselves with help only from John's brother. Creigh spent time last summer in Maine with Jane Lucas.

In June 1985 Peggy Cheesewright Garner and John moved into the house they designed in Medina WA. Peggy is active with the Jr. League of Seattle's Training Committee, works on contract with the local hospital on a babysitting course, is head of Seattle's SBC alumnae club and does fast walking for exercise.

Looking forward to a move in December to Connecticut is Anita Clarendon Ledsinger. She, Chuck, Leila, 4, and Elise, 1, are currently in Dallas; Chuck's transfer to Embassy Suites' NYC office precipitates their Northern move

therapeutic pre-school for 3-7 year olds with moderate developmental delays and high level autism. The class is designed in coordination with UNC's medical school and is one of only several early intervention programs for pre-school autistic children in the world

Deidre Conley and husband Gerard Guizol are back in the States, this time in Houston where Deidre is delighted to find a big SBC group Gerard is working at an international school, and Deidre is selling wine and working in PR for an import-export company. She loves the international mix of Houston that allows her to use all her languages

After too many cold winters in New York Rene Conover Reed and Nat are enjoying the warmer weather of Greensboro, NC. Melissa, 3½, has a brother, Craig Conover Reed, who arrived on Sept. 9, 1985

Susan Craig married Wayne Smith on Feb. 1, and Emily Garth Brown and Lisa Marshall Chalmers were there to help. Wayne has his own real estate business in Columbia, SC, and Susan continues with her art work with an advertising agency. Susan and Wayne enjoy canoeing, snow skiing and camping together

Mary Danford is now the Deputy City Attorney for Portland, OR which means she defends the city when it gets sued. Except when she is in trial she has more free time which she uses to run more, take a yoga class, and to begin weight training. Michael teaches advanced placement English classes and loves the challenge of interesting, bright and motivated students. In preparation for a Mexican vacation in March they took a Spanish course together

When she wrote, Lucy Dennington Kennedy was preparing for two concerts that were to be given during the annual Holly Springs Pilgrimage in Memphis. Her husband is recovering from shingles and arthritis, and they are both looking forward to a healthier year

Somehow Sue Dern Plank found enough spare time from her class fund raising duties to write that because of David's promotion to major they and daughter Elena will be moving to Yokota Air Force Base in Japan in the fall. Right now she is busy getting her house in Tennessee ready to put on the market. She and her family spent most of last summer in Canajoharie, NY

Molly Dunn Martin, William and 9-year-old Cameron spent some time in London last summer for the ABA meetings. Molly spends lots of time showing dalmations and teaching obedience. As Molly observes, "Dogs are easier than kids!" Life in Mobile is great, and piano and tennis lessons and softball practice more than fill her hours.

Chris Eng Leventhal takes ballet, teaches aerobic exercise, does freelance editing at home and takes care of Amy, 6, and Nicholas, 3. Somewhere in there she also teaches science twice a month at Amy's school. Peter runs their health food store in Old Greenwich, teaches kung-fu and has a private nutritional consulting practice. Langhorne King Murray, Latham and their three children spent a weekend with the Leventhals last September. Chris writes that Langhorne is expecting Baby #4 soon. The Leventhals go to Block Island every summer and love it

Val Fannon Phillips travels to 15 states as a regional sales manager for Hershey Pasta Group. Son Blair is almost two.

Most of her time goes to taking care of her 2 and 5 year old boys, but Alison Fifer Stonecipher did make the Million Dollar Club as a real estate agent for Merrill Lynch. Alison's husband is a pilot for TWA based in Santa Barbara, and in March he and Alison spent 12 days skiing in Italy and Switzerland. Alison occasionally gets to see Dede McIntyre Porter in San Francisco

Lisa Fowler Winslow is moving into a new house in Malibu, CA. She had a great trip to Europe last summer. Son Russell is 4

Janie Genster and husband John Buckley are living in Washington, DC where John is a partner with Williams and Connolly. Janie continues to teach law on a part time/adjunct basis, concentrating on courses in the criminal process area and alternating between UVA law school and Georgetown Law Center in DC. Janie and John have enjoyed daughters Emily, 5, and Darcy, 3, so much that Baby #3 will arrive in late July

After six years in London Trish Gilhooly O'Neill plans to stay on indefinitely. Trish continues to do well in the jewelry design business and loves the trips to Hong Kong that it requires. On her next trip she hopes to rendezvous with Jan Storey Honick who will be there on her way to China. For a change of pace Trish has planned a hiking trip in New Zealand in October and if time allows will visit the Great Barrier Reef too. She has one child.

In addition to her duties as mother to Ryan, 11, and Scott, 7, Susan Hancock Duke helps Roy in his job with TFM Industries by handling all the paperwork. To streamline their lives a bit the Dukes are considering a move to Greensboro, NC to be nearer the center of Roy's territory

Chris Hegarty Savage is job sharing three days a week as a medical technologist at University Suburban Health Center Laboratory in Ohio. Pat is a vice president of corporate lending at Society National bank. Last summer they moved into a bigger house. Feeling brave, Chris and Pat took Clay, 4½, and Brendan, 16 mos., on a ten day vacation to Captiva Island and Naples

Jill Heptinstall continues to love her job in the publishing world. In addition to publishing a newspaper her company is starting a monthly business magazine. She spent two weeks in London last April but couldn't find Diane Leslie.

Carter Heyward Morris has moved to a "new" old house complete with beautiful gardens, fountains and a goldfish pond. No wonder daughter Heyward, 7½, and Wade, 4½, love it. Carter has started an import business with two partners, importing mostly from Hong Kong

To end her commute from Augusta, GA to Aiken, SC Peggy Holloway Fitch, Paul, Brannon, 6, Hollis, 3, and Kendall, 19 mos. moved into an historic house in Aiken. Peggy has a private dermatology practice and a zoo — four horses, a foal, two cows — the list goes on and on!

After teaching economics at High Point College in North Carolina, Kris Howell is back in school and is halfway through a Ph.D. in economics at the University of Kentucky in Lexington. She sees someone who is working on a Ph.D. in biology, and she has a fat cat and a new thoroughbred that is an ex-race horse. Kris went to Aspen in March and plans to spend the summer in school and at the beach

After suffering for nine months with an undetected herniated disc, Pam Ivens-Renner is now well and back at work as coordinator of services to older adults through the Red Cross out of Philadelphia. Bartie is 28 mos., and Michael practices law for Marriott, a job that takes him to Boston far too often. Pam was bulb chairman for her area but had to spend her time going to Buffalo for back treatments instead of hustling bulbs

Susan Kirby Peacock is working part-time on an M.F.A. in painting and part-time as a pharmacist. David is a doctor as well as a sculptor, and they both love to garden. In May they went to Abacos and in June to Galapagos. Susan was sorry she missed her local SBC luncheon this year but really enjoyed it last year

Janie Knutson James is trying to adjust to a California lifestyle. She and Michael moved suddenly last fall to Mission Viejo when he accepted an assistant sports editor position with the LA Times. Patrick, 4, and Elizabeth, 2½, have adjusted more easily. Nuts laments that no one in California is poor, ugly, fat or without the latest in anything!

Nancy Lenihan Conaty, Jay and Matt, 8½, are living in their new house in Rumson, NJ. Planning an addition to their house, school board and PTA work at Matt's school and learning to play golf keep Nancy busy

By now Diane Leslie is settled in NYC after having spent two years in London. As a last fling Diane spent some time skiing in Italy.

Linda Lipscomb is the catering manager at a new hotel in New Orleans but will be moving soon to Dallas. Last summer's vacation in England has motivated her to make a bundle quickly and then retire!

Jane McCutchen McFadden is busy with their businesses in Vermont. Their three boys are active with ice hockey and skiing during the winter and sailing in the summer.

Deborah McDowell Gilronan is still in Portland, OR where her husband is vp of International Sales for ESCO. Their two children attend Oregon Episcopal School

Alice McInnis Hughes had dinner with Betsy Perry in NYC the day before Betsy had to pack for a move. Kenneth began kindergarten last fall, and Sarah Beth, 2½, is busy in a pre-school program

With boys ages 2½ and 6½ Marion McKee Humphreys spends her time juggling their carpools with her aerobics classes, Bible study fellowship work, construction and her husband's new job. The whole family will head to Montana for a summer vacation

As they were on their way to California in October, Ann Major Gibb and family ran into Johnny and me in the Atlanta airport as we were on our way to New York. While there Anne visited with Diane Dale Reiling. Ann is a sales representative for Leiter's Designer Fabric and volunteers as head of her Sunday school program, works with the local medical auxiliary, and was knee deep in Emily's Girl Scout cookies when she wrote. David is in nursery school

Lisa Marshall Chalmers has a large following in Atlanta as a children's portraitist. Marshall, 4½, and Elizabeth, 15 mos., give her enough peace and quiet to allow her to do this. She and David relaxed in Jamaica in April

Joan May Hardin and Rick welcomed big Richard John into this world in June 1985 where he joined Meredith, 6, and Bill, 3. Joan sees Julie Johnson Evans and Leigh Schopfer Rhea as often as her children's schedules allow Though grounded when she wrote because of a baby due in August, Chris Mendel Prewitt flies C-9's around the Pacific from her base in the Philippines. Daughter Darwin is almost 2

Betsie Meric Gambel, Greg, Gregory, 9, and Meric, 4, spent Easter in the British Virgin Islands. Betsie took a year off from teaching and did more volunteer work with the Child Assault Prevention Program. In August they will visit Washington, DC and New England

Angie Miller has been appointed delegate to the National White House Conference on small businesses. She was previously president of Angela Miller Investments, Inc. and is now vice president/treasurer of First Florida Building Corporation in Miami

Laura Montague Cross has loved her first year of teaching two classes of 7th grade social studies. Fred, 5, is in kindergarten and Katie, 4, is in a pre-school program. Jeff's insurance business is thriving

Laurie Norris Solywoda is still working at the Albany Medical Center. In March, Laurie, Andy, Stephanie, 5, and Cynthia, 3, went to Hawaii for a family wedding

From Birmingham, AL Betsy Oakley Smith announces the arrival of Robert last August who was welcomed by brothers Harrison, 7, and William, 3. Somehow Betsy does volunteer work for "Magic Moments", a new group that grants wishes to critically ill children

Scottie O'Toole was recently promoted to manager of professional employment at Scientific-Atlanta where she works with Betsy Blackwell Laundon's '69 husband. Scottie has recently seen Kim Riccardi Ramsey and Walt who were in Atlanta for a meeting and loves seeing other alums at SBC gatherings

Debbie Pollock Arce is glad finally to be able to contribute to the ranks of classmates' offspring. Cory Allison arrived in October 1985. Debbie and Roger work for their small but steadily growing software company in Oregon and were thrilled to get some press in PC World

1985 was a good year for Kathy Pretzfelder Steele and Dave. Dave was promoted to manager of his store and Kathy to marketing research manager at the insurance company where she has been working since graduation. Tracy is in kindergarten, and Kelly, 3, is the family's alarm clock. All four will vacation on Cape Cod this summer

Carol Anne Provence Gallivan writes that as Anne Genevieve, 10, Henry, 5, and Harriet, 3, get older life gets much easier! She is active in the Greenville Jr. League and with church and school work as well as with Pineapple Galleries, her antique, gifts and jewelry business. Mills has recovered from leg surgery and has substituted biking for running. The whole family is excited about the new house they are building

Char Reed-Miller still has her medical consulting business, but she and Jean McKenzie '71 are trying to develop their own business. Char's husband Bill is now head of electron optics for Carl Zeiss, Inc. Their national champion Jack Russell terrier has just had another litter, and Char hunts woodchucks, foxes and raccoons with her pack of Jack Russells. Char bought Mr. Cronin's horse Radar, and while in Virginia to buy him she stayed with Alletta Bredin-Beu in Charlottesville

Nan Robertson Clarke sees all our Atlanta classmates as often as the life of a mother of four will allow. She sends the news of the arrival of Alison Baker's baby Dylan. Husband Hal is busy with his law practice, and the whole family loves being in their new, bigger house

Candy Sheffield Neilson is glad to be back east after having lived for several years in Oklahoma. She, Keith, Sarah, 4, and Matthew, 1½, are renting a house in Niantic, CT while waiting to sell theirs in Oklahoma

Tina Sheris Wood continues with her medical auxiliary work, and when she wrote she had a garage full of 1,000 geraniums and impatient for their spring flower sale. Lissa, 8, is very active in gymnastics and competitive swimming, and Adam, 4½, is in nursery school. At Christmas they had a reunion with John's family at Sanibel Island

Though she was just about to leave for Hong Kong and China, Jan Storey Honik managed to get her card in on time. In May 1985 she and Eric went to Athens, Rhodes and Istanbul and were in the Athens airport just before the hijacking. Eric is with the law firm Bizar, D'Alessandro, Shustak and Martin in New York, and Jan works as a travel consultant. David is two and is in a Montessori school

Georgia Tucker Tuttle's news is last year's, having arrived too late for 1985 publication. The Tuttle's are in London, and Laura and Emily, now 6 and 1 according to my calculations, enjoy walks in Hyde Park. Georgia still plays tennis and is active in the Jr League and her church

Clement Virgin Durkes, Rick, Frances, 6, and Harriet, 3, are in Chicago where Rick is an investment banker with the Chicago Corporation. Clement has been very involved with the Lyric Opera of Chicago as a member of the Women's Board and as a supernumerary, non-singing extra in several productions. Frances was an extra in the 1985 production of Otello. Jean Williams Johnson, Pete, David, 8, and Seth, 2½, have taken up sailing and spend every weekend on the water. The biggest challenge is to keep Seth happy in cramped quarters

Dianne Wood Keyser has started working as a dental assistant for the County Health Department in Raleigh. She's delighted to have Rene Conover Reed so close and sees Mary Jane Berry, too. Eric, 8, has just begun Little League, and Barbara, 5, loves school.

Ginger Woodward Gast has moved from Arlington to a bigger house in Fairfax, VA. She teaches second grade at a school close to home and is working on her masters in reading. Michael, 6½, and Carolina, 4½, have a new pet, a bunny named Donna

At last, here is the news from Debbie Ziegler Hopkins. Last July she and George had their second son, Walter Chandler. Debbie sends word that Cary Davis King had her second girl, Lucy, in February. She enjoys seeing '73 classmates at the SBC gatherings there in New Orleans.

And now I need you to help me solve a mystery. I received a card saying that Pat and Gregory had a boy on June 8, 1985 and that Greg is a marketing manager for the state of Virginia. The only catch is that there was no last name or return address on the card. At any rate, we're happy for you!

I, Mac Cuthbert Langley, Johnny, Will, 7, and Hibernia, 2, are delighted to be alive and well in Mount Pleasant, SC. Pediatrics keeps Johnny busy, and I am constantly being challenged in all ways by my cherubs. Our latest addition is a basset puppy named Alfred (no offense, Lisa). When I'm not writing SBC notes I help Johnny in his office, chair a committee on teen pregnancy for the Jr League, do church work, help at Will's school, and make him take piano lessons. This past year we went to New York a couple of times and hope to go again in the fall. I'm looking forward to hearing from everyone again next year. Please remember that I need your cards by April 15

Our 10th year reunion is in May, 1987, so start planning your trip now. Aren't you anxious to catch up with everybody in person?

Claire Cain Thomas Linzee is living in Stamford, CT and working as an associate editor at two medical journals, Consultant and Journal of Musculoskeletal Medicine, published by Cliggott Publishing in Greenwich. Cain was looking forward to a bicycle tour with her sister last spring. She recently saw Elvira Cash Pecora and her new "adorable" baby, Gregory. Elvira and Chip's son was born Dec 18 and Elvira decided not to return to work at Rolm/IBM after her maternity leave. She hears from Janet Meyers Deans and Rob on Long Island.

Marianne Hutton Felch and Bob in NJ. Christine Davis Boulware and Peggy Haley Sheehan and Chris in Colorado. Peggy is ready to take advantage of her position as manager of a designer furniture showroom. She and husband Chris have just bought their first house and need furniture. Chris is working as an investment banker at Boettcher. Peggy is also making use of her French since two French friends and their families have moved to Denver.

Sarah Steel Levine's second daughter, Stephanie, joined Cynthia (2½) in January. The Levines are in the process of building their "dream house" on five acres on New Vernon,

NJ and hoped to move in during the summer. Wendy Congdon Stanton expected her second boy in April. It doesn't look like she will be providing any students for SBC

Being a volunteer with the Boston Symphony keeps Farnell Cowan busy when she is not traveling. She went to Spain and Greece last March on vacation. For her job as International Officer at the Bank of Boston, she traveled to the Philippines, Hong Kong and Singapore during the summer

Renee Hanson Crowder was in New York last October working for the Secret Service. She was involved with the United Nations General Assembly and met Prime Minister Thatcher during a reception. She recently passed her Instructor's Training for Jazzercise and is teaching in Fairfax County. Renee and Jack planned a vacation in April, the first one for just the two of them in six years

Virginia Shepherd is now editor of Virginia Wildlife. Stephanie Maxson is back for the second time working in Georgetown and living on the Potomac in Old Town Alexandria. She is the Director of Legal and Industrial Affairs for the American Society of Travel Agents. Stephanie gives speeches and attends meetings all over the U.S. as well as Hong Kong, Seoul, Budapest, London, Rome and Dublin. This fall she will be traveling to Singapore, New Zealand and Australia

Cindy Webb is working on her Master's at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government. After graduation in June she will return to Washington to continue working for the CIA. She comments that Harvard is quite a change from SBC. Angela Scully is in D.C. working as a freelance fundraiser. She is also involved with an international exchange program. She and husband George have a baby girl, Elspeth Scully Elsen, born April 22, 1986

Ellen Wahl is in her third year with the family business. She has just returned from her third annual trip to Palm-Aire where she relaxes, is pampered, and works out four hours a day. She has been involved as a member of the Republican Inner Circle, a political support group. Ellen spent an exhausting but exciting four days in D.C. last year attending the Presidential inaugural activities

Molly Reeb Clark's daughter Nancy is five now and ready for kindergarten. Molly is still working for Merrill Lynch as a futures broker. Louise Lambert Hunter is enjoying homelife with two year old Graham. Missy Flanigan Clark, David and their two children visited last October.

Sallie Mohle has kept up with several people. She had dinner in March with Lyndi Cote who told her that Jo Ella Schneider is engaged. She planned to spend the night with Becky Mayer Gutierrez in MA last April on her way to New Hampshire to see Pete's family. Sally is working at George Mason University in the Accounts Payable Dept. Pete is across the hall in Data Control. How about that for togetherness?

In Richmond, Cindy Kendree Thieringer and J.T. were waiting for the birth of their second child. She is working full-time as the contract sales manager for This End Up Furniture Company, but hoped to take a break when the baby arrived. Newsflash Sara Kiley Thieringer was born May 2 Also in Richmond, Martha Branch Alexander enjoys her work as a private math tutor and being at home with the children. Their 2nd son, Marshall Branch Alexander, was born in Feb. '85. Jim is now associated with the investment banking firm of Craigie, Inc.

Debbie Hubble Wilson is trying to start a childcare agency in Lynchburg. Also in Lynchburg, Debra Marks Bryant is Assistant Vice President of Investments for Central Fidelity Bank. She is President of the Lynchburg Alumnae Club, is serving on the Board of the Continuing Studies Program at SBC, and is counseling SBC students on career choices. Blake (3) expected to have a new brother or sister in May. Somehow, Debra also finds time for The Junior League of Lynchburg.

Linda Uihlein's new farm has two barns, a cemetery and four old log cabins. One barn will be renovated for a stable so Linda can have her fox-hunter on the farm. Her Jack Russell is due with another litter. She is only working part of her garden this year because it is so big. Linda recently returned from a sailing and diving trip to Bimini.

Gay Lynn Gates' job covers a territory of Winchester to Bristol, VA, but cuts off right before SBC. Husband Bob's company may be enlarging and he may get his own branch to manage in NJ, PA, or NY.

Debbie Koss McCarthy and family are very happy with their house with 3½ acres just outside Chapel Hill. Debbie loves being a mom to Courtney (5½) and Alex (3), who she describes as "The Wild Child." She teaches music two mornings a week at Durham Academy, is starting a Sweet Tones-type singing group for the League, and is active in her church.

Ebet Stevens takes care of Elizabeth (2) and does volunteer work. She had a visit from Clarissa Nielsen in February and a surprise visit from Tricia Waters. Tricia has left the National Gallery in D.C. and moved to the Baltimore Museum as Assistant to Brenda Richardson, one of the top curators of 20th Century Art. Tricia recently has been asked to serve on the Board of Friends of Art at SBC.

Deborah Epperson Sizer and David own an adult contemporary radio station in Galax, VA. They are trying to sell their house in Mt. Airy, NC so David will not have to continue commuting. Besides the radio station, Deborah enjoys her children Brian, 9, Steven, 5, and Virginia, 2. Ann

Crossingham Cannon is active in the Jr. Charity League and other community projects in Concord, NC. Her children, Leslie Ann and Will, are models for Spencer's (her family infant wear manufacturing company). They can be seen in Parents, Women's Day, and Good Housekeeping. Send us some pictures for the scrapbook. Ann

From Fairway, KS, Mary Graves has exciting news. In July she is marrying Charlie Hodge. Originally from Philadelphia, Charlie is a pediatric gastroenterologist. Mary is working for Saks Fifth Avenue and they plan to stay in Fairway. Leslie McMullin and Steven have been living in Billings, Montana for almost two years. Steve is the fisheries manager for the Dept. of Fish, Wildlife and Parks. Emily (6) is in kindergarten and Kyle (4) is in preschool. Leslie's time is spent with the kids and volunteer work at the hospital. She looked forward to going back to Maine during the summer.

Kathy Roantree Renkin and Jeff have bought the "house of their dreams" in the woods of Minnesota. They expected their first child in March. Kathy planned to continue work at Control Data but only part-time after the baby arrives. Unfortunately, she cannot attend the reunion next May.

From Georgia, Glenn King Springer was winding up her year as Museum Guild president. Next year she will be placement chairman for the League. She was Event Secretary for the Midlands Horse Trials last May. The Springs bought a new house and planned to move in September. The girls, Lillian and Haden are 4 and 1½ now.

Keith, Katie and Louise Aiken Calhoun moved to Savannah in January. They liked Atlanta but decided they wanted to raise a family in a smaller city. Keith is a lawyer with Adams, Gardner, Ellis and Inglesby and Louise is a full-time mother.

Cathy Goodhart Henson and Carlton love being back in Atlanta. They are expecting their third child in May. Also in Atlanta, Debbie Butteri Akers is a vice president of First Georgia Bank.

I received a wonderful letter from Maggie Sexton Johnson. She sounded very busy with Daniel (3) and a May graduation with a BS in Nursing from UNC. She has been working as an RN in a private psychiatric hospital, Charter Rivers, and also gives group therapy to recovered alcoholics and ACOA's (Adult Children of Alcoholics).

In Nashville, Mary Palmer Blackmon works at the museum. She has opened a catering company and will leave the museum if all continues to go well with it. Kate (3) is in preschool. Mary's husband Buddy had a song "1982" that was #1 in Cashbox Magazine for two weeks. The song is done by Randy Travis.

After a brief but enjoyable stint in West Palm Beach, FL, Fran Scott

Tesch and Carl are back in Nashville. Fran is a manager in executive communications for Northern Telecom and travels frequently. Carl works for a mechanical engineering firm and is keeping up with the Nashville music scene in his spare time. They recently bought a new house. Anne Marshall-Ross also moved from Florida last year after marriage to Doug Ross. Doug had a new job as an agronomist in California. They are living near Sacramento about midway between the coast and the Sierras, and get to sample everything from San Francisco to snow skiing. Anne is working for the CA Dept. of Fish and Game in the Endangered Plant Program.

David and Patti Wornom Henry moved close to Chicago. David is in the Army and Patti is a full-time Mom to Chaz and baby Ashley Marie, born Feb. '86. In Chicago, Vivian Yamaguchi started her own law firm with three other lawyers she practiced with for the past six years. They handle insurance defense. Vivian still finds time to ride a few times a week and to participate in local horse shows. Stuart and Vivian are looking for a house in the suburbs. They planned to be in San Francisco, L.A., and San Diego last April for business and pleasure. Last September she had a reunion with Keedie Grones, '76. Maggie Shriver, JoJo Scott, and Addy Eshbach, '78, at Libby White Drbal's wedding. After the wedding, Libby and Doug moved from CA to NJ and planned to occupy their new house at the Jersey shore this summer. Six months after the wedding, they had a wonderful honeymoon in the British Virgin Islands. Libby was promoted to product manager for all equine products worldwide for Merck & Co. in NJ. Doug also works for Merck marketing equine and small animal products in the U.S. Libby planned to travel in Europe in the spring and summer of '86 while Doug travelled in the U.S. She saw Addy Eshbach in January in Boston; Addy is working as a head hunter for attorneys. Libby also visited Maggie Shriver, JoJo Scott, and Kathy Slatinchek, '76 in D.C. last February.

Phooi Ching Lai has exciting news from Singapore. She was expecting a baby June 3rd. In September, her husband will be sent on a 1½ year fellowship in orthopedics to Edinburgh, Scotland, The Mayo Clinic, MN and Rochester NY. She is apprehensive about traveling with the new baby. If anyone can give her ideas about accommodations in Rochester, MN (the Mayo Clinic) or Rochester, New York, she would be most appreciative. (You can send any information to me and I will forward it to her.)

From England, Christine Weerasingh Hand writes that she and her husband have been busy installing new machinery and ovens for their business. Harriet Dinegar visited last October while traveling through Europe. Sebastian is 2½ now and anxiously awaiting a new arrival to the Hand household.

Lola Brock Meakin has been enjoying her life of leisure in London. She has been fixing up an 1840 Victorian house, involved with the Junior League, and having long lunches with friends. She is expecting the first 'Meakin Munchkin' in November. Before then she expected to travel to the States in April, France in May and Cornwall in September.

Quaintance Foman married John Samuel Armstrong IV in NYC in May. Quaintance is a VP in La Jolla of E.F. Hutton and Co.; her husband is a financial consultant for Shearson Lehman Bros. in San Diego.

Vera Blake Thiers and Gerd had a baby girl, Kate, in April '85. Vera writes that despite the horrors she had envisioned with a baby, she loves having Kate around. Gerd is looking for a suitable practice to set up as a dermatologist. They hope to stay in the Frankfurt area. Vera is working four days a week for the same tour operator she has worked for since 1980. She reports that Kate (Mac) MacElhinney married Doug Montgomery in San Francisco in Sept. '85 and is living there.

Elaine Griffin Bracewell is expecting child number three. She has a boy (3) and a girl (1½). The children keep her company while Dad is busy with his own law firm in Houston.

In Dallas last May, Becky Frost Good and Steve were expecting their second child. Beverly is now three and is involved with swimming lessons and attending my cooking school. Becky was assistant chairman of the Finance Committee for the League last year, and is involved in publishing the new League cookbook. She continues to serve on the board of the Incest Recovery Association, and she is treasurer of the Sweet Briar Club of Dallas.

Virginia Griffin Brereton is also in Dallas and looks great. Her oldest daughter Beth, (6), attends my cooking school and is a treat. Lewis and Virginia have another daughter, Katherine (2). Virginia works with the Junior Group of the Symphony League. Kathy McDonald has a new job as Director of Marketing for H.P.G. Home Video. For her League placement, she has been part of a singing group that performs at hospitals and nursing homes. In her spare time she works in the yard of her Highland Park house.

As for the McDowells, the three of us are doing well. Emily, who came July 22, 1985, is a joy. I have been lucky to be able to do much of my work for The Cooking School out of my home so I don't have to be gone from her every day all day. Lisa Wray Longino '78 and I are co-presidents of the SB Club Dallas, so we'd love ideas from your various clubs. Next year I'll also be chairman of The Workshop Committee for The Senior Citizens Craft Fair of The Dallas Junior League. Rex and I are looking forward to a sailing trip in the Bahamas in May.

Thanks to all of you who have sent pictures for the scrapbook. The rest of you need to follow suit (At least send me pictures of your children) so we will all enjoy a full scrapbook at the reunion. Until then, take care.

They should have had their baby sometime in May. Ed's note: Christopher was born May 1. Grandmother Diane Duffield Wood '57 went out to help during the sleepless nights.

A few latecomers. Mary E. Adams, who attended SB and graduated from East Carolina Univ., married Thomas Warwick Steed III in Raleigh in May. They will live in Raleigh. Mary is a travel agent and her husband a tax lawyer and CPA.

May Carter Phillips is taking a trip around the world — stopping in Swaziland to dig for remains of early man, then touring through Africa, India, China, Nepal, Japan, Taiwan, New Zealand and Australia. She is due home this December.

Sophia Cryslar Hart and Ford are at their 2nd post in Moscow and are enjoying the opportunities to travel in Europe. They survived their first winter and are approaching the "White Nights" of summer.

Karen Gagnon is getting married to John Wojciak in October; Kathy, of course, will be maid-of-honor. Kathy is busy schooling her 4-year-old thoroughbred and shopping for a house.

Margaret Lynn Galdi is a technical writer for Pittsburgh Software Co. By the time these notes appear, Harriet Harrison Leavell will have graduated from the Univ. of Houston Law Center and taken the Bar exam. In September she will start with the firm of Hutcheson and Grundy.

Stephanie Stitt is still at the Gugenheim and is living with old Boxwood roomie, Margaret Medlock. The two of them see lots of Liz Seacord who is at the Knoedle Gallery. Stephanie says NYC is still great!

Henrietta T. White is a systems manager for Southwestern Savings and Loan Co. in Charlotte. She reports that Jane Terry Lee and Scott had a baby boy, William Branson Lee, in Oct. '85.

And, as for myself, I, Helen Masters Durham have enjoyed being your class secretary for the past 5 years. My congratulations go to the new officers for the upcoming 5 years, Allison Roberts, president, Kearsley Rand, secretary and Nancy Webb Corkery and Barb Bush co-fund agents. Buck, Arch, (now 3 and still adorable) and I sold our renovated farm house and moved closer in to work and school. We're living in a fun young neighborhood in Richmond, Va now, a welcome change. I'm still in marketing, but now for Bank of Virginia's corporate marketing and Buck's still (as always) in school. He has his Ph.D. in Biochemistry and 2 years of medical school behind him now. I wish you all luck and think of you often. Have a wonderful Autumn! Always, Helen

In the meantime, I hope all is well with everyone — please keep in touch during the coming year!

When a Class Raises
The Largest 50th Reunion Gift in Sweet Briar's History —
It Is Banner News

In the Sweet
Briar Tradition

Of banner news for all alumnae is a recent decision of the Alumnae Fund Committee. The opportunity to use a two-part approach in raising their class gift is offered as the exclusive province of 50th Reunion classes and all other classes which have celebrated a 50th Reunion.

The classes which accept this challenge will blaze a new trail in a pioneering effort to raise capital and endowment funds. At the same time they will try to attract more unrestricted dollars for the Alumnae Fund than ever before. For all other classes — those which have not achieved the status of a 50th Reunion — Reunion gifts continue to mean only those unrestricted gifts which are so essential to Sweet Briar's academic strength.

If you would like information about a gift which will count toward your class gift and will provide income during your life, please contact F. Mark Whittaker, Vice President for College Relations, Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595 (804/381-6161).

Sweet Briar at reunion time brings many persons together; old friends meet each other again with joy, former students and faculty members delight in the renewal of the special relationships they shared. Sometimes we have the special joy of meeting and coming to know, for those brief days of reunion, someone whom we never knew in that past which is suddenly all around us. I had a wonderful experience of this kind last May, one which uniquely connected the past to both the present and the future as I talked to Penny Czarra, an outstanding graduate of the Class of 1975. Her name is known to many of us since it was honored by her parents in their generous gift of the Penelope Czarra Award given annually at Commencement to the senior "who best combines scholastic achievement, student leadership, and effective contributions to the improvement of the quality of student life at Sweet Briar College."

As Penny and I sat across from each other on rumpled beds in an empty Reid double, it was not prizes or public achievements that filled my mind. It was a person, a vibrant, whole person, who although she claimed shyness, came across warmly in the first few moments of our conversation. Her words quickly connected the high school senior who was fearful that she might not succeed in college with the young woman who has spent years abroad and fashioned her view of community, wherever she has traveled, on what she learned both intellectually and personally at Sweet Briar.

Always an outdoor person who loves hiking and the country, Penny clicked with Sweet Briar immediately when she had a chance to talk with Nancy Baldwin '57 at a college fair in suburban Washington, D.C. Penny told me that a guidance counselor (who surely sounds heartless) at her high school in Bethesda, Maryland, had said that she probably couldn't get into college, and so she was amazed that the people she met at Sweet Briar, people interested in the things which she cared about, people like Jane Belcher, Elizabeth Sprague and Langley Wood, wanted her and welcomed her. What a wonderful revelation! Here in the early '70s Penny acquired the spaceship earth concept both from her science courses and from the government and philosophy courses which she took with Milan Hapala and Elizabeth Wentworth. She learned about "this fragile earth, our island home", about environmental concerns in that era which was newly and highly conscious of the ecological problems facing our world. She learned about political and social concerns, about the disasters of hunger and genocide, about the painful situations in Biafra and Bangladesh. Penny says that she learned about what was important, and "something about how to go after it". The big protests of the '60s were prior to her college experience and her concerns developed at Sweet Briar with more local focus. Problems of pollution in the nearby James River involved her practically when she worked for her sophomore summer with several science professors who were doing independent testing and measuring. The problem of high student turnover involved her in a different way as she felt its negative effect on the building of class spirit. Vice president of her freshman class, Penny became sophomore class president, a dorm president in her junior year and student government president as a senior — a job she says that she needed to learn how to talk to large groups of people. (She already knew that she could express herself effectively simply by being herself within the college community.) She flourished in an environment that was noncompetitive, that encouraged her enjoyment of learning and that buoyed her confidence. The sense of community which she found at Sweet Briar strengthened and supported Penny in many ways. When she heard it rumored that the Sweet Briar Railroad Station was to be demolished, she led a group of friends to President Whiteman, Mr. Daniel and Mr. Kestner, who arranged for the removal of the building to its current location at the far end of campus. She then helped to paint the building and ran it as a coffee house (especially enjoyed by Guion faculty and students), all on a volunteer basis.

It was in Guion, of course, that Penny became friends with Professor Edwards who says of his former student: "Penny Czarra at Sweet Briar in the early 1970s was the right person in the right place at the right time — a young woman who could recognize and utilize the special opportunities afforded by two programs just then being adopted and implemented, the Winter Term and the Interdisciplinary Major...After enrolling in the innovative (and demanding) Winter Term course in which the students prepared and presented talks on conservation to classes in several elementary schools in Central Virginia (Elizabeth Sprague initiated this program), she had the foresight and persistence to follow the same theme in her junior and senior year with an Interdisciplinary Major in Human Ecology and an Honors Program which included writing the first draft of a textbook for elementary school teachers of conservation."

Professor Edwards' phrase about following the same theme describes Penny well. Her concern for human beings and her awareness of the factors in their environment which so influence their lives made her human ecology major a fitting choice. In Penny's commitment to that program, the unified "same theme" view of life which marks her as a person today, was crystalized and became the basis of her later career.

After graduating Phi Beta Kappa and magna cum laude with High Honors in the major, Penny went to Harvard's Graduate School of Design. Her intention was "to get the tools which would help me to advocate for people". Her need for specific skills pulled her away from the Peace Corps or Vista where she might have expressed her idealism, and toward an academic program which she hoped would enable her to implement her ideals. She said vehemently, "But instead I found I was being trained to be a bureaucrat, a person who could acquire data, hand it on to a policy-maker, and forget about it." Penny reacted violently to this perversion of her aims and found strong support within a group of foreign students who became her best friends. They helped her to realize that although she had great idealism, she had no firsthand knowledge of the rest of the world. They encouraged her to make a move on her own; she responded by taking a leap which was designed to really test her. mer for two or three months, and a visa to India arranged through the Ahmedabad Planning School. She found a group doing community development work independently, as well as a project for the U.N.; it agreed to pay her as a research assistant in the slums of Ahmedabad. Members of the group knew English and Penny learned the local dialect Gujarati, which was fortunate for her since its similarity to Hindi helped her to understand Indians from other parts of the country and to be understood by them. In her year of social work with street people, many of whom had migrated recently to the city from impoverished rural villages, Penny says that she learned how poor people seek to improve their lot, how they make plans to do so, and how those plans are often thwarted because there is no access for them to the resources which could effect change. Perhaps the most significant thing she learned was that she herself was able to help the slum dwellers. She saw the poor people as clients to whom she was accountable. The issue of a proper water supply in a location where women had to walk many kilometers for water was a case in point. The street folk knew what they needed but they had no clout in a political situation where the local authorities, hoping to remove the slum area, were content to let their need for water drive the slum dwellers away. Penny proved herself an effective advocate for the victims in such situations and came to recognize the importance of professional status in negotiations which could lead to solutions. Thus her first year in India was a turning point for Penny, who had expected to become a policy-maker but who found that getting the work done as a professional, implementing policy at the local level with technical, business, political and ordinary people was the right job for her in that place.

When Penny and I came to this point in our conversation she began to talk about Indian culture and how it had affected her. She used a lovely phrase to describe the environment. "It's a personable culture," she said, where she could feel close to people despite barriers of which she was very aware at the beginning of her stay. She described the difficulty of working with people for whom teamwork is an alien concept because of the perceived inequality of persons arising from the caste system. Another difficult area was the ambiguity which she found in her colleagues' view of Westerners. On the one hand there was a kind of nationalistic resentment of foreigners and suspicions about their "do-gooding," existing side by side with frank admiration of the accomplishments of the modern West, and a sense that it is quite simply better. In viewing herself objectively within this context, Penny felt the need for particular skills and professional status, in addition to the invaluable practical experience which a year in India had given her. She left Ahmedabad and returned to Harvard to complete her work for the Masters in City and Regional Planning, receiving her degree in 1978. Her additional courses in agricultural and developmental economics, public health and international politics gave her a specialization in developing countries upon which she has continued to build her professional reputation.

After receiving her graduate degree Penny returned to join the Ahmedabad Study Action Group where, paid as an Indian professional, she felt she was in a better position to implement what was important to her, to be an effective advocate, and to be accountable to the Indians. She became assistant director of this professional group of engineers, architects, planners and social scientists working on both village and slum development programs. For two years Penny was involved with projects which included establishing small businesses and cottage industries, constructing low income housing, providing community health services and veterinary clinics, improving agricultural production and marketing outlets and installing drinking water supply systems.

Although this work provided many needed resources and services to impoverished communities, Penny believed that she was still not professionally accountable to the communities she was intent upon serving. After all, she reflected, the decision to make an intervention, to solve a particular problem in a specific way, was still being made by outsiders rather than by the communities themselves. Consequently, Penny joined a group of poor villagers and some like-minded Indian professionals which formed an organization called "UTTHAN," which means "to rise up". Penny was quick to point out the importance of the name: not that development was undertaken on behalf of the villagers by some well-meaning elites, but that UTTHAN was to facilitate and support villagers in implementing their own plans to solve their own problems.

UTTHAN's work was concentrated in the Bhal region of Gujarat State where more than half the land is uncultivable, saline waste and where there is no natural source of potable water. "Bhal," Penny related, "means 'forehead'...where, as villagers say, nothing grows." Because of the severe environmental conditions and a cruel feudal social system, 85% of the people in this area live below the level of extreme poverty. Since the land cannot provide sustenance most families work as migrant farm laborers in other parts of the state for eight months of the year. As a result the people really don't belong anywhere, and health and education services which most citizens take for granted have remained beyond their reach because they have to work so hard just to eat.

UTTHAN found creative solutions to some severe problems in the course of its work and Penny is "truly amazed at what can be accomplished when all those concerned work together as equal partners. Scientists introduce new plant varieties which are salt and drought tolerant to villagers, who share with scientists their expertise on how to cultivate desert lands to conserve moisture. In this way problems which have plagued the area for generations are being solved. For instance, a solution which no 'expert' had been able to discover has been found to supply drinking water. Ponds which collect the monsoon rains are now lined with plastic to prevent seepage, and natural oils from plants are spread on the surface of the water to reduce evaporation. Villagers organize all the construction work and the systems for keeping the precious water clean. This never would have been possible if the villagers had not been equal partners!"

Living with these people facilitated Penny's adoption of different living standards; she found herself able to do without many material possessions. Not a convinced vegetarian, she ate meat rarely, both for economic reasons and out of concern for the attitude of her Indian friends whose respect she valued so much. She learned to walk everywhere, to be at home on the street, talking to people as she "could never do in Washington where people would think I was bananas". These habits of life, as well as her Indian clothing — not saris but a long tunic (kurta) over tapered trousers (chudidhar) — became standard for Penny in five consecutive years of work with the very poor in rural villages. She conveys with great conviction that the aim of her work with these people was to support their organization, and reiterated that the villagers were her boss, although they couldn't pay her.

Penny returned to the United States in December 1983 to work for A.T.I. (Appropriate Technology International) in Washington as an operations representative. The following year she was named a Loeb Fellow in Advanced Environmental Studies at the Harvard Graduate School of Design. The letter announcing Penny's fellowship described her job at A.T.I. as work "with rural development organizations in India, Nepal, Bangladesh and Indonesia" and said that she "would spend her year at Harvard in creating land-use techniques for nonexperts in developing countries." Since the Loeb Fellowship is designed for professionals pursuing independent study while maintaining outside professional commitments, Penny's year, rather than being spent quietly at Harvard, was a merry-go-round of two-month stints in Cambridge, Washington and Asia. She was the youngest of the Loeb Fellows and one of two women in a group of 12 selected from intense international competition.

Concluding her fellowship in December '85, Penny remained with A.T.I. as a project officer for a few months, but working at the level of an operations representative seemed too far removed from the needs of the people in developing countries which she knew so well. Penny feels very strongly that both agencies and individuals must be more responsive to specific needs in developing countries. She wanted to be involved at a pragmatic level, to "work in her own village", an expression she borrowed from her Indian co-workers. Believing that we in the United States ignore the currents in developing nations at our peril, she sees public education as a high priority and feels that the media should be used to expose Americans to people of the non-Western world and to different ways of thinking about life.

Deciding that "good intentions and commitment are not enough," Penny opted to "go it alone" as of June 30th. She is in the process of beginning her own firm (called Global View) based in Washington. She hopes to continue her work in South Asia (mostly India and Nepal) while also "exploring the possibility of initiating global education activities here in the U.S." She explains in a letter following her reunion visit: "The approach I will be exploring first is broadcasting international news over cable TV. Should it prove to be a practical approach, I would intend for this effort to increase international understanding and world peace. This, I believe, is a necessary adjunct/complement to direct work in the villages of the world. Sort of addressing both sides of the same coin. I am quite excited about the possibilities...while realizing that the effects will be a long time in the making."

Penny's deep loyalty to her college lies partly in her awareness that she received a gift from Sweet Briar which was a sense of membership in a community, and that the College helped her to learn that the experience of community is one "where you don't just take, but you give back as well". The knowledge that Penny has carried that gift and that lesson halfway around the world in her work is indeed rewarding and fulfilling for her, and for her Sweet Briar sisters.

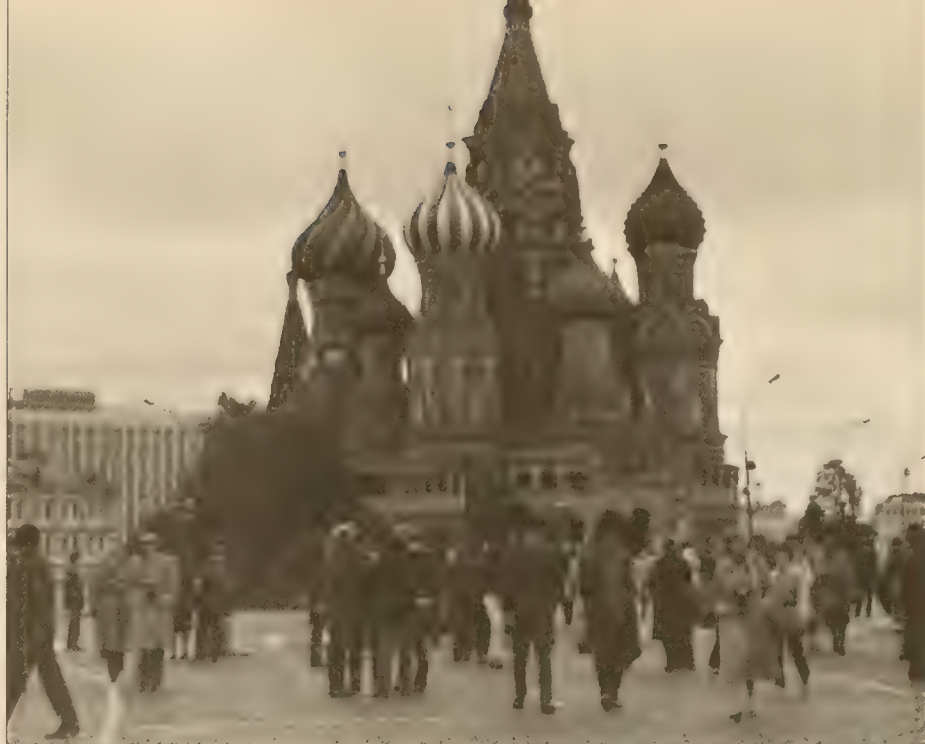

When I asked Penny what her Indian colleagues call her, she said: "Bikashwalli — the feminine of the word for 'development fellow' — not in the academic sense, but 'development chap', or guy, or what have you." Then she said, "The Indian meaning is really 'enlightenment fellow', " and I felt that this concluded appropriately my reunion chat with a Sweet Briar woman who truly is an "enlightenment fellow." □

Return to RUSSIA

PART I

Text and photos by Lucy Kreusler Carey '50

St. Basil's Cathedral, Moscow.

My family and I lived in various sections of the Soviet Union from 1939 until 1946, although we had never planned to settle in Russia nor even visit there. The tragic events of World War II forced us to leave our home in Wloclawek¹, Poland and move to the eastern part of the country. During the early days of the war Eastern Poland was occupied by the Soviet Army.

My father was principal of a private high school, my mother a teacher. The Nazi armies entered Wloclawek on September 16, 1939; about five weeks later the German Gestapo decided to deport all male teachers to a concentration camp in Germany. My parents and I managed to leave town minutes before the Nazi soldiers came to arrest my father. Traveling by side roads in rented carriages, we soon reached Warsaw, where we rented a car and drove eastward.

East was the only direction we could take as German troops were on all other sides. The night of November 5 we crossed the border into the Soviet Zone, hoping to reach Stanislaw² in southeastern Poland, my father's birthplace and the home of his parents.

¹Pronounced Votslavek: 80 miles northwest of Warsaw.

Once on the Soviet side our lives were no longer in danger. Undisturbed by the Soviet Army, we boarded a train to Stanislaw and arrived safely at my grandparents' home. Life assumed a semblance of normalcy: I started the fourth grade, my parents found teaching jobs. In comparison to the Nazis, the Soviet occupation forces were benevolent. The Soviet soldiers were friendly young men, fond of children and careful not to offend the local population.

Our relatively peaceful existence was disturbed once again by the German invasion of Russia on June 22, 1941. Seven days later my parents and I were evacuated farther east into Russia. My grandparents refused to leave their home. We did not know if we would ever return from the Soviet Union but the most important thing was to get away from the Germans — everything else was irrelevant. Our trip ended in Stalingrad. We remained there 13 months. In August 1942 the Nazi armies were within striking distance of our haven: we moved again.

After crossing the Volga River our train went north to pick up the Trans-Siberian route. Eventually we moved southward, arriving in Frunze, the capital of the Soviet Kirghiz Republic in Central Asia.

The area known as Central Asia is bounded on the north and east by Siberia, the Caspian Sea is its western boundary while to the south are Iran, Afghanistan and China. Frunze is near China, an area including high mountains, lush green valleys and deserts. We liked Central Asia for its scenery, warm climate, dry air and subtropical vegetation. We remained there for four years.

Making many friends in Frunze, I began to look upon it as my adopted home town. I finished high school in May 1946 at age 16 and was making plans to enter college. My parents were busy with teaching careers; Mother taught elementary school, Father was head of the English Department at Frunze State Teacher's College.

At the end of World War II the Soviet government announced that Poles living in Russia could return to Poland. My parents (and most Poles living in Frunze) were anxious to return to their homeland, although we had no one left there. My mother's family was murdered by the Nazis, my father's parents died during the German occupation. I did not want to leave Frunze.

I knew that Russia was not a free country. One could not live there and be unaware of censorship of personal mail, press and anything written for the public. Several of my teachers were political exiles and they could not leave Frunze. From them I heard horror stories about political prison camps.

Finally my parents persuaded me that it was best to leave the Soviet Union; reluctantly I parted with friends and boarded a train for the long journey to Poland.

We settled in Wroclaw³ on the western edge. There I started college in the fall of 1946. I wrote to my friends in Frunze several times but never received a reply. I am sure my letters never reached them.

Poland was to be only a temporary stop in our travels. Our country clearly was becoming part of the Soviet Bloc. My parents were determined to emigrate West. My mother's sister, who had lived in New York since 1920, helped us to obtain American visas. In August 1947 we sailed for New York.

After a difficult year there we moved to Sweet Briar where my father was to teach Russian. I was accepted by the College as a junior, granted credit for a year of college in Poland and some courses I took in Frunze High School.

I spent two happy years at Sweet Briar; as a foreign student I received a great deal of support from the students and faculty and my Sweet Briar friends loved to hear about life in Russia. A Soviet-made documentary was shown at the College in the spring of 1949 — every seat in the auditorium was filled. I introduced the film in English and said a few words in Russian as many people wanted to hear the sound of the language.

After graduation I did graduate work and became a social worker. I have kept up with Russian through volunteer work with the Center for International Visitors, contact with Russian immigrants and by reading Russian books.

I had wanted to go back to Russia for a visit since the early 1960s but somehow the time was not right until in April 1985 Pat Owen, a longtime friend, called my attention to a brochure describing an extensive tour of USSR. The tour started in Moscow, moved to Siberia via the Trans-Siberian Railroad, east to Khabarovsk, west to Central Asia and back to Moscow. Once I heard Central Asia was part of the trip, I was determined to go.

□ On Russian Soil Again

Pat and I reach Moscow September 12, 1985: I am overcome with joy when I hear a Russian voice announce our arrival at the Sheremetyevo airport. My happy mood soon changes to frustration. A stern-looking young man at the checkpoint stares at my passport picture; he does not think I look like my picture. I tell him in Russian that American passport pictures are not very flattering. "Where did you learn Russian?" he asks abruptly. Briefly, I tell him that I spent seven years in the USSR and finished school there. After more staring the young clerk lets me go. Customs is no problem; a smiling clerk barely looks at my luggage and I move on.

By now we should have been met by an Intourist guide. No guide is waiting for us. All travel arrangements within Russia and hotel bookings are made by the Intourist

³Pronounced Vrotslav, formerly known as Breslau.

Agency — an arriving tourist is told where he is to stay, he does not know ahead of time. Pat, three other Americans and I must find our way to the Intourist Office.

I decide to get the necessary information while the others wait. The Intourist Office turns out to be three desks presided over by three women with constantly ringing telephones and a mob of tourists milling around. Fortunately I manage to get the attention of a stout, dark-haired woman with her hair pulled back in a ponytail; I give her my name and flight number. She is relieved that I found her on my own. We are booked into the Cosmos Hotel. The lady is short of interpreters but will arrange transportation. We do not really need an interpreter; I will interpret. Within about 10 minutes I am introduced to two Intourist drivers: Zhenia and Senia.

Pat and I go with Zhenia, who speeds along busy Moscow streets, weaving in and out of lanes. We ask him to be more careful but he insists that he is a good driver. At the age of 40, after 20 years of driving, he has not had an accident. (I was to learn that Soviet men are very quick to reveal their ages.)

We manage to arrive at the Cosmos unhurt. Cosmos, a new hotel, was built in 1980 for the Moscow Olympics. Zhenia helps us with registration. One is not expected to tip Intourist drivers but I want to do something nice for Zhenia. I hand him an American ballpoint pen, which he seems to like.

Our room on the 12th floor, overlooking a large avenue called Prospect Mira, is comfortably furnished. Across the street is the Museum of Economic Achievement with a red neon sign proclaiming glory to the working people. The window drapes do not close at the top. The television set works sporadically. There are towels of all different colors in the bathroom and the toilet paper is rough and shocking pink.

I decide to look for a place to eat — tonight we have to make our own arrangements. Finding a restaurant turns out to be no easy matter. There are two at the hotel but they serve only tours, not individuals. A cafeteria open to everyone closed at 7:00 p.m. There is no coffee shop, no snack bar, not even a little shop with candy bars. I go the “hard currency” bar (only Western money accepted). The bartender offers me two sandwiches and fixes a vodka tonic for me. He asks if I had a good day; I tell him that Moscow did not exactly roll out a welcome mat. He assures me that tomorrow will be better because our guide will make all the arrangements and suggests that I look at the bulletin board near the main desk for a note from our guide. Suddenly I feel very tired. The bartender looks at me intently and says, “You are Russian, I know, and you have been away for a long time.” I tell him, “Is almost right.”

On the bulletin board is a handwritten note in English addressed to our tour from a guide named Irina. The next morning at 8:30 our tour group of 28 Americans and Canadians gathers in the lobby to meet Irina, who will stay with us for the entire tour. She is a tall, dark-haired young woman, wearing a heavy brown coat and rubber boots. Her British-accented English is flawless.

Moscow is a large sprawling metropolis with a population of eight million. The streets are wide and clean. There are many parks in the city; their lawns are obviously cut but not edged and there are few flowers. The Soviet capital is drab. Its numerous gray high-rise apartment buildings look alike. The stores look dull with their meager displays. Clothing stores and fashion houses show one dress per window. Food store windows are empty. Lines are visible inside bakeries, fruit and vegetable and dairy stores.

An old section of Moscow, called Arbat, stands out from the rest of the city, its renovated houses and commercial buildings pastel-colored and each having a distinct look. Arbat is reminiscent of Georgetown. Homes of Russian writers Tolstoy and Pushkin have been restored and turned into museums.

Our longest stop is at Red Square. The 400-yard-long area is bounded on the west by the Kremlin, on the east by Moscow's largest department store, called GUM⁴, on the north by the Historical Museum and on the southern end by the magnificent St. Basil's Cathedral. This imposing structure is now a museum. Built in the 16th century by Ivan IV (the Terrible), it consists of the central church surrounded by eight chapels. The church and chapels have their own towers and are built from a common foundation. Each tower is painted a different color. St. Basil's looks like a fairy-tale castle and must be the most photographed building in Russia.

The Kremlin, formerly a royal palace, is the seat of the Soviet government. It is enclosed behind a red brick wall constructed in the 15th century. In front of the wall is Lenin's mausoleum. There is always a crowd of tourists waiting in line to glimpse Lenin's embalmed body; it takes at least an hour to go through the line.

The Historical Museum, a red brick building with white towers, is about 100 years old and is closed for renovations. The GUM is a very large structure with no distinguishing features on the outside. Irina says that GUM is just a working store, nothing remarkable to be found there.

On the morning of departure for Siberia our hotel maid appears to ask us to do her the favor of buying her some chocolate and cherry vodka at the Beriozka shop on the first floor. Beriozkas are stores for foreign visitors, accepting only hard currency. The lady offers to pay us in roubles, but we want no money and tell her that whatever we get for her will be her tip. She is overjoyed, soon reappearing with tea and cookies for us. Her name is Varia. She tells of her frustration with empty shelves and lines in Moscow stores. The shortage of consumer goods is hard to bear for an Intourist hotel employee who comes in contact with well-dressed, prosperous tourists.

Boarding the Trans-Siberian Express, our destination is Irkutsk where we will stay for two days and then go to Khabarovsk. Our tour takes most of the first railroad car — we fill seven compartments, four persons to a compartment. The arrangements are definitely coed. Pat and I share a compartment with two other women; most everyone else is in mixed company. The last two compartments are filled with Soviet passengers. Irina ends up with three men in one of these.

In addition to the passengers, two young crewmen, Sergei and Sasha, who have their own tiny quarters, travel with us. They clean after a fashion, heat the coal stove at night and make tea in a samovar.

We soon discover with horror that there are no bathing facilities on our train. Two tiny lavatories equipped with cold water are at each end of the compartment. Neither lavatory is clean. There are no hand towels and no toilet paper. Within an hour of our departure from Moscow several American passengers ask me, "How do you say toilet paper in Russian?" Sasha soon catches on and asks me to tell my friends that he will get toilet paper at the next stop. He does, but the supply of this essential commodity remains uncertain for the rest of the trip.

We take all our meals aboard. The dining car is clean, tables covered by linen tablecloths. We are given small paper napkins — there is a shortage of paper in Russia. Our meals are simple but well prepared. Our two waitresses are very pleasant. One of them, a short, stout, dark-haired woman named Taisia becomes everybody's favorite. She knows no English but soon discovers what everyone likes and tries to please them.

Making few stops, our train moves at 60 mph. I watch the typical Russian landscape of flat country with endless vistas of birch trees. Everything is still deep green. We pass little railroad stations with dilapidated buildings, villages with unpainted wooden houses and unpaved streets: little has changed in rural Russia in 40 years. As in Moscow, political slogans are seen on billboards and banners near various settlements. Lenin's image looks at me from posters on walls of railroad buildings. The slogans proclaim glory to Communism and Soviet workers and peace to the world. Forty years ago, Lenin's pictures were few, Stalin's picture was everywhere. References to peace are a recent development, the other slogans are not. Stalin is a forgotten man; no one mentions his successors either. Gorbachev's picture is nowhere to be found.

By the second day we begin to adjust to the train's primitive conditions. Men stop shaving. We wear most of the same clothes. We wash as best we can and use a lot of deodorant. I notice that the Soviet passengers avoid the dining car; they travel with bundles of food and fix their own meals. During infrequent stops they rush to the station to replenish their food supply. The Soviets do not travel with pretty luggage, they carry boxes and bags. If a Soviet passenger carries a suitcase it is beat up or tied with rope.

Gradually we get acquainted with Soviet passengers. First I meet a blond five-year-old boy named Vadik. I treat him to a piece of chewing gum; he brings me a bunch of Crimean grapes. Next I meet his grandmother, Vera, with whom he travels. Vera presents her roommate, Tania, a Moscow secretary. Both are going to Novosibirsk. Tania and Vera ask why I left Russia; they are not hostile, just curious. I tell them that I returned to my native Poland with my parents and later emigrated to the U.S. to be reunited with my aunt and her family. Once these women learn that I was only 16 years old at the time of our departure from Frunze, they do not hold it against me. I get a distinct feeling they are critical of those who leave USSR.

The American tourists, except for one, do not speak Russian, but they manage to communicate with the Soviet passengers anyway. They laugh, they use gestures, they share food, cigarettes and drink. Several women play with Vadik — he takes a real fancy to a young woman from Chicago. As the Soviet passengers get off the train they hug and kiss the American tourists with whom they became friendly. Throughout the trip a bond between Americans and Russians develops. It occurs to me that Russians and Americans have similar temperaments — both are friendly, informal and outgoing.

One evening Sergei introduces me to a Russian named Volodia. At first I am put off by this man's appearance. He is of medium height, with dark hair and complexion and a silver front tooth. I quickly learn that he is soft-spoken, charming and quite intelligent. As I did, he spent the war years in Central Asia. Volodia is 50, married and father of five grown children. He lives on a remote Kamchatka Peninsula⁵, working as a bus driver. Volodia is on his way to visit his sister in Zima near Irkutsk.

I answer Volodia's questions about availability of food, clothing and housing in the U.S. Such questions are easily answered, but I feel most Soviets do not fully understand the answers. They have lived with inadequate supplies of consumer goods for so long that they cannot imagine life in a land of plenty.

Conversation with Volodia shifts to travel. He would like to visit the U.S. and Canada. Alaska interests him greatly because of proximity to Kamchatka. He thinks foreign travel may become a reality for Soviet citizens under Gorbachev's leadership. Long distance travel within the Soviet Union is not simple; one must make plans ahead of time. It is much easier to get train or plane reservations with a document from one's employer, professional union or a doctor stating the purpose of the trip. The purpose may be recreational but a document should be obtained. It soon becomes obvious to me that Volodia has no proper travel papers and was able to board our train by making a deal with Sergei. Several other Soviet passengers made similar deals.

Toward the end of the trip across Siberia, Volodia relates an incident from his family's past which brings tears to our eyes and bitter memories of life under Stalin's rule. Volodia's father, now in his 70s, served in the Soviet Army during WWII. Like thousands of Soviet soldiers, he was captured by the Nazis and sent to a camp in Germany. After the war, the ex-prisoner of war was reunited with his family. The joy was short-lived. After a few months Volodia's father was arrested and imprisoned for "letting himself be captured" by the enemy. It was not until after Stalin's death in 1953 that the poor man was freed.

In spite of sad experiences, my new friend is proud of his country. He points out that there is no unemployment in the Soviet Union and that education and medical care are free. Volodia accepts this system. He thinks Gorbachev is a good man and that under his leadership life will improve. I am sorry to say goodbye as he gets off in Zima.

We get off soon too. Irina says we will fly to Khabarovsk due to a sudden change in plans. Few people are upset about that — three days on this train are quite enough. □

Editor's note: Mrs. Cary's Return to Russia will be concluded in the next issue.

Lucy Cary is Public Assistant Policy Specialist for the Maryland State Department of Human Resources. She entered Sweet Briar in the fall of 1948 and notes that she is "probably the only Sweet Briar graduate of a Soviet secondary school." Her father, the late Dr. Abraham Kreusler, taught Russian at SBC from 1948 through 1952. In September, 1985, she returned "as an American tourist to the country where I grew up and where my father was born. Since I speak Russian fluently, I was able to communicate with people from all walks of life in their own language. It was a great learning experience."

An Appeal For Early Language Training

A Position Paper

By Eduardo A. Peniche
Visiting Assistant Professor of Modern Languages

Of all peoples, we Americans ought to be the greatest linguists on earth. There are many convincing factors which point to that potentiality. For one thing, we are a nation of multiple ethnic and cultural backgrounds, a nation with extensive involvement — diplomatic, economic and military — in practically every corner of the world. Furthermore, it should not be too great a task for Americans to acquire a second language because they already speak one of the most difficult and most flexible languages of all: English. Yet, despite this rich cultural background and international involvement, when it comes to foreign languages and an understanding of world affairs and other cultures, our “incompetence . . . is nothing short of scandalous, and it is becoming worse.” That is the opinion of the President’s Commission of Foreign Languages and International Studies which in the fall of 1979 submitted the findings and recommendations it had developed during a year’s “intensive evaluation of the state of foreign language and international studies and their impact on the nation’s internal and external strength.” The report concluded that “nothing less is at issue than the nation’s security.”

During the course of its in-depth study, the commission discovered that U.S. military as well as civilian agencies of the federal government face critical shortages of personnel qualified in key foreign languages such as Arabic, Chinese, Farsi (the language of Iran), Korean, Polish, Russian, etc. The study, according to an ELS (Educational Language Service) Educational Media report, revealed Pentagon figures showing that 75.3 percent of the Army jobs requiring essential foreign language skills were filled. Somewhat similar percentages were given for the Navy and the Air Force. The Marine Corps, which has the lowest number of linguistic jobs required (despite the fact that a large number of our Marine units are part of the U.S. mobile strategic forces), also had the lowest percentage of jobs being filled — 66.3 percent. The Richmond Times-Dispatch of January 1, 1981 commented on this in greater detail.

There is, however, one other important issue concerning a second language acquisition about which I have little doubt. That is that we Americans are missing a great opportunity by not teaching our children a second language in the lower grades in school when they can learn it easily and enjoy learning it.

In contrast to the schools in most European countries where a second and often a third language is standard in the early schools, we, in our American provincialism, ignore the matter altogether. Then we somewhat hastily try to make it up by teaching foreign language in the secondary school after the opportunity has passed; the capacity for language learning atrophies quickly after age 12. By the time we reach high school, language learning is usually an unwelcome and difficult task undertaken and accomplished only as an arduous and odious labor, if at all. Thus is our provincialism enhanced, and our attitudes toward foreign peoples, including foreign nationals who come to our shores, and their cultures are for the most part very negative. This in turn gives us an image, as undeserving as it may be, of being arrogant.

I am not advocating, of course, the training of expert linguists; that would be impractical and costly. Drawing from my own experience in the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, California, I am convinced that language specialization can be best accomplished under such intensive programs as offered by the DLI and the FSI (Foreign Service Institute). For instance, when I reported for Vietnamese language training at DLI, the class was limited to 12 students, yet we had five native speakers teaching the various class sessions. The classes were scheduled to last 47 weeks of six-hour class periods every day, five days a week. The day before our classes began we went to the school book store to get our “equipment”. We were issued a record player and records (I understand that now they use cassette players), a Vietnamese-English paperback dictionary and a booklet about Indochina; everything but textbooks. The books were issued later. During the first two weeks of instruction we learned the sounds of the Vietnamese language — not what it looked like.

Our lessons were on the records and in our texts. We had to memorize the dialogues and interact in class. As the course progressed under the rigorous schedule of six-hour sessions every day plus three to four hours of homework every night, we began to immerse in Vietnamese. We studied the language, the history, the customs, cuisine and traditions of the Vietnamese people. We were tested every four weeks (oral exams). Scores were based on accuracy and use of the language. The method worked and when I arrived in Vietnam I was able to carry out my work in military intelligence collaborating closely with our Vietnamese counterparts. Not only did I understand the language but I understood the people. My training, I was told upon graduation, cost the taxpayers around $15,000 for that one year (January-December 1958).

For obvious reasons, such language training as described above would be prohibitive for any school system. However, there should be no question about the fact that our children could learn any language without much difficulty provided that we started teaching them at the early stages of their formal education. Young children under the age of 12 learn new languages with great rapidity and facility; they not only internalize the grammar of the new language swiftly and correctly but they are able to do so without the need of "mental translation," a definite handicap in language learning. They also learn to operate their "transcription" mechanisms from one language to another much more easily than do older persons.

The reason for studying any language, whether it is a modern or an ancient language, should be that it broadens the student's education and strengthens her/his own cultural background. It gives the student a "whole new way of looking at the world". Therefore, if our students were to start with Latin, let's say in the 6th or 7th grade, this not only would build their English vocabulary but would permit them to develop the grammar skills which will prepare them for further language acquisition as they move into the secondary levels of education where they may be able to choose from a number of modern foreign languages.

In summary, the learning of foreign languages should be an enjoyable worthwhile experience for our students. At the same time they must be induced to realize that their linguistic skills will be indeed valuable for the rest of their lives as educated members of the society. However, to be effective, Americans must begin their language studies at a tender age. Not necessarily because they may eventually become diplomats, or international businessmen, or translators, or even world travelers, but because in the interdependent world of today English can't be imposed as the sole means of communication on earth. June K. Phillips, editor of the ACTFL (American Counsel of Teachers of Foreign Languages) Language Education Series alluded to this fact when she said: "Linguistically, interdependence stresses the give-and-take of real communication. Foreign language learning is a vital connection in the interdependent relationships of the next century, since true interaction can occur only when each community experiences the language and lifestyle of the other, where no group achieves dominance by imposing its language structure on the other."

Moreover, in this age when big and small countries are very nationalistic, the United States could hardly foster global goodwill and understanding if we persist with our monolingual tendencies. □

Eduardo A. Peniche recently was appointed to the Governor's Advisory Board on Virginia's International Education and in addition has been named "Volunteer of the Year," receiving a certificate of appreciation signed by Jeanne Baliles, wife of the governor. Instrumental in establishing the Piedmont Foreign Language Educators Alliance, he has given numerous presentations to elementary and secondary school students promoting cross-cultural understanding.

Sweet Briar Boards Hold Fall Session in Williamsburg

By Catherine Barnett Brown '49

Belle Air Plantation, home of Meri Hodges Major '54.

Editor's note: Ex-editors of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine never rest. We've put "Bunny" Brown right back to work!

What's ahead for Sweet Briar as we approach the 21st century?

Trends of the future and demographic indications will be the subject of intensive study by the members of Sweet Briar's Boards of Directors and Overseers for the next year.

Meeting in Williamsburg September 25-27 for two days of nonstop discussions, the board members were joined by representatives of the faculty, administration, students and parents. At the special request of President Nenah Fry, this group will devote a full year to study how best to direct the College during the years to come.

Committees have been formed. Dr.

Marvin Perry will chair the planning committee for the academic program; Kay Prothro Yeager '61 is chairman for co-curriculum; Peggy Sheffield Martin '48 will lead a committee to study enrollment; Mr. Philip Sellers will head the facilities committee; and Mr. Walter H. Brown is chairman of the finance committee.

During the Williamsburg convention Dr. Harold L. Hodgkinson, a demographic expert and Senior Fellow of the American Council on Education addressed the group on "Forecasting the Future".

Steering Committee Chairman Allison Stemmons Simon '63 later introduced planning specialist Barbara Snelling, who spoke on methods of analysis and planning for the future.

Other speakers at the meeting included Pamela Whittaker (Mrs. Mark Whittaker) on women's college trends; Alice Love on enrollment; market analysis; Thomas Connors on facilities, critical issues and unmet space needs; and Allison Simon on scheduling of future meetings.

The atmosphere was optimistic. The future for Sweet Briar appears to be bright. Alumnae support is enthusiastic, indeed, at a record-breaking high. The dedicated and talented group of individuals who are donating their time to steering Sweet Briar's course are inspired by the support of so many generous graduates and friends.

Members of the Boxwood Circle, Fletcher Associates, President's Circle and Sweet Briar Circle were honored in Williamsburg by the Boards of Directors and Overseers on Friday, September 26. A social hour on the terrace of the Cascades Meeting Center, overlooking a wooded hillside and floodlit stream, was followed by dinner for 200 in the Cascades Room. Director Alice Cary Farmer Brown '59, standing in for Chairman of the Boards Wrede Petersmeyer (who had returned home to stand as father of the bride for his daughter!), cited the fund-raising achievements of many of the attendees and others who were not present. Madrigal singers entertained during the dinner and President Fry spoke briefly.

The next day more than a hundred of the visitors took advantage of a well-planned tour of Colonial Williamsburg and nearby James River plantations. A visit to the DeWitt Wallace Decorative Arts Gallery was followed by a bus trip to Belle Air (owned by Meri Hodges Major '54), Berkeley, Westover and Shirley Plantations. Robert S. Fuller, Professor of Art at Randolph-Macon Woman's college (and husband of Martha Ann Fuller in Sweet Briar's Development Office) gave a short talk about Georgian architecture, of which Westover is a classic example. The day concluded with cocktails at the home of Roger and Martha Dabney Leclerc '54 and dinner at the King's Arms Tavern in Williamsburg. □

COMPUTE, COMPUTER, COMPUTERIZE

By Judith M. Elkins
Professor of Mathematical Sciences
Sweet Briar College

Since 1960 to the present we have seen computers change from being a scarce, costly, strange resource to a plentiful, relatively cheap, familiar tool. Earlier awesome reference to computing power and speed has evolved into frequent reference to “the ubiquitous computer” and also “that blank blank computer” in everyday conversation. We can even see this transition in our dictionaries which reflect current language usage.

The 1961 Webster New Collegiate lists only the word “compute”, meaning to determine by calculation, reckon. “Computer” receives no separate entry and “computerize” is not listed at all. Clearly these words were not commonly used.

In the 1971 Random House Dictionary of the American Language, the meaning of “compute” did not change. “Computer” received a separate entry:

1. one who or that which computes.
2. mechanized or electronic apparatus capable of carrying out repetitious and highly complex mathematical operations at high speeds. Used for business — inventory maintenance, payroll preparation; industry — automatic operation of machinery, control of refinery operations; research — missile flight characteristics, behaviors involving a number of variables.

Note the emphasis on mathematical operations and the listed uses in business, industry and research. Obviously this esoteric apparatus was not recognized as useful, available or affordable for home, office or college on an everyday basis. In fact, personal computers were not on the market until the late '70s. The word “computerize” received a listing — “control, perform, process or store a system, operation or information by means of or in an electronic computer”.

According to the more conventional 1984 Webster's New Riverside Dictionary, the meaning of “compute” is more complex: “1. determine by mathematics, especially numerical methods; 2. determine by use of computers”. The word “computer”, now a well accepted term, receives a more concise definition: “high speed electronic device that processes, retrieves and stores programmed information”. “Computerize” now has two meanings. The first is more concise, reflecting more frequent and common usage: “process or store within a computer or computer system”. The second reflects the widespread use and increased availability: “furnish with a computer or computer system”.

By 1986, even our use of dictionaries has been affected by computers. Using a computerized dictionary and thesaurus (the Turbo Lightning engine with Random House Concise Dictionary and Thesaurus on line), we find “compute” as before, and many synonyms for “computer”: “data processor, cpu, mainframe, minicomputer, calculator”. Of course the spelling has been checked by computer in this arcane, arch document. (The extra adjectives have been added to test the computer dictionary.)

During the same period, computing has made a parallel transition at educational institutions as a time snapshot from 1961 shows. The vantage point is a Connecticut Valley women's college (no free advertising from this persona). Few colleges nationwide had their own computer. Connecticut Valley colleges sent card decks to Dartmouth with expected turnaround time of days. Few faculty used computers, except at Dartmouth, and student computer literacy was below the measurement threshold. Computing and computers were not really academically respectable, especially in pure mathematics departments, and computer science had not emerged as a discipline. Many programmers were language majors and maybe a few math and science majors. All were certainly trained on the job.

By 1971 my vantage point was Ohio State University and my professional path stretched from the University of Wisconsin to the University of California-San Diego to California State University-San Diego to Rutgers, the state university of New Jersey. Such mobility was not unusual. There was a shortage of faculty in mathematics and science and the national effort to upgrade math and science education and “put a man on the moon” was still in full swing. The “in” refrain was, “Do mathematics and see the world!”

At the large universities the secession of computer science departments was well under way, but these departments were still small and underenrolled. Charges for computer time were substantial and effectively restricted computer use to those with research grants and few classes. There was almost no use of computers by mathematics faculty or classes and certainly none in the humanities — after all, computers were used for computing numbers. Integration of computing into academic programs stopped at the undergraduate level with engineering, and calculators, rarely seen, were priced in the $200 range. Personal computers were not yet available unless the count included programmable calculators.

The next time snapshot is Sweet Briar 1986. Computing facilities, both mainframe and micro, are widely available to the College community. The DEC2065 mainframe is ready 24 hours a day to support 48 concurrent users and is not restricted by computer charges or user class — student, faculty or administration. Terminal access, direct or dial-in, is provided across the campus or by telephone with more than 18 terminals in the science building alone. More than 100 microcomputers are in use with some 40 Macintosh and Epson Equity (IBM compatible) computers for public use in addition to those used by individual departments.

The physical and social science departments have long been using computers for analysis, tutorials and simulations and, over the last 10 years, many applications have migrated from the mainframe to microcomputers, making use of the increased graphics capabilities. The humanities have expanded use of microcomputers for writing, graphic design and individual research. The Mathematics Department has become the Mathematical Sciences Department — an umbrella for computer science, statistics and mathematics. Computer science is still considered a “nouveau riche” and “parvenu” discipline by some, despite the emergence of a theoretical and demanding curriculum. The appropriate use of computers and computing in each field is well accepted.

The frantic furor for computer literacy has decreased as our familiarity with and acceptance of this technology has increased. We all expect to use computers and are convinced that we can learn to “drive” this technology much as we learned to drive a car. The main uses have been identified and fall into the categories of word processing, database, spreadsheet and graphics and communication. A literate user need not and probably will not write programs, although programming is an intellectual challenge and success is eminently satisfying. “Friendliness” and ease of use continue to improve. Even so, effective use of these applications requires learning the system, an initial apprenticeship. Carpenter tools do not instantly make me a master of the craft. Likewise, the fastest cpu, largest memory and latest software on my desk will not create an instant genius able to leap intellectual mountains with the tap of a key or two.

There continue to be extravagant predictions about the impact of computers in education which become specific only in regard to tutorials and writing. The use of word processors, for example, gives us more confidence, makes us better writers, enables us to confront written awkwardness. With outliners, spellers and a variety of fonts, it is technically easy to improve clarity, organization and emphasis. But as a longtime user and advocate of word-processing let me disillusion you. Creativity, inspiration and content do not come from the computer system. If that were so, you would be treated to gems of wisdom instead of this Convocation episode.

Paint and drawing software and hardware provided my next major delusion. Armed with a joystick, drawing pad, color printer and monitor, I sprayed a variety of curves and lines across the screen, choosing colors and patterns at random. The computer system provided the technical tools, speed and vivid colors; the result was a facsimile of the inkblot test. Without artistic talent and training, I will do as well with giant crayolas.

Computers have become useful and effective as an educational resource, but we can and should question the appropriate uses. At least we are now spared the pathetic picture of the pudgy freshman failing his courses because his parents didn't have a home computer. As Stephen Manes says, “Will your kid really become a better scholar by using an electronic Brittanica to call up an animated diagram of the duodenum?” (PC Magazine, pp151 ff, 9/16/86)

So what is the role of computers? Intelligence amplification, according to Fred Brooks, the renowned computer scientist, not artificial intelligence. We have a tool to handle complexity and free us from many tedious chores, while creating new problems and challenges. Education, however, concerns values and ideas and requires human interaction and engagement. Computers are not a substitute, however computer literate we become. □

Neigh Reunion '86

By Keedie Grones '76
Manager, Rogers
Riding Center and Stable

If there is one thing for which Sweet Briar alumnae are known, it's loyalty to their alma mater, and former riders prove no exception. Riders ranging from the Class of '27 through the Class of '86 gathered on campus the weekend of September 26-28, 1986 for a "neigh reunion".

Neither distance nor time seemed to be a deterrent, as evidenced by the presence of Sally Dunham '66 from Westport, CT, Ruth Harmon Kaiser '39 from Princeton, NJ and Virginia Lynch '84 from Atlanta, to name a few. Even seven-months-pregnant Vivian Yamaguchi Cohn '77 traveled from Chicago to join the fun.

Friday night arrivals were treated to a cocktail party by the Riding Council and a picnic dinner beginning in the Clayton E. Bailey Room and overflowing into the gallery of the Robin S. Cramer Hall for demonstrations. Student rider and 1986 Intercollegiate Individual National Champion Pam Ward '89 on her "Swiss Watch" presented a hunter or dressage sportif ride. National and international rider/trainer Lendon F. Gray '71 on "Seldom Seen" followed with a playful but impressive musical kur tracing the large pony's history from low-level dressage and combined training mount to successful international athlete. The pony's "horse stride" and natural showmanship, combined with Lendon's excellent training, made him a crowd-pleaser here as he has been throughout the country and abroad. Those who lingered to chat with students, old friends and faculty enjoyed watching a replay of the evening's riders on the Center's color videotape equipment made possible through the Robin S. Cramer '77 Endowment Fund.

Saturday morning broke cool as several groups of early risers set out to explore old and new trails around the Monument, the Ecology Field, Lower Paul's Mountain fields, the Proving Grounds, the dairy and beyond. Sue Croker '84, Katylou Gray Brittle '77 and Patty Glick '85, among others, enjoyed seeing new gates and jumps which make the teaching stations and trails more useful and easily accessible.

Many alums chose to "sleep in", taking either continental breakfast at the Riding Center or the full breakfast at Prothro Commons to gird themselves for the Hunter Pace ahead. Horses and people were mixed and matched to arrive with pairings that would be fun and well-suited to one another as the teams criss-crossed their way through campus with only memory and ingenuity to guide each team to specific pick-up points. Members of the most recent classes were expected to be better navigators, but the pair finding all six points (and their way home!) first were Karen Biemiller Clark '84 and Lendon Gray '71. Slowest or "most lost" honors went to Elora Gilbert Wiley '69 and Ruth Harmon Kaiser '39, while Catherine Adams '82 and Sarah Sutton Brophy '83 came in closest to the optimum time. Sarah "JoJo" Scott '77, Maggie Shriver '77 and Cathy Slatinshek '76 won the best-dressed award for their matching lavender polo shirts and color-coordinated plastic pins.

At the Alumnae House the exhaustive efforts of the morning were soothed by "Bloody Marys" and the warm hospitality of Ann Morrison Reams '42, Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80 and their staff before heading on to a hearty lunch. Tales of riding in former years brought fond memories of Harriet Rogers, Captain Littauer, Clayton E. Bailey, James Blackwell and others who gave so much to the Sweet Briar Riding Program, as well as stories of earlier mounts such as "Buck", "Twilight", "Executive", "Aquarius", "Timmy Turtle" and "Minnie".

Lunch languishers gravitated back to the Riding Center to watch Lendon's second energetic presentation on "Seldom Seen"; the Maine native went through warm-up procedures for working the grey gelding and a demonstration of how to bring a balanced and collected mover through the steps to high school classical dressage movements by cooperation of horse and rider. This "master class" was particularly well-received by the more than 75 alumnae, students and staff spectators who appreciated the years of hard work and dedication it took to bring this team to its competitive level. Long after the weekend faculty and students will benefit from the tapes made of both presentations. We are grateful not only to Lendon but to "Seldom Seen" 's owner, Mrs. Peggy Whitehurst, and to the Robin S. Cramer Endowment, which underwrote the expenses.

The hale and hearty who didn't mind the afternoon heat moved on to the Green Dairy Barn on Monument Road to follow the "Bedlam Beagles" hunted by their master, Mandy McCormick Cronin '63. Although dry conditions thwarted much hope for good scenting conditions, the hounds worked well on two rabbits and followers were treated to a view of a grey fox which popped up in front of the pack.

Some riders who didn't choose to join the beaglers visited professors, took a swim in the lake or just relaxed, enjoying their return to campus.

Whichever afternoon activity was on the agenda, everyone turned out refreshed and renewed for cocktails at Sweet Briar House, hosted by President Fry. Many who had tentatively ridden up to her back door to claim a "chip" in the Hunter Pace enjoyed seeing the interior decorative changes made since their last visit. Alumnae also were glad to meet fellow rider Alice Love, director of admissions and to renew old friendships with Lydia and Peter Daniel, an honorary member of Riding Council because of his long-term interest in the Riding Program and his help in the construction of the current facility.

The evening continued at the Wailes Center at a lovely seated dinner. Over dessert Stephanie Bredin Speakman '68 shared her thoughts and knowledge of steeplechasing and wonderful videotape footage of her horse, "Our SteepleJack". This handsome field hunter's move from the hunt field to timber racing and his culminating win of the arduous Maryland Hunt Cup provided an entertaining story enlivened by Stephanie's enthusiasm and wit.

Sunday was a travel day for most but not before many "old girls" took advantage of late brunch in the dining hall, a peek at old dorm rooms, a check on renovations in the Pit, Benedict, the library, the chapel basement and the Refectory/Pannell Center, a trip down the senior stairs . . . and in fact down memory lane. Some, led by Sarah Babcock '83, cheered on student riders at an Old Dominion Athletic Conference Horse Show in Lynchburg, where the SB team won the four-way competition. Others revived the tradition of attendance at the Foxfield Steeplechase Races.

What's next for this by now very close-knit group with a variety of ages, jobs, interests and geographical locales, sharing an abiding interest in horses and friends made in college? Hopefully, we'll continue to expand our horizons, building on what Sweet Briar (and horses) have given us and will return for the next "neigh reunion" with all the zeal and many fond memories evoked by this one. □

Outstanding Alumnae Awards, 1986

By Judith Greer Schulz '61
President,
Alumnae Association

Daniel Webster said in 1818 of his alma mater, Dartmouth College, "It is a small college, as some have said, but there are those who love it." Sweet Briar College has so many alumnae who love it that the Board of the Alumnae Association decided in 1968 to establish an award to graduate alumnae who have shown their dedication to Sweet Briar by giving outstanding, sustained service to the College in a volunteer capacity.

The graduate must have been out of Sweet Briar for at least 15 years, and no more than three awards may be made in any one year. The first award was made in honor of the entire Class of 1910, and all five graduates of that class were present in 1968 to receive it.

This year we are privileged to honor two alumnae. Even though their involvement and interest have been entirely different, both have exhibited that longtime commitment which has not faded as the years have passed. Both think of Sweet Briar constantly and remember us in many ways, by sending frequent messages or phone calls about things which might be of interest or value. They are always available when needed to help with any kind of Sweet Briar-related program, and both get back to campus often for a variety of reasons. Both are very much loved and respected by all segments of the Sweet Briar family.

ADELAIDE BOZE GLASCOCK '40

Adelaide Glascock has served the College as a member of the Board of Overseers and as a member of the board of the Alumnae Association. She has been a leader in the Sweet Briar Club in each city in which she has lived and has served as president of two clubs. She has been chairman of the Alumnae Representative Committee which deals with prospective students, and she was instrumental in the formation of the bulb project through which the Alumnae Association provides funds for 44 endowed scholarships and two special scholarships. She served as chairman of the first National Bulb Project and has done a bang-up job selling bulbs herself. She also served as secretary of her class, providing news for class notes in the alumnae magazine.

Adelaide, known to her friends of long standing as "Polly", was an active Sweet Briar student, being involved with Paint and Patches, Tanz Zirkle (a modern dance group), the choir, the Glee Club and The Sweet Briar News, and was secretary and treasurer of the French club. As a French major, she spent her junior year studying at the Sorbonne in Paris. She graduated cum laude, then went on to get her masters degree in French Literature from Columbia University. She later did additional work at the University of Virginia extension school as well as at William and Mary's extension. She taught French in several different areas including Fairfax Hall, where she was head of the French department, St. Catherine's, the Collegiate School, and Mt. Vernon Junior College, and she did some private teaching.

She has never lost touch with the College, nor her interest in being a part of it. One of her special interests has been fund-raising. She has had a special concern for the Annual Fund and has been a longtime member of the Boxwood Circle Committee which solicits annual gifts of $1000 or more from alumnae. She is also interested in Planned Giving, having served as chairman of that committee on the Alumnae Board. She has continued her interest in the work of the Friends of the Library.

Her other volunteer involvements include being founder and sponsor of a senior citizens club, serving on the Planned Parenthood Board, the auxiliary board of a hospital and the Girl Scout Council. She has been a member of the state education board and the PTA and a trustee of a day school, as well as president of the AAUW and chairman of Home Service Volunteers and the Visiting Nurse Service.

She has held several interesting jobs. Her teaching experiences were varied and challenging. For a while, she wrote book reviews for her local newspaper as well as a French journal. At the present time she is a successful realtor.

Adelaide's husband is an attorney, as is her son. Her hobbies include tennis, paddle tennis, bridge and language study in French, Italian and Japanese.

SARAH LOUISE ADAMS BUSH '43

Sarah Louise Adams Bush, known to all as "Ouija," has probably done as much to encourage outstanding young women to choose Sweet Briar as their college as any one of our alumnae. She diligently watched out for that particular student whom she thought would appreciate a Sweet Briar education as well as be an asset to the campus community, then very carefully began to talk with her, send her information and gradually win her interest.

But that's not all. She just as conscientiously went about selling our Sweet Briar bulbs to support her club scholarships, one of which is named in her honor, to make sure that any student who could qualify to come to Sweet Briar would not be discouraged from applying due to monetary considerations. This, too, she has done with great skill and interest over a period of time.

While a student at Sweet Briar, Ouija was quite involved as secretary of both her sophomore and junior classes, treasurer of the Athletic Association, member of the Orientation Committee, president of the YWCA, which was an active service organization on campus at that time, a member of Q.V. and Tau Phi. She majored in history. Her ever-ready smile and friendliness were well-known on campus as they are now wherever she goes. You can expect to be greeted by her wonderful, cheery voice, often addressing you as "honey". Born in San Antonio, she still lives in Texas, but in Dallas.

She has continued her interest in Sweet Briar ever since graduation. She has served on the Board of Overseers, the board of the Alumnae Association in several capacities, has been president of the Sweet Briar club in her hometown and is active in the bulb program and the admissions program there. She has been an effective vice chairman of class fund agents, a member of the Reunion Gifts Committee for her last reunion and an active worker with the Generations Campaign.

She has been equally involved in her community. She has been active in the Women of the Church and has served several school boards as well as being involved in PTA work during the years her children were in school. She was involved in the Junior League, having been chairman of four or five of the key committees. Always interested in young people, she and her family hosted an exchange student from England for a year, under the American Field Service program.

Ouija has a very lively family. Her husband has shared her enthusiasm for involvement and has eagerly accompanied her to Sweet Briar many times when she has returned. He seems to be as much at home here as she. In the reverse, they have hosted many Sweet Briar people in their home: administrators, admissions counselors, and faculty, and always with graciousness and warm hospitality. They have three children — one son and two daughters, one of whom graduated from Sweet Briar. □

What the Faculty is Reading

Editor's note: This new column will feature various faculty members or couples with their recommendations for pleasure and/or serious reading. Our first contributors are Dean Robin and Joan Bowers, pictured above.

Joan Spivey Bowers suggests:

1. Green Thoughts: A Writer in the Garden by Eleanor Perenyi. 304pp, 1983, Vintage paperback, $5.95. Eleanor Perenyi's splendid writing and delightfully opinionated views make this one of the best collections of essays I've ever read on gardening — and a number of other subjects as well, ranging from politics and history to superstition and science.

2. Time After Time by Molly Keane. 256pp, 1985 Dutton paperback, $8.95. One of the funniest books I've read in a long time, Time After Time is by an author who is enjoying a second surge of popularity after having been popular under a different name (M. J. Farrell) in the '30s and '40s. The book's four elderly, eccentric protagonists reveal, as does the author herself, the potential of the human spirit for new beginnings even as they live out their lives in the midst of a decaying Anglo-Irish gentry.

3. Letters to Alice on First Reading Jane Austen by Fay Weldon. 128pp, 1985, Taplinger paperback, $14.95. For almost two centuries Jane Austen has remained a touchstone of English literature against which people have measured their own understanding of literature and society. In a series of engaging letters to a fictional niece who finds Austen "boring, petty and irrelevant", Fay Weldon discusses the importance not only of Jane Austen but also of the whole realm of literature, the "City of Invention".

4. Monsignor Quixote by Graham Greene. 221 pp, 1983, Pocket Books paperback, 3.95.

Having long been intrigued by the Don Quixote story, I was delighted to find this reworking of the tale by Graham Greene. Although ostensibly a series of debates between a Catholic priest and a Marxist mayor, the book is also very much about the humane vision of Graham Greene himself.

Robin Bowers adds:

1. Victory Over Japan by Ellen Gilchrist. 277 pp, 1984, Little Brown paperback, $7.95.

In this collection of short stories, Ellen Gilchrist is as charmingly intimate and wryly humorous in her style as she is in her "Morning Edition" journal on National Public Radio. This book won the 1984 American Book Award for Fiction.

2. Ivy Days: Making My Way Out East by Susan Allen Toth. 199pp, 1985, Little Brown paperback, $6.95.

Written as a sequel to the highly-regarded Blooming: A Small-Town Girlhood, this book is a moving autobiographical account of a young woman's experiences — both disappointments and triumphs — as she educates herself at an Eastern women's college.

3. The Night Country by Loren Eiseley, 234pp, 1971, Scribner paperback, $7.95.

Famous as archaeologist, paleontologist and writer, Loren Eiseley has been one of my favorite essayists for a long time. This collection reveals Eiseley's strangely haunting vision of the world, as does this quotation from the book's foreword: "There is a shadow on the wall before me. It is my own; the hour is late. I write in a hotel room at midnight. Tomorrow the shadow on the wall will be that of another."

All books listed are available through the Sweet Briar Book Shop. Please use the order form on page 23.

Admissions Guides: Rosam Quae Meruit Ferat

By Martha Shorter Lanier '85
Admissions Counselor

How many of you remember your campus visit to Sweet Briar five years ago, 15 years ago or even 35 years ago? Do you remember the student who first opened the door so that you could catch a glimpse of college life? This first contact probably played a large part in your decision to attend Sweet Briar College. Realizing this important role, our Admissions Office depends heavily on students to give tours to prospective students and their families.

The present tour guide program, which began in 1965, has faced many changes but the high quality of our volunteer guides has remained the same. In the past, faculty and staff have nominated students whom they felt would best represent Sweet Briar. The nominated students then would decide whether they wished to volunteer an hour per week to giving tours. This year we added an extra criterion — an interview with an Honor Guide. In the interview, the student must answer questions similar to those she might encounter on an actual tour. Based upon this interview and a good academic standing, the Admissions Office selects the new guides. Sixteen new guides were selected from 28 interviewed. This new group will be a wonderful addition to our returning guides.

To ensure that the program remains student-oriented, the chairwoman of guides and chairwoman of overnight hostesses are selected from the tour guides. The former's responsibilities include coordinating the hourly tours, finding guides for odd hours and lending a much needed hand to our crazy office. Vikki Schroeder '87 from Plymouth, Minnesota serves her second year as chairwoman. In addition to a tour, a prospective student often spends a night in the dorm. Finding a student hostess falls under the chairwoman of overnight hostesses' duties. She too gives us many hours of extra help. Gina Pollock '89 from Houston, Texas will learn the word "hectic" as she coordinates hostesses for approximately 100 visiting students for each of two fall prospective student visits.

As you realize by now, we have a special group of young women. As well as volunteering their time to our office they have contributed a great deal to other areas at Sweet Briar. Academically they shine. Among the distinctions are a Founders' Scholar, Sweet Briar Scholars and Pannell Scholars. Many double-major and some have been known to design their majors. Vikki Schroeder, pursuing her theatre interest, created her Technical Theatre Studies major. Very much involved in the technical side of a production, she has just been designated assistant director/stage manager for this fall's production. You would think that she has enough to do but obviously she doesn't: Vikki doubled her Technical Theatre Studies major with Math/Computer Science.

Other very busy students include a set of twins, Kathy and Karen Bryan '87 from Jacksonville, FL. Both have dedicated their time as chairwomen, Kathy with overnight hostesses and Karen with tour guides. This fall, Karen was in charge of Orientation for the freshmen, working with some students she had probably hosted in her dorm room.

To show our appreciation for their important role, we held the first annual Boathouse tour guide picnic last May. This fall at the lunch/training session we gave out pewter pendants engraved with the Sweet Briar Rose, symbolizing SBC's motto: rosam quae meruit ferat. Each recipient must wear the pendant on tour.

The Admissions Office votes for 10 outstanding students from the tour group at the end of the year. Designated Honor Guides, their names are inscribed on a roster which hangs in the Admissions reception area. Honor Guides this year include JoAnn Bogolin '89, St. Francisville, LA; Sherri Brockwell '89, Chester, VA; Karen Bryan and Kathy Bryan '87, Jacksonville, FL; Julia Carter '89, Williamstown, NJ; Legare Davis '89, Columbia, TN (aunt: Suzanne Thompson Watkins '69); Grace Quirk '88, Houston, TX; Anne Robling '88, Middletown, OH; Crystal Sanford '87, Lynchburg, VA (mother: Betty Phillips '58), Vikki Schroeder '87, Plymouth, MN.

No one can overestimate the impact a guide has and we are truly indebted to them all. □

The Sweet Briar Alumnae Club of Richmond

Three alumnae from the Richmond Club came to Sweet Briar to talk to students about the banking industry, on October 29, 1986. They were Sandra Taylor Craighead, '74, a product manager with United Virginia Bank, Jarrett Dudley Goodwin, '70, who is in the loan department at Investors' Home Mortgage Co., and Nancy Hagan '81 who is in wire transfer services with United Virginia. The alumnae answered many enquiries and found that the informal panel discussion helped the students to really focus their questions. Students and staff greatly appreciated the Richmond Club's extending its wonderful networking system to include them. The panelists are members of the banking group of the Richmond Club's occupational networking program; other groups are: legal/government; sales, marketing and retail; and teaching/education.

The event was sponsored by Sweet Briar's Office of Career Planning and LIFETIMES Center.

Eight Sweet Briar employees who have worked at the College for 10 years or more received Staff Recognition Service Awards at the Founders' Day Program in Babcock Auditorium.

Those honored were: Phyllis D. Carter, Food Service, 10 years; Robert L. Cash, Buildings and Grounds, 40 years; Nancy E. Church, Admissions, 10 years; Richard T. Hewitt, Jr., Buildings and Grounds, 10 years; Lewis L. Mannon, Farm, 10 years; James E. Meade, Buildings and Grounds, 30 years; Willie H. Neal, Security, 10 years; Velma L. Turner, Halls of Residence, 20 years.

Lee Carollo Pforsich Wins Gager Chemistry Award

Lee Carollo Pforsich '78 and John R. McClenon, chairman of the Sweet Briar Chemistry Department

Lee Carollo Pforsich, a chemistry teacher at Oak Grove High School in San Jose, California and a 1978 chemistry graduate of Sweet Briar College, is the winner of the third Helen McClure Gager award in chemistry which was presented at Sweet Briar's Founders' Day ceremonies on September 30, 1986. The award recognizes distinguished work in chemistry by a member of the Sweet Briar community. The Chemistry Department stated that Lee was chosen both for her excellence in chemistry and her commitment to teaching high school. She had taught at a junior college and worked in industry but had gone back to high school teaching in the face of more lucrative offers from industry; this, they felt, was a very strong contribution to the field of chemistry.

The award, $600 this year, honors the late Professor Gager who taught chemistry at Sweet Briar from 1976 to 1980 and was established in her memory by her husband, Forrest L. Gager, Jr. in 1981.

While in college, Lee was a Sweet Briar Scholar and president of the American Chemical Society Student Affiliate at Sweet Briar. She spent her junior year at St. Andrew's, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and graduated magna cum laude. In 1979 she was one of the youngest members elected to Pi Lambda Theta, an honorary education society. She earned the master of arts degree in education from the Claremont Graduate School in 1980 and is now chairman of the chemistry department at Oak Grove High School. She lives in San Jose with her husband, Thomas, and their 3½ year-old son.

Dorothy Woods McLeod '58 Nominee for the Board of Overseers

The Board of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association submits the name of Dorothy Woods McLeod (Dotsie) '58 to the members of the Association as a candidate for election to the Board of Overseers of Sweet Briar College.

After graduating from Sweet Briar with an A.B. in Religion in 1958 and from Katherine Gibbs Secretarial School in 1959, she worked for five years in Boston for a management consultant and for a year and a half in New York for the financial vice president of CBS.

She is a charter member of Sweet Briar's Williams Associates and has served on the Alumnae Board as second vice president, chairman of Region VIII and first vice president and director of clubs. She has been actively involved in the recruitment of students as an alumna representative on admission since 1967.

As a student at Sweet Briar Dotsie was vice president of her freshman class, sophomore house president, secretary of the Judicial Board as a junior and chairman of the Judicial Board her senior year.

She was active in the Junior League of Nashville until 1976, served on the Board of the Colonial Dames of America in Tennessee from 1978-81 and currently works for the Nashville Symphony Guild Board and chairs the Reading Is Fundamental Board. Her husband is a Nashville physician and she has two children, Alexander and Dorothy.

Other names may be added to the ballot if they are sent to the director of the Alumnae Association, Sweet Briar, VA 24595, accompanied by 15 signatures of 15 alumnae and written consent of the nominees within two weeks after publication of this name as the nominee. If no additional nominations are made, the director of the Alumnae Association is instructed to cast a ballot to elect the proposed slate. The elected candidate's name will be submitted to the Board of Directors as the nominee from the Association for election at the spring meeting of the Board.

Report of Alumnae Council '86

By Winnie Leigh Hamlin '58, First Vice President and Director of Clubs

Returning to Sweet Briar for Alumnae Council, I was impressed with the natural and architectural beauty of the campus, the fascinating alumnae, students and college personnel and the thoughtfulness of Ann Reams and the Alumnae Office staff. Each alumna was a guest of the College and provided with a list of the 148 alumnae on campus and an agenda from Sunday noon, September 28 through dinner Tuesday, September 30.

Sunday afternoon and evening there were an Alumnae Representatives Workshop at which the fabulous new admissions videotape was shown, a Reunion Gifts Workshop, an Orientation for new board members, a Finance Committee Meeting, a visit to the lovely Pannell Art Gallery, Vespers at the Chapel and an informal supper at the Boat House for all but the Reunion Gifts Committee (which had dinner at Sweet Briar House), followed by Compline at the Chapel.

Monday morning there were breakfast meetings of the Executive Committee and the Nominating Committee. From nine until noon there were a Reunion Gifts Workshop and a Club Activities Workshop. At the latter, Bobo Ryan Hoyt '72, alumnae representatives chairman, introduced our remarkable admissions director, Allie Love, who spoke on admissions and financial aid. She told what students love about Sweet Briar: the friendly community atmosphere, the close student-faculty relationship and the quality education in the liberal arts and sciences. Sally Bumbaugh '54, national bulb chairman, explained that $100,000 of the scholarship funds given to students this year came from bulb proceeds and introduced the winner of the trip to Holland, Kathy Levi Hoover '81. Adelaide Boze Glascock '40 told the history of the bulb project, Ouija Adams Bush '43 spoke on selling in difficult growing areas and Helen Cornwell Jones '40 gave incentives for selling bulbs. I introduced the following club presidents: Charlotte Taylor Miller '55, who described the successful Sweet Briar Day celebrated by the Hunt Country Alumnae Club on Saturday, June 28 when alumnae and families gathered at a club for round-robin tennis, swimming and potluck supper; Becky Truelove Symons '79, who told of the Richmond Club's programs, networking directory and quarterly newsletter; Ann Millbank Mell '71, who described the get-togethers of the Northern New Jersey Club.

At lunch students and alumnae from the same states enjoyed sitting together and conversing. After lunch, Judy Greer Schulz '61 presided at the Annual Meeting of the Alumnae Association, during which we were given an update on the state of the College by President Fry, Dean Bowers, Tom Connors, treasurer and vice president for business affairs, Mark Whittaker, vice president for college relations and Byrd Stone, associate professor of education. (Those of us who remember dates at Buck's were excited to learn that Buck Woody's widow left a generous gift to Sweet Briar.)

The 1986 Reunion videotape was then shown, followed by meetings of the Alumnae Career Advisory Board and the Fund Agents Workshop.

At 5:15 p.m. the Alumnae Memorial Service was held in the Chapel. Alumnae had cocktails with faculty and administrators at the Pannell Center Gallery before dinner with alumnae-related students and student leaders;

the Sweet Tones sang.

That night Student Government President Linda Mae Visocan moderated the student panel which was, as usual, a real highlight. The articulate student leaders cared about the honor system and academic seriousness. Hearing from students at lunch, at dinner and on the panel gave alumnae insight into Sweet Briar today, which is the primary reason so many of us enjoy Alumnae Council.

Tuesday after breakfast and morning prayer in the Chapel, the following committees met: Regional, Alumnae Fund, Bulb, Board and Editorial. For those not involved in committee meetings there was a workshop, "Committee Service: Defining Yourself as a Volunteer", by Kitty Umbayer, director of volunteers for the City of Norfolk.

The Honorable Dale Hutter Harris '53, Founders' Day speaker, inspired us all with her words: "We are all founders today of what will be tomorrow. . . Volunteers are the cornerstones of our culture. . ." and with a description of what will be the best training for the future. Alumnae Awards were presented to Adelaide Boze Glascock '40 and Ouija Adams Bush '42.

Lunch Tuesday, honoring Staff Service Award recipients, was enjoyed with retired faculty and staff members at the Wailes Center. That afternoon the Planned Giving Committee and the Board of the Alumnae Association met. Tuesday night the Williams Associates were honored with dinner at Sweet Briar House and all other alumnae had dinner at Allie Love's home.

Visiting the Sweet Briar family on the magnificent campus was an interesting and delightful experience. Please return as soon as you can and, if possible, bring a prospective student with you.

1986 BULB REPORT

This year 46 clubs, Solos and the Alumnae Office sold 2,247 bulb orders for a total of $106,360.79. 1986 top-selling clubs were:

Washington, DC.	$8,788.65
Richmond	$7,826.53
Fairfield County	5,070.81
Philadelphia	5,053.28
Greensboro	4,963.64
Atlanta	4,742.42

A total of 36 sellers were bonus winners this past year. Eighteen sold between $500 and $749, four sold between $750 and $999, and there are now 14 Bloomin' Alumnae (those with sales over $1,000). They are:

Irene Mitchell Moore '42,	Greensboro	$2,663.41
Kathy Levi Hoover '81,	Richmond	1,894.00
Nancy Keen Butterworth	Palmer '51,	Nashville	1,818.67

Kathy Levi Hoover '81 is this year's prize winner of a trip to Holland in the spring of '87. Congratulations to her and to ALL the sellers, clubs and Solos who worked so hard. Sweet Briar and her students appreciate all your efforts.

The sole purpose of the Sweet Briar Bulb Project is to provide scholarship funds for Sweet Briar students. This year the income earned from endowed club scholarships was over $110,000. This constitutes over 10% of the overall scholarship budget. This from the Bulb Project alone is an incredible accomplishment and one of which we as alumnae can be very proud. The Bulb Project is more important than ever before as the cost of a Sweet Briar education continues to rise. We must ensure that we have funds to bring qualified students to Sweet Briar. Think what just one order from each one of our over 10,000 alumnae would mean. Let's all work together in 1987 to make the Bulb Project an even greater success!

The Gladys Wester Horton Scholarship

Because its members hold Gladys Horton in such high esteem, the Northern New Jersey Club has decreed that from now on, its scholarship will be known as the Gladys Wester Horton Scholarship.

A past president of the club, Gladys has a long history of outstanding service to her College and community. She was president of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association from 1956 to 1960 and prior to this had served on the association's board as chairman of Region I and director of admissions representatives. She served on Sweet Briar's Board of Overseers from 1961-65 and on the Board of Directors from 1965-1973. For nine years she was chairman of the Boxwood Circle and in 1970 was the recipient of the Outstanding Alumna Award. The long list of community organizations for which she volunteered includes the League of Women Voters, the Maplewood Service League, the Red Cross and the PTA; she also served on the Board of Education in South Orange and Maplewood and on the boards of the Girl Scouts and the Garden Club. At Sweet Briar, where she graduated in Economics and Sociology in the class of 1930, she was head of Lake and president of the German Club and was also active in the French Club, the International Relations Club and the New Voters League.

Gladys lives in Short Hills, New Jersey with her husband Leonard, a retired investment banker. Their daughter, Nancy Ceros, wife and mother of four, is studying at Virginia Theological Seminary. Their son, Bill, died in August '86 after a long illness; he is survived by his wife and four children. Both Gladys and Leonard have always given of their time and their worldly goods unselfishly, willingly and generously.

Nancy Wynn Dies

Nancy Edith Wynn, age 51, associate professor in theatre arts, died at Sweet Briar on August 17, 1986. A memorial service was held in the Chapel on August 21. Members of her family, students and former students, friends and colleagues, were in attendance.

Professor Wynn held the B.S. from Kent State University, the M.A. from the University of Akron, and the M. Phil. and Ph.D. from the City University of New York. Before coming to Sweet Briar as department chairman in 1984, Professor Wynn had taught for nine years at Wells College (Aurora, New York) where she was a tenured associate professor in theatre and dance. Among her varied research interests were American musicals and the works of American playwright Sophie Treadwell, a contemporary of Eugene O'Neill, whose complete manuscripts Professor Wynn was studying.

Along with her academic credentials and interests, Professor Wynn was an experienced actress, dancer, director, and playwright. Her earlier experiences had included orchestra director, scene designer and carpenter, editor for a TV nightly news show (in Columbus, Ohio), teacher in the American Pantomime Theatre, and she had been a member of the Radio City Music Hall Rockettes.

She is survived by her mother, sister, and three children.

Donna M. Walker

Jennifer Crossland

Two New Admissions Staff Members

Donna M. Walker, a 1980 graduate of Vassar College where she was student body president, has joined Sweet Briar's staff as assistant director of admissions. Most recently she worked for Vassar, developing alumnae/i programs and public relations publications and assisting in recruitment of minority students. She holds the A.B. degree in Political Science/International Relations and is an M.A. candidate at the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies. Her field, International Legal Studies/International Economics, led to her enrollment in Johns Hopkins' program at the Bologna Center in Italy for one year.

Jennifer Crossland, appointed admissions counselor, is a 1986 graduate of Sweet Briar and has already had recruitment experience: her sister Caroline entered SBC this fall as an Early Decision Freshman. Jenny comes from Charlotte, North Carolina and was a Political Economy major at Sweet Briar. She was also a member of the swim team and house president of Reid.

John McClenon, Rebecca McCord McNutt and Alexandra Eddy

Faculty Recital

The addition of violinist/musicologist M. Alexandra Eddy to the music department was marked with a faculty recital of chamber music in the Sweet Briar Memorial Chapel on October 5, 1986. Ms. Eddy, who holds the Ph.D. from Stanford University, has performed widely as a violinist in the San Francisco Bay area for the past seven years. She was joined by pianist Rebecca M. McNutt, assistant professor of music, in performing Stravinsky's Suite italienne and the Sonata in d minor, Opus 108, by Brahms. Clarinetist John McClenon, professor and chairman of the department of chemistry, who plays in the Lynchburg Symphony as well as leads his own Big Band, joined in performing Bartok's Contrasts, a work combining jazz sounds with the idiom of East European folk music.

UPDATE: Facts About Sweet Briar College 1986-87

In addition to 31 major fields of study, students at Sweet Briar may also choose from interdisciplinary majors and interdepartmental majors. These include American Studies, British Studies, Classical Studies, French Studies, German Studies, Italian Studies, Mathematical Physics, Pre-Engineering Science, Biology/Chemistry, International Affairs, Political Economy, and coordinate majors in Environmental Studies and European Civilization. Sweet Briar offers dual degree programs in Engineering and Business. In addition, coordinate programs are offered in Environmental Studies, European Civilization, Business Management, and Arts Management. A special program is also offered in Asian Studies.

Opportunities for study abroad include the Junior Year in France, Junior Year in Spain, Junior Year in England, study at the Heidelberg University, participation in the Middlebury Program in Florence, study in Rome, and an exchange program with St. Andrews University, Scotland. In 1986-87 for the first time a Sweet Briar junior is studying in China, at the University of Peking. Summer study is available at St. Anne's College, Oxford University, England, through the Virginia Program at Oxford.

Fanita Ferris Welsh's daughter, Sallie, wrote to say that her mother celebrated her 90th birthday in May. Fanita's second great grandson arrived in July, born to her grand-daughter, Frances, and William Sutherland, brother of Mollie Sutherland Gwinn, SBC '65. Although Fanita spent only two years at Sweet Briar, her memory of that time is clear and she loves to reminisce about it.

Catharine McCann Becker sold her large family home and is now living quietly in an apartment in Marietta, OH, since the death of her husband in 1976 and the death of her sister, Isabelle McCann Hibbard, SBC '22, in 1983. Catharine's daughter, Joan Becker Taylor, graduated from SBC in '48. Both of Catharine's children and her 9 grandchildren are scattered from Ohio to Florida to Georgia to Arizona. Catharine remembers fondly her Grammar Hall days with Emma Davis and Aline Morton Burt. From California, Aline writes that there are never enough hours in the day for her to accomplish her multitude of routine living duties and endless financial record-keeping (complicated by unwelcome Medicare figurings); she hopes that some day she will be able to report about her retirement! She enjoys correspondence and telephone calls with her large, far-flung family which continues to graduate, marry and reproduce. Aline is also frequently on the freeways, driving to her sister's in San Juan Capistrano and to her son's busy family in Whittier.

Jeannette Kidd Sheridan is still active and keeping busy in Baltimore. She has 5 grandchildren, all so busy following careers that she sees no immediate prospect of any great-grandchildren. Jeannette still swims but could no longer swim the length of the Sweet Briar lake and back!

It was great hearing from so many of you. Those who couldn't make the class deadline, please keep your cards and send them in anytime, for our next edition

Ruth Will Beckh dubs our 60th-Best Ever. Unfortunately, Frances Dunlop Heiskell became ill and was hospitalized. She was to have been Ruth's roommate but Karl took her place. He calls himself "Mascot of '26'". Family reunions and short trips through the fall will keep Ruth on the move

Marge Shepherd joins the chorus of those who wish they could have attended reunion. She keeps in touch with Betty Moore, Mary Briston, Frances Dunlop and Cathy via her friend, the telephone

Ellen Newell Bryan reports the arrival, soon after her return from SBC, of her first great-grand, a girl Mary Lane Bryan '58 is the grandma. For Ellen, it is Sea Island for the summer, Boston in the late fall for girl scout board meetings, then on to Florida for Wright's reunion with ex prisoners-of-war

Mary Lib Arthur, remembering the fun of our 55th, was most sad because our common enemy, bur-sitis/arthritis, hit at reunion time. She is still the pianist of her retirement home

Dot Keller Iliff reports she and daughter Bambi drove up to the summit of Mt. Eraus, CO, the highest auto road in the U.S., to escape the intense heat and the TV coverage of Miss Liberty on 4th July. Planned in Jan. is a Panama Canal trip with her 3 children.

Mart Bachman McCoy is "all aglow about being Prexy of the class of '26'" — a diminishing but stalwart group. She is very "horticultural" and having a great time.

Peg Posey Brubaker is still very involved with the Manor, a church retirement home. Plans to visit her only granddaughter who will be spending her junior year (from Williams) at Oxford. Helen Dunleavy (one of our reuniting 8) enjoyed the feel of good old college days; is all geared up for trips to Phoenix where she is on several boards. Gertrude Collins Calnan has been trying to clear up European insurance claims for years. She is relaxing in a Life class at the Institute of Art in Tucson and she and Eric plan to renew old friendships in Brussels and Paris this winter. Edna

Lee Gilchrist complains that life is dull — though she's grateful for that. She and Jo love their new apartment. They had a short trip to Maryland, near Cambridge, to see Joan and Steve's new/old house. All the way down, she kept recalling the first trip she and I took aeons ago to visit Cornelia — and how amazed we were at the flatness of the land

Dot Fairbairn Miller, another re-unioner, finds visiting her 3 daughters and 3 sons takes up most of her travel energy but she also spends 3 weeks on Sanibel Island, FL

A letter from Peg Krider Ivey, written 2 weeks before her sudden death, tells of her regret at having missed our 60th, especially after hearing all about it from Betty Moore. Peg still called herself an avid bridge player. Betty Moore Rusk and Lois Peterson Wilson had an enjoyable trip north from SB via Eastern Shore of Md.

In early June, I attended the wedding of Ken Hughes III, grandson of Dot Bailey Hughes and son of my godson, Ken Bailey Hughes II. It was my first visit to Oklahoma City, the largest city in the U.S.; it stretches for miles on end.

Don't forget the Alumnae Fund — Have fun — Keep busy — Until next year, God bless

I have had a glorious time reading your postals. Thank you. Pig Sproul Bush is living alone on her farm. She visits Ned often at a nursing facility in Staunton, Virginia. Polly Swift Calhoun and Jo Gibbs DuBois visited her in May on their way to reunion. Virginia LeHardy Bell is watching her two great grandchildren grow up in Seal Cove, Maine. Slowing up does not occur to Carolyn Martindale Blouin and

Maury. He has just initiated a new facet of his business and she vigils works at getting the South Berwick, Maine library on a firm footing, contacts innumerable friends and never sounds weary. Their son, Craig, climbed in the Himalayas in the winter of '86. Eunice Watters Coolbaugh and Dick celebrated their 50th with their whole family. Lib Marston Creech and Si have moved to an apartment in Naples, FL. Mary Bruce Daily and Lewis cruised through the Panama Canal and the Caribbean in 1985. Betsy William Gilmore took the SBC sponsored tour on the stern wheeler Delta Queen and reports that it was "magic". Mona Stone Green and Thornton play a lot of golf and get out of Arizona in the summer when they travel around seeing family and friends. They had lunch with Carolyn Blouin when in Maine. Scotie Gorsline sent a graphic description of the flood in Richmond. She wrote that Louise Nelson Redd has recovered from a broken hip and is mobile again. Gladys Wester Horton's daughter, Nancy, is studying at Virginia Theological Seminary. Gladys writes that Nancy is also a "good mother." We extend our deepest sympathy to Gladys on the death of her son, Bill. He died after a long bout with "olivo ponto cerebrac degeneration", a disease similar to Lou Gerhig disease

Adelaide Wampler Kundahl travels frequently with her son and his family. This year it will be to China. Meredith Oakford Johnson was in the throes of moving to a senior citizen complex near her previous home in Longmont, Colorado. Martha Lambeth Kilgore's elder daughter has a Ph.D. in Math and teaches at Exeter. Lambie has moved back to Nashville. Emmy Riely Lemaire is still getting used to being a "return" resident in New York city after living in Portugal for 12 years. Boyce Lokey Martin and Harold celebrated their 50th at their cabin in North Georgia. It has a wonderful name, "The Amiable Slum". It was a thrill to hear from Lambie and Boyce after so many years

Thanks to Betsy Williams Gilmore I can report that Liz Copeland Filmore was awarded the Distinguished Alumni award for devoted service to St

Annes-Belfield School We congratulate you, Liz. Lucy Shirley Otis went to England in June to attend the Shirley family reunion at Eltington Park. The Shirley family is the only English family to have held its land since the Domesday Book was compiled in 1086. This is its 900th anniversary.

Elizabeth Saunders Ramsay keeps the Episcopal Church Women of West Tennessee in line as their president Sims Massey Rand writes that her life in Americus, Georgia is routine but it sounds busy to me as well as interesting with hospital volunteering, bridge, and while on a cruise to Jamaica, a tumble and a number of days in a wheelchair. Serena and Mark Stevens attended the Statue of Liberty festivities in NYC on July 4. They missed the goings-on at SBC in Sept. because they were on a barge trip in France. Evaline Edmonds Thoma did not find Florida to her liking and is moving back to Arizona. She pursues her golf and recently attended Golf school.

Margaret Taliaferro Battle planned to stay with Lizzie Stevenson Tate while in Wilmington, NC to check on a 94-year-old uncle. Taliaferro will have a cousin at SBC in '86. Dougie Lyon Stedman divides her time between Florida and Rosemont, PA. Mary Moss Sutcliffe and Bob are happy in their navy apartment complex quite near members of their family. Kathryn Graham Seiter has joyful memories of SBC. We check on each other by phone periodically. Ruth Hasson Smith has lost her sight but she can enjoy the fragrance of her boxwoods. Delma Chambers Stegler has had a rough year. We hope things will look up for you Delma. Sherrill Bromfield Verner feels good about still having her hair and teeth. That's more than some of us can claim! She sometimes sees Willie Smith McConnell.

Elizabeth Carnes is one busy lady. She tutors 3rd grade children in math, babysits with a group of deaf children and takes care of banking and shopping for a crippled blind lady. In July she was off on the SBC cruise around the islands of Britain. Kay Marr White and Jimmy are planning to build a house. That's truly young at heart! Gwen Olcott Writer and Jun. have weathered a bout of ill health but are getting back to normal. Betty Boone Willis and Bob are well, quote, "in spite of the aging process". My sad news is that our gallant class president, Marjorie Sturgis Moose passed away in June.

Eleven of my family reunited at Elkhorn Ranch for the 1985 Christmas holidays. My health is great and I am as happy as if I had good sense. Keep the news coming — you have made my year!

It was good to hear from so many of you. Your cards which came in early, I carefully put in a safe place to read and report later. Unfortunately, they are in such a safe place that I have been unable to find them! If I have lost your news, send me double news next time.

Unlike some of you I am still in my house. The idea of no lawn problems sounds wonderful. Marion Gwaltney Hall enjoys her townhouse. She seems to be keeping her guest room full and likes not having the lawn to cut. Kitty Means Neely stopped briefly to visit Cecil Birdsey Fuessle in Macon, GA. Lib Scheuer Maxwell loves Charleston and her rented house and garden which her visitors say is beautiful. She spent the month of July in Toronto with her son John who has two restaurants. In Aug. she met Cecil in Boston and they went to see Bonnie Wood Stookey. They also hope to see Mary Moore Rowe who has a new granddaughter, Allison Rowe.

Eleanor Fitch Welch sold her house last spring and moved into a condo in the same area with a nice pool and lots of activities. She is close to the beaches in St. Petersburg, FL. Her vacation last Labor Day was knocked out by hurricane "Elena". No planes could get out.

Frances Darden Musick sold her house at Virginia Beach and moved into a condo in Williamsburg, Williamsburg Landing. They will be closer to their children and have one half of a twin house. There is also an area reserved for those who wish to garden, which Frances loves.

Many of you are still good volunteers. Ruth Myers Pleasants is a part-time volunteer with the Piedmont Opera Theatre. Their office is near her retirement cottage and doing something makes her feel a little less like a "has been".

Nan Russell Carter works with handicapped cross-country skiers, and helps retarded children with therapeutic horseback riding. Her grandson, 15, still lives with them and attends special ed classes. The most spectacular thing Julie de Coligny did was to go to Vienna again for the SBC Winter-term course in Jan. '86. She went in '85 as a member of the class and in '86 as Diane Moran's assistant. It was fantastic but very cold. Julia's sons are in Maryland now — Cal in Baltimore and Bill in Ocean Pines as a landscape architect. Daughter Anne and her two teenagers have come to live in Amherst and Amanda maintains a thriving business at S'Amanda's. Anyone traveling near SBC should try Julia's B & B with a beautiful view.

Rosemary Frey Rogers was elected president of the State Association for the Preservation of Tennessee Antiquities. She will be busy visiting 19 chapters and 12 sites statewide. She serves on the Zoning Board of Appeals and the Regional Planning Commission of the Gallatin area. It requires much reading and studying of ordinances. To break the monotony of winter days, Rosemary still does 'sub' teaching in high school. She lost another old dog, so now has only five.

Cordelia Penn Cannon serves on the boards of the North Carolina Botanical Gardens, Hospice and the Weather-spoon Art Gallery. She gives landscaping consultations and writes. She is committed to conservation of the land. She has two grandchildren at The University but would have preferred the single sex college (namely Sweet Briar) for the girl.

Virginia Fosler Gruen had a busy year volunteering. She helped run the Better Than New Shop at the Indianapolis Art Museum and worked on her church's Holiday Bazaar and at The Children's Museum Haunted House at Hallowe'en.

The National Archives still keep Mary Walton McCandlish Livingston busy and interested. Her growing grandchildren are ever more fun.

Eleanor Alcott Bromley works with the Cleveland Council on World Affairs. After finishing her summer tennis, Eleanor took off to visit Turkey and Russia. Last year she went to Japan, Taiwan, Thailand, Penang, and Singapore and touched base twice in Hong Kong. She is concerned about how those countries will feed their growing populations.

Others of our classmates travelling were numerous. Nancy Butzner Leavell spent two weeks in Ireland in 1985 on a trip sponsored by the English Speaking Union and the Georgian Society. Nancy still lives in Charlottesville near two of her children. They each have three children, five of whom have red hair. Her daughter in Richmond also has three children but no redheads.

Ruth Myers Pleasants and Cliff took their whole family to St. Thomas, VI, for Christmas. In May they went island hopping with two other couples to celebrate their 50th anniversary.

Mary Lee Ryan Strother had an interesting trip thru Scotland with an English Speaking Union group. They spent a week in Northumbria and another in the Lake District of England. Great despite the rain which was "bucketing" down.

In February, Mary Rogers Moser flew to Sydney, Australia for a few days, then boarded the Pacific Princess for a leisurely cruise back to San Diego, 31 days. They stopped at New Zealand and several fascinating islands on the way back.

Last year Connie Turner Hoffman and her husband celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Many of those years they lived abroad. In 1950 they went to Brazil with four children. Bob was manager of Gulf Oil. After that they lived six years in London and loved it all. They have six grandchildren. The oldest is in second year Law School, the second youngest a freshman at UVA. Connie still hopes her youngest, 11 years old, will go to Sweet Briar.

Elizabeth Mayfield Chapman spent last winter in Richmond and had a great time catching up with her Sweet Briar friends there. She plans to go back this winter. She visited in Boston in the summer and enjoyed visits from her children at home in Morven, N.C.

Elizabeth Ogilby Sands retreats to Gloucester, Mass. for the summer as she has since Beanie, the Shirley sisters, and I visited her the year we graduated. Her three grown children are scattered. Daughter Betsy built a house on "the Farm" and works at Westinghouse nearby. Son John works at the Mariner's Museum in Norfolk and lives in Smithfield with his wife and 10-month-old daughter. Bill and his family, two boys and a little girl, live in Colo. Still pursuing her art work, Elizabeth just finished a studio in her garage, where she works in black and white drawings and lithographs.

Though she couldn't make it to Reunion because of a big operation, Virginia Broun Lawson recently drove by SBC and enjoyed its beauty. Her husband Bob is on the board of the American Bar Asso. and they have some interesting trips. They went to Wytheville to get cool and visit with their eight grandchildren there. Broun had a visit with Nancy Butzner Leavell in the spring.

Our deepest sympathy to Dorothy Hutchinson Howe whose husband, Spiil, died in July '84. Dorothy had to have a hip replacement in Feb. '85; we hope she is feeling better now.

Dorothy Turno Gardner has had a bad year with an ill husband as has Mitzi Hanifen Fried. We hope they are much improved.

As this goes to press I am off to visit friends in northern Italy, then join other friends and tour France for a month. Stay well and keep me posted.

Flossie Caven Crosnoe saw Carolyn Staman Ogilvie and Buckner in April Flossie's Ralph retired and they went to Expo '86 in May. Cornelia Armfield Cannon's doctor husband just retired and they are busy tripping with 4 children in NC and Memphis, TN. Eylese Miller Latham continues to treasure her June family reunion in Virginia. Their son is in Atlanta and daughter in Cincinnati. Susan Gibson Davenport reports Stevie has retired as rector of St. Francis in the Fields in Prospect, KY. Their SBC daughter Stuart Davenport Simrill '70 lives in Louisville where her husband is at the Cathedral. Lucile Sergeant Leonard says she'd love a visit or call from any Briarite passing through the Ozarks. Betty Dail Windeler rejoices that her one child and his family of 5 children live in Cincinnati now. She sees Betty Heizer Hickenlooper regularly and Dottie Mather Goyert occasionally.

Kay Hoyt tripped from hot, humid Baltimore to Montana for three weeks and had a fantastic time enjoying outdoor life — her first rodeo, bird-watching etc. August 1 found her in Maine.

Mary Ann Housel Carr telephoned when she flew through Dallas. We mourned the passing of Fran Samuels Fellows.

A hep grandmother is Margaret Weimer Shepherd who supplies lunches and snacks for grandchildren who swim at the club across the street. She plays golf, which is good for her injured back, and keeps in touch with Maude Tucker Drane. She had an art trip to Paris and another week in London. Her son, Tony, was elected to his 5th term in the state legislature.

Let's all envy Virginia Guild Colmore who engineers an SBC reunion every 18 months! This April, Betty Hopper Turner, Sammy Hamilton Schuck, Kitty Corbett Powell, Helen Walton Andrae, Dottie Gilbert Browne and Janet Forbush Fead spent a week with Virginia on Lookout Mountain and never stopped talking!

Marion Fuller Kellogg has 5 grandchildren — hopes one will go to SBC. At least she has a grandson at UVA. Ida Todman Pierce spent 11 days in Germany, then cruised on the Danube. Janice Wiley Adams from Maine is taking her favorite trip by rail from Montreal to Vancouver, then on to a reunion with our dance instructor, Nora Staael and her surgeon husband in Portland, OR. She hopes to come home via Denver, and see Ces Jansen Kendrick. (As I write this, I am in Buffalo Creek, CO, one hour from Denver, where we've been coming for 32 years. Let's meet next year, Ces!) Isn't it marvellous to have reached retirement for husbands? Dot Thomas Upton reports they still breed beef cattle and raise soy beans; otherwise it's golf and travel. She returned to SBC with an auburn-haired granddaughter, Susan Cobb, for a two-day prospective student visit. Isabelle Franke De Graaf, still an Elder in her Church in St. Petersburg, goes to Folk School in NC to improve her dancing, and travels to visit her children and grandchildren. Molly Talcott Dodson and the other Roanoke alums had a successful bash for Nenah Fry and the Whittakers. Rebecca Kunkle Hogue winters in Ft Myers, FL and summers in Ridge, NC where their children and grands join them for golf, tramping, birdwatching, picnicking, and blowing cobwebs away. Dorothy Gipe Clement is a happy gardener while her husband and son are the backbone of the Toledo, OH Rowing Club. They have 8 grandchildren. Dorothy visited with Janet Forbush Fead (Stardust) at Cranbrook-Kingswood Alumni Day.

Barbara Ferguson Hill writes that they are in Stuart, FL in the winter and Cape Cod in the summer. Fergie plays lots of golf and tennis and spent last Christmas in London with a granddaughter. Because of her emphysema, Helen Hays Crowley has moved to Judson Manor, Apt. 107, 1890 East 170 Street, Cleveland, OH 44106. She is now adjacent to the Art Museum, Concert Hall and Cultural Center and plans to enjoy them all. Bobbie Derr Chenoweth hopes to exchange their summer home in NC for one in England next year ('87) We all mourn losing Mary Cobb Hulse in May.

We are all blest to be "here" in the summer and "there" in the winter. Pauline Swan, like Fergie, winters in Florida and summers on Higgins Lake in N. Michigan. Pauline was planning an August family reunion of 16 plus a sister from Waco, TX and a cousin from Corsicana, TX. Kitty Corbett Powell and Ben saw Janet Bergmann and Betty Hopper Turner on Cape Cod in July. Kitty visited with Frances Bailey Brooke and Jackie Moore Hoofnagle (SBC '36) at the VMI reunion of the class of '36. Frances visits her 94 year-old mother who is happily living in her own home in Augusta. George and Frannie loved Bermuda in June. In August they went to Seattle, visited Expo '86 and had a cruise to Alaska — bound to be cooler there than in Lexington! Amelia Hewlett Bowers' daughter, Yancey, was married last spring in Georgia. Amelia is semi-retired and loves the freedom she now has to travel with Marion and to visit their 6 shared children. Thus far, their 3 weeks in Scotland was tops. They saw Pollyanna Shotwell Holloway in Baton Rouge. Pollyanna has an active and joyous family of grands and great-grands to take on vacations. Marge Thaden Davis' 4th grandchild was born in April. Their oldest daughter, Suzanne, is the administrator of the news desk for Time and lives in NYC. All the Davis clan planned to gather at North Truro in August '86. Brownie Snider and her 13 year-old granddaughter, Happi, spent a month in Switzerland. They made their HQ in Ouchy and trained and walked. Walking and climbing compensated for the French pastries, Italian pastas and Swiss chocolates!

An alumna from Lynchburg writes of her increased mobility after foot surgery and two hip replacements; husband Joe had double bypass surgery in 1984. They went to Knoxville in August to see daughter, Ann, receive her Ph.D. in clinical psychology from the Univ. of Tenn. There was no signature on her postcard — hope she will write in and tell us who she is.

Carolyn Potter Ryburn and I play gin rummy together and share a flat (with husbands) on Berkeley Square in London the first two weeks of September — perfect! This summer, the Ryburns were in Bermuda with children and grandchild, Frannie, and we were in Buffalo Creek, CO.

Wish each of you could be class secretary, so that you could experience the warm pleasure of receiving the post cards which keep our connections strong. Let us all join for a big HUG at SBC in 1988!

Our 45th Reunion is coming! May 22-24, 1987. Please don't plan any babies or marriages for those dates but mark a big red SBC on your calendar right now. Next, go find pictures of you, your spouse, boyfriend, children, grandchildren, pets, house, boats, businesses, whatever interests you and mail them to me for our scrapbooks, which will be on display at Reunion. Send in your vital statistics. How much have you lost or "fleshed-out"? How many successes or failures? Have you been born again? What challenge lies ahead of you? You may as well get this information off now with your Christmas cards.

I'm writing this in early July as Bill and I are preparing to swap houses with a couple from Cobham, England, just 30 minutes from London, for 3 weeks in July and August. Five of our 7 children and spouses are planning to come over while we're there. Helen Sanford tells me that Margaret Becker Schiltges has spent many months in England over the years and has 3 married daughters: one in Germany, one in Washington DC and one in Atlanta. Grace Lanier Brewer can top that. She has 4 married daughters, living in Memphis, Birmingham, Franklin, VA and Chester, SC respectively! Grace enjoyed a trip to England, Ireland and Wales last year. Jean Hedley Currie traveled to Washington, Maine and Europe, then back to Ocala, FL. Betty Duffield Fajans (Duffy) has retired from her country inn business. Her eldest son, Norm, was married in October; Libby gave birth to Duffy's second grandchild in Dec. and her twin just announced her engagement. Wendy is working with 6 Norwegian horses and youngest son Wayne is in the telephone business in MD. Alice Williams Mighell sent an address for long-lost (to us) Sally Page Williams Burbank, now living in W. Palm Beach. I saw Alice last summer at Grandfather Mountain, NC, where she and Joe have a second home. She's still young and beautiful. Mary Ellen Thompson Beach has remarried and is now Mrs. Robert Ela of Madison, WI. "No really new news," writes Lucy (Army) Case. "New furnace, new water heater, new driveway, new roof — no new husband. That could be the last straw!" Margaret Preston Moore was visited by 3 hurricanes in '85. Elena forced them to evacuate their home at 1:00 am as salt water covered their lawn. Fortunately, the house was spared. Juan flooded the lawn again and Kate threatened, but then by-passed them. Frannie Meek Rowe has traveled from New Zealand to the Scottish Highlands where she stayed in a beautiful inn near Glencoe called Ardslea House. While admiring the paintings, she discovered that the proprietors were Jane Keating Taylor, SBC '54, and husband, Frannie also reported the birth of a son, June 9, to her son Randy, a Delta pilot. After welcoming their 6th grandchild last December, Ruth Jacquot Tempest and Rone went off to Peru, Brazil and Argentina. Eleanor Ringer Linn says she's using her SBC education to help her fill out those "ever-trickier" forms for her seriously ill husband, John. She's staying close to home, needless to say. Others content not to wander the globe are Barbara Ripley Furniss, happily retired in southern Arizona, Jane Taylor Lowell, enjoying a glorious Florida winter with church, friends, swimming etc., and Florence Bagley Witt and husband Raymond, both extremely busy in community activities in Chattanooga.

Dotty Hutchings Donley finally became a grandmother in Dec. '85, with the birth of grandson, Carter Robinson Scott. After 3 sons and 2 grandsons, Sally Schall Van Allen had a granddaughter in Aug. '85. Sally was ecstatic to have her namesake living in Charlotte, just 3 blocks away Helen Sanford has had an extremely busy and successful year as Reunion Gifts Chairman for the entire College. She went to California twice in June: once for the graduation of her niece from Stanford, and again for the wedding of another niece in Berkeley. In August she is planning a trip to Jamestown, Rhode Island to visit Betty Hanger Lippincott and Schuyler who are hosting a mini-reunion at their summer home just across the bay from Newport. Betsy Gilmer Tremain, Ann Hauslein Potterfield, Lette Moomaw Hall, Elsie Diggs Orr and I, plus husbands, are also planning to attend.

We were all saddened to learn of the death of Harry Muller-Thym, husband of Grace Bugg, which occurred the first week of July, 1986. We send our deepest sympathy too to Alice Sweney Weed whose husband, George, died in September '86.

Dorothy Malone Yates and husband Charlie had a delightful trip to the British Isles in May. They were met in London by their grandson who was spending his spring semester from Dartmouth studying and interning in the British Parliament. While Charlie played golf in Scotland, Dorothy toured English gardens with friends; then they went off to France for a barge trip on the Canal du Midi. Back home, Dorothy fell and broke her wrist for the second time in two years. Charlie is being inducted into the Southern Golf assoc. Hall of Fame in July. Patti Rose Early Trippet and husband Harry spent 3 weeks touring Germany, Switzerland and France by car. Charlie as driver and Patti as navigator. She also reported a second granddaughter and a visit with Caroline Monteith Clarke.

Add to our list of honored grads Sally Jackson Mead, Charlottesville's Woman of the Year for 1986. She was honored for her outstanding work with the Charlottesville-Albemarle area SPCA animal shelter which she has run ever since she agreed to take the job "temporarily" in 1970. Also our own illustrious Ann Morrison Reams who has been advanced to a top position at Sweet Briar; she was named to the President's Executive Council which is composed of the five senior staff members of the College.

Bobby Engh Croft with husband Croswell was planning to attend a reunion of 150 relatives of the Croft family at the old home place in Cedar Mountain, SC, in August. And speaking of reunions, "y'all come" to our 45th in May so we can prove to the world we're still a roaring-booming '42

Bea Dingwell Loos (Mrs. Dickson R.), 6400 Garnett Drive, Chevy Chase, MD 20815

It is six in the morning and all is quiet. Cami, (SBC '71) and her two children are still asleep upstairs. They leave today, and tomorrow, Coni (SBC '75) and her two children arrive! So I must write this now.

Ken and I enjoyed seeing all of you who came to our 40th class reunion in May. It was a beautiful weekend to renew friendships, meet husbands and tour beautiful Sweet Briar. One of the highlights was the lovely concert given by Helen Graeff Ellerman and Ray in the Chapel.

My thanks to all of you who sent me news in the short time I have been Secretary.

Caroline "Rudy" Rudolph Sellers, our class fund agent, sent wonderful news. Two checks of $500 were waiting for her on her return from reunion. So the class of '46 raised the unheard of sum of $102,000!

From Richmond, Jean "Polly" Pollard Kline writes that she and Bob have six children and three grandchildren with another due in October. They return to SBC frequently to visit friends, and loved being there again for reunion. Betsy Gurley Hewson and Tom, who was recovering from bypass surgery, were also there. Tom is busy doing custom software. They will be in Nantucket in July with visits from children and grandchildren. As director and coordinator for Meals on Wheels in Caswell County, NC, Lucy "Cholly" Jones Bendall has come out of retirement. She reports her husband is improving nicely from two hip replacements and son, Gordon, from two broken arms! But she says, "We had a nice rain so we all feel better." "Cholly" was also at reunion.

"Candy" Greene Manbeck missed reunion but was busy with grandchild number four, and studying Spanish (one year in eight weeks) at Yale. Her children include a doctor in nuclear medicine, a teacher and two lawyers. Husband, Harry, is a patent lawyer, but more important, just shot a 77 in golf! She has spoken with Leila Felner, and plans a visit with Rosie Ashby Dashiell. Ellen Robbins Red is about to publish a book on the life of her great grandfather, a pioneer Texan and one time Charlestonian. Interested in the environment, she says her favorite charities include National Wildlife and Sierra Club. She plans a birding trip to Seattle this summer and a trip to Africa later. From Alison Buchanan Herbertson comes news that they have moved into their retirement home near St. Andrews, Scotland, "overlooking the golf course to the sea". She writes, "If anyone is traveling in Scotland, I would be delighted to see them." Pat Thompson Bennett is teaching Eng. at Daytona Beach Community Col. Her youngest daughter, of three, who was married in June, is a professor of English at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical Univ. in the same area. For six weeks this summer, Pat is exchanging houses with a professor from the Univ. of Heidelberg, Germany. Helen "Murch" Murchison Lane was sorry to miss reunion but was on a month-long trip to France, a part of which was spent ballooning in Burgundy! Their hostess for this adventure, as well as the chef's mother, were graduates of SBC. Small world, but as "Murch" said, "SBC girls do get around".

Following reunion, Bea Dingwell Loos and Dick attended reunion at Dartmouth and the graduation of their youngest of six, Pam. This will be the first time since 1968 that they do not have at least one child in college and to celebrate, they are taking Pam and eldest daughter, Peggy, to England and Scotland for 3 weeks. Four of their children now have graduate degrees. Louise "Weezie" Lloyd is still living with and caring for Jeanette Stafford, who was paralyzed by polio. She is also active in several church groups. We missed Betty Ann Bass Norris at reunion, but it seems she smashed her ankle while showing property for her real estate firm in Greenwich, CT and was busy being put back together. Her daughter is a private counselor in VA and was written up in Who's Who in the East. Her son, David, is in commercial real estate in Manhattan and son, George has moved into a group home and attends a sheltered workshop while "Bass" recuperates. She sends news of Ellen Thackray Wilson and Nip, who have gone to their island in Georgian Bay, Ontario for July. From Legare "Jinnie" Thompson Robertson comes news of a visit she and Freddie had with Nancy "March" Sanders Starr and Harlan in Georgia and at their lake home in Alabama, renewing friendships after 25 years. Freddie is retired and Jinnie sells real estate. Their granddaughter, another Legare, 1 1/2 yrs. spent the week of the 4th of July with them. Their three middle children are married and the oldest and youngest are working on extra degrees.

Anne Hill Edwards expressed the way we all felt last May. "It was neat...for all of us to be together for so many memorable moments. It was, indeed, a superior reunion." There were 18 of us, including "Wheats", Young Call, "Ade" Jones Voorhees, "Flo" Cameron Atherton, Jean Carter Telford, "Libba" Fruite Metzenthin, "Larry" Lawrence Katsidhe, Jean Love Albert, and Catherine Smart Grier. We were also grateful to be able to share this special time with Nancy Dowd Burton's husband, Robert, and their lovely daughter. Nancy's presence, her energy, generosity and encouragement, were all around us.

Ken and I are looking forward to a trip to Hong Kong this fall for our 40th anniversary and to his retirement from Campbell Soup Co. in the spring. Then we'll have time for more golf, sailing, gardening and travel!

I hear clamorings for breakfast, so I will leave my role as secretary and assume my role as grandmother.

I hope to hear from all of you. If you would prefer to give your news by phone, please do. My number is 609-235-6261.

Elaine Adams Harrison now serves as chairman of the Nat. Harrison Associates Corp., a development company in which she works with her four sons. This year, she developed an aerial photography company. Fort Pierce, FL is home but mountain climbing takes Elaine abroad to Peru, Alaska, Western China and, in Nov 1985, Mt. Paldor in Nepal. Bill Bailly Fritzinger's daughter Laurie Muldoon gave birth to quintuplets in February. Two boys and 2 girls survived and are now home with older brothers Matt and Mike ages 5 and 2. On June 7, Bill's son Stephen married Karen Haabestad in the Heinz chapel in Pittsburgh. Bill's parents, aged 85 and 89, were among the wedding guests. Stephen is completing his final year at the Yale Architectural School.

Dottie Barney Hoover reports husband Jack is now semi-retired and they have time to travel. Between Feb. and June they went to FL, AZ, Mexico, OH and KY. Home is Wilton, CT making it convenient for visits for 3 children and 4 grandchildren who also live in CT. A fourth child is in Tucson, AZ. Ann Belser Asher lives in Bethesda MD, summers in Nantucket and visits Antigua BWI for a few weeks each winter. Ann is Pres. of the Hospital for Sick Children's Foundation which benefits Washington's long-term care facility for chronically ill and profoundly handicapped children from birth to 19 years. She also serves as a Trustee of the Maryland Chapter of the Nature Conservancy and is a member of her Church's altar guild. Oil painting is one of Ann's interests. She continues to be a student of French, Spanish and Art.

Sally Bianchi Foster will retire in April after 15 years as secretary of the Verona NJ Recreation Department. She looks forward to increasing her own recreational time on the tennis courts. Son Andy received, at graduation from U of CA Boalt Hall School of Law, the McBain Award given to the student best exemplifying scholarship and excellence. He is now working for Drinker, Biddle and Reath in Philadelphia, PA. After her first year of fulltime teaching, daughter Kate was chosen Teacher of the Year in her Dept of Planning at CA Polytechnic at San Luis Obispo. Labor Day weekend Kate married Andy's roommate. They have applied to serve in the Peace Corps. Daughter Meg, in addition to caring for her daughter Sarah, has developed a French tutoring service. Edith Brooke Robertson's husband is principal of the Miller School, a small military school for boys near Charlottesville, Va. Last summer they visited Edith's sister Anne Brooke (SBC '54) who lives in Wales and has devoted the last 10 years to saving the Welsh language.

Veda Brooks Norfolk continues to operate a tour service from Baton Rouge, LA. Last June she escorted a group to the Wimbledon tennis matches and English countryside. Last May, her daughter Nancy graduated from Brown U. where she was captain of the women's tennis team.

Frindy Burden Gronen sent a 10-page letter with photos of her beautiful home and garden in Dubuque, IA. Her enjoyment and pride in her home, garden and family were evident on each page. Frindy, a widow of 19 years, has 3 children. Son John, an insurance salesman, lives with her. In Oct. son Jim completed Computer School in Denver at which time John and Frindy visited, taking a number of side trips including one to Aspen. Daughter Elizabeth graduated from Carleton College with honors and is now studying in Boston.

Nancy Carter Jewell has volunteered for 7 years at St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Charlotte NC which runs a daily soup kitchen serving 150-200 people. She serves on the board of the Episcopal Church Women. Nancy and Dunbar enjoyed a trip to London followed by a drive through Spain and Portugal. They have one son and one grandson in Atlanta and a daughter and son in Charlotte. A second grandchild was expected at the time these notes were prepared.

Dolly Clark Rasmussen continues her 8-hour Thursday volunteer work at the White House answering the phone for the president. Dolly also worked for some local candidates running in the November election. Husband John attends many conferences and business meetings and Dolly enjoys traveling with him. Bookie Coryell Feldman after 13 years closed her store, the Willow Tree. She now manages, with the help of her husband Jack, 4 rental properties and is restoring a 25-year-old house. Each winter Bookie and Jack leave cold Michigan for sunny Indian Wells, CA taking a different route each time. Bookie and Jack have 5 daughters and 3 grandchildren. Louise Curry Horine is staff psychologist at psychiatric hospital for children and adolescents in Louisville, KY. Louise has one daughter, Lynn, and a granddaughter. Lynn lives in Atlanta and is a finance manager.

Mary Ellen Davis Gettel is a part-time teacher of Spanish at Marquette U. Last winter she sold her big house in Milwaukee and moved to a one-story house in Shorewood, WI. She was thrilled to see her son efficiently carry out the legal work and her son-in-law who is a contractor oversee beautifully the renovations in her new home. Mary Ellen had a bad bout with arthritis this year and credits the move largely to the help of friends and family.

District Court Judge, Patricia Dennington Hunt has a granddaughter named after her. 3 of her 4 sons are married. The oldest remains a bachelor and is an attorney and teaches at UNC-CH. Trish is President of NC Prisoner's Legal Rights Advisory Board and Volunteers for Youth.

B. G. Elmore Gilleland's daughter Gay has moved back home temporarily. Son Stuart lives in Winter Park and has 2 daughters. Youngest daughter Lynn graduated last year from Duke Law School and is an attorney in Tampa. B.G. continues her work as curriculum resource teacher in an Orange County elementary school. Last summer she took a French course at the U. of Montreal and lived with a French Canadian family. Barbara Favill Marshall lives in Northbrook, IL. Her 2 married daughters, one a lawyer and one a banker, live in Boston. A single son lives in CA and publishes a tradebook about satellites. Barbara has been a member of the same Great Books group for over 30 years. She was recently elected vice-chairman of the Ravina Festival Association with the responsibility of heading their annual fundraising drive with a goal of $1,925,000. Barbara also serves as a trustee of the Chicago-Symphony and a board member of the Volunteer Council of the American Symphony League.

Julia Freels Chwalik has 3 daughters. Judy studies in Orlando. Cindy has a position in the physical fitness program at Dr.'s Hospital in Miami and also takes graduate classes. Susan attends Dade Jr. Coll. Julia and Walt leave Miami weekends for a small ranch in Brooksville. While Walt does the tractor work Julia works on genealogy. They enjoy bird-watching.

Debbie Freeman Cooper mistakenly thought she would have time to herself after her children married. Not so! She is either opening up closed rooms in her Wallingford, PA home to accommodate children and grandchildren or she is visiting them to help out with a new baby or fill in when the daycare situation falls apart. Oldest daughter Sally and husband live in Atlanta. Sally has 2 children, Rebecca and Peter, and is a rehabilitation counselor. Son Jim lives in Washington, D.C. and is a meteorologist. He and his wife have 2 sons. Daughter Dorothy and husband John live near Washington, D.C. Youngest son Tom is playing musical jobs and lives in Orlando, FL.

Bebe Gee Lawes and husband Elliot have a small commercial greenhouse operation on their farm in Troy, VA and raise lots of geraniums and assorted bedding plants. Bebe has also been managing a small H and R Block office in Louisa, VA.

Ann Green Nicolson has started her own business in York, PA — Ann's Classics, LTD. She imports beautiful hand-glazed stoneware ceramics giftware from Western Germany. She exhibited for the first time in the Labor Day Show in the Charlotte Merchants dise Mart. Ann made a business trip to England, W. Germany and Austria in May and June.

Jo Gulick Grant is currently participating in the operation of a local cooperative antiques shop in Lyme, NH. She finds it a new and exciting venture. She was also involved in the management of a series of summer crafts fairs featuring area artisans. Jo continues to teach Sunday School and sings with the local Chamber Singers group and is auditing various courses in Italian literature at Dartmouth Coll. Jo's third grandchild is due this December.

Pat Halloran Salvadori has confined her travels to the USA this year, visiting San Francisco for the first time. Pat is a member of a committee in Arlington Heights, IL which has set up a pilot project of home maintenance for the elderly with teenagers doing the chores to enable the elderly to remain in their own homes. Daughter Margaret and son Robert graduated from Loyola U. this year. Sharon has one more year at Bard. All 3 children are heading for graduate schools.

Henrietta Hill Hubbard was expecting her 5th grandchild last August. Her oldest son is in the investment department with Central Bank and her youngest son is a partner in a law firm. Henrietta is planning a trip with her children to Kenya next year. She is participating in a 4-year course Education for Ministry. Garland Hunter Davies and Nick celebrated the arrival of two new grandsons this year: Allyn Copp Halsey in Feb. and Nicholas Edward Sanders in June. The grandchild total is now 4.

Betty Hutchens McCaleb describes herself as a fulltime homemaker and part-time grand-baby sitter. Husband John is in his 37th year with his family business of sub-contracting. Betty and John have 2 sons, a daughter and 2 grandchildren. Betty is a member of Grace Club, a service organization, and the Volunteer Action Center and periodically works for Republican candidates.

Lucy Kreusler Carey is one of 5 state policy specialists in Aid to Families with Dependent Children in Maryland. Son David graduated from Coll of Wooster, OH and is now attending U. of Baltimore Law School. Lucy's return trip to Russia is known to you through her article in this issue of the Alumnae Magazine.

Stokie Kyle Kimpel, now a resident of Rio Rancho NM, has had 2 photo exhibitions this year and has a third lined up. The major exhibit was at the Coronado State Monument Museum of NM. The 40 photos exhibited are Stokie's first impressions of New Mexico and a reflection of her favorite subject: scenes of the countryside. Fanchon Lewis Jackson is on the board of Bible in the Schools in Corpus Christi, TX. Through the efforts of the board Old and New Testament are taught for credit in 6 local high schools. The courses are taught with emphasis on history and literature. The board hires the teachers and raises the money for salaries. The Jacksons' favorite recreation is visiting the family cabin near Annonson, CO.

Jane Lewis Zollicoffer reports her oldest daughter Jennie has been buyer and manager for Tyler House, a ladies clothing company. Son Allison received his MBA from UNC last spring and is working for First Union Bank in NYC. Fannie (SBC '80) attended UNC School of Journalism and is working for the Westchester Reporter in White Plains, NY. Ellen is a student at Salena Coll. Jane is a vestry and altar guild member in her Church in Henderson, NC and a member of Area Christians Together in Service. Bonnie Loyd Crane visited her daughter Melinda Engel in Germany last fall. Melinda, a graduate of Harvard Law School, is finishing her PhD dissertation from Tufts in economics and international law. Bonnie urges us all to visit Crane Collection when in Boston. The gallery features works by American artists of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Helen Missires Lorenz of Richardson, TX serves as chairman of the language dept at the Hockaday School, teaching French primarily with a few Latin classes as needed. She also teaches a beginning French course at Brookhaven Community Coll. In May 1986 Helen presented a paper at the Pacific Northwest Council on Foreign Languages. This paper was an outgrowth of a National Endowment for the Humanities grant; it concerned the film work of Jean Renoir and his cinematographic interpretations of certain literary works of the 19th century.

Dorothy Montague Choinoky, surrounded by classmates at their 40th reunion, was named to the board of Choate-Rosemary Hall. Dotty also is on the Board of Trustees of Bruce Museum in Greenwich, CT and of the Green Fingers Garden Club. Janet Neumark Fribourg used the class list to reconnect with Dotty after 38 years.

We send our sympathy to Mary Morris Booth whose father, George P. Gamble, 86, died in August.

Rita Murray Gourd is secretary-treasurer of her husband's business in Delray Beach, FL. She also does bookkeeping for a local tennis pro. Rita teaches a Yoga class once a week on a volunteer basis.

Pat Owens Purvis is busy refurbishing an old house on the ranch husband Tom has bought to grow oak trees 45 miles west of Fort Worth. Pat and her family visited England last August.

Ginny Page Love continues to love life in CA having moved to Los Angeles from Kansas City a year ago. She and Bill have put a lot of time and energy into fixing their hilltop home. They have also done considerable traveling including: Egypt, Israel, FL, Jamaica, Wash. DC and

St. Louis

Anne Peyton Cooper writes with pride that son Jim is studying at Oxford U. for his Jr. year. Nancy is a senior at Madeira and she and Ann have been busy doing the tour of colleges. A family trip to England to visit Jim is in the planning stages. Joyce Roseborough White enjoys gardening in Memphis, TN. She has 4 children and 8 grandchildren and is active in her church and the Woman's Exchange.

Lola Steele Shepherd's youngest daughter Gina is editor of Virginia Wildlife Magazine which is noted for its breath-taking artwork and Gina's excellent editorials. Daughter Sallie Garrett Shepherd married d'Estournelles Chardon May 21 at the Rotch-Jones Duff House in New Bedford, MA. "All I had to do was arrive" reported Lola. Sallie and Marc planned every detail of the wedding including a Westport Square Dance after the reception. Marc works for Digital Equipment and Sallie for Epsilon Data. They live in Concord, MA.

Nancy Storey White and Edward returned to the British Isles for their second summer of studies. They attended classes at Cambridge and Edinburgh Universities. Nancy will be returning to Oregon in January to help daughter Marian and family as they wait for the birth of a third child.

Mary Dame Stubbs Broad, while on the Stable Tour in Middleburg, VA, saw Ackie Easter Henderson competing in a driving contest at Foxcroft. "She did quite well and took me for a ride" reported Mary Dame. She and Doug covered lots of territory this year including: Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Bermuda, British Columbia, Emerald Lake, NC, Michigan and a visit to Bookie Coryell Feldman in Petoskey, MI. Joan Teetor Saxe married Steven Marder in the fall of 1985 at St. Bartholemew's Church in New York City. Joan and Steven divide their time between Scarsdale and NYC.

Betty Todd Landen has moved within Cincinnati from four stories of Georgian Colonial to 5 small rooms of California contemporary with a superb river view and is thoroughly enjoying life. Both daughters are married — one to a Marine Lt at Pensacola, and one to a Cincinnati lawyer. Husband Jake is retired from banking and is busy serving on volunteer boards. Betty's mother, SBC class of 1922, is still driving her own car and keeping the family jumping.

Sally Webb Lent had the thrilling experience of being present Dec. 12, 1985 at the birth of her grandson Javier Ruiz who was delivered by a nurse midwife in a hospital in CA.

Jean Yanick Snyder has 7 children who are all out of college and live within 150 miles of her home in Rockford, IA. Jean just completed building a new house on her farm. She is still busy decorating and trying to get a new lawn to grow. Jean continues to work as a special education consultant.

Thanks for sharing your news. Let's keep in touch.!

Our class sympathies to Faith Rahmer Croker who lost her husband in February, 1986. We send condolences also to Jean Croker McMillan, his sister. A double blow to our friends.

We need a current address for Janet McKallor Bates. If anyone knows, please let me know. We found Mary Krotzer. She's at Bennington College in Vermont.

Congratulations to Page Croyder, now Mrs. Bailey, teaching high school in El Paso. And also to Janet Cozart, who is now Mrs. Robert Ramsdell. They have huge family gatherings with three children each and the spouses.

Nancy Campbell Zinley is doing a lot of decorating. A house she did, including stenciling, was House of the Month at Hilton Head and featured in the "Islander" magazine. They have a condo in Aspen and 3 grandchildren. Their daughter, Lisa, has just finished 3 years teaching school in the Canary Islands. Mary Jane Roos and Dick Fenn have been taking youngest, Jennifer, around to see colleges. Older sister, Pamela, is in publishing and Susan is married. Betsy Cushman Collins writes that her daughter married Bruce Collins — is now Caroline Collins Collins! Betsy Walker Duke's daughter, Bet, graduated from SBC 4 years ago and says they love it now just as we did. All the Duke children were married in the past year — whew! The whole family vacationed again at Moosehead Ranch in Jackson, Wyoming, last summer. Anne Sheffield and Brad Hale's children both graduated this year, Sheffield from UVA Law and Ellen from Agnes Scott. Sheffield is traveling for a year — visited Polly Van Peenan and Joe Grimes in Tokyo. Ruth Sanders Smith's son, Steven, has joined them in the business. Son Ed was married this year. Ruth and Norman added a hot tub to their bedroom during renovation. See, we're still "with it". Anne White Connell and family spent Christmas in Aspen. She's teaching French in Memphis and has decided that maybe she stressed "marketable skills" so much that her professional children may never find time to marry. As a mother of 3 bachelors where "do-your-own-thing" was stressed, I can vouch that that's not it! Barbara Wilson Daniell writes glowingly of her son, Jim's wedding.

Joy Bennett Hartshorn took a course in England, the Attingham Summer Program on English Decorative Arts. Dan and 2 of the girls joined her for a 10-day trip through the countryside. She's a guide-teaching specialist at Winterthur Museum. Kitty Wilcox and Bill Reiland took their 4 children, 3 spouses, and 2 grandchildren to Switzerland, Austria, and Germany for a wonderful Christmas vacation. Bill recently went back to school and got a masters in software engineering. Their doctor son and his doctor wife left Cape Cod and are running a public health clinic in Boaz, Ala. Dilly Johnson and Paul Jones went with the SBC group on the Danube Adventure and highly recommend the SBC tours. The Hapalas were on the trip and everyone was very impressed with him as a speaker — we knew that! Dilly's daughter, Louise, is at the London School of Economics for her masters degree.

Alice Harting Correa is at the University of St. Andrews studying for her PhD in medieval history. Her daughter, Alicia, was already at St. Andrews doing the same thing. (Talk about supportive husbands!) Alice's thesis will be a translation and comment on Strabo's De Esordiis (840-842). Her professor, Donald Bullough, who is an international figure in classic studies invited her to collaborate on a paper for an international conference at Oxford, which will be published this winter.

Hattie Hughes Stone has begun a new career. She's studying at the Westchester Institute of Psychotherapy and Psychoanalysis and seeing clients at the Palisades Counseling Center. The Stones went to Japan and China for Bell Communications in the fall. Hattie is chairman of the Outreach Program of their church. They have 2 grandchildren. Cindy Sinclair Rutherford is now associate principal at a high school — a nice promotion! Older son, Bill, has a morning radio show in San Diego, making him one of the youngest in a major market. Husband, Bill, is chairman of Wichita's year-long Gershwin Festival. They have a paddle tennis court for fun. B.B. Smith Stamats has returned to school (after 6 years in market research) at the New York Botanical Garden to get certificates in Landscape Design and Interior Landscape Design in two years. She hopes to go into business in 1988. Both her sons are to be married in the coming year. The oldest and his bride both have masters in industrial engineering. The younger and his bride are in art — he is getting a second masters in fine art and she studies commercial art. Mary

Hill Noble Caperton has a new business: "Guesthouses, Bed and Breakfast, Inc." for the Charlottesville area and "Guesthouses Extended" for longer stays — something we can all use when we're back in that area. Ann Collins Teachout has been investing in real estate and learning about the field. She owns and manages single family homes. Their oldest daughter, Kathy, husband, and 2 little girls are in Japan as Presbyterian missionaries.

Virginia "Gigi" Mitchell Frank's son, Monroe, was featured in Southern Living. After 10 years in Chicago he came back to Little Rock, bought a house in the historic Quapaw quarter, and is restoring it. Nancy Moody had lots of travel in 1986. A trip to Australia and New Zealand in May included the equestrian 3-Day Event World Championships in Gawler, S. Australia. The tour group included several who had visited SBC for clinics when Miss Rogers and Mr Bailey were there! In August it was Dublin for the Horse Show. In between big trips, Nancy has made others to watch some Irish jumpers, in which she owns an interest, compete successfully in this country.

Joan Potter and Henry Bickel went on a foliage cruise with her sister and husband through Canada, New York, Nova Scotia, and Maine. Beverly Bragg and Bill Smith travelled west this year and visited Jan (Julia O'Neal) and Pres Gould in Santa Barbara — a visit that was returned in Birmingham. All three Smith children have graduate degrees. Ruth Frye and Hugo Deaton got a new sailboat and sailed offshore from Maine to Norfolk. Dilly Johnson and Paul Jones sailed with them for a week on Chesapeake Bay. Son David is a resident in surgery. Sarah, an economic analyst in Boston, Barbara an IBM systems engineer in Baltimore (Jo Nelson).

Booze keeps an eye on her), and Beth is at Wellesley. Liz Carper and Roy Huffmann got to see Sweet Briar recently while visiting their daughter, Holly (SBC '74) who lives in Lynchburg with husband and 2 children. Nancy Lee Paul went to LA twice in '86 — once for son's graduation from law school and again for his wedding. Their daughter, Linda, teaches at the Univ. of Md. while getting her doctorate. Daughter Kathleen is in Dallas working on her MBA and Elizabeth works for Md. Senator Charles Mathias. The Pauls have all been vegetarians for about 8 years because of animal cruelty on "factory" farms. Nancy is very active in the animal rights movement. Ellie Vorys Matchner has two grandchildren. All her family lives nearby and they are together a lot. She and George went to England for a month this fall especially for walking. Ann May Via and Joy Bennett Hartshorn were roomies again at the Williamsburg Antiques Forum in February. Ann's daughter, Mary Carroll, is in the class of '87 at SBC. The Vias went to Europe for the first time to see her during her Junior year in France. They have a little house near Charlottesville for vacations.

We received a beautiful invitation to Mike McCaffree's change of command ceremony and reception in Okinawa. Wouldn't it be neat to be able to just dash over for the weekend! However we'll wait to see Lynn Carlton and Mike when they get back to DC where Mike will be Assistant Deputy Chief of Naval Operation, Logistics. Mary Ann Robb and Rome Freer are building a house at Lake Monticello, near Charlottesville. When Rome retires next year they'll be there a lot but will keep an apartment near DC. They vacation in St Thomas. Mary Ann is president of the Garden Club and of the Womens Auxiliary of the Engineering Society of Baltimore. Mary Lee McGinnis McClain and Frank have bought a house here in downtown Charleston for retirement. We'll look forward to seeing them. They have a summer place in Highlands, NC.

Ann Forsyth Timbrel is living at the Carillo Retirement Hotel in Santa Barbara. Her mother (and my brother) live in Santa Barbara. Ann Collins Teachout's daughter is a travel agent there also. Page Brydon Leslie has moved from Locust Hill, Va., to Urbana, Va. and Sue Callaway Haley has moved to Nashville from Georgia. Harriet Robinson Taylor has moved from West Hartford to East Canaan, CT. Shirley Poulson and Gil Hooper celebrated their 34th anniversary this year. They have 4 grandchildren. Their youngest daughter, a UVA architectural graduate, designed the Hooper's recently completed new house, which Shirley says is fabulous. Nella Gray ('55) and Rufus Barklay (from here) and Kirk Taylor ('53) and Jack Clarkson went to their housewarming. Shirley is a fulltime fashion coordinator.

Jerry Driesbach and John Ludeke are both teachers at Bakersfield College. Son, John is staying in Costa Rica as resources coordinator for the Peace Corps. They visited him last Christmas. Kevin finished Stanford in geophysics, taught cross-country skiing and took an intensive Russian course at Santa Cruz. The Ludekes still back-pack in the Sierras for recreation. Ann Venable and Richard Rogers have taken up sailing in a big way — even in Hawaii and Newport. Their son is in Harvard Business School. Sissy Morris Long is writing a history of Memphis for a cookbook the symphony league is putting out. She and Bill were in Europe in October. Joy Parker and Charles Eldredge visited Sissy in July and Sissy sees Anne White Connell, Peaches Davis Roane, and Betty Gene Orr Atkinson all the time. Memphis sounds like a good spot to start for a mini reunion! Helen Smith Lewis's daughter's wedding in Richmond was wonderful according to Meri Hodges Major. Helen nearly stole the show in her loveliness. Meri visited Joy in Miami in January and won a trip to Palm Air Spa. She and Joy went in August — it's the "fat farm" of the stars — I'm dying to hear about it. Joy and Charles travelled all over the country in July and went on a cruise in late August. Joy and Meri also visited Jean Gillespie Walker at Sea Island. The Fall meeting of the SBC Board of Overseers was in Williamsburg and they, along with other important supporters of Sweet Briar included Meri's Belle Air Plantation on their tour. Meri has a sideline that's "blossoming" also — her flower arrangements are in great demand in Richmond's many weddings. Caroline "Kobo" Chobot Garner is busier than ever with child care. Thom is Director of Chattanooga's Houston Antiques Museum. Kobo's mother is with them also. Daughter Laurie married in September and Gailor is a junior at Davidson. Mag Andrews Poff is back at aerobics daily after being very, very ill last spring. She's on the Business section of the paper now and has been taking business courses also. She travels with Bill a lot and is involved with Roanoke's Sister Cities program with Kisumu, Kenya and Wonju, Korea. Billy Isdale Beach's younger daughter has come into the family business, N-CON Systems, as treasurer after finishing Smith; she is getting her masters in history at Columbia. Bly is teaching at Athens Academy in Georgia and Christopher is studying engineering at SUNY. Billy is presenting a paper at the Univ. of Turin, Italy, at the 6th Conference on Chemistry for Protection of the Environment.

Page Anderson Hungerpiller and I chatted briefly during the Southeastern Wildlife Exposition here in February. She and Jim are Patrons of the Expo and I was exhibiting at a sidewalk art show. Her son and his wife are both doctors; second son is in New York with a steamship company, and Susan, in Atlanta, has the 2 grandchildren. Page is president of the Savannah Tree Foundation and chairman of the Chatham County Tree Commission. They plan a long trip on their trawler when Jim retires. Peggy Jones Steuart is a founding trustee of the National Museum for Women in the Arts which will open in early '87 — two blocks from the White House. She hopes we all will join. (Barbara Ballard Wommack has just been elected to the Texas board of this National Museum for Women in the Arts.) Peggy's twin sons are in the class of '88 at W & L. Daughter, Elizabeth, has recently presented Peggy and Guy with their first grandchild. Guy, in addition to presiding over the family investment firm (petroleum, fishing, insurance, sea transportation, and the Half Moon Hotel in Jamaica, where they often vacation) is a trustee at W & L. Peggy's parents at 88 and 92 live in Chatham, NJ, and her sister, Elizabeth, who is the Chief Sculptor of the US Mint, designed the gold Liberty coin which sold 500,000 from the mint before public sale and is now sold out. Peggy has just finished being on the executive committee for the successful 6 million dollar renovation and endowment capital campaign for St. Albans School. She still plays the piano, gardens, and plays tennis in her spare (!) time.

In answer to your many questions, Toogoodoo is a Gullah (the language of the early sea island blacks) corruption of the French Huguenot name Thiebiedaux. Yorges is also from the French. Our house was finished in May and we love it. We enjoyed building (except for bankers, surveyors, and appraisers). We are on a small tidal creek 20 miles south of Charleston in a very rural area and are enjoying the marsh, the birds, and the space. I have recently become employed in doing something I love. I give guided nature walks (featuring birds especially) for Water, Woods, and Wildlife, a firm that manages those things for plantation owners. The walks I lead are on some of the non-public land at Middleton Place, with which I've been associated for ten years as a house, gardens, and stableyards docent. Bill has travelled several times to Europe in the latter part of 1986. The plan at this writing is for me to go too in September.

Several long-lost classmates have written and it is just great to hear from them.

Patti Pevear Grabau and her family live in Fairfield, CT.; she is taking a four-year course called "Education for the Ministry". She sings with a group, "Touch of Class", and has performed at the White House, the Statue of Liberty and for private groups; there was an article in the Connecticut edition of the Sunday New York Times about the ensemble this past winter. Patti went skiing in Europe in the early spring; her daughters met her there and in May she met a whole group of Darien friends and they all celebrated their 50th birthdays in Geneva. Sandra, 23, attended Univ. of Richmond and finished at Boston Univ.; Cindy, 21, spent 2 years at Skidmore, then decided to concentrate on a career in photography

Betsy Robinson Taylor, in NYC, does a one-woman musical show called "The Reincarnation of Snow White"; she has presented it to senior citizens' groups and as a benefit for the Colonial Dames. Her children are in Oregon, Germany and Italy.

Hope Sparger Hanbury, also in NYC, and her husband Harry have moved to W. 57th Street after living 19 years on the East Side. Hope is a manager at Citibank writing training materials; she loves walking to and from work. The Hanburys spend their spare time at their Fire Island beach house

Val Parker Storms, Greenwich, CT, has just finished writing the major part of a book about the great estates of Greenwich, built between 1890 and 1930. Look for it in bookstores in fall. Val is a member of the Town Meeting, does free-lance editorial work and travels with her husband Cliff. She has one offspring in college; the others are "scattered all over the world"

The Mimi Garrard Dance Company spent a four-day residency at Sweet Briar in April. Mimi said she really loved it. In June, the company gave a benefit in NYC for the endowed scholarship fund and raised $2,279. Alice Morris Gaskell's (SBC '59) daughter is visiting the States for the summer from Cornwall, England; she visited SBC with Mimi.

I hope all of you read the wonderful article in the Summer Alumnae Magazine by Ruth Frame Salzberg on the joys of hot air ballooning. A card from Ruth, who lives in Hartford, CT, caught me up on her family. The Salzbergs' son Tom graduated from U. Conn. and has a great job with Otis Elevator; their daughter Anne, who is a sophomore at Boston Univ., ran (unofficially) in the Boston Marathon and finished in 4 hr., 13 min. Bob, her husband, collects and restores "mopars", the so-called "muscle cars" from the early '70's. Besides Ballooning, Ruth has started to write children's stories again

Lee Cooper Van De Velde wrote about a mini-reunion she attended in Washington, DC, in May; participants were Claire Cannon Christopher, Eleanor St. Clair Thorp, and Lynn Prior Harrington. They had such a good time they plan to make it an annual affair and invite other '58'ers to join them. Lynn Prior Harrington celebrated the big 5-0 in June at the shore and Coopie had the distinction of being her "oldest living friend" in attendance! The Van De Veldes have bought a weekend retreat on the Eastern Shore of Maryland

Jean Lindsay de Stree has just moved into a smaller home in Easton, Pa. Daughter Muffy, Hamilton College '88, will spend her junior year in Paris; she worked this past summer at Scudder Stevens in Boston. Giles will be a senior at Blair Academy in the fall. Jean still teaches E.S.L. plus an introduction to foreign languages to 8th graders. Her husband Quentin has seen his dream of a new library in his district become a reality.

Susan Day Dean is a tenured associate professor in American and English Literature at Bryn Mawr College where she has been on the faculty for 11 years. She and her two teenaged children live in Swarthmore

Ethel Ogden Burwell reports that both her daughters, are still working in Washington, DC. Armistead III, a high school sophomore, letters in ice hockey, soccer and lacrosse and is also a good student. Ethel serves on the SBC Alumnae Board one more year and continues with her job in admissions at University-Liggett School in Grosse Pointe, Mi. She and Armistead are involved in many community activities

Mary Lane Bryan Sullivan announced the birth of her granddaughter Caroline Elizabeth to Wright and Laurel Sullivan. They live in Clemson, S.C., near M.L.'s mother and father, Ellen Newell Bryan (SBC '26) and Wright Bryan (former SBC Board member); young Wright works for a computer firm there. Son David works for IBM in Washington, D.C.; daughter Keeley will be a junior at the Laurel School in Cleveland. Julia McCullough Shivers visited the Sullivans in the summer and M.L. talks often to Julie Green on the phone. M. L. still works as a part-time pediatric occupational therapist in Cleveland; she sees children in homes or at a handicapped children's preschool. She had lunch with Lanny Tuller Webster while in SC. Lanny's daughter was married this summer in Allendale, SC.

Ina Hamilton Hart continues her quest for a Master's in Divinity and eventual ordination in the Presbyterian Church. She spends one quarter at McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago each year. Just as she returned from Chicago this year, she had a call from Seward, AL; her son Jim had to have an emergency appendectomy; he is fine and is home, waiting to return to his junior year at the Univ. of Wisconsin. Her oldest son Bob will graduate in December from Purdue with a degree in economics; her youngest son Fred will be a Junior in high school in Shaker Heights, Oh, where the Harts live. When Ina is at home she attends the Catholic seminary; she will finish her degree in December 1988. She is a parish visitor for her church.

I had a wonderful long letter from Biffie Fairfield Creighton from Carthage, MO. The Creightons have three daughters: Catherine is married and teaches school; Margaret is a biology major at Univ. of Missouri; and Elizabeth will be a high school senior. Biffie and Jim call their place Knights Station Farm; they love country living but bemoan the plight of farmers! Biffie devoted much of her letter to Diane

Stafford Mayes who has become a very enterprising businesswoman. Diane recently sold her thriving Christmas decorations business in Carthage and has been marketing her new cookbook called Rush Hour Super Chef. She will appear on 25 talk shows nationwide. Diane and Roy's son John just graduated from SMU in engineering and Rick has a baking business in Raleigh NC. Look for Diane's book on the stands this fall. Biffie said she had talked to Boo Bagge McPeck in California recently and hopes to meet Mary Faith Templeton Rountree in Tulsa this summer

Betty Rae Sivalis Davis has a new hobby, bird-watching. The whole family is involved; they have birded in Hyde Park, Central Park, Israel, Hawaii, Colorado and at home in Midland, TX.

Our sympathy goes to June Neighbors Morton who was widowed last year. June is now selling residential real estate in Fort Worth, TX. Her children are grown and she wanted something more than bridge, homemaking and Jr. League work to keep her occupied Betty Gallo Skladal has been home visiting in Lynchburg, Va, for three weeks this summer. She was pleased to be guest soloist at Rivermont Presbyterian Church where she grew up. Her card was sent from Homer, AK, where she said she was surrounded by ocean and glacier-covered mountains; she was still on vacation. Betty also visited Chitina and McCarthy, fascinating old mining sites. The Skladals' oldest son Wayne was married August 1955; Joe is majoring in business at Texas A & M. Betty still teaches school in Anchorage, AK.

Edie Knapp Clark and Roger are both teaching in Beaverton, OR; Edie relaxes by sewing and weaving. The Clarks have two sons: Andy, 24, is in law school and Jim, 25, is a properties artisan for the Shakespearean Festival in Ashland, OR Joanie Black Davidson sells real estate in Palos Verdes, CA but also has time to travel with Keith. Daughter Cynthia is married and lives in Kansas City where her husband is a Youth Pastor. Dianne, 23, is on a Rotary Scholarship earning her MBA in Milan, Italy. Suzanne is completing her studies at Calif. State, San Luis Obispo.

Nancy Hawbaker Gilbert and Carter spent the early summer on a marvelous trip through the Canadian Rockies. They visited Jasper, Banff, Lake Louise and Vancouver, for Expo '86, as well as Victoria, Seattle and San Francisco

Cornelia Long Matson is going to France in Sept., to buy for her shop, Antiques des Provinces. Cornelia and Dick have bought an estate, Beauvoir Hall, built south of Sarasota in 1929. The main house is Greek-Revival style; there are two rental properties as well as a garage apartment and a boathouse. Cornelia's daughter Anna,

27 finished her first year at U. of CA/Berkeley Medical School with all A's. Julia, 25, is a broker at Bear, Stearns on Wall Street and David, 22, will graduate from Skidmore in May, 1987

After a very long silence, Waldo Latham Craven wrote that she is living in Jacksonville, FL, editing The Jacksonville Register. "The Social Newspaper of Florida's East Coast" Waldo's two children are Priscilla, an '86 graduate of Vanderbilt U. and Michael, in the 11th grade at Woodberry Forest School.

Ceci Dickson Banner continues to travel extensively in her job as a consultant for nonprofit institutions, mostly independent schools, for Browning Assoc. of Newark, NJ. She frequently sees both June Berguido James in Buffalo, NY, and Ethel Ogden Burwell, Grosse Pointe, MI. Jenny Banner graduated from Albion Coll. and is a computer specialist living in The Plains, VA; Larry will graduate from Stanford in 1987 and Becky, from Denison in 1988

To commemorate the occasion of many of our 50th birthdays, Betsy Worrell Gallagher sent the following poem:
Sagging flesh and cataracts! Liver spots and more! Cellulite and senility! There's so much more in store! So go out and have your fun! and do what you can do now, because in a few more birthdays you won't remember how!

Peggy Jean Fossett Lodeesen writes that she is "a Republican activist working for the 1986 election of Congressional candidates". The Lodeesens live in Bethesda, MD

Eleanor Cain Pope went to Washington, DC, to see the Treasure Houses of Britain with Claire Cannon Christopher; Julie Booth Perry and Charlie joined them one night for dinner. Betsy McCutcheon Williams's daughter Elizabeth is working in Washington for the U.S. Sentencing Commission. Her daughter Lucy will be a senior at UVA; she has enjoyed getting to know the children of SBC friends — Claire Christopher's Ashley and Betsy Trundle's Audrey. Eleanor Pope works with Betsy at the gift shop Nonesuch in Columbia, SC; Betsy also does some specialty dessert catering. She says that her middle years are busier than ever

Lanny Tuller Webster wrote that her daughter was married in Allendale, SC, this spring; planning the wedding at long distance kept her busy. She mentioned lunching with M.L. Sullivan and her parents in Clemson.

Tibby Moore Gardner and her husband and two sons had a wonderful sailing trip to Tortolla, BVI; they went "bear boating" — a "perfect vacation". Tiddy has visited with both Mary Taylor Swing and Mollie Archer Payne; she also sees fellow Richmond residents Mary Johnson Campbell and Patty Williams Twohy often. They enjoy going to the theater together. I saw Mary Campbell when I was in Richmond for a wedding at Thanksgiving; Mary and Bill's three children are all working in Jackson Hole, Wy. this summer. Margaret will start working for the Living Trust in NYC in October; Wendy is at Demson. Mary says that the SBC Club in Richmond is really "revved up" with meetings, dinners and programs.

Also from Richmond, a card came from Joan Nelson Bargamin telling about her family's activities. Paul, 24, is finishing graduate school at William and Mary in International Political Relations; he is one of only 6 in the program and is working toward a foreign service career. Stephen, 22, graduated "with distinction" from UVA in May, and works for Nestle Int in Wilmington, DE. Joan sees Louise Dunham Williams often for theater and lunch. Joan wonders if anyone can help her locate a 1958 yearbook; hers was destroyed in a flood.

Carolyn McIvor Dews and Mack still live in Crewe, Va. They have three sons: Carl, 22, graduated from James Madison Univ. in 1986; Chuck, 18, will be a freshman at Lynchburg Coll.; and Andy, 16, will be a junior at Not-toway H.S. Carolyn said that she, Celia Loving Richeson, Kathryn Spencer Pixley (SBC '63) and Betty Skladal had a marvelous reunion luncheon when Betty was home. Carolyn sees Elaine Schuster when she comes to SBC for Board meetings.

Dorothy "Poogie" Wyatt Shields has her MA in religious studies and counseling and is looking for a position. In the meantime she has done such temporary jobs as director of Christian education, tutor of handicapped teens, teaching LD/ED resource and high school French. Poogie and her children have just moved into a "small, light, open and airy house" she built in Greenwood, Va. Carter will spend her junior year in Strasbourg on the Syracuse Univ program

Judy Graham Lewis and Jim are back in Charleston, WV, where Jim is executive director for Coalition for the Homeless. Judy is an IV therapist at a hospital; she is responsible for all in-patient chemotherapy administration and teaching. Beth was married in Nov. '85, and lives in Ann Arbor. Kathie graduated from Denison and Debby, from Wooster

Marietta Eggleston Burleigh sent news of her children; Kathryn will graduate from Middlebury, after a junior year in Florence, in June and Stephen from the Univ. of Texas at Austin. Fontaine, her oldest, graduated from Kenyon and is now working in Germany; son Doug is employed in Memphis where Marietta and Bob live

Linda MacPherson Gilbert and her husband Dan have left Eureka College and moved to Louisville, Ky, where Dan is president of Christian Church Homes of Kentucky. The organization has 4 "campuses" in 4 cities — 3 for the elderly and 1 for troubled children. Linda is Academic Program Coordinator for adult students on the Shelby campus of the Univ. of Louisville. She is still interested in environmental and peace issues. The Gilberts love to go to Black Mtn., NC, as often as possible. Two of their children are married; one lives in Illinois and the other in South Carolina. Their daughter, the youngest, has "stopped out" of her forestry program at Colo. State and is getting experiential learning at Yosemite Nat'l Park; she will return to Humboldt State in the fall

Barbara Von Hoffman, who finished her schooling at Washington University in St. Louis, is a photographer and is becoming known in the Pike's Peak region for her photographs of African wildlife, pets and figure skaters. She planned to have a show of her work in the Colorado Color Gallery in the fall

It has been a busy year for the Kuntzes. Lee was married to Robert Eckerman, an Albion graduate from Saginaw, MI, in Sept., 1985; she and Bob live in Clarksville, TN, where Bob is with the Highway Patrol and Lee is a caseworker in the District Attorney's office. Martha and Don Schenck have just bought a condo in Alexandria, VA; Anne, our youngest, transferred to Meredith Coll. in Raleigh, NC, after graduating from St. Mary's College. She has decided to take a few semesters off and work in Raleigh. My husband Eddie, a commercial realtor, received a "Sales Leader" award this spring. I have a new position with Carillon Historical Park as Promotion Coordinator; I am responsible for all publicity and public relations for the Park. I continue to coordinate the weddings that are held in the Park — approximately 50 per summer and have just started doing a little free-lancing in the P.R. field as well. I will be on the board of the Garden Club of Dayton as chairman of the flower show. We try to visit the girls as often as possible. We will have a mini-reunion with the Schencks and Anne at my mother's (Martha McBroom Shipman, SBC '31) summer house at Columbus Beach on Burt Lake in Michigan.

Your letters make this job so much fun! Please keep in touch.

Thank you, wonderful class of '62 for sending news. Almost everyone who communicated is planning to attend our 25th reunion — May 22nd-24th, 1987. Please start planning now to come so we can have a great turnout and a wonderful time! Also, start gathering pictures and information about yourselves for our class scrapbook

Brook Hamilton Cressall hopes to see everyone there — especially those who have never come. Brook is still enjoying teaching and her son, Hunter, loves Sewanee where he is a sophomore

Great news!! Jocelyn Palmer Connors and Tom are moving to Sweet Briar where Tom will be Vice President and Treasurer of the college. They are looking forward to being part of the Sweet Briar "family" and to welcoming back the class of '62 at reunion. Katherine, their oldest daughter, graduated cum laude from SBC last spring, married Garland Cassada in June, and now lives in Charlotte where he is practicing law. Michaelle will be a senior at SBC this fall, having spent junior year in St Andrews; and Mark is a senior at the Christ School. We will all look forward to seeing Jocelyn and Tom in May!

Our household is quieter with our youngest, Louise, 13 away at Cardigan Mountain Camp/Summer School and the Knox School on Long Island for the winter. Brad, Jr., 18, is a senior at MBA here in Nashville and Elizabeth, 22, graduated from Davidson College, worked at the A-Bar-A Ranch and is now in Breckenridge, Colorado.

On the way to see Louise in New Hampshire, we had a wonderful visit with Nina Harrison Scribner and Curt on Cushings Island, Maine where they live in the summer. Curt takes the ferry to work in Portland and their house is a delightful renovated World War I warehouse! We met their two attractive sons, Curtis who is a sophomore at Lake Forest and John who is a freshman at Hobart. Their daughters were away at camp and school but Anne is now a senior at Trinity and Elizabeth is a sophomore at Pomfret boarding school. Mina Walker Woods' mother and Nina's good family friend George Austin were married recently so Nina and Mina are almost cousins

We loved seeing Patsy Cox Kendall and Skip when we were in Maine and also in Nashville when they were here for an insurance meeting. Their daughter Sheldon, 20, is at Dartmouth and son, Rusty, 18, is at Kimball Union near Hanover, New Hampshire. Stephanie, 15, attends Berwick Academy in Maine. Patsy and Skip travel frequently with YPO and his insurance business.

In Scotland, Louise Durham Purvis is still running the Prison Fellowship

Scotland office from her home and will attend an international symposium of this group where 50 countries will be represented. Her husband, John, is a financial consultant in Europe and the U. S. and travels often — Louie has accompanied him recently to the U.S., Italy and Switzerland. Their eldest, Elizabeth, has finished at Oxford and will work with Marks and Spencer in London. Emily is still at Oxford and enjoys acting and singing as does Robert, 17, who is at boarding school in the Highlands, where he also excels in debating.

Ann Percy continues her work for The Philadelphia Museum as curator of drawings. Her major big project is a 1989 exhibition of prints and drawings by Francesco Clemente.

Jean Gant Nuzum and "same" husband, Tom, are still in Chapel Hill where he is in the UNC Department of Medicine and she is a part-time social worker responsible for getting children from foster care into permanent homes. She also does some teaching at the UNC School of Social Work. Their daughter, Christine, 12, and son, Henry, 9, play violin and cello duets along with their other activities.

A promotion for Fran Early means moving from Houston to Gaithersburg, Md. to be Director of Marketing for Prudential Home Mortgage Company (a new joint venture of Prudential and Solomon Brothers). She plans to live in D.C. or Bethesda; and, although she loved her 9-1/2 years in Houston, she is excited about being back in this area. Betsy Pearson Griffin and Buzzy gave her a wonderful send-off party. Fran's new phone: 301-330-6634.

Allison Moore Garrett is at Memphis State working toward her Ph.D. in clinical psychology. She and Tom will be visiting in Scotland in the fall with Louise Durham Purvis and John. Occasionally we see Allison's older two children Brandon and Murray who are students at Vanderbilt. Murray plays competitive tennis all over the U.S. and is on the Vanderbilt team. Brandon was elected to Phi Beta Kappa this year and will enter The Owen School of Management mid-year.

In December, 1985, Douglas Dockery Porteous was married to Wilmer J. Thomas, Jr. (His mother and sister both attended Sweet Briar). They live in New York where he is a private investor and managing director of the Metropolitan Opera. Douglas' son, Will, entered Taft this fall. She had a great family reunion in Montecito this past summer and had a visit with Chloe Fort Lenderman there. Chloe's youngest daughter, Wynn, will be in the first co-ed class at V.E.S. in Lynchburg and little Chloe will be a senior at Harpeth Hall. Chloe spent August in Nantucket and before that she and daughter Chloe were in Bath, England catering parties for Jane Seymour, the actress!

ford the fourth generation of Symonds to go there

Beth Johnson Phillip's daughter, Angela, graduated cum laude from Hampton Roads Academy and is going to Duke University as a National Merit Scholar. Eleanor Anne is on the honor roll at HRA and has a horse which takes up most of her time and some of Beth's; Sandy is an enthusiastic athlete and cheerleader; and 7 year old Jimmy shares many interests with his father 'who still works and plays like a dynamo.

After 14 years in Lawrence, KS, Rosemary Whiteside Henderson and her family are moving to California where Rosemary's husband, Butch, will be pastor of the Claremont United Church of Christ. Mark and Claire are students at the Univ. of Kansas and Maria, 10, is looking forward to life in California. After 7 years in banking, Rosemary is enjoying "retirement" for a while. A visit to Sweet Briar was on the itinerary for Linda Emery Miller and her daughter, Jocelyn, age 10. Linda describes herself as a "perennial bench warmer" watching Jocelyn and husband Clark in many sports and other activities. However, she does find time to continue consulting and training.

The farm in Rustburg, Virginia is still home for Jo Wheatley Overbey and Hutch with 100 cows and 5 dogs! Joe is a real estate appraiser working toward her MAI designation. Both girls are in the Richmond area; Burks who works in real estate and Stuart, who, after taking a year off from Williams to work on a horse farm, is now at the University of Richmond

Dru McEachern Martin's son Will, 16, is now a junior at Woodberry and Ellie, 14, is a sophomore at Foxcroft

When not traveling to South America with her husband Gerd, Nancy Hudler Keuffel works with a friend who owns China Coast, an import company, selling imported belts, sweaters and accessories to private label companies, catalogs, and other retailers. Will, their oldest son, a senior at Exeter, is studying in Barcelona on School Year Abroad. Eric is in 9th grade and Susan in 5th Marilou Green has fond memories of her year at SBC and visited last spring with her 21 and 22 year old daughters. They live in Billings, Montana and enjoy skiing, scuba and wind surfing. Marilou is working as a service rep for Social Security and also finds time for volunteerism.

Kyoko Asakawa of Tokyo and her son visited Boston last summer to investigate his studying abroad as she did. She hopes any Sweet Briar alumna traveling in Japan will contact her. Her address is: 6-16-29 Seijo Setagaya-ku, Tokyo 157, Japan. Phone: 03-483-8765. What a lovely suggestion!

Andrea's Designer Clothes by Andrea Denson Wechsler continue to win many awards and recognitions.

Pat Perkins Wolverton writes of visits to California with her husband David — one a YPO meeting in the Napa Valley. Their oldest son, Alan, graduated from the University of Texas last spring and Kirk, who is 21, will graduate from Duke in 1987. Their daughter Julie is 12

Penny Powell Carmody sees Molly Harris Jordan almost daily as they both work in the Volunteer Department at the Science Museum of Virginia in Richmond. Penny's children: Lycia, 17, is a senior at St. Catherine's and Nathaniel, 16, is a junior at St. Christopher's.

Glenna Caddy Tet is an Evening Dean at Hartnell College in Salinas, California and her husband, Frank, is a professor at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School. They have three boys — Steve 14, Trent 12, and Drew 9

Cary Lamond Lynch sends "hellos to all from Southern California. Julia Shields left Charlottesville this past summer to study at Cambridge.

Ann Ritchie Baruch's Ritchie is a freshman at the University of Pennsylvania and Marcy is a Senior at Dana Hall. Ann volunteers as a Hospice worker, takes landscape design courses and is active at church and younger son David's school

Mary Steketee MacDonald enjoyed showing her two daughters Sweet Briar last spring.

From Hagerstown, Sally Sharrett Perryman writes that they've had a busy year getting settled in a new house and business. One son, Tad, is "launched" — working for Rockwell in California as a systems design engineer — and Will is still at Auburn. They've had great trips to Ireland and the Greenbriar and she's involved with tennis, Symphony Guild and Garden Club.

Gwen Weiner still lives in San Francisco and runs the family business in Fort Worth, Texas. She also paints and does interior design — lately she has been doing numerous commissioned portraits.

Accolades to Martha Baum Sikes who graduated in June from the first class of Georgia State University College of Law. She commuted from Cornelia, Georgia to Atlanta — a distance of 100 miles — to accomplish this! After the bar exam, she had a well-deserved vacation in London for the month of August with her father and daughter, Suzanne. Her son, Matthew, 16, won a Japan-U.S. Senate scholarship for study in Japan last summer and lived with a Japanese family in Hiroshima

Winnie Swoyer Phye was married to James Phye in 1982. Winnie describes herself as a happy housewife after many years of office work. They have a blended family with four children: Trevor, 16, who is a 5th former at Kent in Connecticut, Robin, 13, a 7th grader at Rye Country Day, Gaelen, 14, a 9th grader at Concord Academy in Massachusetts and James, 12, a 7th grader at Rye

Country Day. Jim practices law with Davis, Polk & Wardwell in NYC. Winnie looks forward to reunion and hopes other "dropouts" like herself will be returning

Sarah Adams Model hopes anyone near Los Gatos, California will stop by for a visit. They're settling into a new "dream house." Their son Fritz, 15, is a sophomore and football player at Saratoga High School and daughter Heidi, 10, is in 5th grade

Ann Cai Meredith Hilgeman, husband Ernie and 8 year-old son Richard have moved to a 90 year-old house, which they are restoring in Monticello, Arkansas. She is enjoying teaching English again at the college there

From their summer home in Seal Harbor, Maine, Cynthia Leigh Vaughan Urfel writes that after Sweet Briar she attended Columbia School of Architecture and married Richard Peterson who is an investment banker with Chase. Their children are Jocelyn Leigh, 17, Christian Gilbert, 11, and Carthey Vaughn, 7. At home in Morristown, New Jersey she does volunteer work with the Junior League, Episcopal Church and is on the Board of United Way

Elizabeth Farmer Owen writes that all is well in Louisville. Their son, Douglas, is attending Westminster College in Fulton, Missouri and daughter Elizabeth is still at school in Louisville

Ray Henley Thompson has seen Mina Walker Wood, Alice Allen Smyth and Eve Pringle Boyd — all fine. We saw the Smyths in Charlotte last spring and their lovely daughter Elliot who is at Duke University. Their sons Jordan and Henry are at Chapel Hill and Andover. May Belle Scott Rauch writes of a wonderful summer at Lake Toxaway in North Carolina

Anne Parker Schmalz writes that she's made a mid-life career change from "nursing" plants to nursing people — having become an LPN — and is working at Yale New Haven Hospital. Husband Bob practices law in New Haven. Their oldest daughter, Jenny, works in Boston; Caroline is a senior at Oberlin, Peter, a sophomore at Princeton and Nick, a junior in high school at home. Anne has also worked on a city park greenhouse rental project and the mayor's Solid Waste Task Force.

I see Macon Winfree Hilton often on the tennis court. Betsy, their daughter, spent the summer in France and is a junior at Princeton while Robbie is a senior here at MBA.

News came of Mary Layne Shine via Houston where she and her family visited for a wedding — Reports are she looks super, is an oncology nurse in a large cancer clinic and lives in Chapel Hill with husband Bob and four children.

Anne and I will be communicating with you about reunion. May 22nd-24th. It's going to be great! See you then Gidget Babb Griggs and family are moving to Athens, Greece, from Atlanta. Her husband John is in the military.

Judy Baker DeSouza has a son entering Tufts in the fall. She and Nelson and family are still in Brazil Kit Baker Sydnor, Kendall and daughter Jennifer, 11, live on a farm near Lynchburg. Kitset teaches riding, and at a Montessori school.

Anna Bartel Cox and Boyce have two girls (13 and 9), and live in Charleston, S.C., in an 1822 house, which Anna says "always needs work." She is school counselor to 600 6th, 7th, and 8th graders. That takes patience and fortitude!

Judy Barthold DeSimone says she practices law and "juggles". She and Frank, Frank Jr. (16), Lia (14), and Ulla (a Danish AFS student) live in Pine Bluff, AR

Cynthia Baynham wrote that she is married to a Dutchman, Galtjo Geertsema, and they have a 5 year old daughter, Mary Elizabeth. Cince also teaches second grade and has a house rental business in Martinsburg, W VA

Barbara Dublin Van Cleave and George live in McLean, Va. with Christina Koelb, 17, Willie, Michael, and Elizabeth.

Marsha Dumas O'Connor and Henry have one son at Dartmouth and daughters in 11th and 8th grade. She plays tennis, "tries to survive" mothering and homemaking, and was instrumental in opening the Jr. League Children's Center in New Orleans (now a part of Children's Hospital). She says she and Ann (Kerr) Preaus wanted to attend reunion, but both had other commitments. We'll expect you both for the 25th!

Makanah Nancy Dunham Morriss and Bob live in Richmond, where Bob is a counselor in private practice, and also at the Va. Home for boys. Makanah is Minister of Religious Education at First Unitarian Church, and is looking forward to a 4-month sabbatical. Jeff is 11, and Sara is 9. Makanah says Sally Dunham was due home in Sept. from a "dig" in Syria.

Anne Eberstadt Hollander and son Miles (14) live in Skippack, PA, where Anne is a sports masseuse, skates, and gardens.

Terri Fentress Thompson is a full-time "parent/chauffeur", but finds time for riding and various community activities. She and Ed, Mark 11, Carolyn, 7, and Kim, 6, live in Eugene, OR.

We spent a wonderful few days in Cambridge, Ma, with Marcy Fisher in July. She looks great, works for Public Housing in Cambridge, and is the best tour guide and hostess in Boston!

Anne Frothingham and Dennis Cross are parents of Louisa, 11, and Eliza, 1 1/2. Anne teaches piano and is involved with community and musical activities in New York.

Marilyn Garabrant Morris and David, Blair, 5, and Anthony, 4 1/2, returned to the U. S. in July after 4 years in Taiwan. She sounds excited about moving to Wilmington, DE., and says she "may even go back to work!" David works for Morgan Bank.

Peggy Gillmer Myers lives in the Lynchburg area, and has taken on the class job of coming up with "distinctive reunion garb" for our 25th. Any ideas?

Ellie Gilmore Massie is Co-President of the YWCA in Darien, CT., and mothers Adrian, 8, and Billy, 6.

Mary Meade Gordon Winn and Tom are in Roanoke, where she helps with his OB-GYN practice, gardens, exercises, and is active at church. Their children are Tom, 18, Gordon, 16, Andrew, 14, and Meredith, 12.

Cindi Michel Blakely and Bob Eden, 13, and Ian, 10, live in Houston, where Cindi does volunteer work with PTA and Ballet

Randi Miles Long saw Anne Newton in San Francisco after reunion. Randi is working on her California teaching certification, and has only one course left; she hoped to have a part-time job this fall. Herb works for Chevron, and the four Mileses (incl. Melissa, 16, and Kent, 13) had a great summer exploring the Pacific Northwest. They looked at colleges for Melissa, and went to "Expo" in Vancouver. The highlight of Kent's summer was skateboarding camp.

Kathy Mockett wrote that she is still in "computer consulting" on an IBM S/38. Her husband John is president of Iris Graphics, a "high-tech start-up", which makes four-color prints using digital photography. Children and steps include: Alyson, 13, Amanda, 10, (both into soccer, dance, and church), Lisa, 19, and Karl, 17.

Susan Moorman Southworth and Gus have two children, Hunter, 6, and Taylor, 2. They live in a 1763 house in Woodbury, CT which is getting a family room, master bath and cosmetic overhaul. Susan has a full-time job and also volunteers; Gus heads the litigation dept. at a Waterbury law firm

Wick Nalle and Bob Rowland are parents of Julia, 6, and Emily, 4. Wich keeps busy with home and family, Jr. League, church, and choir

In Richmond, Jane Nelson is a social worker, and is active at church and in the community

Margaret Nichols Markham and Julian live in Rochester, MD., with Julian III, 12, and Ann Catherine, 10. Margaret says she is a full-time mother but has also returned to school

Joan Niles Tansey was delivered of a "bouncing baby boy" on May 31, 1986 (James Niles Tansey)

Marcia Pace Lindstrom's son, Christopher Pennewill, is a freshman at W & L this year — Marcia wants to know if anybody else has children in school in the area. Her other children are Ashley, 13, and Ellison, 10

Abby Patterson Schullis has our very first alum daughter: Parker entered as a freshman this fall. Younger daughter Ashton is into horses and music. Abby and Gary plan to go to Australia in Feb. and Japan and Hong Kong later on. Abby also competes with her driving pony, skis, and gardens. They live in New Jersey.

Cindy Paugh Korfmann lives in Switzerland. Her two children (Roger, 21, and Kristen, 16) are at school at U. South Carolina, and the Hotchkiss School. Cindy also works at an investment company, teaches tennis, and translates

Andrea Pearson and Al Pennington live in Mobile, where she is a lawyer, and court referee at Strickland Youth Center. They have two children, Kate, 7, and Anna, 3

Laura Penick Felt, Navy Capt. Bob, Elizabeth, 16, and Emily, 15, have just returned "from four wonderful years in Japan." This tour of duty for Bob (who is in oceanography and meteorology) will be for two years in Washington, D.C. They will live in Springfield, Va.

Lida Lee Pierce Small and Wayne are partners in three Hallmark stores in Stanton, VA. Daughter Krysta is a freshman at U.Va., and Courtney is 17

Katie Lou Pritchett Harris is owner of a real estate firm; she alone sold over $5 million worth in Decatur, AL., last year. Her children are Pressley, 17, West, 15, and Nikki, 13

Helen Raney Pinckney is also in Richmond. Mother to Sarah, 17, and Tom, 15, she is an active gardener and does some landscape design.

Diana Rediker Slaughter's husband, Bill, is running for the Alabama state Legislature. Diana herself works full-time as a business writer and editorial consultant for several large corporations. Sons Will and Hanson are in 9th and 8th grades. They moved to a new house over Thanksgiving — and to top it off, Diana hoped to get her karate brown belt in September!

Linda Reynolds is still at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. She will be our reunion song leader for the 25th, so pass ideas along to her

Natalie Roberts Sheriff and Steve live in Columbia, MD. where Natalie is a Branch Chief at the Social Security Central Office. Natalie is also president of the Board of Trustees for her church

Courtney Sands and Steve Wilson have two boys, Alex, 3, and Stuart, 1. She says she is a "professional volunteer", and works part-time as Vice President for Community Relations for Wilson Financial Corp. They live in Jacksonville, FL.

Judy Wilson Grant wrote that "life with all the little Grantlets keeps Newell and me busy." Margaret, 9, is a soccer goalie and the only girl on her baseball team; Will, 7, is a budding zoologist and Cub Scout; Newell, Jr., just started kindergarten, and Caroline is 3 1/2. Judy is immersed in school activities and Newell is in commercial real estate and ranching. They live in Littleton, CO.

Susie Wilson Ashcom is in real estate (selling horse farms), has two kids in college, and lives in Tryon, NC. Husband Robert is Master of Hounds and Huntsman Bunny Cord sent a great article from "The Chronicle of the Horse" about Peppie Yeager Rankin who represented the U.S. at the Federation Equestrian International-Nashua World Cup in Holland last March. Peppie is married to Tom, a Baltimore neurosurgeon, and they have five children: Alexandra, 16, Caroline, 14, Tom, Jr., Ruth Marie 5, and Carroll 3.

We Helms are thriving. Son Pen is 16, and a junior; is looking at colleges (East coast), and is into computers, writing, and acting. Ted is 11 and is looking forward to performing in the Louisville Ballet's, Nutcracker for the fourth year both in Louisville and on the road in Nashville. Nelson continues lawyering (mostly estate planning) and I still love my public relations job at Louisville Presbyterian Seminary.

It was super to hear from so many — but what happened to the rest of you? Right now, sit down and write a note to me or Corky. Let us know if you ever go through; the welcome mats are always out

Most of us marked the trauma of the 20th anniversary of high school graduation in the Spring of '86. Many of you wrote news of SBC friends gleaned at these encounters. Thank you all for your responses

Keith Brown Oehlert said, "I ran out of things to do as a mother of one, CPA, and aerobics instructor and so I had a baby, our second daughter, Amanda Elizabeth, who joins 7 year old Elizabeth Jane." Lyn Barr Hoyt and I "reunited" a plenty at our 20th. Pictures the next day show several sleepless women looking like outtakes from "Alien". Lyn, Reed, sons Foster and Tyler, Scottie Ossa, and Legs the snake have moved to Framingham MA where Reed has taken a job with the US Army Research Labs in Natick. Reed is an exercise physiologist and Lyn gets her exercise chasing the boys, moving, and lining up schools and sitters

Carey Cleveland Swan is "very happy with new law firm, new marriage and new house". She is less delighted with Houston's economy which she reports is as bad as its press. Maggie Cooper Tyner and children, Rob (12), Cooper (9), and Mimi (6) live in Clarksdale where Maggie, finally in possession of her master's degree, works as a guidance counselor at Lee Academy. Diane Council Sweeney wails, "My psyche is in boxes — just moved over the state line to VA but it might just as well be CA! 30 days to enroll kids (Leigh Erin (8.5) and Kerry (5)), license cars, dog etc!" Diane left Pan Am 5 years ago when the Dulles base was closed and has been busy with the Junior League since. Mike is field manager with IBM in Reston to give to the Annual Fund. Mary Dietz Brown, Charles, and Cathy (15) have spent the past 10 years in CO. They have been taking full advantage of the wonderful outdoor sports the Rockies offer. Terri Eoff Walsh has been a moving target this summer. Terri, David, baby Nicholas, Andrew, and Heather met both Terri's folks and the chicken pox in Colorado. Once they returned home, Terri moved to larger quarters in Harrisonburg to accommodate her brood. Claudia Forman Ostrander is a VP with Sovran Bank and had a busy civic year as a member of the Board of Directors of the Mortgage Bankers Assn in Metro Washington and chairperson of their 4th Annual Income Property Seminar for 300 attendees. She is now serving as treasurer of the northern VA chapter of the Natl Assn of Industrial & Office parks. May Humphreys Fox acts as Health Care and Legislative consultant for a Richmond law firm. May and Charlie have been building an addition to their house and George (7) is in 2nd grade and Keely (5) enters kindergarten. This summer, the family plans a trip to the Adirondacks and May and Charlie hope to get to France in the fall. She sees Katie McCardell Webb often and keeps in touch with Wallis Wickham in Brookline MA.

Stuart Davenport Simrill urges us all

Our favorite internist, Ann Gateley, is still teaching and practicing medicine at the University of Texas Medical School. Ann says she runs approximately 60 miles a week. Debbie Warren Rommel cheered your progress during the Houston Marathon when you flew past her house. Betty Glass Smith and I enjoyed luncheon in Richmond. Betty is VP of operations at Sovran Bank and Bill is with Virginia Power. After 10 years, Betty has proclaimed her house "finished" for now and sons Ran (4) and Corbin (3) keep them "hoppin'". Schuyler Gott Herbert was elected president of the St. Louis Junior League. A vice president of trust services at Clayton Mercantile National Bank, she was written up in the St. Louis Business Journal for being the first employed head of that city's Junior League. Frances Gravely Frankstone reports that Susan (7.5) and Lee (4.5) are both "happy and healthy. Frances works at Vitri, the family Italian import company, and lawyer husband David is "exploring computers". The Boards of SBC and several other non-profit organizations benefit from Fran Griffith Laserson's talents. Fran reports her life is "punctuated by children's (Tenley (6) and Galen (2.5)) milestones".

Laura Hawkins wrote charging Sweet Briar's computer with hopeless sexism. It seems the micro mind not only acknowledges Laura's marriage to Ray Olivera Brady, but insists that Laura adopt his name. (Ed's note: We will enter your name in the computer any way you want. Unless we're asked to do otherwise, we use married names (eg. Mrs. John Brown) for mailing labels. If you have a preference, be sure to let the Alumnae Office know.)

Joanne Hicks Robblee just moved into her dream house in Springfield VA. Paul is an appellate judge on the Court of Military Review. Clay (13) excels in scouting and hockey while Jessica (9) pursues swimming and gymnastics.

I got a chance to catch up with a tan and vibrant Tricia Hodge Parks at our reunion. Tricia has her own company, Intellisys, whose focal concept is the "Intelligent House" which functions under computer control. Baird Hunter Campbell writes glowingly of life in Annapolis. Bill and Baird are kept on the run by Neal, Clay, and Parker. Family demands have forced Baird to cut down on most of her volunteer activities except for the Jr. League, church and the boys' school.

Once more, Page Kjellstrom has rushed into the breach with wonderful informative tidbits. Adelaide Johnston Skoglund and John are still busy shuttling between Florida and Minnesota. Debbie Jones is living in Springfield PA and is Assoc. Director of Continuing Education for Jefferson Medical College in Phila. Her husband, John Engel, works with the National Board of Medical Examiners. Elsa Jones Forter took the summer off from Addison Gilbert Hospital in Gloucester MA where she is a cardiac ultrasound technician. Alexandra (9) and Roddy (6) have mom to take them swimming and sailing. Chip and Kathy Cummings Catlin and the Forters are godparents and sitters to each others children.

Corbin Kendig Rankin and husband, Tom, celebrate the birth of another son. Both Fran and Page have been able to visit Corbin as they go through Richmond. Dayna Kinnard Shah and her husband will be living in Islamabad, Pakistan for the next several years. Page Kjellstrom continues as Protocol Officer for Chemical Bank in New York. She has been to Berlin on business and Paris on vacation. Stateside, Page checked in with Kathy Barnes Hendricks at St Catherine's reunion.

Barbara LaLance Kelly, fresh from a trip to Va and W. Va reports her daughters, aged 6 and 9, were smitten by Sweet Briar's beauty. Barbara Ann still edits for the NY State Dept of Ed, and Terry is an attorney with the Organized Crime Task Force. Wood Jr (11) and Will (8) are the lucky sons of Cathy Louis Lovell. Cathy laments that the children "would have been better off with a mother of a higher energy level and more intense interest in athletics". Wood has his own real estate company in Atlanta and Cathy, after 10 years of teaching Latin, is pursuing portrait painting.

Susan McGrath Moses and Garnet (14) extolled the virtues of VA Beach in the summer. Susan still works for Prudential Financial Services selling securities. Elizabeth McKee Werlinich is traveling extensively for Estee Lauder International as Senior Marketing Director. Husband Doug is General Manager for Midland Banks' U.S. Operations. Great News! Betty McLemore married Albert Sidney White III on February 1, 1986. Mardane says Al is a CPA and that Betty should have her MBA from William & Mary in December. They are living in Poquoson, VA. Becky Mitchell Keister's first child, Kitty (1.5) joins a household of 4 cats and 2 goldfish. Becky is still hard at work at Johnson Lane, a regional brokerage firm. She manages to keep in touch with Jane Rush Davenport in NYC, Corbin Kendig Rankin, and Molly Woltz Carrison in Greensboro. Emmy Moravec Holt writes from drought-stricken Greenville that all is bustling with Bill, Will, Elizabeth, and Emily. Emmy joins her daughters in Suzuki violin and teaches part-time at a school for children with learning disabilities. Put Mundy Ebinger is director of the Bachelor of Science in Foreign Service Program at Georgetown Univ. Put has made revisions and changes in science, technology, and international affairs programs as well as in regional and comparative studies. She was elected president of Georgetown's chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Charley has received media recognition (Wall St. Journal, New York Times, and CBS News) for his interviews on falling energy prices.

Julia Northrup has been named AVP of 1st Interstate Bank of Washington in the Employee Benefits division of the Trust dept. Julie's 2-day 150 mile bike ride around Puget Sound to benefit MS was "somewhere between hell and fantastic".

Bonnie Palmer McCloskey is pulling up stakes and moving to Aspen, CO, where the family has summered for the last 5 years. She is busy getting Todd (11), David (9), Lauren (5), and Devon (2) enrolled in their new schools. Within 2 weeks she ran into Lucy Lombardi Evans and Kathy Waldrop. Kay Parham Picha is working towards her master's in middle school education at UNC-G. Mandy (10) and Tom (9) keep her busy as Girl Scout leader and violinist in the school band. David is busy with his company, Classic Dyestuffs Inc., in High Point NC. The Pichas took in the 4th of July celebration in NYC and Expo in Vancouver B. C. this summer. Mary Jo Petree Murphy, is involved in the Jr. League as well as mothering Mary Elizabeth (13), Will (11) and Jay (8). Mary Joe is forming a volunteer guild to support Bethabara Park, the oldest Moravian Settlement in NC, and can even engineer an escape to their condo on Kiawah Island. Kate (previously Kathy) Pinner and her husband, Lou Stalworth live in Princeton and produce original plays under the auspices of PinnWorth Productions. Another PinnWorth Production is daughter Jordan Etheredge, almost 2. Kathy Potterfield is busy working in physical therapy and church activities. She had a reunion this summer with friends she met 7 yrs ago with Friendship Force in Germany.

While her oldest were camping in NC, Betty Rau Schewel worked on the 90-yr history of their Synagogue — part of Lynchburg's bicentennial. Betty is also editing SBC Friends of Art newsletter and urges her classmates to support the gallery 1971 had almost 100 alums. husbands and kids for their 15th Reunion; that throws the gauntlet down for our 20th — so start planning! Mardane Rebentisch McLemore writes that she caught the Reunion pregnancy bug and gave birth to Sarah Elizabeth in April. Mardane is vice president of VA's Water Pollution Management Assoc. She supervises 150 employees and is responsible for the operations of 4 of the district's 9 treatment plants.

Kate Schlech's 3-wk China trip this summer got cancelled so she is placating herself with a cruise from London to Amsterdam, Scandinavia and Leningrad. Kate has been in DC with the Dept of Justice for 1.5 years. Spare moments are spent teaching herself the recorder.

Margaret Sharp Howell and husband Bill moved back to their home town, Nashville. Elizabeth Smith and husband, Rob Adams, are off on a vacation to Yugoslavia's Dalmatian Coast, Greece, and Turkey. They live in the DC area where Elizabeth works in banking law and Rob specializes in law relating to Savings and Loans. Lloyd, daughter Lily Hayes, and Pat Swinney Kaufman anxiously await the birth of their next little girl. Modern science took the guess out of the gender but none of the thrill. Pat urges SBC friends to call her when they are in NY since the film festival in France conflicts with SBC reunions.

Look up "peripatetic" in a good dictionary and you should see Sally Taylor's picture. Sally has addresses in several continents and probably one of the more sophisticated message and mail forwarding systems as she keeps up her tour guides of biking and wine as well as her specialty articles. Heather Tully Click has been in Peachtree City, Ga. for 2.5 years. While Amanda (5) and Benjamin (3) are in school, Heather spends several days a month nursing at a Coronary Intensive Care Center. Richard made co-pilot with Eastern and flies fighters in the Air National Guard out of Montgomery ALA.

Debbie Warren Rommel, Ann Gateley's marathon cheerleader, is trying to keep Emily, Andy, and Sadie cool and busy this summer. Ross is totally immersed in his law career. Katy Warren wrote in haste that she had just returned from her dream trip to Japan, China, Hong Kong, Singapore and Thailand. New York's Pierpont Morgan Library boasts of our lady of urbanity, Elizabeth Wilson as its Public Affairs Officer. Suzy Yates

Cahill and Bob are the doting parents of Laura, who turned one in August 1986

Anne Adare Wood did about 8 million dollars in real estate sales in 1985 for her firm, Shannon & Luchs. She bought two new properties of her own and is living in and renovating one — a great little house overlooking the Potomac in DC. She has traveled a lot, as usual (Aspen, St. Thomas, Bahamas, Florida) and has good, frequent visits with her daughter, Kimberlyn

For the first half of this year I spent alternate weeks in Boston working on a special marketing assignment involving optical disc technology. The initial phase completed, I have returned to my original job as Eastern Regional Sales Manager and have a little more time to pursue extracurricular activities. Gil recently left ComputerLand to act as Technical Services Manager for MicroAge in Berwyn PA. Spare time this summer was spent swimming and reading trashy novels by the pool and waging a losing battle with poison ivy for control of the backyard

She and her family are enjoying country life and she plans to visit Jane Frierson in Washington when she needs to get back to civilization. Barbara Ashton Schiller visited in Birmingham, AL this summer. She is busy in Fritch, TX, with her two boys (2 and 5) and church activities. Husband Scott works for Phillips Petroleum, in safety. A year ago, they got together with Nancy Lea Houghton, Hoot and family. Betsy Banks Daley moved into her first home in Berkeley Hills, CA, complete with deer, owls and a eucalyptus grove. She's teaching creative movement to about 100 children in a program run by Mary Joyce. Her consulting business is blossoming and she's still in business school but takes time out to play music. Betsy Biggar Hellmuth and Janie Reeb Chadwick are still running their clothing business and Janie has added reasonably priced jewelry to it. Four times a year, while Betsy's two eldest are in school, they turn the first floor of Betsy's house into a specialty boutique for moms and daughters

Lisa Blakely Martin's oldest son, Tony, started high school this year and Chris, the youngest, is in 2nd grade. Husband, Don, is a home-builder in Greenville, SC. Lisa teaches aerobics 2-3 times a week and Don is trying to interest her in running the NYC Marathon. Sally Brice-O'Hara was promoted to Lieutenant Commander in the Coast Guard and expects a transfer from Cape May, NJ in 1987. Her sons, 4 and 2, keep her busy but she's finding time for arts, crafts and jogging. Anita Brosius Sisk, Robert and daughter, Maria, have moved to Pittsburgh PA and love it. Robert works with Westinghouse and studies at Carnegie-Mellon. Lucy Bryan Ballard and Bob have a new house, 5 blocks from the beach at Virginia Beach. They're enjoying bike rides and trips to Duck, NC, and Hatteras and are in the market for a Chesapeake Bay retriever. Mary Lee Burch Weil is teaching French at Newark Central School in Geneva, NY. She won a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to participate in a summer French institute at SUNY-Potsdam. Her son, Grant, 4, is doing well in SBC 66'er Meredith Moodie's school. "The Children's Hours." Mary Bush Norwood, Felton, and two daughters, Palmer, 17 and Dorsey, 15, had a great week in Paris and Brussels in March. Mary is still in media brokerage in Atlanta and is president of the National Association of Media Brokers. Jean Cartwright Dickson and her family are in Waco, Tx, where Jean is a "retired" dental hygienist and husband David is a real estate attorney. They have a son, Austin, 6 1/2, and a new baby, Annelisa, born in May '86. Wendy Cherry and husband, Ted, had a lovely trip to St. Bartholomey and Wendy was able to make herself understood. This spring, Wendy's brokerage firm sent the two to Switzerland. Robin Christian Ryan, Jerry and the boys are moving into a new house in Flourtown, PA, "a lovely, old, typical Pennsylvania fieldstone house with lots of work and lots of charm". A Mormon au pair will live with them next year and Robin will become a product manager for letters of credit and international trade products at the Philadelphia National Bank

Bonnie Chronowski Brophy's big news from Summit, NJ, is the birth of Meghan Teresa on April 13. A miniature schnauzer has also arrived on the scene and Chris, 8, has named him "Giddings". In Washington, Sally Clary has been named vice president of corporate affairs for the Home Owners Warranty Corporation, the largest new home builder warranty and insurance program in America. Pam Cogghill still loves her Wall St. job with Mabon, Nugent and Co. in

NYC. She had a couple of great trips to London, Bermuda and the Bonaventura Spa in Florida. Over the 4th of July, Pam, Sue Castle Rolewick, and Maureen Hynes Binder got together. I missed a call from Alice Cohn but her mother tells me she has her own thoroughbred farm, complete with former SBC co-workers, in Folsom, LA. Jean Conner Churchill is doing adoption home studies for infertile couples via the Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Arlington, VA. Blair Converse Bentall will move back to Los Angeles this year from Scotland, where she has been running a theatrical agency in Edinburgh. She has been living in bonny Scotland since her marriage in London in Jan '83. Cindy Craighill Archer has moved to Washington, DC. Wanda Cronic is in charge of advertising and public relations for Cronic Chevrolet-Pontiac-Nissan in Griffin, GA. She is active in aerobics and the American Businesswomen's Association for which she coordinated a spring fashion show fund-raiser. Colleen Dee Butterick and Merle now have 4 Domino's Pizza Stores in Southern Wisconsin and expect to have a couple more open before the end of the year. Colleen worked with the parent corporation for a year. She and Merle have bought a 6 bedroom house on 10 acres; if anyone has a humane solution for gophers and groundhogs, let them know! Mitch Dore is doing great in AZ, selling her jewelry designs and planning large environmental pieces with local architects. She's looking for a warehouse in Tucson; to be a blacksmith and sculptor is her "true desire". In Lake Forest, IL, Laurie Epstein raises funds for her old school, Ferry Hall and is still with Grayslake Gelatin Co. Also in Lake Forest, Karen Fennell Holly started a business; she's designing children's wear under the name, "Banbury Cross" and has showings in NY and Chicago. Daughter, Meghan, is 3

Mary Foster Strickland and John have a 2 year-old daughter, Mary Kathryn. They live in Kennesaw, GA, where Mary teaches severely emotionally disturbed children. In Salinas, CA, Andria Francis Haruda has "retired" from CTB/McGraw-Hill to spend time with 13-month-old Ashleigh. She's doing part-time consulting for a local publisher and helping Fred to write an application for a grant to do research on seizure patients and their medications. They are enjoying restoring a '64 Jaguar. Emory Furniss Maxwell, Charles, Furniss and Christianne moved into a new home in Annapolis, MD in Jan '86. In May, they took part in Coca-Cola's 100th birthday celebration (Charles's employer) and then went sailing on the bay for a week. They enjoyed seeing Edie McRee Whiteman and Jane Hutchinson Frierson recently. Lee Gamble Peralta-Ramos is working as an architect/interior designer with her own firm in Cody, Wyoming.

She has two daughters, Lindsey, 8 and Ashley, 1 1/2, and is raising miniature burros on the side ("the perfect children's pet"). Debbie Griffin Tanner and family are still in Newport News. Mary Shaw Halsey was married in Dec. '85 to Robert Evan Marks, a vice president of Carl Marks and Co. in NY

Debbie Hart Eiserle, Dave, Jeannie, 5 and David, 2, visited family and friends in Ohio, Indiana and Tennessee. Dave is completing his MBA from Regina, Saskatchewan. Mimi Hill Wilk keeps up with SBC friends on the telephone. She highly recommends Canada for vacations, especially Lake Diefenbaker where they keep their houseboat. Paula J. Hollingsworth-Thomas and Steve have been married for 7 years and have 2 children, Charles, 4, and Lillian Elise, 1. They spent a long time and had many problems in renovating their house. Paula is still a litigation paralegal with Sun Exploration and Production Co. and Steve was promoted to Court Services Director of Dallas County. Paula is president of the Kaufman Garden Club and Steve is an Elder and Sunday School teacher in the Presbyterian Church. After teaching handicapped preschoolers for 11 years, Debbie Hooker Sauer is staying home with her new family. She and Gary adopted Brett Joseph in February when he was 6 weeks old. She also expects the birth of a second child in October. Jane Hutchinson Frierson moved to Arlington, VA with her son Lawrence, 4. She's designing data bases for the Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command. She's been seeing a lot of old buddies Elizabeth Watts, Sally Clary, Beverly Crispin Heffernan '75 Libby Whitley '75 and Emory Furniss Maxwell. Laura Hutchinson Thompson bought a "fixer-upper" in Montgomery, AL and is in the process of renovation, packing and moving with the help of Laura Hails, 3, and Hudson, 9 mos. She's no longer "gainfully employed" and loves it. Sarah Johnston Knoblauch and Michael celebrated the arrival of Kelly McKee in May. Sarah continues to give art classes in her home studio while Michael transforms their colonial into an expanded saltbox — he's doing all the carpentry himself. Kathy Kavanagh is still enjoying Baltimore and her job at the Walters Art Gallery. She's also a partner in the Franklin Group, a firm of consultants to nonprofit organizations. Linda Kemp visited London last November. She is looking forward to Nancy Mortensen's wedding in October.

Penny Lagakos Turak and George have opened their gallery at 1721 Spruce Street in Philadelphia. They will specialize in 19th and early 20th century American and European paintings. Mary Landon Barkley has her own fitness TV show on the Texas NBC affiliate, KCEN-TV. She is expanding her aerobics program all over the U.S. from Hewitt, TX and invites SBC'ers to teach and run their own business. Alethea Lee does abstract painting and needlepoint in Ossining, NY and also does creative work with children. Missy Leib Veghte and Bob are still working on their house in Salem, NJ. Missy loves having her son, Rox, 6, in her first-grade gym class. Eleanor Magruder Harris and her two boys, 7 and 3, visited Mary Lee Burch Weil and Grant, 4. Jeannie Manning Schmidley, James, and Max, 3, announce the arrival of William Manning Schmidley on January 29, '86. They are all enjoying Cleveland where Jeannie practices law two days per week and stays active with the Junior League. Marilyn Marshall Livingston and Bill are moving into a new house in Falls Church, VA in October and expect their third child at the end of the year. Lisa Martin Ferguson is a licensed speech pathologist at the Intercommunity Medical Center in Covina, CA. Husband Jim is a family physician in Glendora. They are on a ranch with all the amenities — horses, coyotes, cactus, deer and rattlesnakes, yet they are only 30 minutes from the beach or LA!

Ann Stuart McKie Kling and Bill (married September 6) are in Dallas where Ann is the toy buyer at Neiman-Marcus. Cindy Sutherland and Robin Singleton Cloyd, SBC '75, were bridesmaids. Ann and Bill (originally from Indianapolis) met on a blind date through Ann's aerobics instructor.

Eddie McRea Whiteman and Mac love Richmond, VA, in August they moved to a new home south of the James River with lots of woods and space for Jamie, 4, to play. They expect a second child at Christmas. Mac has a new job at the Sovran Bank. Eddie had a successful lobbying effort in the VA General Assembly for a 43% increase in state funding for museums. Tana Meier Parselili spent a full year volunteering at son, Dan's elementary school and daughter, Dana's nursery school in Glastonbury, CT. She also developed a brochure for their old restaurant in its new location — "Frank's at City Place" in Hartford.

Barbara Jane Moore is still a psychologist with Texas Christian University and is in private practice in Fort Worth. Nancy Mortensen and Christopher Piper were married in October, '86. Sharon Mangus and Linda Kemp were there. Nancy is still working for the committees on Small Business for the U.S. House. Gini Nolte Rude and Dean now have three sons, Chase, 8, Mark, 5, and John, 1. Dean was recently promoted to the general office of the Montana Power Company as senior auditor, moving the family from Butte to Lewiston, MT. Gini is an "alumnae representative" for Sweet Briar — she represents the College, visiting with prospective students. The work brings back many good memories. Jane Piper bought a house in Nov. '85 and is busy with it all the time; Sherrie McLeRoy came to St. Louis to advise her. Jane's '85 travel schedule included London, Switzerland, Munich and Vienna. In May '86 she went to her cousin's wedding in Stockholm, then on to England in July to meet Prince Charles at the American Museum in Britain. Doug received a promotion in sales with the Linde Division of Union Carbide, so he and I. Ellie Plowden Boyd (your secretary) moved from our home of 12 weeks in Birmingham, AL to West Bloomfield, MI. We hope to move into our second home this year around Halloween. Our baby boy, Clayton Robert Boyd, was born on Sept. 13. Detroit alums (I got a list from the Alumnae Office) like Kathy Telfer Johnson, Judy O'Keefe Vindici '73 and Patsy Robinson '49 helped us to settle in, find doctors, residential areas etc. I'm looking forward to continuing my jewelry business as soon as we settle into our "colonial". Melanie Porter Sons and Larry's first baby, Alexander Thomas, was born Nov. 13, '85. Melanie has retired from her advertising job with the Horchow Collection to raise and enjoy him; she's also remodeling a newly purchased house in Carrollton, TX. Fuzzy Pownall Billings, in Bethesda, MD is expecting her fourth child in Nov. '86. Eric, 5, and the twins, Tommy and Scotty, 3, make her life "much too peaceful"! Janie Reeb Chadwick and Betsy Bigar Hellmuth rendezvoused in LA recently to "do" Rodeo Drive and search for the stars in the Polo Lounge. As they were leaving their hotel, Tom Selleck was checking in! They did have fun visiting Cottie Matheson Wallace and little Will. Janie also skied in Aspen in March and hopes to visit England.

Mary Ann Reese Rosenberg is redecorating their house, with the help of a decorator. Rebecca is in the terrible twos. Bern has been named director of a new psychiatric hospital being built in Houston. Jan Renne opened her own interior design firm in Costa Mesa, CA in March and is doing a lot of restaurant interiors. She is also a critic, appearing regularly on a radio show and writing for a local magazine. She hopes to get a master's degree next year if she has time. She's working out every day and vacationed at a spa in Tucson, AZ. Checka Robbin Delle, in Hempstead, NY, is enjoying Paul, 5 and Jaclyn, 3. She's minding the shop (their deli) while Paul goes to law school.

"Trying to be a working mother is...difficult, especially when chicken pox and measles hit..." reports Claire Sandifer Tuttle from Paris, France. Claire had several weeks vacation in southwest France and hopes to return to the States next summer with Jean-Philippe, 1 and Solange, 3. Colleen Shannon Robertson and Dwight are in the process of moving from Charleston, SC to Boca Raton, FL, where Dwight will be medical director of Healthwing, a new HMO. Julie Shuer and husband Steve Davis were in Washington, DC in March and had lunch with Wendy White. Julie and Steve just bought and renovated a 60-year-old Spanish style house in Beverly Hills, CA. Winton Smoot Holladay had her fourth child, a son, Addison, in Oct. '85. She now has two girls, 7 and 5, and 2 boys, 3 and 8 mos. Her spare moments are devoted to the National Museum of Women in the Arts, founded by her mother-in-law, which is due to open Spring '87. The museum, international in scope, spans four centuries of art by women artists. Sherrie Snead McLeRoy became the director of the Sherman Historical Museum in Feb. '86. She's writing a how-to book for the Sherman Preservation League and has an article coming out in Texas Highways. Husband Bill is director of development for Austin College, his alma mater. In Kansas City, MO, Cindy Sorenson Sutherland is active in the "Sanctuary" movement, giving shelter to refugees from repressive regimes in Central America. She is also working with the Mid-America Anti-Nuclear Coalition, Mothers March for Peace and other organizations.

Anya Starosolska is no longer a Swiss Miss in the Alps but has returned to the Big Apple and lives next to none other than Richard Wolfram, a refugee from the SBC Jr Year in France of 72-73. Sandra Stella Horwege is completing her second year as president of the Sweet Briar-Amherst SBC Alumnae Club, and is working hard with Cub Scouts, Brownies and Daisy Scouts. She is still Art Slide Curator at Sweet Briar.

Susan Stephens Geyer, in Dallas, faced a crisis this year involving her third child, Edward, 2. On May 20, Edward, who was to stay with the housekeeper while Susan drove Stewart, 4 and Julia, 3 1/2, to preschool, slipped through a gate left open by the other children and accidentally ran behind the car as Susan was backing out. He sustained a broken pelvis as the wheel rolled over his legs and chest. He wore a body cast for 5 weeks and is now walking, running, jumping and swimming. To see him, you would never know what he, and his family, faced. The class extends sympathy and love to you and your family, Susan.

Jesse Stewart is still manager of professional staffing for the Construction Products Division of W.R. Grace Co. in Boston. Send her your resumes. In Atlanta, Susan Stubbs Brown is busy with her kids and her sister's bid for the state senate (DeKalb County seat). Susan and Michael had a week in Bermuda and visited Lee and Charles Warren in August. Sandy Taylor Craighead is busy in Richmond with the SB Alumnae Club and the Banking and Investment group. The rest of her time is spent working in the yard — "great exercise". Kathy Telfer Johnson, in Ann Arbor, MI, spends most of her time with "terribly two" Courtney Elizabeth and substitute teaches at the Montessori School. She and Tom are perpetually busy with renovating of their home just in time to think about selling (Tom is in residential construction). Kathy plans to visit Mac Cuthbert Langley '73 in Charleston, SC, and, as soon as things settle down with us, Kathy and I plan to meet for lunch. Connie Terhune is "living a happy, uncomplicated life on Cape Cod". Liz Thomas Camp and Jack hosted a Labor Day '85 party for Mary Witt who liked Georgia so much she decided to stay. On Nov. 11, '85, Sophie Rose Camp was born. Liz sent me a picture of her in her 1883 christening gown and 1899 cap. The Camps made the Newman Times-Herald when their house, the William Leonard Crowder home built by Jack's maternal grandfather, was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in March '86. Liz is still in charge of Congressman Newt Gingrich's HQ in Georgia. She enjoyed seeing Mary Bush Norwood, Rossie Ray Spell, and Lee Addison '73 at a meeting of the Atlanta SBC Bulb Club.

Boy, it's great to hear from 3rd floor Reedities! Joyce Thompson Miller, Plainfield, NJ, promises to send a detailed account of her life to all interested parties. Meredith Thompson just returned to Houston from a trip abroad to collect ideas and objects d'art for her new interior design business, "Country French Accents." She produced two public service announcements for local TV, one on "The Children's Museum" and the other on "Latchkey Children". She is preparing for next year's Junior League Charity Ball by taking a course in musical theatre and is working for Governor Bill Clements. Meredith, who never sleeps, also served as treasurer for the SBC Houston Alumnae Club. Cary Thorp Brown, Tracy and Ben are in New Rochelle, NY. Cary finished design course work at Parsons and is contemplating motherhood again. Doyle Dane Bernbach, the advertising firm where Helen Travis works, merged with Needham, Harper and BBD & O to become, for two weeks, the largest advertising agency. Then Saatchi & Saatchi added Ted Bates to its acquisitions and now Helen's firm is #2. Gabriella Urbanowitz Wehl cruised the Caribbean with her husband for a week on the SS Norway after sustaining renovations of a home they bought in Huntsville, AL. Cheryl Viar Upchurch, Sam and their three daughters moved into the house Sam grew up in, in Birmingham, AL. Sam is now general counsel for Torchmark Corporation. When Cheryl takes a breather from motherhood, she does volunteer work and plays tennis. Cathy Weiss Thompson now has two girls, Leah, 1, and Suzanne, 2 1/2. They're enjoying their farm and the independence of having their own business, "Print Shack," which is steadily building in Winchester, VA.

Cathy saw Pam Hughes in Front Royal, VA recently. Lee Wilkinson Warren has reached the stage of motherhood where she's in the car more than out. Cain is in 4th grade and Paige kindergarten. Lee is taking piano and organ lessons, teaching piano, managing her own cosmetics business from her home, and golfing. She and Charles went to Jamaica on a Va. State Bar trip and she had a reunion with Ruthie Willingham Lentz and Robin Ryan in Philadelphia. Ruthie has switched from selling computers to stocks at J. C. Bradford. David is fine and Ruthie really enjoyed the May Day weekend in Philly with Lee and Robin, while visiting her aunt, Ruth Preucel '49. Wendy White is still practicing law in Washington and is on the verge of moving into a palatial mansion in the city. Mary Witt is now in private practice in pediatric endocrinology and diabetology in the new diabetes unit at Scottish Rite Children's Hospital in Dunwoody, Ga. She also just moved into a beautiful new condo in that area.

Your devoted secretary, Ellie Plowden Boyd, has enjoyed compiling these notes. Wish us luck in raising a Yankee baby!

I was amazed at our geographical distributions so have organized the '78ers by states

Alabama: Dru Springer Oswald admits that while son Harris, almost 3, and new daughter Haden, her choral group, and tennis are fun, life is hot and humid on the Gulf Coast.

Nancy Robinson Linberg lives in Fosters, near Tuscaloosa and writes that her big news is her new son and finishing year #2 of medical school. She'll be doing year #3 now at U. of Al at Birmingham

Helen Bauer Bruckmann is kept busy in Mobile by 16-month-old Meg and Ronnie, but still plays tennis and tutors a few hours a week

Arizona: Carol Baugh is starting her masters in international management at Thunderbird. She has just left Atlanta where she was a senior copywriter/account executive for an advertising agency.

California: Lee Carollo Pforsich

writes that she is still teaching high school chemistry in San Jose and this summer has "quite a change of pace" working as a materials engineer with Westinghouse's Marine Division. Her son is now 4. (Ed's note: For news of Lee's winning Sweet Briar's Gager Award in Chemistry, see the Notices section in this issue.) Tricia Mason is in LA working for the Italian Trade Commission. She'll be off to Europe in the fall and will hook up with Nanette Cooper. Also in LA is Susan Negaard Mendel who is division purchasing manager for Baxter Travenol Laboratories. She also does a lot of traveling for her job and has a trip planned to Hong Kong this summer. In San Diego, Elinor Humphrey Comer is still with San Diego Trust and Savings Bank in investments. She writes that sister Ellen's two daughters "are growing like weeds." Yet another '78er in LA is Mary Moore Garrison. She and her husband honeymooned in Europe and since then Mary has an ESL teaching job, with adults from at least 12 different countries around the world. On the side, she is pursuing a writing career. Her husband is a writer and is both (her) inspiration and (her) devil's advocate. Hunter Davis writes from the Bay Area where she's just recorded her third record: this one with Redwood Records is called Harmony; it is available nationally and she's touring nationally as well

Jane Lauderdale Armstrong is still with Sprint, as an advertising manager in San Francisco. Liz Maynard Hoyt was married in March and then moved immediately to LA where she is working in the admissions office of the Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising

Colorado: Two responses from Denver reported that Laura Farmer Gebhardt has a 4-year-old son who is already riding horses. She is with Richmond Homes/MDC Holdings and training her horse while her husband is writing songs and hoping for a recording contract. Carol Cordell Mullins graduated from U. of OK Law School May 10 and married Keith Mullins May 17. Keith is in banking while completing a masters of law in taxation at U. of Denver law school. Carol's new toy is cross-country skis.

Connecticut: Ieka Osinga Scully and her husband Mark have a new house in Simbury. She admits it needs cosmetic work. She is working full-time on her MBA at U. of Hartford, and reports the yoghurt business is still going strong under her brother's care!

District of Columbia: Barbara Mendelsohn Price writes she is going on year #6 at Wang on the State Dept. account. Jana Koubeck is looking forward to two years of graduate studies at the U. of NM for her Ph.D. in Anthropology. She plans to return to DC to her new house and pool. Lots of '78ers mentioned Cecie Garcia-Tunon Lear's wedding and Barbara Mendelsohn Price's delicious lunch for the gang from out of town. Leigh Ramsey is also reported as hiding out in the Nation's Capital.

Florida: Barbara Mitchell Polizos is in Daytona Beach. Her daughter is 7 and son 3 and she is doing work for her Greek Church and community affairs as well as her husband's restaurant supply business. In Miami, Leslie Anderson Battle is enjoying 9-month-old daughter Bailey, while Maggie Laurent, in Jacksonville, is enjoying being the programmer for the Florida Medical Association as well as being mother of almost 3-year old Meg. Anne Baldwin Mann and her husband and daughter also live in Jacksonville. Dana Dotten just finished three years of flying Navy EC-130's on Communications missions in the Atlantic. She will be a Naval Science Instructor, teaching sea and air navigation and pursuing a masters in Jacksonville. In Orlando/Winter Park Catherine Taylor Moore is employed by Sun Bank as a Loan review officer and plans to start her MBA work at night. Catherine saw Liz Day Dalrymple and husband Chris recently at Sea Island. Virginia Craig works for Brown Brothers Harriman in Naples.

Georgia: Anne Jarrell Berry has a new son and a daughter, 2 1/2, in Newnan where she and her husband are building a new house. Peggy Stryker Horne reports about son 3 1/2 and daughter 9 mos and her work part-time as a manager for a women's boutique in Atlanta. Also in Atlanta is Ann Yauger who claims 4 1/2 years with AT & T's authorized computer dealers. She travels and trains a lot and manages to see lots of SBC'ers on the way, such as, Libby Freeman Goetz, Jane Lauderdale Armstrong and Claire Cartwright Vaughn. It is reported that Janet Smalley Todd and her husband live in Atlanta too

Illinois: Karen Kuhlman is still working as a compliance examiner for the National Assoc. of Securities Dealers. She's riding and competing in horse shows and reports a depressing increase in her shoe size!! Anne Riordan recently moved to Chicago to work at the U.S. Bankruptcy Court. She sees Eve Baskowitz a lot.

Louisiana: Mimi Borst Quillman writes from the New Orleans area: she and her husband will be back East in January with son Travis, now in his "terrible twos". She saw Meg Richards Wiederseim and Mary Goodwin Gamber on a recent trip to Philadelphia.

Massachusetts: Leigh McDonald Forrester is scheduled for #1 child in August, having just moved to Concord, after husband John's graduation from Harvard Business School. She'll be on 'leave' from her account executive position at Garber Travel in Boston for a while

Maine: Mary Nash Massey and her husband have been living in the mid-coast town of Camden for the past 6 years and have recently been joined by daughter Leigh Whitney Maryland: In Baltimore (but California-bound) is Deb Davison Weidner, expecting #2 in August. She says she's pool floating and waddling around the tennis court as well as chasing her son Bo (2)

Missouri: Reports from St. Louis include: Cathy Mellow Goltermann who flies with the friendly skies of TWA coast to coast and to Europe. She and her husband have a new house and are in search of a chocolate lab puppy. Dudie Hiemenz DiLeo has a two-year-old son, with #2 due in September. She sees Anne Key Lucas who is vice president, inventory control, for Knight's Ltd. Anne sent one of her terrific catalogues...we should all be on the list. Becky Mulvihill McKenna's oldest daughter is 2 1/2 and younger daughter is 6 months. She and her husband bought a big, old house last year which requires as much care as their girls and they are planning to finish their Ph.Ds in Marriage and Family Therapy at St. Louis U., taking their comps together in October. Somehow Becky finds time to be in a part-time private therapy practice.

North Carolina: Newlywed Lu Litton Churchill writes from Valdese. She is employed as the director of marketing for children's products at Alba Waldensan, Inc. and now has three stepchildren. Lots of '78ers gathered for Lu's wedding including Jean Beard Bardon, Annie Stelle Sadler, Elizabeth Perkinson, Julia Sutherland, Sue Griste, Cecie Garcia-Tunon Lear, Ann Maricle Stefano, Janet Smalley Todd and Becky Dane! Hope a picture was taken of that gang! Karen Lemon Hassett writes from Southern Pines that she and her husband and daughter are doing well, as is their restaurant and 11 franchises. She is expecting #2 in February. She reports that sister Carol lives 1/2 mile away and is enjoying her three children. From Pinehurst Liz Day Dalrymple writes, as our most recent bride, and mentions that Maria Rixey Gamber, Eve Jackson London, Robin Jones Eddy and Mari Monahan were at the wedding. Elizabeth Perkinson is still in Winston-Salem working as the business manager of Piedmont Craftsman, a non-profit craft guild. She says the job encompasses everything from keeping the books to selling in the shop and gallery. She's also working at a Battered Women's Shelter and with the Children's Theater. Kathy Jackson Howe has returned to Charlotte since husband Root has finished his general surgery. He is now into cardio-vascular work and "Jackson" keeps up with her two active children. Audrey Townsend is managing a backpacking and windsurfing shop in Chapel Hill and lives in the country in a log cabin on 10 acres

Stewart — SBC Class of '08 (!). She mentioned seeing Allison Egbert also

New York: Barbara Behrens Peck and husband have recently moved from Seattle to Tuckahoe, where Barbara is freelancing, working on the Fall Fashion supplement to the NY Times Magazine, as well as a new Martha Smith book on weddings. In "The City" is Mari Monahan who has a new job which she loves in the Drexel, Burnham, Lambert Taxable Fixed Income Sales and Trading Program! She is also training for the NYC Marathon on 11/2/86. So we can all look for her on TV as well as Monica Shaffer who is also planning to run the NYC Marathon. She is senior vice president of Biederman and Company Advertising Agency and reports seeing Martha Glover Perry in NYC. Diane Wiese wrote from Long Island on her summer off". She is recently returned from a Hollywood premiere in which her brother starred. Diane brags she is now an aunt thanks to sister Kim Wiese Smith '77. Lisanne Purvis wrote that she is an associate attorney with Pollner, Mezan, Stalberg and Fuchtmann in NYC, but is also an assistant producer for a documentary on the Wilma Theater in Philadelphia and manages to sing at some nightclubs and cabarets occasionally.

Ohio: Katherine Powell Heller married a year ago, and Lenore Cox was the maid of honor. Her husband is now a 4th year resident in Orthopaedic surgery at University Hospitals of Cleveland. Meanwhile Katherine is managing the medical illustration division of CWRU School of Medicine. From Columbus Cindy McKay confesses three job changes in one year, but all within Community Life Insurance Co. Currently she is the director of Flexible Benefits. She did meet her husband-to-be, a free-lance photographer, at work, as he was doing photos for her annual report. Also Muffy Hamilton Parsons is reported as being alive, well and married in Columbus. In Cleveland, Julie Plautz Bodenstab is enjoying her sons who are aged 3 1/2 and 6 mos

Pennsylvania: Betsy Hurley is a communications director for United Way and yet can give time to sailing lessons and the Jr. League. Word has it that Karen Bowers Lazar is still happily running her car dealership in Chester, PA. As for your correspondent here I am still teaching 5th grade and coaching Varsity Field Hockey and Lacrosse. This year I took on Admissions for the Middle School. "The trip" for this year found Win and me escorting my 18 Varsity Lacrosse players around Bermuda for 10 days. We still do our crazy student ski weekends in Vermont as well as the family's summer camp. I finished my masters finally and am now trying motherhood — due in early October folks! (Ed's Note: Cannie's baby girl, Francie was born Sept. 26) wrote a while ago of her annual southern swing down the coast. She noted seeing Mary Goodwin who has married Billy Gamper, making Mary and Maria Rixey Gamper sisters-in-law!

South Carolina: Suzanne Collins reports from Greenville that business is "incredible", complete with a NYC showroom and new Dallas and Florida representatives! Mable John Stair's wedding announcement stated that she owns a hunt riding school on John's Island.

Tennessee: Anne Taylor Quarles Beveridge is starting work in the Fall on a M.Ed. at Peabody College while she does some graphics work and writing on the side. Both of her daughters are doing well

Texas: Suzanne Stryker Ulrich is lost somewhere crossing the country in her move from Nevada to Houston (Ed's Note: The Ulrichs reached Texas safely.) Michelle Tarride Frazier is also in Houston where she teaches voice. Anne Simonds Lowe, in Dallas, is the subscription manager for The Beckett Monthly — a baseball card magazine. She also teaches jr. high girls in Sunday School, while her husband is the finance committee chairman at their church. He is working on his MBA. Lucy Darby Cole, also in Dallas, is currently interviewing for a consumer product marketing job. She says there is a great SBC alum group in town that makes up for the weather. Claire Cartwright Vaughn and husband George are trying to finish up a ranch camp house as they await the arrival of #1 child around Christmas. Melanie Bowen Steglich has just moved to Temple where her husband Lee, a recent Baylor College of Dentistry graduate, is a resident. They had a great trip to Ixtapa, Mexico after Lee's state boards! Hallie Powell Horton and husband Wilmot have also been to Mexico recently for a deep sea fishing trip...only Wilmot caught fish. Mavis Ray Griffith is "sizzling through a Texas summer" in Austin, awaiting baby #2. Lisa Wray Longino has had great visits to their lake house in Georgia, and a trip to the California wine country. She and Ellen Sellers McDowell '77 will be the Dallas SBC Club co-Presidents next year!

Virginia: Our largest group (known!) hails from Virginia. Edie Baird writes from Great Falls that she is working in loan operations at a bank. She is also volunteering at the N.V.A Chapter of the Archeological Society of VA, and was planning to attend field school this summer. In Richmond, Cathy Finley Onder is working part-time as a paralegal for McGuire, Woods and Battle, as well as being a mother to 1-year-old son Sean. Julia Sutherland is coordinator of public information and a board member training for Virginia's Dept. of Health Regulatory Board. She is a member of the Va State Library Board and works on the Richmond Alumnae Resources Program...never a dull moment. In Vienna. Michelle Youree Hostler took some time off this summer from her stock brokerage job to work with her horses and help coordinate activities with The Fairfax Hunt. She's also discovered a new interest in gardening. Ann Mari-cle Stefano writes of her new town house in Old Town Alexandria, that she and her husband are fixing up. She is still a sales representative for Sharp Electronics. She is also planning on attending Susie Heitmiller's wedding in the fall. Janet Rakoczy Hudson is also living in a townhouse in Alexandria. She is the vice president and secretary for Growth Stock Outlook Trust, Inc., a closed-end investment company. This job took her to Hawaii and Switzerland recently, and her husband was able to get leave from the Army to go on the trips too. She mentioned seeing Paula Brown often. Juliana Frosch Smart has moved to Amherst, where she does projects with the Amherst County School System and enjoys her two daughters, who are 8 and 5. Debbie Snead Shrader works at SBC while her husband is practicing law and doing well in the area. She says their plan is "early retirement". Betsy Wood writes from Charlottesville that she is still loving teaching hearing-impaired preschoolers and is still trying to become proficient in sign language. She did see Susan Negaard Mendel this spring on a trip to LA. From Williamsburg, Cindy Whitley informs us that she and her dog are off to William and Mary this fall to get an MBA. Marybeth Lipinski McAdoo is a billing supervisor at Hogan and Hartson in DC and has a condo in Arlington. However, she enjoys getting away to her "leased house" in Vienna, VA. She rides with Liz Williams and sees Sue King at horse shows

Washington: Katie Renaud Baldwin is still in Seattle teaching preschool, tutoring and taking classes, as well as producing Amanda Renaud Baldwin this June

West Virginia: Carey Johnson Fleming reports living in Parkersburg and working as a trust officer at United National Bank. Her son is 20 months old and is wearing a size 4T already. She mentioned getting a fun visit from Paula Brown and Marybeth Lipinski.

Internationals: Donna Mihalik Gelagotis wrote that she and her husband, Alex, live in Athens, Greece where she teaches English. Alex runs a landscaping business and they leave their apartment, which has a great view of the mountains and the sea, only to travel around and enjoy the islands. Nanette Cooper is living in Paris, France. Gerlind Elizabeth Younts lives in Moscow, USSR working as Assistant Bureau Chief for the Cable News network. Carolyn Ennis Taher lives in Egypt and has a new daughter named Sara

Jennifer Hebb LaRose (Mrs. Keith Glenn), 35 Uplands Drive, West Hartford, CT 06107

By December, I will have finished my international M.B.A. at The American Graduate School of International Management (Thunderbird) in Arizona. There are three other SBCer's on campus, including classmate Consuelo Michelle Martinez, who graduated in August, and Kirsten Vold (84). Consuelo and I live in the same complex and have only now found the time to get together because of the work and the pace of school. The last two weeks of August, I will be going to Melbourne, Australia to do some interviews for jobs and then I will move there in February. In addition, I will be interviewing here for jobs in the food/consumer products area when I return next summer. Unfortunately, I will be overseas for our fifth Reunion and I am sorry to have to relinquish my post as Secretary. It has been a wonderful way to keep in touch with everyone.

Catherine Adams works at the Hershey Medical Center as a research technician. She has a brand new three-year old thoroughbred that she has been training and showing. This summer, she visited the West Coast, including EXPO in Vancouver. B.C

Dansie Allen is in Boulder, Col and is now a full-time student at the Colorado Institute of Art in Denver. She is studying Interior Design.

Debra Autry Bock and husband David are the parents of an 8-month-old son, Adam. They are living near Dallas, TX where David is a police officer for one of the suburbs and Debbie is a full-time mother. Their address is 3500 Riverview Dr., Corinth, TX 76205

Angela Averett Rock is still handling Personnel for Browder, Russell in Richmond, VA and loving it. She says the married life agrees with her and sees other SBC friends in Richmond. Bobbie Serano Black (83), Patee White (83), Helen Masters Durham (81) and Alice Dixon

Holly Bates is currently living in Atlanta, GA and is vice president of Bates Associates, a public relations/public affairs agency.

Betsy Bell Liles is working as a group travel agent and living in Mt Pleasant, NC. She, Salley Davis Daniels and Kathy Reynolds Barsness were at the wedding of Jennifer Hebb in June.

Mary Ames Booker is finishing at the University of Delaware with a Masters in History. She spent the summer working for the state historical society in Dover.

Brianna Boswell Brown and her husband have just bought a house in Dallas. She enjoyed the Third Annual Alumnae Sports Weekend in May and said the Class of 1982 had the best turnout!

Cynthia Bottoms McLaughlin and husband Dan have moved to 431 Hancock Place, Morganville, NJ 07751. Cynthia is a consumer analyst for the Federal Home Loan Bank of New York.

Wendy Brunell-Plenge and husband Steve are expecting their first baby this November. Wendy is very active in the Alumni Club, and was the Southern Californian SBC Bulb Chairman. She has resigned from her job as Assistant to the Editor of California Magazine to remodel their home and do some traveling before the new baby arrives. Wendy keeps in touch with Gay Kenny who is living in Brentwood and is the secretary for the Alumni Club. Gay is assistant sales rep. for News America Publishing, and works on a screenplay in her free time. Robert is still in the picture. Gay is enjoying the company of Beth Halsted and Quinne Fokes — though Quinne is moving to SF.

Ethel Burwell is living in Fairfax at a new address: 3052 Southern Elms Court, Fairfax, VA 22031. Ethel is working full-time for Young Life in high school ministry. She spent August working in upstate New York.

Margaret Camblos Carey is a marketing account executive with the Health America Corp. She and her husband now live at 3110 Bransford Rd, Augusta, GA 30909.

Virginia Carabelli and Roberta Perillo are working hard with their company, Monticello Mountain Wine Imports, Ltd and will be moving operations to Boston, MA in July.

Dorinda Davis is heading south after four years in NYC. She said she may be interested in graduate school, and is spending a few months just relaxing and seeing family.

Nancy Deiss has moved to Chicago from Paris, France. She is now an export manager. Her new address is: 1870 N. Halsted Street, Chicago, IL 60614.

Alice Dixon is living in Richmond, VA and working for Wallace Laboratories, a pharmaceutical company.

Marie Engle is still in Washington, D.C. working at the Chronicle of Higher Education. She is engaged to Fred Earnhart. Marie and Lisa Blake were at Lisa Zuke's wedding this summer in Virginia.

I just caught Mimi Evans as she was about to depart for the University of Edinburgh in Scotland where she will be studying at the Faculty of Divinity at New College. Mimi says she got her inspiration to go to the Highlands from Miss Garner, Mr. Armstrong and the late Rev. Bloy.

Ruth Fowler Bauerle and husband Jack are still loving Athens, GA and the married life. She is working in real estate and her husband continues to coach swimming. No babies yet, but a darling cat, Betty. Their address in Athens is 420 Waddell Street, Number 10, Georgia 30606.

Elizabeth Lee Gantt and Guy Castles were married in Columbia, SC, in June. Elizabeth is teaching at Ashley Hall School in Charleston and Guy is studying at the Medical University of SC.

Holly Stewart Green married David Marcus Dunlap May 31, 1986. She and David are both practicing law in Birmingham, AL.

Danielle Herubin recently returned from a trip abroad with Cynthia McMechan that lasted nearly a year. Danielle is currently spending most of her time writing, but assures Cynthia that it's not about the trip.

Rachael Giles and Joel are currently living in Coca Beach, FL where Joel is a mechanical engineer with the Boeing Corporation, and Rachel is a copy editor and columnist with Florida Today. Her address is 5050 Ocean Beach Blvd., #104, Coca Beach, FL 32931.

Anne Goebel has moved to Washington, D.C. Her new address is: 1801 Clydesdale Place, NW, Apt. 519. 20009.

Janet Goss graduated from the Washington College of Law at The American University in Washington, D.C. this May and plans to practice there.

Polk Green says Dallas is still great. She has been with Bell Helicopter as a market researcher since graduation. She is in the process of buying a house and still finds time to sing.

Courtney Hanahan has a new address: 608 Gables Drive, Birmingham, AL 35244.

Rosemary Hardy's Masters degree in behavior disorders is nearly completed. She is still teaching at the Pembroke Hill School in Kansas City.

Rhoda Harris is an associate with Paine Webber Development Corporation, specializing in R & D financing. She also serves on the board of Directors of Balletworks, a local contemporary ballet company. In her spare time, she is also treasurer of the Sweet Briar Club of New York.

Lisa Ward Henderson is living in Greensboro, NC working as a Designer Specialist for Ivey's. She married Michael Thomas Bice in Birmingham, AL in September. Berrie Pitts McVay, Laura Whitehurst Lascara and Marie Engle were bridesmaids.

Kelly Judson Jenkins has moved from Wilmington, DE to Cincinnati, OH. Husband Paul is with Dow Pharmaceuticals.

Monika Kaiser is living in her hometown in Germany pursuing a career in advertising. In August, 1985, she received her MBA in International Business at Schilles University in Paris. While she was studying there, she lived with Claude Becker, Sylvie Gueyne and Lorie Teeter. She writes that Sylvie is working as an interpreter and translator for a large company in Paris, while Claude is working for CBS in Paris. Lorie is working for the Wall Street Journal also in Paris and just had her first article published.

Betsy Keiser Smith and her husband have moved from Washington, D.C. to West Palm Beach, FL. Betsy is working as a customer service representative for Presidential Airways and her husband is practicing endodontics dentistry.

Sharon Kerr Jordan, husband Shep and sons Drew and Gait are moving from California to Virginia Beach. Their younger son Gait underwent heart surgery when he was born, but is doing well and Sharon says she is keeping very busy with the boys and being a Marine Corps wife.

Viki Lasala graduated from Michigan State University in May with an M.D. She and her husband, also a graduate from Michigan State, will begin their post-graduate training at the School of Medicine at the University of Arizona in Tucson.

The last news I had of Mary Lavigne was that she was "out in Africa", but has since returned to Shreveport, LA. She has her own horse farm with a partner who breaks and trains horses for sales and racing. She says Lee Vandegriff and Alice Cohen, both SBC grads, are selling horses for them, so the SBC connection does work.

Leigh Leibel Brown and her husband Walker returned from their two-year post for the bank in Hong Kong. They are now in London, England.

Meg Mahon has moved to P. O. Box 2056, Haddonfield, NJ 08033.

Fraances Mantho has just moved to Washington state from San Antonio, TX. She received her certification in Special Education. Karen McLain has moved to Number 1, Spicewood Rd, Norwalk, CT 06854.

Rachael Millroad is still living in Philadelphia, PA and will be getting married January 10, 1987. Rachael has joined the firm of Tucker, Anthony and R.L. Day, Inc. in the municipal bond department in sales.

Lollie Noble is a real estate appraiser for Glen Noble & Associates. Her new address is: 517 Thelma Drive, San Antonio, TX 79212.

Gina Parish South and husband Robert have moved to Atlanta, GA. Gina is working in the banking department of ADP and they are busy fixing up their new house. Their new address is: 4938 Falconwood Trace, Marietta, GA 30066.

Harriet Pascoe is still at the Southtrust Corporation in Birmingham, AL.

Heather Pirnie Albert returned from a two-month trip in May to the Philippines and Thailand. Daughter Rebecca is almost two.

Robin Platt Wetherbee and Jim are still in Houston, TX where Jim works for NASA. On March 28th, 1986 they became the parents of Kelly Devore, an 8 lb baby girl!

Debbie Price has a new job as a financial analyst at SEI Corporation in New York City. This past May, she vacationed in Palm Springs.

Anne Pridgeon is working for Ford Motor Company in Bloomfield Hills, MI as a consultant-analyst.

Lucile Redmond Flournoy and husband Tom are starting a new house in Columbus, GA. Lucille is still working as an office manager in a veterinary clinic.

Leigh Register has moved to 103 King Henry Court, Alexandria, VA 22314.

Kathy Reynolds Barsness and husband George are living in Washington, D.C. where Kathy is a paralegal at the law firm of Beveridge & Diamond. Their new address is 1501 26th Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20007.

Melinda Rodgers Couzins has moved to 1107-3A North Pitt St, Alexandria, VA 22314. Melinda is working for Sen. Robert Dole in Washington, D.C.

Debbie Rundlett is currently studying at the Yale Divinity School and loves the civilized world of New Haven as compared to NYC. She is focusing on religion in the arts and she hopes to be setting up community arts projects in the next year or so.

Carol Searles moved from NYC to Alexandria, VA this August. She is now working as a loan officer at A.E. Landvoigt Mortgage Company. She married Jason Bohrer in August. Valerie Youree, Rachael Millroad, Lisa Laubach and Debbie Rundlett were all in the wedding.

Sally Shapard Peek and husband Mark are now living at 107 Ardmore Place, NW, Atlanta, GA 30309. Sally is working at the First Atlanta Bank.

Beth Sheets Reed and her husband Brian are remodeling their 19th century home in Maine. She and Brian traveled to Virginia for the wedding of Ann-Morton Young. Best news they are expecting their first baby this August.

Nancy Smith is now teaching Mathematics at the John Rolfe Middle School in Richmond, VA. Her business painting pocketbooks, tote bags and Christmas ornaments for stores in NC and VA is doing well.

Pattie Snodgrass is still a copyeditor for The Loudoun Times-Mirror in Virginia, and still finds the work challenging, rewarding and endless!

Cynthia Stanford is a student at The American University in Washington, D.C.

Leslie Taylor Kavanaugh and her family have moved to: 1611 Rolling Glen Drive, Boothwyn, PA 19061.

Peggy Thistlethwaite graduated from medical school in May and has begun her residency training in general surgery at George Washington University Hospital in Washington, D.C. She has moved to 730 24th Street, NW, Apt 614, Washington, D.C. 20037.

Martha Tisdale Cordell and husband David were married on August 31, 1985. After their honeymoon in England and Scotland, they settled in Tulsa, OK where they both are practicing law. Martha works for Charles Shipley & Associates doing commercial litigation. They have just bought a house and have a brand new cat. Their address is: 2524 East 25th Street, Tulsa, OK 74114.

Betsy Townsend married David Porter Smith of Charleston, S.C. on April 26, 1986. Betsy, please send us your new address!

After two years as an Assistant Director of Admissions at The American University, Gracie Tredwell Southall is starting her masters in medieval history at the University of Maryland and will be a teaching assistant there. Gracie heard from Anne Edmunds Hansen who spent two months in Asia with her husband Dave and who may be returning to Nashville, TN. Nancy Trimble bought a condo this year in Virginia. Her new address is 1011 Arlington, Blvd, #1004, Arlington 22209. She is still working for Xerox and is actively working with the SBC Career Counseling Service to help Xerox hire more grads. Carry Cathcart ('83) visited at Easter. Nancy will be "roughing" it going to Bermuda on the QE2 in September.

Monty Tripp Wolfensberger and husband Don are working on their house and she hopes it will be ready in time for her to go on the campaign trail with her boss Rep. McCandless in September. Monty and Caren Cravath ('84) went to Atlanta earlier this year and visited with Juliet Jacobsen ('84).

Pamela Walsh spent the last 2 1/2 years in the Central African Republic as an inland fisheries extension agent with the Peace Corps. She is currently attending Pace University in New York pursuing a masters degree in nursing. Her address is now 450 Mauville Rd, Pleasantville, NY 10570.

Since graduating from Law school last year, Naomi Weyand has moved to Waco, Texas to begin practice for a litigation firm. She will be married to Scott Smith, an attorney for the Army, in October. Their new address is 601 N. Twin Oaks Blvd, Apt 927, Temple, TX 76501.

Laura Whitehurst Lascara has moved to 1424 Fannet Run, Virginia Beach, VA 23451.

Susan Wright, husband Jim and daughter Jennifer have moved into their first home in San Diego. Susan is starting classes at San Diego State University. Their new address is: 3676 N. 47th Street, San Diego, CA 92105.

Ann Morton Young filled me in on lots of friends. In February she married Charles Carroll Habliston IV in Alexandria, Va. Kelly Judson Jenkins and Debbie Rundlett were bridesmaids. Ann-Morton and Charlie have moved to 2410 Culpepper Road, Alexandria, Va 22308. Charlie is a graduate of Washington & Lee ('79) and is an actuary at The Wyatt Company. Ann-Morton is working at the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association in Washington, D.C.

Valerie Youree is living in Alexandria with Suzanne Turner ('83). Valerie works at the Design Center in Washington, D.C.

Middleburg was the site of the May wedding of Lisa Zuke and Robert Kline from Frederick, MD. Leslie Bergman was bridesmaid and many friends from SBC attended. Both she and Robert met while working at Saab Aircraft of America, but Lisa is leaving to get into the horse business. She and Robert will live at Way-A-Way farm in Arcola, VA after their honeymoon in Jamaica. Their address is Way-A-Way Farm, Route 1, Box 6, Arcola, VA 22010.

Tax Reform 1986

What does it mean for each of us and what does it mean for Sweet Briar?

There is no doubt that the 1986 Tax Reform Act will affect every aspect of our financial lives. There are also serious implications for charitable institutions. As a service of Sweet Briar's Planned Giving Committee, this issue of "In The Sweet Briar Tradition" highlights aspects of the new Tax Reform Act of special concern to colleges and other nonprofit institutions and offers an opportunity for you to receive further information.

Changes that will become effective in 1987 include:

- lowering of the tax rates.
- elimination of the charitable gift deduction for those who do not itemize.
- the possibility of taxation of appreciated gifts to charities for a small number of donors.

Before December 31, you may wish to consider making a new gift, life income gift, or accelerating payments on an outstanding pledge. The advantages are as follows:

1. Because current tax rates are higher, the after-tax cost to you for your gift will be lower in 1986.
2. A full charitable deduction in 1986 is still available to those who do not itemize their income tax returns.
3. Appreciation on gifts to charity will not be subject to taxation at any level through December 31, 1986.

Many of the changes in the Tax Reform Act, particularly those which relate to IRAs, make life income gifts to charity one of the few shelters still available to donors. A gift of highly appreciated stock invested in one of the many forms of life income gifts provides one way to make a donation to charity and at the same time provides for retirement income. In addition, this type of contribution can be designed to fit your particular financial circumstances.

As a service of the Planned Giving Committee, a booklet highlighting major provisions of the Tax Reform Act is available. To receive a copy or personalized information about a life income gift to fit your needs and circumstances, please contact F. Mark Whittaker, Vice President for College Relations, Sweet Briar College, Box G, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595 Telephone (804) 381-6161.

Enriching a Legacy: The Sweet Briar Art Collection

By Carma C. Fauntleroy

Director of College Galleries and Arts Management Program, Sweet Briar College

Shusaka Arakawa, Blankless Tone, 1979, 15-color lithograph with silkscreen and embossing, 4/35, 29 x 48"

The transformation of the Refectory into an art gallery continues to draw cries of amazement from alumnae, their families and friends. More wondrous is the scope and caliber of the Sweet Briar College Art Collection gathered under one roof in the Anne Gary Pannell Center. On display and in storage areas on the ground floor are approximately 1,000 art objects readily available for enjoyment and use in the study of art. Each year the collection grows with gifts from many generous donors and in 1986 the Friends of Art greatly enhanced the collection's prestige and teaching effectiveness with major gifts of art.

The Sweet Briar Collection offers countless opportunities for pleasure and enlightenment. Art history slide lectures supply a guide to styles and trends, but examination of the art object is a vital step in understanding the scholar's analysis of a work of art. For students of the fine arts, actual examples of acknowledged masters reveal the potential of artistic techniques. For scholars in the liberal arts, cultural artifacts are tangible evidence of the historical context in which they were conceived.

Sweet Briar's collection in fact serves as a resource for students and faculty. An etching by Rembrandt demonstrates the artist's early baroque style in an introductory course surveying European art history. Several different metalwork techniques appear on a Burmese silver bowl shown to a decorative arts class. Studio art classes visit the gallery to test their skills in identifying methods of printmaking. In the classroom, a Sudanese wooden figure demonstrates the interrelation of African sculpture and early 20th-century European art. Student research projects have focused on the collection's American landscape paintings and 16th- and 17th-century European prints.

In an effort to present a comprehensive survey of art history, museums strive to complete a roster of examples within a defined area of interest. As a liberal arts college, Sweet Briar's interest is all encompassing and fortunately its art collection includes European, Eastern, African and North American objects dating from the 13th century through the 1980s. Because the collection is comprised mainly of gifts, it lacks representative examples for teaching purposes in certain areas. Four of these "gaps" are what the Friends of Art admirably filled in 1986. The Friends as a group donated works by Roy Lichtenstein and Shusaku Arakawa. Individual members of the Friends of Art augmented the collection with gifts of an etching by Philip Pearlstein and a 17th-century Flemish painting attributed to Paulus Bril.

The acquisitions fund maintained by the Friends of Art is an important source for improving the quality of the College's permanent collection. It was this fund that enabled the group to purchase the two excellent examples of 20th-century American art: Painting in Gold Frame by Roy Lichtenstein (illustrated on the cover of this issue) and Blankless Tone by Shusaku Arakawa.

Roy Lichtenstein was recognized as a leading proponent of Pop Art in the 1960s. His early oil paintings of comic strips enlarged to monumental proportions reflected his ongoing investigation of "art" and the creative process. The process of making a work of art was a primary concern of the Abstract Expressionists, the vanguard of American art during the 1940s-1950s. Disavowing traditional subject matter, they espoused an art form that recorded individual expression in abstract compositions. In reaction, Pop artists retrieved familiar objects for use in their compositions; Lichtenstein's was the blown up comic strip.

Dots, lines and simplified flat forms associated with commercial printing became the hallmark of Lichtenstein's artistic vocabulary. He translated Old Master paintings, the Abstract Expressionist's brushstroke and even the physical structure of artwork (canvas, stretcher, frame) into magnified dot-and-line. The 1983-84 print Painting in Gold Frame given by the Friends of Art includes the major elements of Lichtenstein's oeuvre: broad black outlines, hard-edge renditions of Abstract Expressionist brushstrokes and the decorative gold frame.

Not only does this work shed light on the artist and his role in art history, it also offers excellent examples of printmaking techniques. The 14-color combination of lithograph, woodcut, screenprint and collage was published by Gemini G.E.L., a workshop of master printers well-known for their expertise in collaboration with artists.

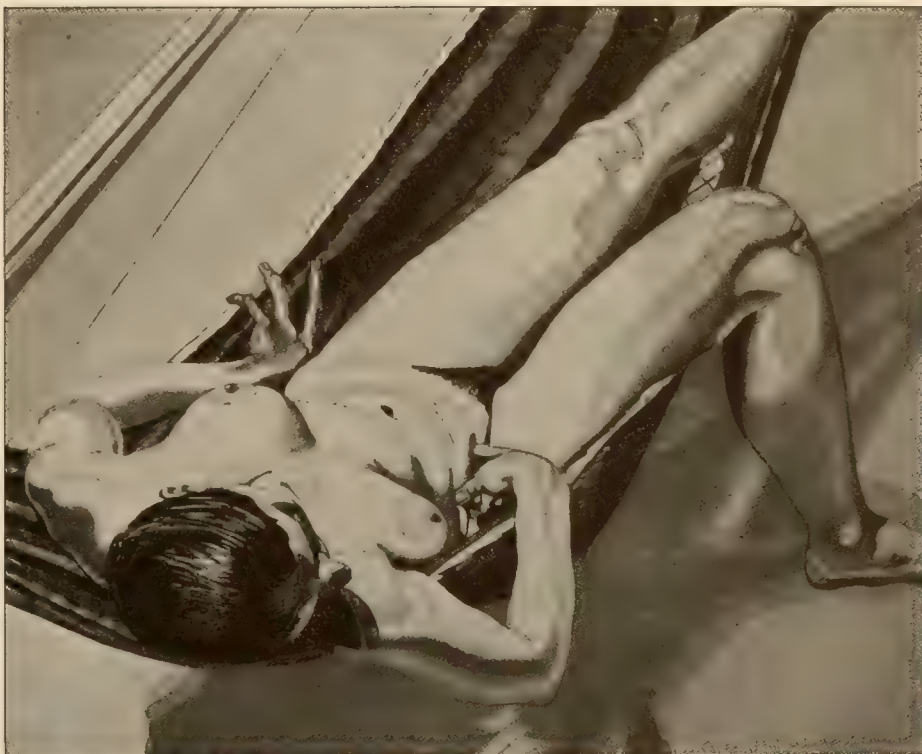

Another fine example of multiple print techniques is the second gift by the Friends of Art, Blankless Tone by Shusaku Arakawa (page 2). The 15-color lithograph with silkscreen and embossing dated 1979 is Sweet Briar's first acquisition demonstrating Conceptualism, an art movement that gained recognition in the late 1960s and 1970s. Of primary importance to the Conceptual artist is the concept, or idea, behind the creation of artwork; the physical product is secondary.

Born in Japan, Arakawa studied philosophy, linguistics, medicine and mathematics. All contribute to his form of Conceptual art which explores communication and the indefinable area between verbal and is not sacrosanct. Instead, the supremacy of the idea places Arakawa's work in the Conceptual realm.

In addition to acquisitions made possible by the Friends of Art as a group, Sweet Briar received gifts from individual members during 1986. The College art collection now includes a fine example of New Realism that reemerged in American art during the 1970s, thanks to the generosity of Jackie Mabie Humphrey '60, a board member of visual signals. In Blankless Tone, the artist delves into the meaning of language symbolized by stenciled words (SPEAK, PERCEPTION, TONE). The ambiguity of the text is reinforced by its visual treatment. On the left, the horizontal blend of color first dissolves, then reveals, then dissolves the letters. A duplicate text on the right is further obscured by what appears to be smeared ink and radiating lines overlaid with a rectangle of translucent white ink.

Arakawa's subject is communication and the inherent shades, or layers, of nuance beyond observed verbal and visual cues. The folded corner of the paper reminds the viewer that the physical work of art the Friends of Art. The reaction of Pop artists to Abstract Expressionism was characterized by the use of familiar objects. A natural outgrowth of this return to recognizable subject matter was toward literal representation. Perceiving Sweet Briar's need for an example of this facet of modern art history, Jackie made a gift of a 1974 color etching by Philip Pearlstein entitled Model on Hammock, shown on page 3.

Characteristically, Pearlstein portrays the static, nonchalant nude in a sparsely furnished studio setting. Compositional planes are defined with the cropped, close-up view, angular pose and zones of shading. Neutral light and equal attention to all components — figure, hammock, molding, shadow — establish an objectivity that negates the traditional sensuality of a nude subject.

the Friends of Art, donated a 17th-century Flemish oil painting in memory of her husband, Charles Lee Smith, Jr., and in honor of her daughter, Lindsay Smith Newsom '67. The painting, entitled The Monks Fishing (see below), is attributed to Paulus Bril, whose landscapes are considered a stylistic link between the panoramic views of Pieter Brueghel and the ideal landscapes of Poussin and Claude.

The Flemish painter Bril, who moved to Rome around 1574, rearranged elements from the natural world to achieve dramatic effect in imaginary landscapes. At the same time he retained a typically northern concern for realistic detail. Sweet Briar's acquisition embodies these qualities. Dark rocky masses tower over the fishermen in the foreground. In contrast a distant village and tiny silhouettes of mountain travelers are bathed in glowing light.

In a traditionally northern manner the artist meticulously rendered the fingers of the fishermen.

Gifts from the Friends of Art in 1986 were not merely four more works of art. Filling four "gaps" with examples of impressive quality enhanced the collection's role as a source of enjoyment and enlightenment in the college community. Since the renovation of the Refectory provided facilities to preserve precious artworks, generations of future students, faculty and visitors will reap the benefits of the Sweet Briar Art Collection. The generous support of the Friends of Art continues to enrich that legacy. □

Collecting American Painting, A Personal View

By Bonnie Loyd Crane '50

#1 Young Girl in Yellow Calico,
American School, oil, 27 x 22" circa 1840, The Crane Collection.

In Boston the Evans Wing of the Museum of Fine Arts has reopened recently after four years of extensive renovations. The first floor is devoted to American paintings, many familiar to any student of art history. To stand in the pale blue gallery housing part of the M. F. A.'s collection of Copley paintings is truly an awesome experience. From Copley's youthful Boy with a Squirrel, to the searching portrait of Paul Revere, the silversmith, and the high drama of Watson and the Shark in Havana Harbor, the range of the young artist is elegantly presented. Copley embodied the highest qualities of the emerging nation; indeed these American works are regarded as his best, as the later influence of cosmopolitan English portraiture and history painting was not compatible with Copley's unique talents. To see 30 or more paintings by this most important American artist is indeed a rare treat.

A short 20 years ago the would-be-viewer of American paintings had to overcome numerous obstacles in order to see works by artists like Copley. Hanging in the back halls, galleries and mezzanines of major museums were whatever paintings the curatorial staffs deemed worthy of exhibiting. Usually the numbers were few and the viewing areas less than satisfactory. Such was the esteem in which American paintings were held. European paintings were still the stars! Collections of museums such as Houston's (a relatively new city) concentrated on European painting, with only a few western American paintings on display. But times have changed. Other museums no doubt will follow Boston's lead in recognizing its wealth of fine American paintings and displaying them in a manner worthy of the art itself.

My own interest and expertise in the field of American painting began to develop before it became "fashionable." In 1968, 18 years (and three children) after receiving my A.B. from Sweet Briar with a major in French, I enrolled in a graduate program in art history at Bryn Mawr. As a sometime-painter, I had fleshed out my interest in the making of art with an art history survey course at Sweet Briar. When my youngest child entered kindergarten I embarked on an M.A. program, at a time when such a commitment by "mature" women was still most unusual. Four years were required on my part-time schedule of student/mother/wife to complete the course work and thesis. Along the way I became interested in the evolution of American painting from colonial days to the present. My thesis was concerned with Philadelphia collections in colonial days and the early days of the republic. Collections before the Revolution? Yes, indeed. Research unearthed bills of lading for shipments of paintings from Antwerp to America for sale at auction. Auction? Yes, indeed. Freeman's in Philadelphia (with a Sweet Briar connection in Debbie Freeman Cooper '50) is one of the oldest auction houses in the country. Wealthy colonials did most certainly hang paintings in their elegant houses. Portraits, definitely, but landscapes and still lifes as well adorned their walls. Although most of the early paintings were done by European immigrant artists, some were native-born, self-taught artists who used engravings of European paintings as models for their rather stiff renderings.

The excellent little book by Mary C. Black with an introduction by Lloyd Goodrich, What is American in American Art,* poses thought-provoking questions. Is there something uniquely American in the works by our early artists? Most were trained by European painters in the art of drapery depiction, for example, or the rendering of baroque props for portraits. However, there is an American quality, I believe, which manifests itself in the linearity and precise observation and rendition of detail in these early paintings. Attributable perhaps to the isolation of our young nation, the medieval tradition of painting — flat, stylized, detailed, linear technique — persisted well into the 19th century. A well-known benchmark of early American painting, Mrs. Freae and Baby Mary, at the Worcester Art Museum, embodies these qualities.

Portraits by America's first artists differed somewhat from their European counterparts in the artist's faithful representation of the subject, warts and all. No effort was made to "prettify" the sitter. Court painters these artists were not! It is a very long way from the flat, decorative folk portraits of the 17th and 18th centuries to the sophisticated elegance of a John Singer Sargent of the 19th century (witness the recent exhibition at the Whitney Museum). Stylishly elongated, graceful figures, presented with virtuoso fluidity of brushwork characterize Sargent's work. The equal of any of his European peers (he lived in Europe all his life), Sargent's work still falls within our definition of the American quality of painting in his sensitivity to the sitter. His beautiful subjects, seemingly poised and elegant, reveal inner tensions in the twisting of hands or the pressure of long fingers against a table top.

An interest in portraiture led me to include the charming, unsigned portrait of a young girl (illustration #1) in one of the first exhibitions of 19th-century paintings which I curated for a local gallery. The girl is dressed in a mustard yellow calico dress. Her pigtail hangs in front of a rather large ear, but her sweet face and direct gaze capture the viewer's heart. The artist is unknown, but his, or her, understanding of the young sitter is tenderly evident.

NEW FACES was the title of the inaugural exhibition of my gallery on Newbury Street, Boston's street of galleries and boutiques. Just as portraiture was the first type of painting done in the colonies (excluding such commercial painting as signs, coachpainting and firebuckets), a portrait exhibition opened our gallery. Dealer friends had cautioned me about such an exhibition, as portraits are notoriously hard to sell, they said — and they are, unless the portrait is wonderful and appealing, or by a major artist. The record-breaking price achieved for the Rembrandt Peale portrait of Rubens Peale with Geranium ($4.4 million) was an affirmation to me of the importance of portraits!

A very small Portrait of a Gentleman (illustration #2), an 18th-century work, was the earliest painting in NEW FACES. A young woman Ph.D. student fell in love with the small portrait, which we had determined to be English. Although there was no visible signature, it was evident that the artist was highly trained. The buyer told me that she had never expected to be able to own an 18th-century portrait, especially one which would fit into her suitcase or pocketbook as she traveled to England to work on her dissertation. Her curiosity about the painter and subject of the small work led her to take the painting to the university conservation lab where, upon the removal of a backing substance, there was found an inscription in Russian. The subject was Russian; no doubt by now the new owner knows his whole history! Paintings do have stories to tell.

I have a special fondness for pairs of paintings. Like old married couples, these pairs have stayed together for decades. In my opinion they should not be separated, even if one of the pair is clearly superior to the other. A case in point: I bought a very small view of Niagara (illustration #3) from a dealer friend from Connecticut. "Very small" means in this instance about 4x6" — roughly the size of a postcard. The painting was unsigned, but by a trained hand. It could be dated roughly by the tower shown near the cataract, as the tower was demolished before mid-century. The little Niagara was to be one of the stars of SMALLS, an exhibition of small paintings. In searching for other works for the show, I received several small paintings from an out-of-state dealer. Among these was a view of Niagara the same size as mine (illustration #4) and, I was convinced, by the same unknown artist. We hung the two paintings side by side and they received a great deal of attention. One of the visitors to the gallery was the dealer from whom I had bought the first painting. He remarked, upon seeing them, "Oh, I see they are back together again." Explaining that he had bought both from a "runner," he subsequently sold one to an important New York dealer, who in turn sold it out of state and it finally came to me. By the time I received the painting, it had greatly appreciated in price, so its mate looked like a "poor relation." I therefore priced them as a pair to equalize the difference. Some months later in New York I happened to see a larger pair of Niagara paintings, highly detailed and clearly by the same artist as our small pair. Careful examination revealed a signature, "Lotti," in minuscule script. Thus the small unsigned painting found its mate and its artist as well, even though no information has been forthcoming about Lotti.

The 19th century, often called the Golden Age of American painting, witnessed the development of an American style of painting. Landscape succeeded portraiture as the favored type. Painters such as Bierstadt and Moran went west with surveyors, recording the magnificent variety of dramatic scenes in this vast country. Nostalgia for the passing of an era may have prompted the interest in marine painting which flourished in the latter half of the 19th century. As the age of sail met the age of steam, sailing ships became a popular subject for artists. Notable among these were ship portraitists such as Jacobsen and Buttersworth, while the seacoast was the province of such fine painters as William Trost Richards and Alfred T. Bricher.

Artists flourished in the cities where paintings by leading artists were exhibited, sometimes on a fee basis. The first art museums were established in the early part of the 19th century. Leading artists were commissioned to decorate the halls of state. News of the booming art interest in the young nation led hundreds of artists to immigrate to this country where they believed their fortunes lay.

Following the Civil War there was a shift in interest towards European painting as the large fortunes of American industrialists responded to the whim of fashion. American artists, sensing the shift in taste, went abroad as before, and many, like Friesseke and Mary Cassatt, stayed. Those who returned brought back the new "impressionism" which later eclipsed all other styles. Not until New York became a major art center in the 1940s with the advent of abstract expressionism did American painting regain its position in this country. Historical American painting, however, was still relegated to the back halls.

Collectors today have multiple choices in 19th-century American painting. Fine folk art collections (for instance the Karolik in Boston, of Jean Lipman's) represent a commitment and acute sense of design rarely equaled. The beginning collector of folk art still can locate good examples, but now must pay a substantial price for the best work. Hudson River School paintings have long been sought after. It has been increasingly difficult to acquire good examples of these bucolic scenes, especially those with a luminist quality. Marine painting is another specialty for which the demand surpasses the supply. Still life and genre paintings (scenes of everyday life) are other areas in which one might develop a collection. Clearly the more information one possesses on any given area, the more interesting the search for paintings will be.

Whenever a painting comes into the gallery, we research the artist, if known, or we try to discover the name of the artist if unknown. There are experts who specialize in the work of particular painters, whom we consult when appropriate. Since the 19th century was the Golden Age of American painting, there were hundreds of fine artists working all over the country. It is well nigh impossible to be conversant with all of them, so we are constantly learning and adding information on new artists to our "bio-books." My able assistant, Adrienne Wilde (SBC '85) has become conversant with a host of artists whose names are not included in any college survey course (not even Sweet Briar's).

When a painting is unsigned, it presents special problems. There are those who believe the purchase of an unsigned painting to be a poor investment. I do not adhere to that philosophy. If the painting is well-done and appealing, and the price affordable, I buy it. If research does not unearth the name of the artist, the painting still has intrinsic value. The pair of still lifes (illustrations #5 and 6) fill me with joy each time I look at them. They are visual delights, beautifully executed, with a wonderful feeling of volume and rich color. One day I may discover their creator. If not, I will not value them less.

This past fall we featured the work of the American artist Bruce Crane, one of the founders of the American Tonalist movement. The exhibition, the first in a commercial gallery since the artist's death in 1937, was the culmination of a long interest which I held in the artist. Initially the name attracted me. Photographs of the artist showed a familiar Crane facial type and expression. Research led me to the discovery of a common ancestor (on my husband's side) in the 1700s in New Jersey. Finally, when asked about the Crane Collection and Bruce Crane connection, I had a ready answer. Interesting though these facts were (the artist did

In recent years there has been renewed interest in the work of the Tonalists. I find Crane's landscapes immensely satisfying and visually delightful, but beyond that there is an emotional reaction which is conveyed, to me at least, when viewing his work. I firmly believe that the viewer should be moved, affected, by the painting under consideration. If there is no reaction, the painting probably is not the right one for you. A psychologist told me of a study in which he had participated indeed lead a dramatic life), it was his paintings which spoke to me. In 1984 the Florence Griswold Museum in Old Lyme, CT mounted an elegant exhibition of paintings by this too-long neglected artist. I was excited by the work, never having seen so many of Crane's paintings together at one time. Two and a half years later we presented some 21 of his paintings and I reluctantly parted with many of them as they went to new homes in various parts of the country. Bruce Crane was a very important artist in his own lifetime, being a National Academician, and one who exhibited and was collected by major collectors (Andrew Carnegie) and museums (Metropolitan and many others). However, as with other artists who remained separate from impressionism or abstraction, Crane's reputation ebbed after his death.

#6 Fruit Still Life, American School (Pennsylvania), circa 1830. Oil on panel, 15¾ x 13", The Crane Collection.

which did, in fact, measure the physiological effects on the viewer when presented with a series of paintings. Whether there is a surge of adrenaline, or some other substance, causing the reaction, something does happen! It is possible to be quite analytical when looking at a painting, but I also believe in an emotional involvement.

Springtime, Long Island Farm was the featured painting in our Bruce Crane exhibition (illustration #7). Done when the artist was just 24, the painting is a masterful American Barbizon work. A few years later Crane created the magnificent Snowscene (illustration #8): a leaden sky streaked with a slice of lemon yellow bordered with orange on the horizon. The storm had passed and there was promise of a fine day to come. American painters of the 19th century held a reverence for nature, elegantly conveyed in their work. Whether the awe-inspiring grandeur of a Bierstadt or Church, or the gentle transcendental luminism of a Heade or Fitzhugh Lane or the more intimate view of a Crane, all were attuned to the mystery and implied divinity of the landscape.

Collecting American paintings can be a most rewarding avocation for anyone with the eye and interest to pursue the subject. Tales of the occasional masterwork discovered in an attic or dusty antique shop are fewer these days. Certainly there were those astute souls who ferreted out the good works of relatively unknown artists, held them for 25 years or more and reaped large profits, but they are also rare. For most of us, acquiring paintings is delightful but often very arduous work. Paintings of real quality and interest are becoming increasingly pricey. Reputable dealers, collectors and auctions are the likely sources. In order to buy at auction one must do one's homework beforehand, looking at condition, provenance and quality of each painting before bidding. Whether one searches for a single painting or an entire collection, the search itself can be fascinating. Whatever the source, the paintings acquired can afford a lifetime of pleasure for us and for succeeding generations.□

A 1950 cum laude graduate of Sweet Briar with a major in French, Bonnie Crane received an M.A. in art history from Bryn Mawr in 1972. She also has studied at the Sorbonne, at the American University, Cairo, Egypt, and at the Pennsylvania Academy of Art. She has taught at Cairo American College, Egypt (drawing and painting) and the Kincaid School in Houston, TX (art history survey) and has lectured at Rice University and at the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston (American painting). She has enjoyed extensive foreign travel and has much experience in museum and gallery work. In 1985 she became owner and director of the Crane Collection (Boston), a gallery specializing in painting from the 19th and early 20th centuries with changing exhibitions. She is married, with three grown children. This is her second contribution to the Alumnae Magazine: in 1952 she wrote about UNICEF, where she was working at the time.

Belle da Costa Greene Femina Doctissima Virginiensis

By Elizabeth B. Wilson '70

Every year The Pierpont Morgan Library attracts about 200,000 visitors who come from all over the world to ponder its priceless collections of old master drawings, rare books and manuscripts. The rooms are small and jewellike — appropriate to the scale and quality of the objects they house. It is a serene and imposing place, which brings out the reverential side in even the most jaded museum-goer. (Even schoolchildren tiptoe and whisper; this has to be seen to be believed, of course, but the author is an eyewitness to the phenomenon.) Indeed, the illusion that one is the privileged guest in the home of a great connoisseur would be complete were it not for the Helen Hayes look-alike at the front desk who has just rung up your “suggested contribution” of $3.00.

In their perambulations through the Morgan Library, visitors are obliged to pass through a short hallway which contains a single work of art. It is a portrait of a woman named Belle da Costa Greene by the early 20th-century French artist Paul-César Helleu. As an intermediary stop between majestic examples of Renaissance draughtsmanship and the ponderous grandeur of the Gutenberg Bible, the picture strikes a faintly jarring note. Patent-ly pretty and sporting an extravagantly plumed hat, the sitter is a paragone of Edwardian chic — and cheek. The uninformed observer could easily and somewhat disapprovingly conclude that the sitter was like one of those anti-heroines out of an Edith Wharton novel — the kind of woman who might select the Morgan Library as a fashionable place for a rendezvous with a prospective beau, but never for edification and aesthetic stimulation. In point of fact, the sitter selected the Morgan Library as the place to which she would dedicate her entire career. And it was Belle Greene who, perhaps more than any other individual, transformed the Morgan Library from a private treasure house into one of the most distinguished museums and centers for scholarly research in the world. (It is quite true, by the way, that she also had a marked penchant for alluring and fashionable attire.)

Her association with the Morgan collections began in 1905, when, at the age of 21, she was hired by Pierpont Morgan as his librarian and personal secretary. He was by that time in serious need of both. For the past 15 years Morgan had been acquiring — at a pace that can only be described as breathtaking — authors' manuscripts, medieval and Renaissance illuminated manuscripts, incunabula (books printed before 1500), later printed books and precious bookbindings, as well as paintings and other works of art. (In commenting on the vastness of the Morgan collections, Belle once remarked, “It apparently includes everything except the original tables of the Ten Commandments.”) It is probably fair to say that even Mr. Morgan was not completely certain of exactly what he had and where it was; and each day brought a new stack of letters and cables from dealers around the world hoping to tempt Morgan with news of yet another priceless treasure which might be available...for a price.

Mr. Morgan's nephew, Junius Spencer Morgan, a man of slenderer means but a passionate connoisseur of books and manuscripts, had been acting for some time as an unofficial advisor to his uncle in the formation of his collections. It was primarily on Junius's recommendation that Pierpont Morgan hired Belle. She had been working in the Princeton University Library (Junius was himself a Princeton man), as a cataloguer and reference assistant. The leap from the Princeton University Library reference desk to Mr. Morgan's library may seem to some extent precipitous, but there is every indication that Belle found it a logical, perhaps inevitable step. "I knew definitely by the time I was twelve years old that I wanted to work with rare books. I loved them even then, the sight of them, the wonderful feel of them, the romance and thrill of them. Before I was sixteen, I had begun my studies, omitting the regular college course that many girls take before they have found out what they want to do."

There may be an element of bravado and prideful sensitivity in Belle's pronouncement that, being more directed than most young women, she "omitted the regular college course." From what little we know of her early life, it seems extremely unlikely that domestic finances would have allowed her even to think of a college education. Born in Alexandria, Virginia on December 13, 1883, she was the third of five children of Richard and Genevieve Van Vliet Greene. Her middle name came from her maternal grandmother, Genevieve da Costa

Van Vliet. It appears that Belle's parents separated while she was still quite young; the children moved with their mother to Princeton, New Jersey. Mrs. Greene, a native of Richmond described as "a proud and cultivated lady of old fashioned dignity," was obliged to give music lessons to support her children while they attended local schools. Almost immediately after graduation Belle went to work at the Princeton University Library.

There are no detailed accounts of Morgan's first interview with Belle, but it is a scene worth imagining. Morgan was almost 70. As the most brilliant and successful financier of his day, his name was synonymous with wealth, power and influence. He also had a reputation for being brusque, impatient and generally forbidding. Edward Steichen, the famous photographer whose portrait of Morgan is permanently on view in the Library, remarked that meeting Mr. Morgan's gaze was like facing the headlights of an onrushing express train — if you could get off the track, they were merely awe-inspiring, but if you couldn't they were terrifying. Into this lofty presence stepped Belle Greene, barely out of her teens, equipped with lots of enthusiasm and very little experience. The contrast between the two must have been striking, to say the least, but, seemingly against all odds, they hit it off splendidly from the start. Later Belle would write that her lasting remembrance of Morgan was "as he came into the Library on Christmas morning...singing 'O come all ye faithful' at the top of his lungs...throwing his hat and came into the nearest receptacle (a porphyry sarcophagus) and putting both arms around me and kissing me on both cheeks."

When she assumed her duties, the splendid Library building on 36th Street, expressly designed to house Mr. Morgan's precious books and manuscripts, was nearing completion. The facade, constructed of tons of costly Tennessee marble, was modeled along the graceful, classical lines of an Italian Renaissance palazzo. Inside, a vast two-storied room was lined floor to ceiling with massive bronze bookcases, each fitted with its own lock. Across the foyer was Mr. Morgan's private domain, a magnificent study with an ornately carved 15th-century wooden ceiling, red damask wall coverings and an enormous custom-made desk. (These rooms are now National Historic Landmark Interiors and remain little changed since the days of Morgan.)

Belle's first responsibilities were to sort, catalogue and generally organize the collections and, upon completion of the Library building in 1906, to oversee the installation of these collections into surroundings worthy of their importance. Within a few years Mr. Morgan's "librarian" had become his trusted and indispensable aide. More and more she was sent abroad to consult with dealers, auction houses and other collectors on her employer's behalf.

She took full advantage of these trips not only to track down new treasures but also as an opportunity for self-education of the highest order. While some dealers found her imperious and hard-headed, scholars remarked on her "genuine humility" and eagerness to learn. In 1908, for example, began her long and deep friendship with Sidney Cockerell, the director of the Fitzwilliam Museum in Cambridge. He was to exert a profound influence on her as a connoisseur of manuscript illumination, training her eye and critical approach, and providing her with introductions to the most eminent scholars of Britain and the Continent.

As the representative of one of the world's wealthiest and most spectacular collectors, it was inevitable that she should receive a certain amount of notoriety. Far from shrinking from the spotlight, Belle Greene seems to have positively gloried in it. She adored dressing in sweeping Renaissance gowns (with matching jewels), which showed her voluptuous, slim-waisted figure to greatest advantage. She adopted the habit of carrying a large green silk handkerchief (to match her heavy-lidded green eyes), which she would use to dramatic effect. Always avid for entertainment, she was famous for her devotion to champagne suppers and practical jokes. Many of her contemporaries found it somewhat difficult to reconcile her flamboyance (which occasionally could veer into downright outrageousness) with her professionalism and scholarly dedication. Defying categorization, she was, in the parlance of bibliophiles, a unicum.

An event of the greatest importance in her early career was the sale of Lord Amherst's extraordinary library of manuscripts and early printed books. They were scheduled to be sold at auction by Sotheby's of London on December 6th, 1908.

Contained within this group was a remarkable selection of books printed by William Caxton, England's first and most celebrated printer; and it was the Caxtons for which Belle set her cap. Months before the sale, she had written Morgan in Paris, "I have word from Quaritch [a London bookdealer] that Lord Amherst is willing to sell separate pieces from his library...the number from the Caxton press are most exceptional as they are perfect copies (almost unheard of) and would make your collection unique au monde." Belle was not, however, disposed to battling it out for them in the auction rooms.

Arriving in London a few weeks before the sale, she made a private offer to Lord Amherst for the Caxtons. Still awaiting his reply the evening before the sale, she attended a dinner party at which many of the international coterie of collectors and dealers who had come to London for the auction were present. During dinner, she quietly received word that her offer to Lord Amherst had been accepted and that the Caxtons would be withdrawn from tomorrow's auction. As the evening was drawing to a close, a colleague asked, "Miss Greene, will you promise me that in the morning you will not bid against me for [a particular] Caxton?" Belle replied simply, "Yes, I promise not to bid against you at the sale tomorrow." As a result of this coup, she returned to America with 17 Caxtons including The Game and Play of Chess and the Recuyell of the Histories of Troye, the first two books printed in the English language. In their coverage of the sale, the British press noted that "Mr. Morgan cabled his congratulations to his clever librarian" and added rather grudgingly, "We may yet see lady librarians at the British Museum."

In those days it was certainly unusual for "lady librarians" to steal the spotlight in auction room dramas — or in any sphere of activity for that matter. Belle could not have been unaware that she was, among other things, something of a pioneer in the establishment of women as a force to be reckoned with in business and professional worlds. While some might see the elements of a modern Cinderella story in her remarkable success, she would have summarily dismissed such a romanticized explanation for her achievement. A woman like Belle Greene did not require the services of a fairy godmother. "I cannot agree that my connection with the Morgan collections has been a mere matter of luck. It was indeed a rare and beautiful opportunity that came to me, but I do not believe the opportunity would ever have come if I had not been prepared in the first place...I am tremendously interested in women in relation to work; I think it is splendid for women to be coming to the front in so many ways. Of course, I think there are a lot of women who don't have to work and who don't know how to do anything in particular who are simply discontented at home and have vague yearnings to do something — preferably interior decorating! But there is a host of earnest and intelligent young women everywhere looking about to do some worthy work and I have a very decided theory that fine opportunities will come to all that are prepared..."

Belle Greene was not a great beauty in the classic sense of the phrase, but she had rather sensuous features and a vibrant personality which seemed to have proved irresistible to many men in the course of her life. Prominent among these was the great art historian Bernard Berenson, whom she met in 1908-1909. His infatuation with her (a source of some consternation to his wife, Mary) developed apace and in 1911 he described himself as one who "had been hit by a wandering sun..." and lamented (out loud to Mary!), "It is an awful thing to be in love with a person who is 3,000 miles away." Both parties seem to have understood that there could be no question of marriage, but he continued to write to her — some 400 letters in all — for the rest of her life. She apparently burned most of his correspondence shortly before her death in 1950, but one letter, written in July of 1949, was found among her papers: "Dear Bella, I...have just returned from an absence of six weeks during which I revisited all the towns we saw together 40 years ago. I recall that you had no taste for looking back. but I have. & a day did not pass that I did not think of you...In my 85th year I spend most of my waking hours dozing. Yet between dozes I still enjoy being alive, working & seeing people. A word from you would not be unwelcome. Love B.B."

In 1913 Belle received the crushing news that Pierpont Morgan had died after a period of ill health, while on vacation in Italy. Virtually his entire estate, including the vast collections of art and books, had been left to his son, J. P. Morgan, Jr. Up to now Morgan, Jr. had shown little interest in the treasures his father had amassed on 36th Street and for a time Belle's future and the future of the Morgan Library were uncertain. In the end he decided not to sell the Library or any of its contents and in 1914 she was able to write to a bookdealer friend in London, "I am glad to tell you that he [has] a strong interest in the Library and promised me that I may go on collecting books and manuscripts when the war is over."

When the United States entered the war in 1917, she became ardently involved in war work, and the activities of the Library were set aside for a time. But by 1920 she was off again to Europe, adding to the Morgan collections and to her own vast store of knowledge.

For many years Belle had wanted the Library to be established on a permanent basis. In 1924 this wish finally was realized when J. P. Morgan, Jr. converted it into an incorporated and endowed educational institution. Public reaction to this remarkable benefaction was understandably enthusiastic and a reporter for the New York Tribune wrote, "The thing is perfect, inside and out, a Renaissance gem in the heart of prosaic New York...this monument comes to the City not as a mere philanthropic gesture, but as a carefully thought-out contribution to the domain of the intellect and of the spirit...New York has never had a nobler gift." Belle was named director, thus becoming the first woman director of a library in the United States.

The transformation of the Morgan Library from a private to a public institution was orchestrated by Belle with consummate skill and enthusiasm. Publications, lectures and exhibitions were arranged, always conforming to the highest possible standards of scholarship and overseen by her down to the smallest detail. During the New York World's Fair (1939-40) the Library's exhibition of rare materials from its collections caused something of a sensation, prompting one critic to write, "The best exhibit at the New York Fair is not at the fair." When the Library first opened its doors to the public, there seems to have been some concern about how visitors would behave. The Morgan Library was not, after all, just another museum. Such fears quickly proved groundless and Belle wrote to J. P. Morgan, Jr. reassuring news: "The visitors, few or many, are so d_____ respectful, never speaking above a whisper. I occasionally think of importing a hoodlum (should I say another hoodlum) to keep myself company."

In the 1940s her health began to deteriorate and in 1948, having served the library for 43 years, 24 as director, she retired. The following year plans were begun for a volume of studies in her honor. Among the contributors were many of the most revered scholars of the day: Bernard Berenson, Curt Bühler, A. M. Hind, A. Hyatt Mayor, Millard Meiss, Erwin Panofsky, Gisela A. M. Richter, Meyer Schapiro and Kurt Weitzmann. As a general rule Belle shunned honors and tributes of any sort (although many were proffered). Finally published in 1954, Studies in Art and Literature for Belle da Costa Greene surely would have pleased her, however, for it was and remains an enduring contribution to scholarly enquiry of the greatest distinction.

Another tribute she was persuaded to accept (no doubt with some amusement) was the following citation from The Mediaeval Academy of America, written on the occasion of her admittance as one of its first women Fellows: Belle da Costa Greene, femina doctissima Virginien-sis, in amoenissimo Musaeo Ipsa Musa, quae, viri humanissimi thesauris et callide custoditis auctisque et grate populo apertis, ex bibliotheca universitatem effecit, in qua discipuli, rigidissimi scilicet artium professores, admensam eius et legendi et causa libentissime congregantur. (Belle da Costa Greene, very learned woman from Virginia, herself a Muse in a most delightful Museum, who, expertly guarding the treasures of a most cultured man, has increased them, unlocked them for a grateful people and made her Library a University where students, yea and the sternest professors of the liberal arts gladly gather at her desk, for study — yes, and for laughter.) □

Autumn street scene in Irkutsk.

We arrive in Irkutsk on the cold, clear night of September 26. Our hotel, a very nice building, has stained glass murals in the lobby and our room overlooks a park and the Angara River. We desperately need a bath; hot water feels great. After a quick drink at the Foreign Visitors Lounge, we retire.

Next day we tour with a local guide named Elena, a pretty blue-eyed blonde whose English is very good. More cheerful than Moscow, Irkutsk is a pleasant city. The leaves are turning red and gold in its many parks and the Angara River is blue and very clean. There is little traffic on the side streets. The numerous high-rise apartment buildings are painted yellow, which blends well with prerevolutionary buildings of similar color. We also see quaint wooden houses painted dark green or blue with decorative window frames. Pictures of Lenin and slogans are very visible everywhere.

We visit a working Russian Orthodox church. The place is crowded; most of the worshipers are elderly women, but a sizable group of young women with babies in their arms is also there. Many young people are in the choir and the priest looks to be under 40. Elena wants us to believe there is freedom of religion in the Soviet Union. I cannot accept it.

There are more than half a million people in Irkutsk and only one working Orthodox church!

Next day we drive to Lake Baikal. Now the terrain is hilly, with heavy woods on both sides of the road, plenty of birch trees, also maple and pine. En route we stop at a little village; our guides stay at the bus stop and we explore alone — I go first to explain the foreign invasion to the villagers.

The villagers are used to tourists who come from all over the world most of the year. The little settlement is very charming, but primitive: except for electricity and television it has no modern conveniences. Neatly-kept unpainted wooden houses with flowerpots in the windows line both sides of the unpaved street. Sheep graze in a meadow behind the houses, watched over by an elderly shepherdess. A woman wearing rubber boots rinses her laundry in a clear little stream. There is a little Russian Orthodox church at the far end of the village. The outside looks like a country church anywhere in the West but inside it is decidedly Russian with gilded icons. Very well kept, it is empty that day.

We lunch on wonderful lake fish, rice, vegetables and Bulgarian wine at a restaurant overlooking Lake

Baikal. The largest freshwater lake in the world. Baikal is very beautiful with crystal clear deep blue water.

Next morning we fly to Khabarovsk. Our group boards the plane first, then the Soviet tourists and a group of soldiers last — the Aeroflot does not appear to favor the military. Soviet planes do not have first class or reserved seats. They are certainly adequate, comparable to American planes and serve good meals: the food is fresh without the overprocessed taste so common on Western planes. A three-hour flight takes us to Khabarovsk, 5,500 miles southeast of Moscow, eight hours ahead of Moscow time and 15 hours ahead of U.S. Eastern Standard Time. The sun shines brightly, the temperature is in the 60s.

Khabarovsk is a handsome city with interesting brownstone buildings downtown. Karl Marx Avenue, the main street, is jammed with buses and streetcars. Large groups of soldiers are in the streets: the closeness to the Chinese border accounts for the military presence. Tall trees shade side streets lined with pastel-colored two and three-story apartment houses enclosed behind red brick walls. Pink begonias and yellow marigolds decorate city parks and squares. There seem to be fewer billboards with Lenin's image, although there is a large Lenin monument in one of the squares.

Our hotel is a six-story white and blue structure and this is the most comfortable room we have had on the trip — thick window drapes close and the bathroom has a rug and a shower curtain. Dinner is in a spacious dining room decorated by columns. A live band provides soft music as we dine on caviar, chicken soup and meat ravioli, with tea, coffee and pastry for dessert.

After dinner we are invited to stay for a dance. There are many local people there. The band switches to rock music every bit as loud as in America. Young men dressed in jeans dance with girls in short dresses or denim skirts. Several men dance with each other; it is a strange sight. Irina says that women have their choice of men in this frontier town. Irina, two American women from the tour and I sip wine and watch the dancers. "Let's dance," suggests Irina. She wants us to dance with each other, she is sure that the men will cut in; she is right, we soon are paired off with young men, my partner a curly-haired youth in jeans and boots. He starts a conversation in halting French. When I tell him to speak Russian he is overjoyed. His Russian is heavily accented. He is from Moldavia, a Soviet Republic near Romania. High wages and a spirit of adventure lured this young man to the Far East. He is homesick and probably will not stay long. The dance ends at midnight: tomorrow is Monday and a workday.

Next day, October 1, I roam on my own. Contrary to predictions from American and Russian immigrant friends, no one has watched me or prevented my talking to the natives throughout the trip. I have prepared for this outing: my camera is in my pocketbook. I am wearing a skirt, blouse and sweater and my wedding ring is on the right hand as is customary in Russia.

Strolling in a park I meet an elderly man who starts a conversation about the weather, telling me that Khabarovsk has a terrible climate. The fall is nice but winters are very cold: the temperature dips to zero in January. This is not bad for Russia, but coupled with severe winds and violent snowstorms, the cold is hard to bear. Monsoon rains come in the spring; all last summer it rained and the rivers flooded. The government does everything possible to lure young people — stores are adequately supplied with food and clothing and there is plenty of work. "It's great if you can stand the weather," says my new friend. "Are you from Latvia?" he asks. "Why Latvia?" I wonder. "You look like it," says the old gentleman, glancing at me. "You have the light skin and blond hair." "Actually, I am from Poland." At least my statement is partly true.

Moving on toward the shopping district, I note the stores doing brisk business; the lines are short and move fast. The bakery is well-stocked with bread, rolls and plain sugar cookies. I walk into a small clothing store that sells sweaters and jackets; there is a nice selection of leather jackets. I have not bought anything except newspapers, magazines and postcards in Russia, for shopping has been cumbersome everywhere. Even here one has to make a selection first, pay the cashier, then present a receipt at the original counter — a three-step process. I do not feel like going through all that. I go into a fruit and vegetable store where people are buying apples, oranges and quite a variety of vegetables; so as not to be too conspicuous I buy some sunflower seeds, a very popular snack in Russia. My next stop is a little kiosk where newspapers and magazines are sold. I ask about a local paper (so far I have bought one everywhere). Now the sales clerk knows I am a stranger in town.

"Which one of the Baltic Republics are you from?" he asks. "Poland," I reply. He laughs, "Poland is not a Soviet Republic." "Isn't it?" I ask.

The following day we fly to Tashkent. I am eager to see Central Asia again. The flight takes seven hours, crossing three time zones. This time watches are moved back. Landing at the Tashkent airport, we step into sizzling 93° weather. When we departed from Khabarovsk the temperature was some 40 degrees cooler! By now I have a cold and almost everyone on our tour is coughing.

Tashkent is the capital of the Uzbek Republic, also known as Uzbekistan. The fourth largest city in the USSR (after Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev), it has 2.8 million people. Uzbekistan has had many rulers — ancient Greeks, Tartars, Mongols, Turks and Russians. Central Asia was annexed by Imperial Russia in the 1860s. Tashkent, a bustling metropolis with many colleges, several theaters and museums, is an industrial and commercial center. Heavily damaged by an earthquake in 1966, the city has been restored.

Tashkent's indigenous population is Uzbek: the Uzbeks speak a language similar to Turkish. Racially they are a mixture of Mongols, Tartars and Turks, oriental in appearance with yellow skins and dark hair and eyes. The short men are slightly build, women petite and delicate-looking. Uzbeks are Moslems. There are Uzbek and Russian signs all over Tashkent. Red posters of Lenin with Uzbek inscriptions are a curious combination.

Except for the Uzbek signs, the city looks much like an average

At the market in Tashkent, an Uzbek woman sells dill.

Soviet city, with row upon row of gray high-rise apartment and office buildings. I was in Tashkent in 1942 and 1946, but nothing looks familiar now. One can tell Tashkent is in Central Asia because of its subtropical vegetation. Tall shade trees line most of the streets and irrigation canals flow through the city. Its numerous parks have roses, hibiscus, palms and cypress trees.

Hotel Uzbekistan is a huge 17-story white building, crowded with tourists from all the Western world, including Australia. Unfortunately the hotel appears to be poorly managed. Air conditioning cools only the lower levels, our eighth-floor room is hot. Television works only on the Uzbek channel and is of no use to me. After dark it cools off, allowing a good night's sleep.

Our Uzbek guide is a little more mature than his predecessors, about 35 years old. The highlight of our tour is the Museum of Decorative Arts, featuring richly colored hand-woven rugs, hand-embroidered tablecloths and jewel-encrusted robes. On the way back are several outdoor markets with a multitude of fruits and vegetables sold by Uzbek women dressed in colorful skirts, bright scarves and light-colored blouses. Men, wearing dark blue or black skullcaps embroidered with white thread, are selling barbecued lamb and chicken. Uzbek native clothes are very attractive.

The Uzbeks unquestionably maintain their cultural and ethnic identity. While most who live in the cities speak Russian and Uzbek, Uzbek is the language they use at home. Uzbeks living in villages are less fluent in Russian.

On the second day we visit a cotton-producing collective farm outside Tashkent. Cotton fields stretch for miles. The little white flowers feel like the cotton bought in a drug store. Most of the collective farmers are Uzbek, living in mud huts with thatched roofs. The huts front on little courtyards enclosed by walls made of mud; from the road only the windowless backs of the houses are visible, which seems an awkward arrangement but provides privacy. The huts are wired for electricity but have no other conveniences. Our guide says that the local population likes to live in their own homes, preferring them to high rises.

At the end of the tour the guide and I have a private talk in the hotel garden — it is not every day that he meets someone who lived in Frunze. His name is Talgat Akumbaev. He has lived in Tashkent all his life, but has traveled inside Russia quite a bit and spent some time in Poland during his army days. Talgat is more open than any other guide. Talking about life in U.S., Talgat asks if I find it easier than life in the Soviet Union. I reply that I would not have the energy to be a Soviet woman, describing my easy one-stop supermarket shopping, access to a car, time-saving electric appliances and disposable household articles such as paper plates and cups. He is very interested.

A Soviet housewife does not have it easy. She shops several times a week in several stores. She must carry her groceries, as few people have cars. Her refrigerator is very small. Clothes dryers and dishwashers are scarce. Milk bottles and glass containers must be saved, as stores seldom provide them. Paper plates, cups and Kleenex are unknown. Talgat notes that Uzbek women raise an average of five children, in addition to being breadwinners and homemakers. Yet Talgat would not want to live anywhere else, Tashkent is his home. "If America stops this senseless arms race, we might catch up with the West in respect to consumer goods," he says. We part, expressing hope for better USSR-USA relations. Talgat would like me to come back soon so that he can take me on one of his tours of Frunze.

Our next stop is Samarkand, a city famous for its many Moslem temples and mausoleums. In the new Intourist Hotel we find a throng of Western tourists. Unfortunately, our accommodations are substandard. Water pipes leak, electric plugs come out of walls, cooking odors penetrate upper floors. In spite of plentiful food in Central Asia, the food served here is tasteless. Grapes, watermelons, tomatoes and mineral water sustain me.

Samarkand, more than 2,000 years old, has a definite Mideastern flavor. Domes of Moslem temples and mausoleums dominate the skyline. Old blends with new: yellow and white apartment buildings with ornate columns mix with ruins of mosques. One remarkable mausoleum called Gur-Emir, built in 1404 by a Mongol ruler, Tamerlane, is a well-preserved octagonal building topped with a 40-foot dome made of blue glazed brick. Many visitors from other corners of Central Asia come to see Samarkand. Young couples of Moslem background often tour the mosques and tombs on their wedding day. One wedding party on the grounds of Gur-Emir treats us to chocolate candy and graciously lets us snap their picture. All the mosques we see are museums — we are not shown one single working mosque.

Before boarding a plane to Moscow, Pat and I see Giselle performed by the Samarkand Ballet Company. The concert hall is lovely, the dancers young and graceful — we enjoy the performance very much.

On the plane to Moscow I meet a Soviet Army officer, a lieutenant colonel in the medical corps. He is an Armenian on his way to Yerevan, the capital of Armenia. He is excited to meet an American woman and wants to talk. He asks if there is a Communist Party in the U.S. I tell him there is, but that it is very small and its influence on American politics is negligible. "I am a Communist," he announces. "You mean you are a party member," I interject. He is. Party membership has not hurt the doctor's career: at age 34 he has achieved a rather high military rank. He agrees that joining the party enhanced opportunities for advancement — he supports the party and accepts difficult assignments. He served in Laos and Vietnam with Soviet medical teams.

The doctor believes the bad publicity the U.S. gets in the Soviet press. Soviet newspapers paint a grim picture of America: millions unemployed, homeless and hungry. I point out that America is not a perfect society, that we have social problems and discuss them openly. The Soviet press presents an unbalanced view of the U.S. and exaggerates its problems. Very seldom are American accomplishments in the realm of science and technology mentioned.

The conversation turns to American newspapers. My Armenian friend gets a little confused: "If the editorials express one point of view and the columnists another, what is the reader to think?" he asks. It is difficult for this obviously intelligent man to understand that an American reader makes up his own mind. A Soviet reader is told what to think. Russia has no tradition of free press — the Soviet government did not invent censorship, it was there long before the Revolution. There is, however, one significant difference: the Tsarist government did not forbid travel abroad nor did it prevent Russians from reading foreign papers. Many Russians published in the West and their books and articles were brought to their homeland. Lenin spent many years writing articles and pamphlets in western Europe and his writing inspired the revolution at home.

As we say goodbye, the doctor expresses hope for greater cultural exchanges between our two countries. He would very much like to visit several U.S. hospitals.

Back at the Cosmos hotel in Moscow and feeling utterly miserable, I go to see a doctor. A young dark-haired woman inquires about my symptoms. She looks in my throat and pronounces it inflamed. The doctor gives me four prescriptions and some samples — two for the throat, cough tablets and aspirin. Apparently aspirin is not sold over the counter in Russia. I stand in four lines in a neighborhood drugstore. The doctor's visit was free; the medicine costs about four roubles ($5.20). I take the medicine and collapse in bed until dinner.

Tonight is our tour's last night together. We present Irina with several English books and a bottle of perfume. A spokesman for the group tells her how much we enjoyed her as our guide. She appreciates the gifts. She enjoyed the tour too: it is not every day she gets to visit Siberia. I wish she were a little more personal in her remarks. I feel terrible so I say my goodbyes early. Irina and I hug. She hopes I will come back soon.

On October 8 Pat and I leave Moscow. Giving Pat's luggage a passing glance, the customs clerk chooses me for a thorough search. The clerk goes through every piece of my luggage, my pocketbook and coat pockets — looking for gold, or so she says. She finds nothing suspicious. Again I hear from the passport control clerk that I do not look like my picture. This time I lose patience and say: "It's too bad. This passport is good for 10 more years and I am not getting another picture until 1995!" The clerk looks at me in disbelief and lets me go.

As the Aeroflot takes off for Helsinki, I breathe a sigh of relief. I have a strange feeling that I have been cut off from the world, I do not know what has been happening. Everywhere I went in Russia I read newspapers, but I only know a few disconnected facts: the U.S. East Coast was hit by hurricane Gloria; Gorbachev visited France and was received as a leader of a great country by President Mitterand (the papers did not tell me what the two leaders discussed); the Soviet Foreign Minister Sheverdnadze visited Washington and met with Secretary of State Shultz. "Their talks were useful," but I have no idea what they talked about. Soviet papers are thin, they consist of four or five pages. Foreign news is buried on the back pages. I plan to catch up on world news in Finland.

During a two-day stay in Finland I buy the European editions of the Herald Tribune and Time magazine and gain a better idea of what happened in the world during my visit to the USSR. I also satisfy my craving for orange juice and perked coffee, both unavailable in Russia.

Having had several months to reflect on my recent experiences in the Soviet Union, I am amazed how little some things have changed. Life in rural Russia is almost as primitive as it was in the 1940s. Shortages of consumer goods persist. People in the cities are dressed better — by and large they have adopted Western styles in clothing. The housing situation is a little better, most families now have their own living quarters.

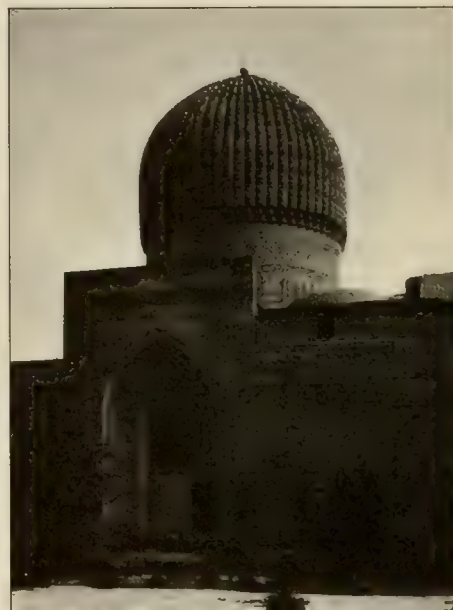

Throughout my travels I found the constant presence of political slogans and Lenin's pictures on public buildings very annoying. The Soviet people live with slogans and pay little attention to them. Lenin remains their most durable hero.

The people of the Soviet Union are more relaxed now than in the 1940s. The reign of terror is over. A Soviet citizen who completely accepts the system may live in peace now.

It is clear to me that the Soviet people support their government. At the time I was in Russia, they did not yet know much about Gorbachev, but had high hopes for the future. The Soviets at this point do not want radical changes in their system. They do not long for Western-style democracy. Unquestionably they want peace. In spite of the bad publicity the United States gets in the Soviet press, the people of the USSR are friendly to Americans. They are also interested in our country.

I am determined to go back to Russia in a few years and hope that the relations between our two nations will improve. We must find a way to coexist peacefully.□

You Can Do It!

By Nannette McBurney Crowdus '57

Nannette and husband, Bill, preparing a house specialty: So. Georgia B-BQ.

One of the most talked about phenomena in our society today is the changing role of women. The media reports unceasingly on every aspect of women in the work force — statistics, marital status, education and achievements, to name a few. We read about day-care centers and housekeepers. We consider quality of time spent with children as opposed to full-time mothering, and its effects on the formative years. We learn that working mothers feel positive but somewhat guilty about their relationships with their children and that children whose mothers work are more independent, responsible and mature.

We become aware of stress, sexual harassment, the old boy network, the lack of female senior managers or corporate directors. We admire those Super Women who want it all, get it all and cope with it all — perfect children, supportive and unthreatened husbands, wardrobes without mistakes in all the right colors, fingernails all the same length and six-figure salaries. We respect the women who have decided not to be perfect and are helping to kill off the Super Woman myth.

All of this attention could be intimidating to a woman interested in joining or returning to the workplace after a number of years at home. Statistics and surveys can prove anything, but it is true that only 2% of the senior managers in Fortune 500 companies are women. Of those 2%, 70% have no children. Women with MBAs take home only 80% of the figure their male counterparts enjoy.

But things are changing. Thirty-seven percent of the MBA candidates at Northwestern's Kellogg School of Management are women and percentages at other professional schools continue to rise. And good news for those of us who have reached that fortieth birthday watershed: the mature look is in. Consider Linda Evans, Joan Collins, Elizabeth Taylor and the Golden Girls. A modicum of gray hair creates respect and suggests experience to employers these days, especially those who have read the surveys indicating that older women are more productive than younger ones because of fewer distractions.

Women college graduates of the '80s seem undaunted by the media and its quest to scrutinize the working woman. After all, they did not just "get jobs" following graduation; they placed their Pappagalloed feet on career paths while wearing tidy suits and little bow ties. And they seem to be successful at being whatever they want to be, with the assurance and confidence of those who know that they can compete with anyone, anywhere, at any level. They are professionals. I look at my daughter — Colgate '84 — and admire the spirit and commitment. I am impressed daily by the gumption, drive and competitiveness of the younger women with whom I work.

As I look back on my entry into the job market 11 years ago at age 40, I marvel at the changes in my life, my attitude and my expectations. I have been stretched, challenged, flattened and fleshed out again by circumstances, people and opportunities. By some I am considered knowledgeable on the real estate industry as a vertical market with emphasis on training vehicles and computers. That piece of information probably amazes my Class of '57 classmates as much as it does me.

This article contains the story of my arrival at that dubious distinction and some observations based on the experience. They are offered with the hope that some readers will find them a useful preparation for the workday world and that others will nod their heads, saying, "Yes, that is the way it is."

My first steps certainly were not very assured or confident. My children were teenagers, my husband a marketing executive and I was busy, busy with finite volunteer projects which were useful, enjoyable and time-consuming. In the mid-seventies Boston had more than its share of young professional women. Many of the members of my volunteer committees in their 20s and 30s had interesting full or part-time jobs. More and more of my working six and seven days a week, not to mention evenings. But as the commission checks increased, so did my confidence, assurance and commitment to being successful. My cocktail conversation began to include mortgage rates and equity financing. I learned to deal with bankers, lawyers, appraisers, builders and the fascinating, sometimes maddening people who became my clients.

When we moved back to Chicago, I decided to look for a selling job

Resources people were welcoming — after all, I was a member. It seems that there was a new sales position to market several products nationally to REALTORS®. So I was ushered into the office of the vice president of marketing for one of the association's affiliates or subsidiaries for an interview. Oh yes — mustache, 30s, three-piece suit.

Suddenly those years in real estate became a valuable credential. I knew the buzz words and understood the people who would be my customers. We had a match and I learned very quickly about the glamor of executive travel. Every other week for about six months I was on the road. Generally I left on Monday and came back on Friday, renting a car and living out of the trunk as I moved from city to city and motel to motel in a particular area. In addition, I attended state REALTOR® conventions, making presentations. Believe me, I missed my lovely home, my comfy bedroom and my husband! The delayed or canceled airplanes, the rented cars in poor repair, the airline food and the hassle were all balanced by the interesting people, the new cities and the sales. My address book contains names of good friends met during the travels over the years from Huntsville to San Diego, from Toronto to Mexico City. There is, however, part of travel that never changes, and that is the desire to be home instead of where you are at the end of the day.

Fortunately this peripatetic existence changed when I was promoted to sales management, and in 1983 I moved to the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® — the largest trade association in the world with 720,000 members — and became the marketing director for office computers. Currently I am director of marketing services, principally developing marketing plans and strategies for all products and services offered by the association for its members.

The direction this six-year journey took did not just happen. Timing and serendipity, training and experience helped, of course, but I like to think that my liberal arts background was a major reason. There is power in knowing that answers to questions are available, if you know how to use a card catalog, friends and acquaintances were working or seriously thinking about it. We looked at ourselves and said, "Why not take our talents and skills to the marketplace and see what they are worth?"

After all, I had an excellent education and had raised considerable amounts of money for numerous projects. Unfortunately for my self-esteem, volunteer work was considered fun time. There was a need in me to be recognized as an individual achieving something meaningful on my own, not as an extension of my family or my husband.

The first job was right in the town of Wellesley, Massachusetts, only about a mile from our house. I believed I had to be available to my children if they needed me and becoming a REALTOR® with a local firm seemed ideal. As an independent contractor, I could work when I wanted to and still fulfill my roles as wife, mother, hostess, volunteer, etc. etc.

That naïveté vanished very quickly. Being a REALTOR® is demanding and being a really successful one is really demanding. Volunteer hours seemed restful after a few months of that could lead into management instead of staying in real estate. So the cycle of newspaper ad/send resume/interviews began, which holds such an unshakeable control over our lives. Every interview was conducted by a young man with a mustache, usually in his 30s, wearing a three-piece suit. Though I had carefully left my graduation date off my resume, I am certain each interviewer figured out fairly quickly that the interviewee was older than he. The favorite comment was, "Real estate? Oh, you've never sold a product." I had foolishly considered homes products and that selling skills are selling skills. Executive recruiters were not receptive even though my earnings were high because I had no "real" managerial experience. (Vice-chairing the Boston Junior League Show House wasn't a managerial feat?) Pure stubbornness kept the search rolling.

One day I noticed a large blue "R" outside the building at 430 North Michigan Avenue in downtown Chicago. THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®! The headquarters of the trade association I belonged to. Why not look in? The Human read, use some deductive reasoning and, if all else fails, ask an expert for assistance. That same deductive reasoning has illuminated difficult decisions, providing insight into never-before-encountered situations and personalities. A few interesting theorems have grown out of this process, and have served me well enough to be guiding axioms now. They are not scholarly, nor are they clever, innovative or even terribly original. Many of you probably have arrived at the same conclusions, but for those who are considering entering the work force, a review might offer a shortcut.

"Expect to pay dues." No one walks off the street and becomes an instant success without paying dues. Everyone learns, fails, strives, worries, battles and finally succeeds to repeat the cycle again. It is required. A look at recent women MBAs and attorneys suggests that there is an easier path compared with 15 years ago. Yet there are women who have risen from the secretarial pool of 30 years ago who think that promotions come too fast for those who arrived on the scene 10 years ago. Now that there are more opportunities and more choices, setting priorities and trade-offs among career/family/children is even more difficult. Prices are paid for success. The individual has to decide if the return on the investment of self is worth it.

"Be prepared." Not only the Boy Scouts' Marching Song (remember Tom Lehrer?), but the watchword of a successful executive. Frederick the Great said (I paraphrase), "Being defeated is not a disgrace; being surprised is." Know as much as you can know in any situation, consider every alternative, the worst case, the best case and read the people involved. Being prepared allows you to take calculated risks. But be prepared to be surprised. Even excellent research does not guarantee clairvoyance. Occasionally, surprise others.

"Be prepared to face discrimination." The most disheartening and frustrating acts are those performed unwittingly by lip-service feminists, exhibiting a total lack of sensitivity. The blatant chauvinists are the easiest to deal with, since they embarrass everyone except themselves.

"Shop for space." This admonition was uttered frequently by Harriet Rogers to me over 30 years ago while I desperately maintained "the galloping position" atop one of Sweet Briar's school horses. The beast was tearing around the riding ring (actually at a sedate trot) as I was seeking room among the other very large horses. Looking ahead and planning is not only part of being prepared; it is vital to setting expectations, goals and objectives for yourself that are attainable. Shop for mental space as well. Close the workday world out when you can, preferably all weekend, to enjoy your family and your friends and recharge your batteries. The problems have a way of becoming opportunities when you give them a little space.

"Politics is a dirty word." Don't believe anyone who says, "I don't play politics." Politics is the art of the possible and an honorable one. Try to understand the corporate culture existing around you and the present power base to avoid surprises that can be devastating. There is nothing evil or Machiavellian about knowing the players and understanding their positions in the corporate game. Take the initiative and invite co-workers, including men, to lunch, to take a walk at noon, to play sports. Visibility is crucial; they need to know you and you need to know them.

"Change is inevitable." Heraclitus the Obscure, a Greek philosopher, explained his belief in the fifth century B. C. and it was explained to me in Classical Civilization at Sweet Briar. Nowadays we say, "Go with the flow," which would please Heraclitus, since he based his views on the passage of water as it meets obstacles and changes course. The message is to accept change and be flexible in dealing with it. Careers can crash and burn because individuals fail to change a management style in response to a change in circumstances and personalities. Learn to tack — but without compromising your standards. Change is demanding, but today's woman is handling evolving, shifting responsibilities better and better.

Change can be comforting as well as challenging. Change can offer another chance and another opportunity to use the experience gained in a similar situation. Count on change and make it a friend.

Cognitive flexibility leads to an objective understanding of limitations and strengths, which provides the necessary confidence and assurance to take a deep breath and plunge in. It helps enormously to have your family, your husband, a friend, a boss say, "You can do it." Even achievers and eagles need the wind beneath their wings.

Women achievers in the workplace are no longer a news story. There are too many nowadays for readers and listeners to be surprised. Any and all could have written this article with diverse perspectives. Women have always been quiet achievers; the accomplishments are simply in a more visible, competitive arena with financial measures of success. The challenges are there and the choices increase geometrically as more opportunities are seized. Choose your way by chance or by design, and with compliments to Robert Frost, it will make a difference that you could never imagine. □

Annual Report of the Vice President for Business Affairs and Treasurer

By Thomas N. Connors

In preparing the annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1986, I could not help but look at last year's report which was written by my good friend and predecessor, Peter Daniel. Peter remarked that he felt mixed emotions as he wrote his last of 32 such reports for the College. I, too, have mixed emotions as I prepare to summarize Peter's last year at the fiscal helm of the College for you. Peter's wonderful stewardship of the College's financial resources will be hard to follow but I am certainly excited about the challenge.

Total assets of the College on June 30, 1986 were $69,788,000 compared to $62,820,000 for the previous year: an increase of $6,968,000 or 11%. The major factor that led to this increase was the very strong growth in the market value of the College's Endowment Fund which increased $6,000,000 to the $40 million level. Total revenues of the College were up $1,280,000 or 9.6% while total College expenditures reflected a smaller increase resulting in another successful year for the operations of the College. All in all, Peter's last year was one of the strongest financial years in the College's history.

And so fiscal year 1985-86 is also history and we must now address the current fiscal year, 1986-87. We look forward to a very challenging and innovative year in which Sweet Briar enters into an era of strategic planning for the future. The next 12 months will be very exciting as the entire Sweet Briar community plans the future direction of the College; a time when prospective student pools are declining in number and changing in character. I am just very happy to be able to play a part in the shaping of this wonderful College's future. □

Working Mothers and Their Children

By Catherine H. C. Seaman

Professor of Anthropology and Sociology, Sweet Briar College

Women, especially mothers, are in the news today. The images are not always flattering. For example, The Washington Post (November 9, 1986) published a news article under the headline "Modern Moms: Bringing Down Baby?" For the most part, the article reports the effects of group day-care centers on very young infants. However, blaming moms attracts readers. Not long before this, a major television network produced a news documentary entitled "Working Mothers: Who Wins, Who Loses?" Again, mothers are the issue. It is unlikely that the network will ever produce "Working Fathers: Who Wins, Who Loses?" or that the newspaper will publish the headline "Modern Moms: Bringing Up Baby." It is not news when fathers work; neither is it news when mothers bring up baby — that is what society expects.

What is "news" today is the support of something quite old: the traditional pro-natal, pro-homemaker ideology. Deeply rooted in American society, this ideology persists in the face of the society's anti-natal behavior, demonstrated by the decline of the birthrate from 4.5 children in 1870 to 1.8 in 1980. Today even the most fervent pro-natal persons seldom have 15 children, estimated to be the biological maximum for a group of women (Weeks, 1986:84). The decline in the birthrate, together with employment opportunities for women outside the home, allows and even enjoins modern mothers to work. Over half of the mothers do so now and by 1990 it is estimated that 75% will be employed in the work force. Although the nation benefits from mothers' employment, it does little to develop a national child care policy to assist working mothers and protect the nation's rising generation of citizens. It is easier, cheaper in the short run, to force parents to find their own child care and to blame mothers if arrangements are not ideal.

The pressures to work for pay, together with the ideology that condemns "working" mothers, create complex dilemmas for women. They are forced to assess the benefits they and their families gain when they work for pay.

□ What is a working mother?

In our society, the concept of work has a dualistic meaning. It is a rational means to achieve a materialistic goal and it has a moral value — it is good to work. It is especially good to be paid to work. This explains in part why "working mothers" and "modern moms" both refer to mothers who work outside the home for pay. Mothers who work at home don't really "work." Yet most mothers have always worked. It is society's view of work, and the differential prestige assigned to the work of women in the domestic sphere, that creates a dilemma.

The oldest work of women was no doubt similar to that found in contemporary hunting and gathering societies — women work to gather wild plants and distribute this food primarily to their individual families. It is a task so crucial that customs arise to insure a spacing of children to allow mothers to work: it is difficult to carry more than one small child on gathering expeditions. In contrast, men's work as hunters takes them outside the domestic domain. In addition, the successful hunter distributes the meat he has produced throughout the band, not within his family alone. He is "paid" when another successful hunter shares his meat with the band. The public nature of men's production and distribution brings men prestige. The same principle seems to operate in our own society. Society expects men to work outside the home, and rewards them for doing so. Mothers who work without pay in the home apparently are not considered to be working. Mothers "work" only when they, like men, work for pay outside the home.

□ Are mothers who work outside the home healthier and happier?

Numerous research publications over the last ten years or so suggest that women who work outside the home are psychologically and physically healthier and happier. Birnbaum (1975) reports data from a study which compared the self-esteem and feelings of three groups of well-educated women. One group had been graduated with honors from the University of Michigan 15 to 25 years earlier and had subsequently married, had children and stayed home. The second group of women had earned the Ph.D. or M.D., married, had children and worked as faculty members at the University of Michigan. The third group also had earned the Ph.D. or M.D. and were employed as faculty members, but had remained single. Of the three groups, the homemakers who had never worked outside the home reported having the lowest self-esteem, feeling the most lonely, the least attractive, the least happy with their marriages and the least competent, even at child care. These findings seem to support the earlier data of Bernard, reported in her book The Future of Marriage (1972), which indicated that women suffer if their sole identity is wife and mother — they are unhealthier and endure more depression. Their husbands, in contrast, have an advantage over both their wives and single men — they are healthier and happier and more likely than single men to have better jobs with higher pay.

Studies in the '80s seem to confirm earlier findings. A combination of marriage and employment is advantageous for women. In 1984 Gore and Manigione reported data obtained from the study of a random sample of 1,111 men and women in Boston. One purpose of the study was to determine why women had higher rates of depression than men. Findings indicated that the difference could be accounted for by the fact that men were nearly twice as likely as women to be working full-time and married. As Tavris and Wade note (1984:280), work outside the home for pay seems to give women a sense of mastery that marriage and children alone do not provide. Many housewives seem to experience a loss of esteem and feelings of helplessness, hopelessness and depression because there is no reward for the job they do at home and because they are socially isolated and financially dependent on their husbands.

However, it is unlikely that feelings alone account for the rise in the number of women in the work force. The economic position of families and the availability of jobs in the service sector may be powerful factors that attract women to the work force.

☐ The family income

The entry of women into the work force is the most important factor that affects family incomes today. In fact two incomes enabled many households to maintain their standard of living during the inflation of the '70s. Today the young middle class family must deal with the threat of downward mobility because material rewards for the family, such as a house, vacations and college for children, have become more difficult to obtain. It is small wonder that more and more mothers work for pay. Half of the mothers with small children under one year of age work today — a 95% increase since 1970. The rise in the numbers of mothers at work raises questions about child care. What is the effect of the employment of parents on very young children?

☐ Assessing the effect of mothers in the work force on children

Numerous publications report research data on the effect of working mothers on their children. However, Howell (1973) alerts us to the prejudice against working mothers found in much of the literature. Following an extensive review of the research literature, she concludes that deep-seated beliefs and prejudice fog the entire issue. She cites one researcher who began his report with the statement that he had always believed maternal employment to be a potent factor in producing maladjustment among children. Other researchers related maternal employment to data from the study of children separated from their mothers and families under special circumstances. For instance, they utilized studies of children in orphanages; children separated during distressing circumstances such as the serious illnesses of mother or child, or even the mother's death; or separation of children from families during time of war. As Howell notes, these studies have little to do with ordinary conditions of parenting by employed mothers who are with their children all but eight to ten hours of the day, five days of the week.

Howell also found that many studies confounded maternal employment with many other variables such as poverty, social class, single-parent family life and undesirable or unavailable child care facilities. Moreover, researchers defined "maternal employment" in many different ways. Some counted any employment of the mother, whether part or full-time, during any time of the child's life. Finally, she noted that numerous weaknesses in the research designs produced spurious data.

Howell suggests several points to keep in mind when examining the effect of maternal employment on children. First, "ideal" child care cannot be defined, since needs vary with family and the age and personality of the child. Second, positive, effects of maternal employment are more likely to occur if the mother is supported by family members and finds satisfaction in work outside the home.

Howell also suggests that certain precautions should be kept in mind. Child care is expensive and good child care may be difficult to find. In addition, there are times in the development of a child when stress is already present. During these periods, changes in caretaking should be avoided. Nevertheless, maternal employment per se should not have a single and uniform effect on the lives of children. Other intervening variables such as the style of child-rearing may be critical. No one is a good mother by instinct — there is no assurance that a parent who stays at home will have a better style of child-rearing than one who works outside the home.

Rosenfeld's article "Modern Moms: Bringing Down Baby?" is a more sensational assessment of child care. The article actually focuses on the effects of day care for the very young children of working mothers. Yet the headline produces an image of all mothers of today: "modern moms" (but not modern fathers) bring all of their babies "down" — whatever form of child care the mothers utilize, whatever the age of their children. Those who go on to read the subheadings — "Insecure Babies," "Nervous Experts" and "No Ax Murderers" — are not reassured.

However, a careful reading of the article presents a somewhat more balanced view. Rosenfeld devotes most of the space to psychologists who utilize the "nurture" theory of attachment to express alarm over the effects of day care on very young infants. Yet she does cite biologically-oriented psychologists who believe the importance of mother in early childhood is "grossly exaggerated, largely by Freudians with a cultural agenda to keep women at home full-time." Beyond the disparate theoretical approaches, Rosenfeld raises the question of the responsibility of politicians and employers to assure availability of child care for working parents.

☐ Is there a national responsibility to assist with child care?

Rosenfeld suggests that most politicians and employers are unhelpful in solving the problems of the care of children in the United States. She writes that conservative politicians would solve the problem by removing women from the work force altogether, ignoring the question of how women who must work in order to eat will be protected from starvation. Other politicians simply avoid the problem by crying "Sweden! Socialism!". Employers, for the most part, are shortsighted in that they do not see how child-rearing is their problem. They ignore their own long-term self-interest which requires the kind of child care which will produce future generations of workers who are competent, responsible, ethical, drug-free and mentally healthy.

A decade ago, Safilion-Rothschild (1975) reported an examination of women's occupational options in 23 countries at various levels of economic development. Support of working mothers tended to fall into two categories. In the first category were the nations that provide no systemwide professional help or day care for working mothers, in spite of the fact that many mothers work outside the home: the United States, Canada, Argentina, numerous European nations, Japan and Australia. The cultural values, ignoring the reality of women in paid employment, stated that children need their mothers and that child care is a full-time occupation. The ideology legitimated the lack of support for child care in the face of the increasing numbers of working mothers. Nations that assist with child care include the Scandinavian countries, Finland, Hungary, Poland, the Soviet Union and China. Even here, the focus was more often on how to get women out of the home and into the work force, rather than how to provide adequate assistance. In addition, during times of economic reversal, support weakened.

In the absence of national or community support, the most likely support for the working mother should be her spouse, if she has one. How much assistance can a mother who works outside the home expect from her spouse who also works?

□ Fathers and husbands: what is their responsibility?

Fathers and families benefit economically when mothers work, since two incomes appear to be the only way many families maintain their standard of living. However, most fathers seem to hold to traditional roles even when their wives must adapt to changing roles. For example, a married father has one role, his work role, while a working mother has two. She works in paid employment in the work force, and works again when she comes home, in the domestic area. Not many husbands and fathers assume the role of co-homemaker when their wives work. Few take on the added responsibilities of housework and few increase the time spent with children, calculated to be only about 12 minutes per day. Recent studies indicate that men are doing more to help, but liking it less. Blumstein and Schwartz (1983) report that husbands who participate in the tasks of family life feel more competent and involved as fathers, but may be less happy and less satisfied with marriage. In addition, men may feel like losers if their role of the provider declines and they may experience a loss of power and status as their wife's ability to make decisions increases.

□ Summary

We are living in times of great change. Women are in the news because their roles as working mothers are changing faster than the values of society. In the face of a traditional pro-natal, pro-homemaker ideology, women are having fewer children and working more in paid employment. Mothers who are paid to work outside the home seem to be healthier and happier than those who work as unpaid homemakers. The declining birthrate allows mothers to work, while paid employment brings prestige and the possibility of a higher standard of living. However, mothers receive the bulk of the blame for problems associated with the care of children, especially the use of day care centers for very young children. In fact, sensational headlines seem to scapegoat mothers. Howell advises us to evaluate carefully the research which purposes to explain the effect of mothers in the work force on children — prejudice and poor research practices led to spurious data. At the same time, she warns that good child care is expensive and difficult to find, and that changes in child care may add to the stress of children at critical times.

Politicians and employers in the United States and elsewhere either close their eyes to the changes in the status of working women or take a shortsighted view of their own interests in addressing the problems of child care. Whatever the arrangement for child care, working mothers must fill two working roles, one in paid employment and the other at home. Husbands apparently are adjusting slowly to the considerable changes in home life, but as their roles of house husband and child caretaker increase, so, evidently, do their dissatisfactions with marriage.

Change seems inevitable. Changes in one part of a system always produce changes in all parts of the system. While societies seem to change through existing institutions, institutional change may be uneven. Less powerful elements (women and children) may bear the brunt of change, but all of the social system eventually must be involved. □

Editor's note: This article is based upon a lecture designed for the Continuing Studies Program in the fall of 1986. Dr. Seaman presented the talk to students and other members of the Sweet Briar community as part of the chaplain's office lecture series entitled "Current Events Over Dinner," and to the Turning Point students at a luncheon sponsored by the Career Planning and LIFETIMES Center. Dr. Seaman is continuing her research on this topic and will discuss the results at a seminar on Friday, May 22, 1987, the opening Friday of Reunion Weekend.

Woody Bequest to Sweet Briar

By Julia Sadler de Coligny '34

Have I got a story for you? Ever since I heard about the generous bequest (which may amount to over $400,000 before it is settled) made to Sweet Briar by Marjorie Abbott Woody with no strings attached, I have been scurrying around gathering the facts of her life story so that I could report them to you.

At the outset, I want to acknowledge with gratitude the help given by those who knew her personally, whom I was able to interview. First, there is her lawyer and trusted friend, the Honorable William Rosenberger, Jr. and his secretary, Anne Smith. Next came her oldest sister, Mrs. Annie A. Wilkerson, who lives in Madison Heights. Another friend who helped her with her duties as justice of the peace and who is a legatee is Margaret Burks, clerk of the General Court of Amherst. Reporting on Sweet Briar's contacts with the Woodys were Peter V. Daniel, retired vice president and treasurer of the College, and Dorothy Jester, dean of students, retired. Without all of them my information would be limited, to say the least.

Marjorie Abbott Woody, daughter of George W. and Ola Layne Abbott, was born in 1915 and lived her entire life in Amherst County. She was the middle child in a family of 11 children, six girls and five boys. She graduated from Madison Heights High School and took a business course at the Virginia Commercial School in Lynchburg, equipping herself to be a proficient secretary and business manager. There were few indulgences in her life but when she made up her mind that she wanted something, she went after it with a vengeance! One desire she had was to play the piano: at 12 she began study under Mrs. Elizabeth Shaner Gibbs, a Randolph-Macon Woman's College graduate, and she kept that up for a good many years. She became the first official pianist for the newly-completed Randolph Memorial Baptist Church. The other indulgence she "went after" was to have her portrait painted; the portrait is another gift to the College (see below). She was high-spirited, apparently into all sorts of activities. She was chosen Miss Amherst County in the beauty pageant when the Tobacco Festival was held in South Boston. Her sister, Annie Wilkerson, tells a story about the time Annie's expensive silk lace stockings (at least $3.00) disappeared. It turned out that Marjorie had "borrowed" them and worn them to visit a friend who just happened to be the sister of a new boyfriend she was trying to impress. Unfortunately she tangled with the friend's cat, ruining the stockings, but it was the family's first inkling of her interest in Buck, whom she later married.

Buck Woody and his brother, Linwood, owned and operated The Parkway Inn at the intersection of Routes 60 and 130 for a number of years. When Marjorie became a member of the team, she and Buck bought out Linwood, remodeled the facility and began full-scale operation of Buck's Place, which opened up a new world to Marjorie. Not having any children of her own, she took a keen interest in the young people who came to "Buck's" for dancing and sociability. In those days, places where Sweet Briar students were permitted to go with their dates had to pass rigorous inspection. Naturally, the Woodys were anxious for their facility to satisfy the demands of the Sweet Briar inspectors; it is said that they not only had tablecloths on the tables but were ready to expose whatever was under those tables on demand!

Peter V. Daniel, representing President Pannell's administration, remembers his visits of inspection there. He found the Woodys responsible and intent on abiding by the state liquor laws. Dorothy Jester, dean of students from 1947 to 1974 (when she became assistant dean of the College), tells of accompanying Dean Mary Pearl to give the place a thorough going-over. I can well imagine the tension of that confrontation, with the deans presenting their stipulations for a well-ordered place and the roadhouse-keepers giving assurance that it could be no other way. The deans were served a very fancy lunch and assured that "Buck's" would be closed to Sweet Briar students at 11:00 p.m.; their fears were calmed about alcoholic beverages being served and in general a good feeling was given. (Remember, there was no Bistro, as such on campus.) The session ended with Buck's Place being placed on The Approved List. That practically guaranteed the success of their business, and Marjorie Woody never forgot it. Those of you who remember the fastidiousness of our dean of students will appreciate Dot's telling me that when Marjorie came to Sweet Briar to thank them for their approval, she wore white gloves!

The best story I have to illustrate her deep concern for the young people she came to know through her duties as hostess at Buck's Place is about a young soldier on crutches, making his way home from the service with severe leg injuries. He stopped in at "Buck's" and talked with Marjorie, admitting his hopelessness about his prospects for recovery and leading a normal life. She was sympathetic and urged him to think positively. He came there often while he was in the area, but eventually had to go on his way. One morning some time later Marjorie opened the door to find the crutches and the chain holding his dog tags — an eloquent testimony to her helpfulness. She treasured them for the rest of her life, keeping the crutches close by and hanging her watch on the chain with the dog tags on her bedpost. (The watch was one she had received as a prize for some product she sold. It was not in her nature to buy one for herself.) When Anne Smith, her lawyer's secretary, came to Marjorie's house to take her to the hospital for what proved to be her final illness, she was very anxious to take her watch and chain with her; it was at that time she told Anne about her friendship with the wounded soldier and what it had meant to her.

Buck's Place was operated for about 15 years and then sold to Buck's brother, Edward, who leased the new building to the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank (now First Virginia Bank). Marjorie acted as a justice of the peace for a while, but the joy went out of her life after they gave up "Buck's." Her interest had been completely centered in the young people she saw there. She and Buck moved across Route 130 to a small house but immediately started work on a large house set back from the highway in a pine grove. It was a strongly-built house constructed from the cobblestones retrieved from the surface of 9th Street in downtown Lynchburg. Buck made a specialty of recreational equipment (an elaborate pool table inside and barbecue pits and picnic tables outside) — but this was no outlet for Marjorie, who became increasingly depressed and melancholy. She was put under the care of a psychiatrist, who later testified that she was of sound mind. During this unhappy period they were living in the big house. After Buck's death in February of 1984, Marjorie continued to live there alone until her death on May 13, 1985.

Her will was written not long before her death. It included special bequests to Madison Heights Baptist Church as a memorial to her parents, Ola Layne and George W. Abbott, and to Randolph Memorial Baptist Church where she was a member and had been the church's first pianist. Next she remembered by name certain friends and employees who had been kind and helpful. To her surviving siblings she left $50,000 each, but nothing to the heirs of her deceased siblings. The residue of her estate was left to Sweet Briar. Although she had feared that there would not be enough to take care of the pecuniary legacies she had designated by name, she need not have worried: after all named bequests were paid, more than half of the total estate remained.

Reaction on the part of relatives was immediate; a suit was filed in an effort to break the will. Her competence was questioned and her lawyer, the Honorable William Rosenberger, Jr., was sued by nine nieces and nephews for using undue influence — quite a spectacle, but friendly witnesses far outnumbered those in opposition. Dot Jester, Margaret Burks and others remember sitting outside the courtroom all day, waiting to be called. Peter Daniel was in the courtroom at the counsel table (representing Sweet Briar College's interests — not as a witness but as a symbol) at the request of counsel, the Honorable Henry M. Sackett III. With the doctor and lawyer giving facts in support of Marjorie Woody's sanity and competence, Judge Goad declared that there was no case and the will was declared valid.

As soon as the court case was settled, the named bequests were distributed. The final residue to which Sweet Briar is heir still is not certain, due to the sale of several pieces of real estate. Thanks to Marjorie's own careful husbanding of her resources, the sound judgment of her advisors and the appreciation of the value of real estate she owned, Sweet Briar will be forever grateful for her expression of gratitude for "Buck's" being on the approved list of places where Sweet Briar women could go. □

Strategic Planning at Sweet Briar

At the September 1986 Williamsburg meeting, the Sweet Briar Boards of Directors and Overseers began a formal strategic planning process. The purpose of this effort is to identify those factors in the external environment which will have an impact on the institution's future, and to look at the College's ability to fulfill its mission while adjusting to changing conditions. This is being done to better assure that proper decisions are made about the future of the College. Strategic planning involves identification of possible changes in direction and focus that must be taken to ensure a strong and vital institution in a future which will inevitably be different. It is hoped that the results of the strategic planning process will be a shared understanding of how our resources will be used to achieve our purposes.

Areas of study have been separated into five major categories, each being reviewed in depth by "issues planning committees" made up of Board members, faculty, staff, students, alumnae and parents. Each planning committee met in January or February to review a report from the committee that analyzed the external environment and to identify critical issues in their areas. Reports from each of these committees were submitted to the steering committee in February and March. At the April Board meeting, a preliminary report will be discussed

OBITUARY:

Drue Ella Matthews

Alumnae, faculty and staff members were saddened to learn of the death of Drue Ella Matthews which occurred in Delhi, India in mid-October of 1986. Miss Matthews was at Sweet Briar from 1937-1943 as a professor in the history department, and also served as assistant to the dean.

At the time of her death, she was traveling with a group of friends when she fell in the airport and broke a hip. This necessitated a hip replacement which was done successfully. However, Drue was one of those fairly rare people who had a violent toxic reaction to the standard bone cement used in the operation. This tragic result would have occurred regardless of where the surgery took place.

Class Notes

Julia Holt Coyle '47 writes that her mother, Isabel Wood Holt, is happily ticking along with her pacemaker and is very happy with her first great grandchildren, one aged 2 and the other 8 months. Isabel is confined to her bed except for walking around upstairs. She remembers with pride her SBC days and her adventures in NYC as a social worker at the YWCA and as a proofreader at Scribner's.

Helen Gaus is always interested in reading the alumnae magazine, and sends a big hello to Helen Mac, her classmate.

Marie Klooz, in Sandy Spring, MD, is legally blind now but still manages to correspond with Sweet Briar. She is overjoyed to have Muriel MacKenzie Kelly living not too far from her in Bethesda. Helen McMahon writes: "Jeannette 'Dan' Boone and I are still spending our summers in Little Switzerland, NC, returning to Sweet Briar in October. We would be happy to see you either here or there. We continue to see alumnae and camp friends in Little Switzerland, including Jane Guignard Curry who visits her brother Sanders there. Lydia Purcell Wilmer and Fred have lived at Westminster Canterbury in Lynchburg for several years so we see them at the Williams Associates dinners at Sweet Briar House and at other campus programs. Lorna Weber Dowlings' Christmas note brought news of her active life in Fort Worth, her scattered family, and especially a great-grandson, a 4th-generation doctor in her family!"

The time has come the walrus said to talk of many things — you will be reading this in the spring and it is only November

Peggy Williams Bayne, who lives in Norfolk also, has spent her last teaching years in public schools in Virginia Beach and Norfolk — Latin and French — and has written a book about a 200-year-old home she inherited upon the James River near Brems. The reviews list it as outstanding. Helen Smyser Talbott sounds like a busy grandmother and a physically active woman, swimming and walking, my kind of girl. I still take the campers at Camp Greenbrier, West Virginia, on their daytime hikes and take every whitewater canoe trip that comes my way. Mountain climbing lures me still Hilda Harpster checked in from Toledo. She says her travel days are over, but I'll bet she can be persuaded if you get on her; write, tell her the joys of reunion! Please do. I'm serious. Emily Halsell Marsten is just right up the way from Belle Haven, Virginia where we have lived half the year for some time. Christmas was with grandchildren in California. She, as do all of us, wonders where all the happy busy years have flown.

Tinka Johnson Brehme came East and spent a week with me in Norfolk in December. She has to be convinced that we'll be at SBC for our sixtieth next May. I quote, "I wonder how many can creep, crawl, or skate there, or want to." I'll bet on a dozen at least. Can you imagine a cocktail party in front of the Refectory before dinner the first night? Great, a wonderful mixer at the fiftieth.

Bass Boynton Rawlings has a paralyzed foot, uses a walker, and promises to be with us in May if it improves. Remember how well she walked to Bus Rhea's? She enjoyed the marriage of a granddaughter. Our family just returned from a similar "to-do" in Philadelphia. Long talk with Emily Jones Hodge about reunion. She married into a family that has close connections with my daughter-in-law. Small world

Alice Eskesen Ganzel was at the fiftieth with her husband and they were just across the hall from The and me. She wants Sweet Briar to do Elderhostel once again. Her schedule sounds wonderful. Among other things, it says "tennis". We need to work on Frankie Sample Holmlund. She says no to the sixtieth because it is too early to leave Arizona. Not at all — anyone who can winter there can afford a three-day Virginia trip. We need you, Franie!

Libbo Matthews Wallace and Harry are "still swimming". If I swim it is when we go over on a whitewater canoe trip. Her grands are at Harvard, Haverford, Davidson, and Denison. Mine, at U.V.A., Wm. and Mary, one graduated SBC last year, one still undecided for September, one completed U. of Del., married. M. Brown Wood marvels that so many of us are "still hanging on". They are scared not to, Madeline. Compie still hears from M. Brown. Connie Van Ness and Sue Milligan in CA. Compie says her painting is coming to a slow halt.

The first thing Jerry Reynolds Dreisbach looks for when the new alumnae magazine comes in is our class letter. Jerry is still traveling but — she says — at a slower pace. In Feb. she flew to Acapulco to join a Panama Canal cruise and visited her grandson in Costa Rica; July she had an interesting tour of Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and P.E.I. where she went through the home of Anne of Green Gables; Sept. she was in CA, and Dec. and Jan., Charlottesville.

Lib Wood McMullan's grand-daughter, Lisa Ruffin, will be married in April '87 to James Harrison. Lisa has written the text for a book on American styles of flower arranging.

Martha Ambrose Nunnally has three new great-grandchildren to brag about.

Gretchen Orr Hill is moving back to Eleven Prospect Street, South Dartmouth, Mass. 02748 since her husband's death. San Antonio is too hot. Camp Greenbrier in West Virginia has marvelous summer weather, especially when you live in a cabin on a river bank. I stay into the fall until frost.

Rebecca Manning Cutler had a visit to Sicily during the Achille Lauro hijacking. She has given up what she calls "euphemistically" the practice of law. She and Howard see Cates Wall and they go to South Carolina Jan.-May each year. Beatrice Carson Marks wrote last May that she lives in Arizona but loves summering in Rockport, Mass., with a son and grandson near.

Daphne Bunting Blair and Larry are grandparents to Gordon and Sean Blair and, by son #2, to a brand-new baby girl, Morgan Constance Blair. Daphne and Larry still spend their summers with Dot ('28) in the woods of Ontario. Elsetta (Bebe) Gilchrist Barnes is a retired landscape architect. She and Dick continue to be active in Crystal River on the West coast of Florida on Dixie Bay. Summers they spend in Cashiers, NC, mostly on the golf course at High Hampton Inn and the Country Club.

We had a wonderful Christmas meeting in Norfolk — the best ever. Ann Marshall Whitley '47, curator of the Sweet Briar museum, gave an excellent talk, accompanied by slides. Among those attending were Catherine Johnson Brehme who was visiting me from San Marino, CA, and Meg Williams Bayne, from our class. Other guests included Frances Murrell Rickards '10 and Mary McCaa Deal '19. It was a fine affair.

This is a critical year in our lives, and I know that most of us are timid about travel and alone for the first time, which makes us hesitant about flying to Lynchburg [someone from the College meets you and takes you back to the airport]. If you give in, you will always regret the fact. From experience I can tell you the visit is well worth it. Sweet Briar needs us old gals too.

Isabelle Bush Thomasson was busy for most of 1986 campaigning for her seat on the Alabama State Board of Education, on which she has served for 12 years. The Federal Court redistricted the board so Isabelle had 11 new counties in which she had never campaigned before. She won, after the 3 hard campaigns — primary, run-off, and the general election in November — and will be installed for her 4th term in January.

Agnes Cleveland Stackhouse and Glenn went to England and Scotland in May and June visiting gardens with the Brooklyn Botanical Society. They had a week in London and one in Dublin. In Sept. they went to Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard for a week with the American Horticultural Society.

Jean Cole Anderson after reunion visited her daughter Lovat at the beach. After that another drought, again with water restrictions.

Virginia Cooke Rea and Fritz had a visit in August from the grandson of a French orphan who was supported, in Virginia's name, by her great grandmother in 1917 when his father was killed and his home destroyed when Germany occupied France. Daughter Jane and her husband are adopting a Korean baby in Salem OR. Virginia and Fritz go to Lynchburg this fall to donate opera glasses which came from her grandmother's home there, now an historical landmark, the Blackford house.

Jean Countryman Presba sold their home of 30 years. From May to Nov their address will be Rt. 1 Box 2410 Neshkoro WI 54960. They will be on Siesta Key, Florida for 6 mos. but send no Florida address.

Virginia Derby Howse will celebrate her 55th wedding anniversary next April with her 3rd grade sweetheart. "It's awesome to find you are head of the clan and old settlers! My hobbies are gardening (no mean feat in dry, windy Kansas), photography, keeping scrapbooks for the DAR and Historical Museum, and learning to cook. Bob is a cook fit for gourmets and has always done our cooking. At 65 I got interested and defy anyone to beat me at any dish that does not have to go on the stove!" Her clubs are: bridge, poker, garden, book and Pi Beta Phi Alumnae. She was named sustaining member of the year by the Junior League of Wichita and an honorary member of the Institute of Logopedics Women's Board and is starting her 16th year on the Women's Board of our Historical Museum. Son Christopher is 6 ft., 5 in., unmarried, a world traveler, writer, lecturer and consultant for a chain of hotels.

Daughter Candy is married to Michael Kelly Finnigan, a "keyboard man" who also produces, writes, arranges, sings and goes on the Road with Crosby, Stills and Nash. There are two grandchildren, Bridget Burke Finnigan (9) and Kelly Patrick Finnigan (5). The Howses went to NYC in Sept. for a long weekend of theatre.

Ellen Eskridge Sanders stays busy with church work, DAR, Women's Club, baby-sitting with daughter's 8-month son. He has two sisters, ages 17 and 10. Their son lives with his wife and 3 sons in the San Francisco Bay area where they visit them every year. She was sorry to miss our 55th but attended a function at Univ. of Va. with Walter and it was impossible to do both.

Josephine Gibbs Du Bois: "We flew to Colorado in Aug. to see our daughter and husband. They are returning to their boat for the 5th year — hope to go through the Panama Canal!" Expect to fly to Maine in Oct. to visit Carolyn Martindale Blouin (Class of '30) and Maury and drive to Halifax with them.

Susan Haskell Harrell: They still travel and just had a "Danube Passage". They plan to move from Gochland into Richmond. They have 2 children and 5 grandchildren, one of whom was married in Sept.

Gillette Hilton Pritchard: Was sorry to miss our 55th. They enjoy their Oceanside, CA life and don't seem to need to get away.

Nancy Hunter: Went with three friends to France last spring. A week in Paris and 2 wks. driving through France. This fall she enjoyed a New England trip to see the foliage with a friend. In May she is going to Iceland, Ireland and Scotland. When at home her chief enjoyment is hiking in the Smokies National Park.

Elise Jester Meadows: She and Claude celebrated their golden anniversary last Oct. They have 2 daughters, a son and 5 grandchildren. 3 grandchildren graduated from college in the spring. Claire Cowden, magna cum laude from SMU's Meadow's School of Fine Arts and is now there in graduate school. James Cowden graduated from Vassar, departmental honors in English and grade of distinction for his senior thesis, and will do graduate work in the East. David Judd graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary and received the Charles J. Reller Abiding Memorial Fund Award.

Mary Stewart Kelso Treanor: The Treanors planned to attend reunion but a house they waited for 3 years came on the market so they bought and moved. They plan to exchange homes for several weeks with an SB graduate living in Normandy, during the summer of '87, and are brushing up on their French at the local college.

Charlotte Kent Pinckney: The Pinckneys have been living at Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond for a year and a half and have many friends there. Their apartment looks out on a garden. Charlotte says she has written everyone in the class asking for contributions to the Fund.

Helen Lawrence Vander Horst wrote, "Jean Cole Anderson gave me a good account of our Reunion in May which I was sorry to miss. Had to be in Durham NC for my oldest grand-daughter's prep school graduation. From there to MA to greet a new granddaughter and to help with a 3-year-old. In a few days to go to TN to help with a 4th granddaughter born yesterday (Sept. 29th)!"

Martha McBroom Shipman hated to miss Reunion but had just returned from Florida after 6 weeks in Naples and 6 weeks in Delray Beach, and granddaughter Jane Shipman was graduating from Wooster College, Wooster OH. Martha spent 9 weeks at her Michigan cottage with 6 of her family. This fall she was preparing to visit the Shipman family in Wilton, Conn. and to spend a weekend at Newport, R.I.

Martha McCowen Burnet: A reprint from the Greensboro (NC) News and Record of March 30, 1986 came to hand, an amusing article written by Martha about "The Taking of a Christmas Card Picture" with a picture of the Burnet family of 17! Wish we had space so this could be enjoyed by all our readers. Martha is a former columnist for The Greensboro Daily News.

Elizabeth MacRae Goddard: After living in San Diego since '74 they still marvel at the weather and are only a few blocks from the Pacific Ocean. In summer they enjoy the Pops Concerts. Liebe was at Reunion.

Evelyn Mullen: Had planned to be at Reunion but was in the hospital for major surgery and had a home nurse's aide for 2 weeks afterwards. She was at the SBC celebration in Williamsburg the end of Sept. and saw Virginia Quintard Bond and Nancy Coe. Her 3 year term as Chairman of the SBC Friends of the Library has expired but she will continue to be active.

Virginia Quintard Bond: First grandson Edward Bond arrived in June. His sister Laura, is 2. Other grand-daughters are Anne, 17, a senior at Westminster in CT and Heather, 13, at school in Dover ME. Still a volunteer at the Dedham Women's Exchange, which has consignors from all over the country, with profits going to local charities involved with young children. She enjoys the museum, lectures and the Symphony, says European travel is out for the present and she likes spending more time at home.

Mary Frances Riheldaffer Kuhn: Says arthritis of the knees has slowed her down. She has 11 grandchildren and one great grandchild. Retired after 39 years of teaching social studies in Senior High School, her time is spent playing bridge, visiting nursing homes for the Church, working on the Hospital Auxiliary, Women's club and as parliamentarian for AAUW

Natalie Roberts Foster is busy as ever with social service work and church activities. At reunion she heard Gert Prior was not well. Gert came to the Roanoke Medical Center while recuperating and went with Nat on several jaunts. Mary Hughes Blackwell provided transportation between Amherst County and Roanoke. The news of Jimmie Blackwell's death was accompanied by good news of his two fine sons

Ruth Schott Benner: Earl has had a pacemaker since June. In spring, summer and fall they go often to their home and boat at the Lake of the Ozarks, and spend February in Naples, Florida. They have 3 Texas great grandchildren

Helen Sim Mellen: The Mellens went to New England in Sept. to see relatives, friends and foliage. During Christmas they will be in Bermuda and will be joined by their son and his family. Hellie enjoyed seeing and talking with each one at our reunion in May.

Polly Swift Calhoun and Frank are enjoying life, though annoyed that they can't do as much as they used to. Polly averages 20 hours of volunteer work a week, at Hospice, Recording for the Blind, and Church World Service where she runs a clothing project. She raised almost $8000 at a church rummage sale this summer. The Calhouns enjoyed trips to their Adirondack camp with family and Jo DuBois's son.

Martha von Briesen: Went to Hampden-Sydney for the first time in June with a former Hampden-Sydney Librarian and his wife who also live at Westminster-Canterbury (Lynchburg) where Martha lives. Same week she attended a Radcliffe/Harvard Alumnae luncheon in Charlottesville. Several times enjoyed picnics on the Blue Ridge Parkway with friends especially when the rhododendrons were in bloom. In April and May she spent 4 days visiting friends at St. Michael's MD, 3 at our reunion, 2 with friends in Greensboro NC.

Orla Washabaugh Shenk: Norm died in March. She will stay in Tampa where the climate is good for her arthritis. Friends, a vital church and bridge fill her time. Both sons, one in CA and one in PA like to visit there. She enjoys corresponding with Nancy Worthington who sends SBC news

Marjorie Webb Maryanov: Her husband sent a card saying that she is in a nursing home.

Peronne Whittaker Scott: Their daughter and her husband have moved from Texas to Hollywood, FL and they are hoping their son and his family will move to Florida. Perry was sorry to miss Reunion but the christening of their first great grandchild came at the same time.

Harriet Wilson Tarbert was a widow for 2 years and has been married to Walter Tarbert for 6 yrs. They have an apartment in White Oak near Pittsburgh and go to her home in Ligonier in the mountains every Wednesday until Sunday. They go to Naples, FL in winter where she sees Eda Bainbridge Kolbe, Jane Muhlbert Halverstadt, Martha McBroom Shipman and Dot Ayres Holt when she visits Eda. Harriet has 3 children and 7 grandchildren plus a stepson-in-law and 3 grandchildren of her present husband

Elizabeth Wooledge Hamilton: Howard died Feb. of '84. In June '85 she moved into Westminster Village North I-239, 11050 Presbyterian Drive, Indianapolis, IN 46236. She is active in 6 clubs of GFWC and president of the Environmental Action Club. She has always done much church work and is chaplain for the 7th District of the Indiana Federation of GFWC. She and her husband traveled the U. S. for 16 years

Nancy Worthington said that Ella Williams Fauber also lives at Westminster-Canterbury, Lynchburg, and was expecting to see Virginia Cooke Rea and Fritz for two days in October when Lynchburg celebrated its bicentennial

Your Secretary: Last fall a bus load of the Lenders to the Treasure Houses of Britain Exhibition at the National Gallery in Washington came to see Sabine Hall which is a National Historic Landmark and a Virginia Historic Landmark. Our last trip was a "Nordic Odyssey," then we cruised on the Argonaut the "Island Worlds of Britain, Scotland, Ireland and Wales," ending in London. In June Carter's oldest granddaughter graduated magna cum laude from Harvard and was co-captain of the Harvard women's lacrosse team. She is the granddaughter of Mercer Logan Jackson Wellford, Class of '30, deceased, Carter's first wife. Great to see each of you at Reunion and hope to see more class members next time. Grateful thanks to all who returned cards with news making this column possible. What about 100% response next time?

Becky Marriner's days include working on the Reading Program and overseeing needed repairs of the old house she and her sister enjoy together. Alice Laubach, on the other hand, moved across Asheville, NC to a smaller house in an Episcopal Retirement Community, Deerfield. Her toy poodle has adapted faster than she has.

Beverley Hill Furniss has been back in Annapolis, MD for 10 months so her apartment in daughter Emory's house begins to feel like home. She's renewing high school friendships, tending flowers on her patio and enjoys being so near her grandchildren.

Mary Willis Kempe has to limit her activities but went to Williamsburg in September for the recognition activities honoring members of SBC's leadership gift clubs. She particularly enjoyed dinner with the trustees, seeing the newly opened DeWitt Wallace Museum and visiting James River plantations. Cary Burwell Carter reported on another SBC function, a party at the Nashville, TN home of former president Harold Whiteman, honoring Dr Fry. Cary spent 2 delightful September weeks at a Swiss chalet on Lake Brienze, Esterwald

Becky Young Fraser and Natalae Strickland Waters traveled closer to home, visiting historic sites in KY on a trip organized by the Colonial Dames. Jane Lawder also kept to this continent, driving with friends through NM, AZ and UT viewing national parks and August's western landscapes. The Southwest also has a claim on Barbara Benzinger Lindsley and Herb. They check into Scottsdale, AZ in February and Colorado Springs in summer. Barbara's daughter and family live in Wichita; her doctor and architect sons are in Kansas City

Hester Kraemer Avery has a good excuse for not signing her card (I compared handwriting with some in our scrapbook). She had open heart surgery (triple by-pass) in September in Denver and was visiting her two sons in the Boston area when she wrote. She had a great August Virginia Beach reunion of "all my progeny", one of whom plans to produce a cookbook of their favorite recipes

Ginny Gott Gilbert expected an October visit from Mary Templeton and sister Jean, who worked on the Syracuse University dean's staff where Paul Gilbert was on the faculty before retiring. The Gilberts are in charge of a 200-member senior church group doing art, crafts, bridge, furniture refinishing and can-

ing. She says they are typical senior citizens: family, travel to FL in winter months, garden, golf, bridge. Mary also visited Judy Peterkin in Parkersburg, WV, had dinner with Lucy Hoblitzell, and cruised to Alaska this year. Busy freedom

Helen Wolcott, Lucy and I met for lunch at Great Falls, VA while this column was being written. Lucy was in CA for a wedding earlier in the year and as our capable fund agent, attended Fall Alumnae Council. She planned to head back to Parkersburg in November. Helen spent two glorious weeks touring Ireland: enjoyed terrain, people, rack of lamb, poached salmon and shrimp. She'd just completed a stint with the annual sale to benefit the Presbyterian Home when we talked

Dot Barry Ketcham has our sympathy in the death of her husband of 49 years. Gen Howell Gist, also adjusting to widowhood, had a summer vacation with one son on the outer banks of NC and will be in CA for Christmas with her Navy dentist son and family. She takes aqua exercise classes and loves walking.

Catharine Taylor Manning says Roberta Cope Gerlach's new hip "gives her lovely slender legs"! They saw each other in Litchfield, CN where the Gerlachs were meeting their two grandsons and younger daughter. Earlier Roberta had sent Mary Templeton a postcard from Honolulu. Jeanne DeLamarter Halversen also visits Honolulu, where her daughter lives. She's planning Christmas '86 there. Jeanne has been quite a traveller — Philadelphia, Oxford, IN in July; Kennebunkport, ME in August, San Francisco, Seattle and EXPO in September. When at home she sees Blandina Jones Skilton quite frequently. Blandina happily expects her scattered family to gather at their Winter Park, FL home in January for their parent's 50th anniversary.

Bright Bickerstaff West wrote that her only news is the birth of a grandson who will carry her husband's name as III. The West, Jrs also live on St. Simons Island, GA. I hope Bright will check in on our former class secretary, Janet Kimball Miller who moved to Sea Palms, St. Simons recently.

Grace Langeler Irvine will be into her 6-month stay in Sarasota, FL when these notes go to press. She loves her easy, contented life in Ogunquit, ME with 2 daughters and 7 grandchildren nearby. Unlike Grace, Virginia Morgan Mowry has been on the go most of the year. Travel included a trip around the Horn, S.A.; 3 visits with family on the West Coast; China with a week on the Yangtze River; a glimpse behind the Iron Curtain in Berlin, Dresden, Prague and Budapest, and also Vienna. She'll join her daughter and family for Christmas in Madrid

I too was in Iron Curtain countries this year. My sister-in-law and I joined the Sweet Briar group for the Danube River cruise on board the Russian river boat, the Volga. We started in Istanbul, crossed the Black Sea to the Danube delta, boarded ship and made port in each Balkan country en route to Vienna. Was surprised to find the Danube so narrow, and saddened to see tributes to revolution and conquest so proudly evident in the cities we visited.

Mary Lou Saul Hunt is well, busy, happy and looking forward to great-grandmotherhood. Will this be a Class of '35 first? Betty Fox Moon has a granddaughter who finished at Berkeley, another at UCLA and a third at Davis. Both grandsons are still in college. Martha Jane Gipe Earle had the fun of being on the planning committee for her granddaughter's June wedding in Jackson, MI and enjoyed girl plans since all her children are boys. She hopes to see Betty on her next visit to Toledo.

Sue Strassburger Anderson passed her medical check-up in fine style, better than last year. Maybe her new Ciera Sport Coupe or her trip to San Francisco with her young granddaughter is keeping the doldrums at bay. Marguerite Duval McGinnis had to miss our 50th but is pleased/amazed to learn there seems to be no slowing down among our classmates. Talk about energy — a card too late for the 1985 deadline told me Alma Simmons Rountrey is historian for the Presbytery of the Blue Ridge; a volunteer for DAWN (Donation a Week Neighbor), a program which answers emergency calls for food, clothing, and utility payments for the needy; and a "house-to-house" beggar for heart, cancer etc. drives.

Also too late, but so good to hear from her — a card from (Florence) Carey Snow Garrison, whose 47 years of marriage to a now-retired Del Monte executive had her keeping house in HI, CA, NJ, Manila and back to Palo Alto, CA. They had 2 sons, a daughter and 5 grandchildren. Her special volunteer work has been in hospitals and with brain-damaged children.

Had a nice telephone chat with Judy Halliburton Davis who says she rocks along and is pleased that husband Burke's new book is completed. They were in Williamsburg for SBC's September celebration and share Mary Willis Kempe's enthusiasm for the quality of that program. They count 9 grandchildren, 7 of whom are girls. Judy will have to check out Martha Jane Gipe Earle's experiences. Judy had heard from Marian Walker Alcaro who spent some of the summer in England visiting relatives of and locating papers on the subject of her doctoral dissertation, a woman poet. She returned safely, carrying with her some treasured letters and other materials.

Mary Honeywell Dodds is loving retired life, busy with church work, golf, bridge and "partying". She'd love to see any gals who get to Sarasota. Sue Wilson Rutherford writes: "I have just about decided this will be my last year working in an elementary school library! Then I can do more things!"

I didn't hear from Poody Morrison Ruddell, our Co-Chairman. Judy said she was now all right but that an illness earlier had kept her in Indianapolis. Last year she and Warren drove to VT, NY, WI, MN, MI and AZ, so my next report should pick up new travels.

Do keep in your prayers our classmates who have died during the year — Jackie Strickland Dwelle, Betty Myers Harding and Jane Mitchell Robeson. We remember them with affection and appreciation for their loyalty and generosity to SBC.

Bless you all for remembering your class secretary. This job is getting to be fun. Thanks and don't stop now.

Nancy Gatch Svien has a one-man show coming up in January '87 — sounds as if it will be in Mexico. This spring she will try living in Baja, CA, on the Sea of Cortez to watch the fish.

Vey and Mardie Hodill Smith's highlight trip this year was to Hawaii and the 7-day island cruise. They took their 13-year-old granddaughter and 18-year-old grandson to celebrate three earthshaking events: Their 45th anniversary, grade and high school graduations.

Bob and I are getting old, but at the same pace. We took our 11-year-old grandson to Quebec this summer, that city as foreign as any on these shores, and then rambled back through Montreal and Vermont. It was a precious experience. Indeed, we unabashedly wallow in pride over all four. We are particularly proud of daughter Beth's culinary glossary, "The Chef's Companion," 221 pages of gastronomic lore. Beth Gawthrop Riely is our Sweet Briar '67 music major.

Betty Barnes Bird was in Paris on September 16, settled in her hotel room when the terrorist bomb went off one block away. Pandemonium — then appalling security everywhere. Three plainclothesmen surrounded her when she put her hand in her purse to pay for some stamps at the post office. She doesn't know who was the more scared. Then a carefree spree in England for her son's wedding.

From Henri Minor Hart, she and Lottie Lewis Woollen and Gracey Luckett Bradley were in Waynesboro, GA and saw the Master's Tournament in Augusta. They saw Lillian Neeley Willis and Pete, whose first grandchild is in college.

Nancy Beard Dix and husband are enjoying his retirement. Their grandson, 14, and granddaughter, 12, live nearby (Bel Air, MD).

Bennett Wilcox Bartlett's husband has made a wonderful recovery from a heart attack. They are back on the golf course, and no doubt singing with the birdies (!)

Janet Thorpe has persisted in her museum interest by being a volunteer guide in the Lockwood Matthews Mansion, a 60-room opulent Victorian country seat in Norwalk, CT. She had a fine little reunion and lunch at 21 with Kitty Lawder Stephenson and husband in July.

Augusta Saul Farrier says that she has nothing much to report, then goes on about church work, tennis, music group, sundry civic affairs and keeping up with children and grandchildren, the oldest a junior at Princeton. She would love to see any class mates traveling through VA.

Anne Harrison Brown says that she continues struggling to master golf and tennis. Though she's too modest to say so, I happen to know that she has mastered that great game called bridge.

Kay Porter Read is naturally proud of having a granddaughter in her sophomore year at Sweet Briar. Ole!

Ruth Harman Keiser and her husband went to the Sweet Briar Rider's Reunion. They enjoyed meeting President Fry and alumnae from other classes.

Anne Parks' year was rather a bore. With tongue in cheek, she admits to receiving her third Ph.D., submitted her thesis on the study of the nuclear physics syndrome as it affects the Class of '39. All of this involved wide travelling, visiting potentates, etc. . .

Teady, Mary Treadway Downs' husband, has a new business, The Cambridge Clock Company. Their clocks are traditional in design, but have the wonderful German quartz movements. He is looking for "reps," girls, so raise your hand if you are interested.

Anna Espach Weckler speaks for us all when she says she's impressed with the accomplishments of our class — though not bestirred into emulating, just peacefully appreciating. The Wecklers live in West Sedona, AZ, and their son and his wife always come from MI at Christmas. Their 5-year-old golden retriever is knocking down fewer guests, and has almost gotten them trained to his schedule.

We are going to sup with Anne Benedict Swain and Ted next week. She writes of happy family doings. Less tennis due to back muscle spasms, which is a boon for church work. She speaks for many in saying that too much time is spent keeping these golden-aged bodies in tune. Ellie George Frampton and Bill spent a few days with them last summer.

Boot Vanderbilt Crampton and Henry took a fascinating early October trip on the Orinoco and Amazon Rivers, using Zodiacs (like Cousteau) to explore the inlets and tributaries. They observed tropical birds, fish and Indian villages. They go to Squam Lake every summer to reunite with as many of the family as possible, this year, 17. She has been appointed Alumnae Rep. of Naples for the southwest area of FL. She's busy with Garden Club, tennis, swimming and all those good sunshine things.

Kitty Lawder Stephenson visited younger daughter, Nan, and husband in L.A., then traveled up the CA coast. Two other children and their families live in Greenville, SC.

Bettina Bell Wyman Emmons, upon the death of her second husband less than a year after they were married, has settled in Naples, retaining also her house of 30 years on Cape Cod where she sees her 3 girls who live in ME and NH. She is more active with the Class of '39 at Dartmouth as chairman of the widows (first husband), than she is with Sweet Briar, but remembers fondly her Sweet Briar friends.

News of Julie Ridgely Howe is somewhat like receiving a benediction. Every week she works late, late Sunday night compiling her column for the Cobs County Democrat, then takes it early Monday "to the old fashioned, narrow building across the street, where there is a pot-bellied stove and a narrow staircase." She then has breakfast, a leisurely, hearty one, with a widowed English war bride. This column is her talent, discipline, and dedication, and meaningful beyond words — an apt phrase! — to the little town of Whitefield, NH, 2,000 strong, nestled in the White Mountains. Happily, she lives only 9 miles away from her sister. Her church, named New Hope, is another important part of her life.

Marguerite Myers Glenn's son has joined the real estate firm of McGavack, Ltd. in Charlottesville. She hopes to enroll grandchild, Marguerite, III for possible entry to Sweet Briar.

"Our most wonderful news," writes Virginia Wellford Farwell, "is a new grandson, born July 19 in Savannah, GA." Her donation this year is in memory of Julia Worthington Lombard, who died October 19, 1985. Our sincere sympathy to all her family, and apologies for being so late in rendering them.

Suzette Boutell McLeod and husband John continue as Publication Advisers and Asst. Managing Editors of the Society of Computer Simulation, the technical society which John started with her help 30 years ago. They live near the beach at La Jolla, CA and love it, but tore themselves away for a canal boat trip in England and Wales and then traveled to VA for the ordination of their son, Robert, as a Deacon in the Episcopal church. Their older son, John, is an architect in Washington, D.C. and they hope that his work in the field of ethics in the use of computer modeling and simulation by decision makers will have beneficial results.

Ethel Hauber Crowe had a wonderful trip to China. However, upon her return, a cough picked up there developed into viral pneumonia and she was laid low for 6 weeks. Just after recovering from pneumonia, she had an emergency appendectomy. "Am recuperating now. The trip was fabulous! The rest — blah. But was lucky the appendix didn't burst."

Bill and Lucy Gordan Jeffers were in Norfolk in July and saw Lu Martin, Margaret Ballard Whitehurst and Ann Parks. Anne Dearstyne Cornwell visited them en route to Scandinavia with a Smithsonian group.

John and Jean McKenney Stoddard went on the super Sweet Briar trip from Norway to Portugal last July. They debarked in Bergen to go on the Norwegian mail boat to the North Cape and beyond. She is busy with the National Cathedral, which entails interesting trips to Washington. Now they are just back from Canada.

Lee Montague Watts reports the sad news of her husband's death, January 8, 1985, after a brief illness. His symptoms first appeared, alas, while attending Boxwood Circle festivities. She and their son are running his company, which was left to her, keeping her blessedly busy. On the good news side is the application of their granddaughter, Trevor, to enter SB in '87. Trevor's mother, their daughter, Gini Wade, is summa cum laude SB '63. She and Trevor visited Sweet Briar together last summer after visiting Sarah Belk Gambrell in Charlotte, NC.

Alton and Jean Oliver Sartor enjoyed a visit to campus in October — "a perfect time to see SBC in its autumn glory". They went on to visit two sons and their families in Washington, D.C. and Chapel Hill, NC and Jean's brother and sister-in-law in Sarasota, FL.

Mary Welles Pearson writes the sad news of her husband's sudden death in April, "so life has changed, but my art lessons are a lifesaver as I spend many evenings painting. Visited Gussie Farrier in August and we went to see Janie Lewis Kingsbury. Visits from my children and grandchildren are life's high points."

Kay Bonsall Strong writes happy news: "My youngest, Sarah Parlar, produced a most precious daughter November 21 — named Katharine Bayard for grandma — called "Kate". She was off December 15 to visit daughter Bonnie Berge, husband and two "wonderful grandsons" in Johannesburg for 2 months.

I am so glad that Eleanor Claffin Williams, who left us freshman year for matrimony and art, didn't really leave us. She paints as "Claffy Williams" — acrylics on canvas and paper — and has works exhibited in Boston, Dallas, New York and Atlanta. She is president of the Board of Directors of South Shore Art Center (south of Boston, MA).

Anne Dearstyne Cornwell lost her sister, Cherry Dearstyne Whiteside '42 in September. Cherry lived in Richmond and is survived by three children. Anne's daughter, Jane, had a son in October — bringing the number of grandchildren to seven. Both Jane and family and daughter Anne were to celebrate Christmas '86 with Anne.

Thank you all who responded, and to you who didn't please do next time I'll look forward to hearing from you and wish to share your news with all.

Our '89 reunion will be one to remember, you know. "They" have been planning as well as practicing these for years. We'll have just the right menus, a beautiful setting and all of us together. God bless —

Clare Eager Matthai, (Mrs. Albert D.), 108 Clinton, Whitesboro, NY

I thank the many of you who made this column possible, but next year please let's hear from lots more. I don't even mind writing up your cards.

In September Karl and I attended a Cornell Adult University course given at the Shoals Marine Lab on Apple-dore Is. in the Gulf of ME. With two Cornell professors and a group of interesting people we spent a week studying the biology of the gulf, the fisheries and the interfacing of the two. After the course Karl and I traveled by car to the Bay of Fundy, Prince Edward Is. and Cape Breton Is., NS and then by ferry back to Portland, ME from Varmouth, NS. I'm still doing the same volunteer work and enjoying my cairn terriers.

Sarah Adams Bush was at SBC for Alumnae Council and attended the Saturday night dinner for the Rider's Reunion. In July she and Bob traveled to England and in August visited all their family, including 2 grandchildren, at a resort in NH and then daughter Jeannette in NJ. On their way home via Louisville, "Ouija" enjoyed reuniting with 5 SBC alumnae, 4 from our class. Brooks Barnes is busier than she wants to be. Not only does she still do all the yard work, she is Community Nurse, Board of Directors member for Children's Hospital, organ search committee member and in her church choir. Also lots of family and friends visit Brooks.

Catharine Bracher Leggett reports a busy life with children and grandchildren. Her big excitement is the anticipation of a trip in January to Antarctica, traveling toward the South Pole through waves averaging 24 feet and icebergs all around. Dorothy Campbell Maher enjoyed the southern hospitality of Sarah Belser Eggleston, whom she had not seen in 45 years, in Columbia, SC. She then traveled to Dallas to see 2 sons and to Missouri to the college graduation of her youngest, cum laude. During the summer 4 children and families visited Dorothy and Jim, even grandchild #13, 2-month-old Grant. Dolores Cheatham James reports a horrid year, having broken her foot and her back in September. She is almost recovered now. "Dodie" enjoyed the summer in ME, had a grand lunch with Annabelle Forsch Prager (who still paints and is represented by a couple of galleries) in NYC.

Mary Christian Mulligan lost her 92-year-old mother in August. "She was a fighter to the end." Before working at the Chalfonte Hotel for 5 months "Diddi" took a trip to Singapore, Bali and Bangkok. Two children live in Portland, ME. One teaches at Phillips Academy in Andover, MA. Virginia Dewing Dorsey enjoys golf, bridge and gardening at their condo in MA and had a March respite in FL. Four grandchildren are her greatest joy. Daughter Susan's husband, Ph.D. Cornell, teaches science in Stockbridge, MA and daughter Martha's husband teaches in the math and computer departments, Blair Academy, NJ. Katherine Doar Jones reported that her daughter, Kathy, SBC '71, clinical psychologist, had a brain aneurism, but miraculously survived. Her mind was not affected. She is making good progress in her rehabilitation program for her paralysis. "Kitty" plans a trip to Switzerland and a French barge trip for next June.

Deborah Douglas Adams announces the birth of their 5th grandchild. Sally Bryan Allen visited with Debbie and wishes more SB classmates would come see her in Brunswick, GA. Clare Eager Matthai has just returned from a trip to England, partly accompanied by son, Chris. It was a busy time taking in the sights, museums, pubs and theatre. After 20 years serving on the Board of Children's Hospital, Clare is retiring, but still is active in many other volunteer jobs, not to mention SBC Fund, letters currently underway.

Please respond generously. Mary Love Ferguson Sanders had a month-long trip to China — an exciting adventure that took her over a great deal of China's huge landmass — Canton to Beijing. The people were welcoming and friendly. The Great Wall was the treat of a lifetime. Janice Fitzgerald Wellons went to the Winter Palace in Leningrad, which is dirty and unkempt but contains fabulous treasures. Janice had a severe heart attack on the beach at Frapp Is., SC; she was flown by Life Flight Helicopter to Duke, had angioplasty, now feels fine and expects to start teaching piano again soon.

Annabelle Forsch Prager is involved with 3 children's orchestras in NYC. The advanced orchestra played in the pit for The Dance Theatre of Harlem. She still writes children's books and has one about a baseball player, being considered now by her publisher. She and David enjoy the house on Owenoke Is., CT in spite of water damage from hurricanes and 2 fires. Dorothy Friday had a marvelous time traveling with 3 friends in Spain and Portugal. "Dottie" loves working as a volunteer in the St. Louis Zoo Friends Association office. Charlotte Garber Rudolph and John are both retired and traveling a lot. They recently drove to NY to see their daughter and her new baby girl (3 grandchildren) and then to VMI for John's 45th Reunion and over to SBC for Charlotte to renew her soul in the beauty of the place. Muriel Grymes Blumenthal spends her time between NYC and Easton, MD. She saw Jeanne Claybrook Collier in Md and sees Nancy Bean Hector when Nancy comes to NYC from Coconut Grove, FL. "Muie" reports that Patricia Robineau McCulloch's children compiled a cookbook for their mother, privately printed no less, in which "Muie's" peanut butter sandwich (which we had at SBC) was 1 of 2 leading entries.

Byrd Smith Hunter enjoyed a houseparty last spring with 6 other couples at Wintergreen. The wild flowers were beautiful. She wishes she could see her 5 grandchildren often. Esther Jett Holland had a fine summer with all the family, children and grandchildren, together at Virginia Beach. The last weekend in September Caroline Miller McClintock and Gales spent the night in Suffolk, VA. Friday they all went to Williamsburg for a lovely dinner given by SBC for over 200 people, many of whom were old friends. Caroline reports the birth of a granddaughter, to their daughter, Hunter, on November 14. Esther reports that Betty Braxton Preston joined the Peace Corps and is in Cameroon, West Africa for 2 years. Primrose Johnston Craven had her 2 granddaughters on Cape Cod with her for the summer and then flew them home to Denver, where she had the experience of eating buffalo meat. Still president of AAUW on Cape Cod, "Primmy" remains on the board of Girl Scouts. Barbara Jones Hale Prentiss announces 2 major events in her family: the marriage of son, Sam, on a beautiful day in September and the impending birth in December of a grandchild to son, Tom, who is Sam's twin. Sam has designed sets for a successful play in L.A. and is in demand with decorators there.

Bonilee Key Garrett says trying to see 11 grandchildren a couple of times makes the year fly. She and Garin took a delightful trip to Big Bend National Park and just this week returned from Garin's 50th Reunion at McCallister, Chattanooga, TN. Lucy Kiker Jones: I have to write this sad note because Lucy wants her friends to know. Their youngest daughter, Cynthia, died suddenly on October 1 from a heart attack. We extend our deepest sympathy. Betty Potter Kinne Hillyer was busy this summer preparing for the wedding of their only daughter, which was followed by a reception in their garden with dining and dancing for 250 guests. She and Bill are considering a trip to the Humane Society to acquire a couple of additional dogs. Bill still practices law and co-runs the antique shop for the Humane Society. Betty Potter saw Barbara Briggs Quinn recently. She is still at the Rancho Santa Fe Inn, CA.

Fayette McDowell Willett also reports "'Ouija'" Bush's visit to Louisville. Since Fayette's husband has Parkinson's Disease, her activities are curtailed and she must spend much time nursing. Her grandchildren are a real joy. Ann McJunkin Briber just returned to her home on Amelia Is., FL after spending the summer in Milwaukee catching up on the grandchildren, Becky and Brittani. "Junk" and Frank are both happy with the relaxed lifestyle on Amelia. Barbara McNeill Yow writes of seeing Camille Guyton Guething occasionally. Camille has a 9 golf handicap. Barbara and husband Jack took the Orient cruise on the Viking Star, highlighted by climbing the Great Wall of China. Son Randy Blessing (SBC's first boy to attend classes) triathlons and is becoming a well-known artist. Anne Noyes Awtrey had a foot operation in August, which made it impossible to play golf, but she is working to finish her second needlepoint chair. Anne and Ray went in June to visit their daughter and her family in Winston-Salem, NC., then in July visited cousins in CT, did a bit of genealogy and traveled around New England. Anne and Ray enjoy gardening and playing bridge.

Rozelia Hazard Potter thrives on the outdoor life of tennis and swimming in FL. This summer "Posie" took several trips: to VA, to New England and then to the West Coast — flew to San Francisco, drove and hiked up the coast to Victoria, BC. "Posie" reports that Judy Snow Benoit fights her cancer with a wonderful high spirit. Page Ruth Foster tells us that she enjoys spoiling her 2 young grandsons, Robin's boys, who live nearby in Oahu. Other son, Nelson, has just returned from a conference in Tokyo on Nuclear Free Pacific. Their youngest, daughter, Dolly, came from CA to celebrate her 30th birthday. Afterwards Page and Jim took off for the mainland for their annual trip to see extended family. Margaret Swindell Dickerman believes in traveling when the opportunity arrives. She enjoyed a first class trip on the Delta Queen — sponsored by Sweet Briar. In May she toured England with a small group and later went to Sea Island and New Port.

Anne Tweedy Ardery, Fayette McDowell Willet, Helen Lawton Mitchell and Jane Lampton Peabody gave "'Ouija'" and Bob Bush an enthusiastic welcome when they stopped in Louisville. Virginia White Brinton and Ben went to Meyer Beach, FL where they have friends. Ben works for Grosvenor Books, Inc., London, teaches illiterates and tutors French, while "Ginny" is a tour guide at St. John's Church, where Patrick Henry gave his "Give me liberty or give me death" speech. Louise Woodruff Angst is looking forward to Christmas: their son, his wife and their 2 children are flying from Juneau, AK for a three-week visit. "Weezy" has been busy this year losing weight and going to flower shows and workshops to qualify as a Garden Club of America judge.

Chesley Johnson Dale-Arnurius married a friend of many years (Armond Arnurius) in October and gained "2 more wonderful sons and 3 more grandchildren. We're looking forward to raising Tennessee walking horses and traveling." Elizabeth Weems writes "My family is proliferating . . . second son, Wharton Weems Westfeldt and Nancy just had triplets . . . sons. First son Patrick Westfeldt just had a son to add to his 2 daughters. My stepson James Oberwetter just got married to Cheryl Ames. I am practicing architecture, among too many other things." Harriet Pullen Phillips reports a good year, "especially because of the birth of our first grandchild, Elizabeth in October." Harriet spent 12 days "helping" care for her. Harriet and husband bicycled through Quebec and VT last summer. Elizabeth Shepherd Scott ("Shep") has been selling real estate for 16 years. She has 2 daughters living in Winston-Salem, NC, who are connected with the South East Center of Contemporary Art and a son living in Virginia Beach, who works for Honda, VA Beach. Marguerite Hume is busier than ever. She is still in charge of the Community Emergency Services Dept. for the Louisville area Red Cross. This covers innumerable social services. She also is in choir church session, the Arts Club and does baby-sitting.

Jane Warner Williams (Mrs. D. Adrian), 3909 South 27th Circle, Fort Smith, AR 72901

In September, Jane Warner Williams, Eleanor Crumrine Stewart and I drove to Sweet Briar to attend Alumnae Council and Reunion Gifts Meetings. Jane, looking perky and stylish, had flown into Washington, D.C. several days earlier to see the town with her daughter-in-law and daughter, Carolyn. Jane still lives in Fort Smith, AR, where she works as a realtor. Her husband, Adrian, has retired. "Crummie" was coming from Bethesda, MD, and I from Baltimore.

Summer weather at Sweet Briar made pleasant our treks to the Wailes Center or Bookshop, to Fletcher or Prothro Commons. We especially enjoyed seeing the new Anne Gary Pannell Art Center and the Sweet Briar Museum. We were fortunate to have Ann Marshall Whitley as our guide through the museum (her "love's labor") and to enjoy her hospitality. She joined us for class meetings, as did Judy Burnett Halsey from Richmond and Sara Ann McMullen Lindsey who came by way of Lancaster County, VA. "Sammy" and Doug have recently bought a second home there, near the Rappahannock River. Judy brought pictures of her middle daughter, Mary Shaw's marriage last Christmas to Robert Marx; they now live in New York.

Meredith Slane Person, Jean Old, and Kay Weisiger Osborne were also to have joined us, but had to cancel due to circumstances beyond their control. (Meredith had a very important date with her bridegroom, Curtis!)

"Crummie" swims regularly, has her hair cropped very short, looks great. She had just returned from the annual houseparty at Jean Old's Virginia Beach cottage, where she saw Shirley Levis Johnson, Martha Smith, Margie Redfern, Nancy Cofer Stacey, Jackie Murray Sanner, Ginger Barron Summer, and Ann Marshall Whitley. "Sash" Hudgins Rice, who was staying nearby, joined them for a shrimp dinner one evening.

Last winter, Shirley, Jean and "Crummie" spent a month in South America, crossing the Andes by bus, sailing Chilean Waters, touring Santiago, Buenos Aires, and Rio. "Fabulous!"

In October '86, while in Richmond, Mac and I spent a wonderful evening with Nan Hart Stone and Billy, and saw the new house they built down the street from their old one. Nan makes all sorts of things, clothes, furnishings, sweaters! Also, tables, lamps, etc. from plexiglass; she single-handedly paints, prepares walls for finishing — you-name-it-she-can-do-it. Her youngest son, Sheridan, is now in the Antarctic, conducting a study of the Adelphi Penguin and the Emperor Seal for Scripps Institute.

Nan attended the SBC Board of Directors dinner in Williamsburg in September.

Ginna Walker Christian and her husband, daughter, and son-in-law took a Smithsonian Tour of China in fall.

Fall was also the time of our 10 days in England for our 40th Wedding Anniversary. Mac and I drove at a leisurely pace through Devon, Northern Cornwall and the Cotswolds, dividing our time between 2 old Inns, one in the West Country the first 5 days, and the other in a Cotswold village.

Traveling with a group of fellow artists is Barbara Golden Pound's newest motivation for painting. They paint together, then exhibit, scenes or landmarks visited. Last Christmas Barbara was celebrating the birth of 2 new grandbabies, "one of each!", and also planning to drive with Ginna Ilges Norman to Miami to visit Ceci Herr Perry, who was to be staying there. Barbara's oldest son, Garry, a professional artist, has received his doctorate in Comparative Arts.

Jane-Arthur Etheridge finds attending Elder Hostels (Bridgewater College, July '85, Hamilton College, August '85) fun and interesting. She is sorry that she will not make reunion this time as son, David, will be married that weekend to a lovely girl. May will be an eventful month: her youngest son, Garrett, will graduate from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute the weekend before David's wedding. Daughter, Faye, teaches 5th grade. Faye and her husband and daughter live in Severna Park, MD. "I am truly proud of our children and their accomplishments. Do hope the committee publishes an after-the-fact letter similar to one after the last reunion I attended."

Anne Webb Moses writes that she is still enjoying teaching English at Polytechnic School in Pasadena. She is on Sabbatical this semester, attending Claremont Graduate School to learn about helping secondary students with reading "and also about the relationship of reading and writing, a fascinating and fairly new field." She adds, "George and I are lucky enough to be healthy and enjoying our work, our adult children and each other." Jackie Murray Sanner's card added that after the Virginia Beach mini reunion, she traveled to NY and Westport, CT to catch up with her children, plus lots of art and opera. She is now "back to earth... scrubbing a derelict house plus quite a bit of sculpture and pastel portraits." She will begin teaching pastels at the art center in January. Justine Arnold Linforth writes "Justine and Edward Linforth (ex. asst. prof.) increased their brood by 2 after leaving Sweet Briar: Justine Ingersoll and Katharine Gordon." They now have 6 grandchildren, are living happily in Howey-in-the-Hills, FL and will celebrate 50 Wedding Anniversary June 19 "with a bash!"

Maria Tucker Bowerlind tells of a wonderful trip to France and England last summer. Youngest son, Bill, is a freshman at U.Va. and loves it; daughter Janie hopes to enter medical school next fall; Tuck is teaching 7th and 8th grades at a Montessori School, coaching, swimming and into bike racing; Peter is working at a hospital and into karate

Our deepest sympathy to Aimee Des Pland McGirt whose husband, Vance, died suddenly while visiting at a friend's house on All Saints' Day "Our 9th Anniversary would have been on December 27... I find that my teaching is a blessing as it keeps me so busy. Am hoping for a college position nearby... Hope to make it to Reunion in May!"

See all of you in May at 40th Reunion: COME.

Thanks to all who wrote — I haven't had so much mail for years — my mailman is most impressed and I feel so loved. In fact the job was great until I read the instructions from the Alumnae Office. Now I proceed with great trepidation, so please disregard poor punctuation and split infinitives. Grammar and spelling were never my thing.

Carol Rolston Toulmin describes her life "down on the farm" as "dull and humdrum" — to me it sounds anything but — her activities are United Way, helping organize a Food Bank, working with an Episcopal Retirement Home and tutoring in an adult education program in a distressed area of Montgomery, AL. She loves bridge, gardening, and her animals. Carol takes 2 trips a year — 1 with a museum group and 1 for pure fun — such as a white water trip down the Salmon River shared a soggy summer in Richmond, VA — though Seymour beat the heat by going to Ireland in June. Mary and her family (including 5 children under 4) were at Virginia Beach during Hurricane Charley. She and Rives celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary — and Rives' and Seymour's husband John's 60th birthdays.

Mary Pease Fleming, Ann Sheldon Taylor and Seymour Laughon Rennolds

Janet Broman Dingle's summer was a steady stream of visitors including children (5 between them), their spouses and grandchildren. Her younger daughter and husband just returned from a mission project in Japan. Her older daughter and husband expect their 3rd child in March. Janet and husband Lawrence plan to spend the first three months of 1987 in FL near Janet's parents and sister.

Mary Bardin Lyon earned a Master's degree and is a school psychologist in Jacksonville, FL. Her youngest child is a veterinarian getting ready to go back for a second doctorate. Her daughter is in CO—working on a doctorate in environmental biology — and her oldest is in CA doing research for Xerox — preparing to study for a doctorate.

Two of Etta Craig Dick Shurley's 3 daughters are married to lawyers — and live in Rock Hill, S.C. as does 3rd daughter. Husband Harris had major surgery in March, but is doing well now — and they have enjoyed trips to the beach, mountains and to Boston and Cape Cod

Patty Lynas Ford and husband, Dick, were in England in June visiting friends and enjoying concerts — then on to France where Patty brushed up on her 35-year-old French. She and Dick had a marvelous reunion with Ruth and Julie Micou Eastwood and husband Dick. They stayed in a B.&B. owned by an SBC alum — and enjoyed bird watching. Ruth Magee Peterson is still playing "Marian the Librarian" at Ladue High School while husband Walt enjoys early retirement. Her youngest child, Diane, graduated from Perdue in Industrial Engineering. She and Walt had a marvelous 3½ week tour in Sweden, Norway and Denmark chasing down Walt's relatives.

Dorothy Marks Herbruck "Muff"

writes that reunion was the recent highlight in her life. They went from SBC to NY for 2 weeks in the Big Horn Mountains. They also had a nice visit with Nancy Pesek Rasenberger in Washington, D.C.

Ann Red Barstow has sold her school after 10 years — it became too big and successful leaving too little time for her 5 grandchildren. She belongs to '22 tennis leagues to keep body in shape — tutors H.S. and college to keep mind in shape and spends summers in the Rocky Mountains to keep spiritual self in shape.

Georgia Dreisbach Kegley returned to school for her masters — is a reading specialist and loves teaching — but 60 diagnostic tests and narrative report cards prevented her from attending reunion. Lynn McCullough Gush and husband Gerald enjoy 2 labs and a flourishing flower garden. They visited N.Y.C. and Montreal last year, and are trying out a new car on a trip to Denver. Lynn's piano students "grow lazier every year" so she arranges more duo performances for herself and partner. Lynn takes 4 hours of ballet weekly.

Katharine Phinizy MacKie missed reunion because her daughter was married in June. Jean Randolph Bruns — "Randi" is on a trip around the world — attending son's wedding to a lovely Thai woman — visiting Mona Wilson Beard in Honolulu — friends in Nairobi, Paris and London. She is moving back to Alexandria, VA in March. Marilyn Feller Simon and husband Jack have been married 37 years. They have 2 daughters, a lawyer in New York, and the other in car leasing business with Jack. She has 3 grandchildren. Marilyn works in special education — easing students with hearing impairments and learning disabilities into the mainstream

Rosalie Barringer Wornham — "Pinkie" is still a Californian — still married to same old husband trying to keep up with what's really happening by working with bright adolescents at the Bishop's School as Director of Admissions and senior class advisor. She has 3 children, Wendy, 31, a pediatrician; Cindy, 30, Director of Marketing for A.F.S. International in N.Y.; and Tommy, 25, a V.P. at Wells Fargo Bank.

Monna Simpson MacLellan is in Youth Ministry in the Episcopal Church — was unable to attend reunion because of a conference. Mary Jane Ericksen Ertman works in the Alumnae Office at Wellesley. Nedra Greer Stimpson's daughter was married last summer. Eleanor Davis Boardman was unable to attend reunion because she and her husband fish in the Adirondacks every May. Jane Moorefield is still working full time as a chemist for the South Carolina Highway Department and still decorating her 2-year-old townhouse. Jane has had some health problems but says she is fine now.

Betty Browder Nibley has become a grandmother again. Stotttert Browder Nibley was born to son Stuart and his wife Elizabeth on September 25. Betty loves her job as a medical librarian at George Washington U.

Betty Brawner Bingham moved last summer only 5 miles away. Then she was off on a flying trip around the world — Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia. One of Betty's sons just bought a home in Richmond, VA; her second son builds roads in New Orleans, LA and her 3rd son is a senior in College. Sue Lockley Glad is still commuting to Sacramento, CA to work for the governor. All is well with Sue's family — they are scattered from Los Angeles, to Sacramento, to Little Rock, Palo Alto and Rochester, NY. Marcy Staley Marks and husband John spent 6 months in Italy last winter and spring. John was on a sabbatical doing research on the mental health situation in Italy since all Italian mental hospitals were closed in 1980. Marcy enjoyed studying Italian language and art.

Terry Faulkner Phillips reports "nothing new but continuous dog obedience classes for SPCA. Combination of owners and dogs makes for a challenge!" After 3½ years in Brussels, where husband, David, was the Ambassador to NATO, Carolyn Sample Abshire has returned to Alexandria, VA, having loved the life and all the experiences of living abroad. Jody Kuehnle Kaufman writes, "Sorry to have missed the big 35th, hope to be there for the (egad!) 40th. I am coping well with cancer diagnosed in late 1985 and treated in 1985-86.

The Louisville crew fine — I shall write more about us next time. Begin to plan for Reunion '91!

Sue Lawton Mobley (Mrs. John H. II), 4348 Sentinel Post Road NW, Atlanta, GA 30327

Looks like I'm getting the hang of this — your response gets better every year! I'm sure this is an indication of a similarly super response to Sue Lawton Mobley's fund request!

It is always my aim to include everyone who makes the effort to write so forgive my brevity and I'll try again not to leave out anyone. I've been feeling guilty all year because I didn't include Kathleen Peoples Pendleton in the class attending reunion. Fortunately, you couldn't miss her in the class picture. First, and most important in her year was the birth of Mary Kate Bell in May to daughter Katie and her husband, Jeff Bell. Her other big news is the house she is building in Brevard, NC — we are all invited to visit! She isn't far from Frances Bell Shepherd and Jimmy and their year-old house at Cataloochee Ranch above Maggie, NC. They are really enjoying it. Frances's children are both in college — Jim is a senior at Sewanee and Margaret, a junior at Vanderbilt. Margaret spent a semester in Aix-en-Provence, providing the Shepherds with an excuse for a wonderful trip.

Lots of new grandchildren this year — Barbara Plamp Hunt and George's first, Ryan James Hunt, was born in California in April to son Paul and his wife, Jeni. Barb also wrote that they are planning a trip in January to visit their new "companion diocese" in Northern Brazil.

Almost-2-year-old Mitchell London is the apple of Barbara Garforth Jackson's eye. He is the son of daughter Eve and Gary London. Babs and Ivey had a fabulous cruise to Alaska this past summer.

Also in Alaska for several weeks in July and August, Amanda McThenia Iodice and Don, with son James, were visiting Don, Jr., the commercial (King Crab) fisherman. They drove where there were roads, flew to Eskimo villages, took a white-water raft trip with Manda's niece who was guiding for her summer job, fished off Kodiak and watched "60 Minutes" tell them that their son's profession is the most dangerous in the world!

In July, Betsy Stevens Sutton and Bob welcomed Christopher Lalonde Nowak, son of their daughter, Anne. Bob lost both his parents this year so the Suttons have a second home in Florida and are doing lots of commuting. Betsy is also hoping for a trip to Australia and New Zealand (with a stop in California to visit son John and daughter Holly) in January.

"Lovely, smart and talented" Morgan Ann Korbel, born in Farmington, CT, last April may be an SBC candidate in a few years, according to her grandmother Mary Anne Love Morgan. Mary Anne is busy working with the local cable TV station and designing church banners. She and Garner live in Summit, NJ.

Kathleen Button Ginn and L.H. report that L.H.V. is an adorable almost 2-year-old. His daddy, Holmes, is a helicopter instructor pilot at the Army Aviation School at Ft. Rucker, AL. The Ginns' daughter, Scottie, is with IBM in white Plains, NY. Kathleen is traveling a lot with L.H. in connection with his Army Reserve job.

Both Betty Sanford Molster and Meta Space Moore are expecting grandchildren this winter. Betty and Chuck already have two and she loves taking care of them when she gets the chance. Meta's daughter, Susan, will present her with her first grandchild in Chicago in November. Meta loves being in her new home in Savannah. Her daughter, Margaret is in New York with Chemical Bank and son Allston is a senior at SMU in Dallas.

More babies due in February and March will make grandmothers of Petsy Gautier Mezey and Patty McClay Boggs. Patty and Flip's son, Cliff, and his wife live in Detroit so babysitting will be convenient. Their daughter, Nancy, is an assistant Tennis Pro at a club in Chapel Hill and her parents have decided it's a lovely vacation spot! For Petsy and Cliff, who still commute between Detroit and Coral Gables, FL, baby-spoiling will require a special trip as son Wade is with IBM in Chicago! Petsy's daughter Peyton was married last winter and lives in Denver. They also have a daughter in New York and two sons in Florida so trips are frequent. Their month in Europe last summer was highlighted by THE tournament at Wimbledon.

Other expectant grandparents are Phyllis Herndon Brissenden and Walter who are planning to breed their "little girl" this winter. If anyone is interested in acquiring a Jack Russell terrier in the spring, let them know!

Traveling in Europe last summer were Charlotte Orr Moores and Jon and their whole family. Daughter Jeanie lives in London and works for the American College of London. Oldest son Robert is an assistant Vice President at Amsouth Bank in Huntsville and has been on the go in Europe for business and pleasure. Son Jack, a senior at Vanderbilt, spent the summer at the American Embassy in Paris and daughter Louise, also at Vanderbilt this year, was an exchange student in Sweden. Charlotte enjoyed visiting with Evelyn Sanders Haugen whose son, George, was married in Decatur last summer. George and his wife left in July for two years in Zaire where they will be assistant house parents in a Presby-Methodist Youth Hostel. There should be an exotic vacation for Evelyn sometime soon.

Speaking of exotic vacations, Anne Lyn Harrell Welsh and Bill had one in March when they took two of their daughters on safari in Kenya. They were back in time for the graduations of the other two in May — one from VA Tech. and the other from the U. of Richmond.

Mitzi Streit Halla and Roman were anticipating a November trip to New Zealand. Most of their overseas traveling this year was done separately; Roman to Europe and Mitzi, in the other direction, to China and Hawaii. Son Kenneth is a graduate student at Boston U. and still a very active distance runner, competing all over the country. Brian, a senior at Duke majoring in Russian area studies, spent 6 weeks in the USSR and 5 weeks at sea with the Navy last summer.

Martha Hedeman Buckingham and Dick are still doing plenty of traveling and were looking forward to an October trip to China, Hong Kong and Bangkok. Now that both children are educated, Marty is trying to get the dog through obedience training.

Only the two youngest of their big brood, Peter and Christian, are left at home with Emma Thune Parker and Riggs. When Peter graduates in the spring, the four of them plan to take off in their Shannon 43 ketch to explore the Bahamas and Caribbean for a year.

Also headed for tropical climes, Didi Stoddard will spend Thanksgiving in Jumby Bay, Antigua, with her family. Her busy summer began with two weeks of gourmet eating in France, from Paris to Brittany and back. This trip was immediately followed by emergency surgery, during and after which she lost the weight she gained in France. A week of camping with one other adult and two 12-year-olds in September has convinced me that physically she is fine again but I do question her mental state!

Sandy Rhodes Berglund and Don moved to Crested Butte, CO, last winter and are building near a ski area. Sandy is taking weaving at Western State and Don is studying art.

A "new" house is keeping Cary Fox Fisher busy. She and Peter moved from one built in 1692 to another built in 1840. Their two oldest children are married and the youngest, Elizabeth, is a junior at UVA. Also at UVA, Peggy West Valentine and Henry's son, Ned, will graduate in the spring. Ida is still working in Atlanta so they feel fortunate to have Margy and Henry III working in Richmond.

The fund-raising consulting firm of Haas Cox & Alexander that Frankie Marbury Cox owns has grown from 7 employees in 1979 to 40 and its gross annual income has topped $2 million. Obviously, she's keeping busy and doing a great job. Their daughter, Molly, is married, living in Vermont and writing children's books. Harper and Row will publish "Petunia and the Yellow Balloon" in 1987. Tench Jr. is now in San Francisco as Marketing Vice President for Cohesive, an Atlanta-based high-tech firm.

Nella Gray Barkley and Rufus have opened a shop in Charleston, SC, called "L'Unique" where "everything is special and can't be gotten anywhere else in the area." Their daughter-in-law, Helen, is the manager. They feature women's clothes and accessories for men and women. Most of the items are designed in Europe.

Susan Hayward Collins' Briar Patch Designs is enjoying greater success all the time. She spends all her time doing accessories seminars for local stores and community groups. Let her know if you want information about her line.

Dede Crater Pearse is busier than ever with two radio stations for the handicapped. She started the second one in Tucson a year ago and travels down there from Phoenix for a few days each week. Despite bad economic news from Texas, Catherine Cage Bruns writes that her business at Texas First Brokerage is booming. They recently took on the brokerage business for American General Insurance nationwide.

Another successful business is Joan Fankhauser Burrell's stationery boutique, "On Occasions," which expanded to a second location in October. In connection with her business she frequently travels to New York. She is always there at the St. Moritz the third week in May and would love to hear from anyone in the vicinity. She and daughter Linda play a lot of tennis. Linda won the Women's Metropolitan Tournament in Cincinnati this year and Linda and Joan won the Mother-Daughter.

Pat Smith Ticer is still busy being Vice Mayor of Alexandria, selling a little real estate and playing tennis. Their daughter, Margaret, was married a year ago and is a CPA with Price Waterhouse in Norfolk where her husband is practicing law. Daughter Catherine works in White Plains, NY, and Virginia is a sophomore at UVA. Son John received his MBA from Dartmouth last spring along with Nancy Douthat Goss's son, Ned. Nancy wrote that she and Anne Williams Manchester are taking a course at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts that will teach them all they never quite grasped about Western Art at SBC. From Anne came the news that John Updike's The Witches of Eastwick was filmed in Cohasset in August. She advises everyone to concentrate on the scenery and ignore the story! She was on hand in Cold Spring, NY, last May for the wedding of Jane Feltus Welch's son, along with Pam Compton Ware, Phyllis Joyner and Ethel Green Banta.

From both Anne and Douthat, as well as Bar Hunt and Bexy Faxon Knowles came reports of the now infamous lobster fest in Maine. The 4 of them, with husbands and Lydia Plamp Plattenburg, were hosted by Shirley Suttiff Cooper and Tom for another gala mini-reunion. Bexy wrote that she and Bob are both tapering off and getting down to serious retirement planning. She is still a director of the Portland Board of Realtors, and the Tri-State Graduate Realtors Institute but is trying to slow down her brokerage activity. Bexy's sister-in-law is one of Lydia's best friends. Lydia also gets together regularly with Gene Smith.

Gail Davidson Bazzarre and John have all their family educated and out of the nest and are finally finding time and funding for their own projects. Gail is redecorating, which doesn't thrill John but then he didn't care for the alternative either — moving! Gail and her sister, Margery Davidson Rucker '51 are planning a June trip to England and Scotland.

Liz Rector Keener wrote that she and Ross are now in Newport News where he is rector of St. George's Episcopal Church. Son Ross III is in Orlando, FL, working at Disney World, which provides an excuse for wonderful January vacations for his parents!

Still busy with numerous community projects, Pat Kilmer Norris is now also a Cable TV producer and completed a course for portable equipment last summer. Daughter Melissa was married in October, 1985, and son Ben is a freshman at Valparaiso U. in Indiana.

With all three children at Dartmouth this year, Elise Wachenfeld dePapp has more time to spend with her horses, which she rides almost daily. Daughter Anne is a third-year medical student, John is in the Thayer School of Engineering, and Erica is a freshman. Elise visited Ruth Campbell Vanderpoel at Lake Winnepesaukee, NH, where Ruth and Charlie still spend their summers. Their son, Jim, is learning the trucking business and taking over for his father. Daughter Leigh is married and teaches 5th grade. Both live nearby and are a great help to Ruth.

Volunteer work is filling Kay Roberts McHaney's time now that both Stephen and Camille are at St. Stephen's Episcopal School in Austin. She is on the Citizens' Hospital board and is still the only woman on the Victoria College board. Son Gordon graduated from law school in May and is practicing in Austin and Scott is a sophomore at Westminster College in Fulton, MO.

More from the busy volunteer department: Mary Boyd Murray Trussell was working on the search committee for a rector for their church as well as serving as a trustee for Trinity Episcopal School for the Ministry. She and George enjoy scuba diving at Harbor Island. Dede Harrison Austin keeps busy with hospital board and garden club. She and Larry enjoy tennis and hunting. Their youngest, Jim, is a senior at Duke; Lisa is married and living in Sarasota, FL; and Larry, Jr., and his wife are in Grosse Pointe. Honey Addington Passano, without a wedding to plan this year, put her organizational efforts into the SBC Alumnae luncheon at the Gibson Island Club, which was attended by classmates Pat Ticer and Shirley Cooper. She also enjoyed catching up with Nella Barkley over lunch in New York.

Retta Jelks Vance wrote from Savannah that all three of their daughters graduated from the U. of Tennessee. Julie is with Tennessee Eastman Co. in Kingsport; Retta lives in Charlotte, NC, and works for Gallo Wine; and Helen is with Arkansas Best Freight in Huntsville, AL.

Lee Fiducia Hartmann and Ruedi love being in Florida after all those bitter Minnesota winters, (and she doesn't mind gloating either!) Denise finished her MA and has a wonderful job as a mental health counselor in Jacksonville. Greg is a project manager for Interlake in Chicago and Eric is in college in Florida.

Diane Johnson DeCamp headed back to England on the QE2 in October and planned to visit villages in the Cotswolds and look for antiques, returning on the Sagafjord in time for the holidays. Barbara McLamb Lindemann and I had a wonderful trip too. In July we took the train from Winnipeg to Banff and Lake Louise and then on to Vancouver and Victoria. We enjoyed one spectacular sight after another in the Canadian Rockies, then wore ourselves out at Expo '86 and the Butchart Gardens!

In the gracious living department, it was fun to see the pictures in the NY Times Magazine in October of the mouth-watering Thanksgiving dinner served by Emily Coxie Winburn to Craig Claiborne. It looks like southern hospitality at its finest. And, do y'all know that Ethel Banta is now mistress of Hope Farm in Natchez? Listed in the National Register of Historic Places, Hope Farm was built in 1774 and added onto in 1789. The house is open daily as well as on the Pilgrimage tour. Ethel runs a Bed & Breakfast in the guest wing and we're all invited! Barbara is already planning our southern tour.

(Addenda: The following late news was received in the alumnae office Phyllis Herndon Brissenden sent us the sad news that Walter died on October 13. They only had 8½ years together but Phyllis said they packed more into them than some people do into 25.

Mrs. Robert G. Lindsey, mother of Jane Lindsey Riddell who died in 1979, wrote to give us news of Jane's 3 daughters. Mary is still in the Air Force, Cathy in Silicon Valley, and Carol, the youngest, finished in accounting at Spring Hill College in Mobile, AL. Mrs. Lindsey would love to come back to Sweet Briar.

Renis Siner Paton's business, Heritage Sales and Appraisals, is now 5 years old and growing nicely. Renis's daughter Polly, a senior at SBC, will be looking for a job in biology this spring. Twin daughters Katie and Sarah are juniors at Chatham Hall. Camille Williams Yow's daughter, Camille, is marrying Robert McDuffie, a concert violinist, and they will live in NY.

Greetings from San Diego. Betsy Smith White writes she saw Judy Sorley Chalmers & Doug at Davidson where both have daughters in their junior year. Betsy's daughter Margaret is a senior there and Elizabeth, Davidson '85, was married June 14th to Al Diekus. Ann Eagles Carrell's son William is also at Davidson in his freshman year. Ann is serving as secretary-treasurer of the Carrell family business which is celebrating its 93rd year. Ginny Robinson Harris is taking a computer course in addition to master gardening and interior design work. Daughter Whitney is a junior at SBC and studying to be a veterinarian. Son Carter is doing field work in geological engineering.

Rachel Bok Goldman loves Chicago where she and Allen moved last year. Rachel is involved in the contemporary art scene in Chicago, but manages to get back to Philadelphia to see family and attend Curtis Institute board meetings. Their 5 sons are well and busy. Gay Hart Gaines and Stanley are enjoying their country house in Princeton, NJ. Gay will be on the presidential campaign trail for former Gov. Pete du Pont full-time for the next 2 years.

Betsy Colwill Wiegiers is enjoying art school. Snowden Durham Kisner was in NYC to see Betsy and Di Doscher Spurdle and reports that Betsy is quite an accomplished artist. Snowden and husband Chuck headed Charles Town's bicentennial celebration last June which took 9 months of hectic planning. Son Kenneth is now a senior at William & Mary where he is a "walk on" for the basketball team.

Tabb Thornton Farinholt's daughter Mary Blair graduated from SBC in May and was featured in Sports Illustrated (7/14/86) for her record as an All-American lacrosse player. Tabb plans to see Ann Young Bloom when she visits Mary Blair at her new job in Bryn Mawr, PA. On a recent trip to see son Bart in Atlanta, Tabb visited with Polly Space Dunn. Polly is busy raising two daughters, ages 13 & 17. Polly visited the Burgundy wine country in France and spent a week in Monte Barker Fiske sends word that both sons John (Trinity '85) and Tory (Colby Col. '86) have graduated. Monte spends as much time as possible at their house on Lake Winnepesaukee, NH. Ann Smith Heist and husband own a clothing and retail center in Jacksonville, FL. They considered a relocation to either Australia or New Zealand, but a recent trip convinced them to stay in FL. Daughter Mandy is a freshman at SMU. Ann sees Cookie Payne Hudgins occasionally and reports Cookie's gourmet shop is thriving. Trish Chandler Burns bought a motor home 2 years ago and has enjoyed touring the country. Trish visited SBC last year for the first time in 19 years. Her daughter Patty is a sophomore at U. of Alabama and Meredith is a freshman at Belmont in Nashville. Son Andy, 13, is "into" basketball and is already 5'11".

Connie Fitzgerald Lange's grant with the American Swedish Historical Museum in Philadelphia has concluded after a rewarding year. Daughter Sarah is a senior at Colgate and doing honors in her major. Merri Hagerty Rumrill has completed a graduate program in landscape design at Georgetown and started her own business after raising 4 children. Marge McCollum Tillman continues as head of the upper school at Schenck School in Atlanta and has completed her Ph.D. dissertation in educational psychology.

Mary Blair Scott Valentine enjoyed a trip to Italy in the fall of '85 with Jane Ellis Covington ('60) Betsy Pender Trundle ('58) and Mary Waller Berkeley Fergusson ('50). Mary Blair's daughter Grace is a freshman at Hollins. Liz Chambers Burgess has been promoted to executive director of Child Development Centers of Tidewater, a United Way agency. Husband Chuck is dean of the College of Arts & Letters at Old Dominion U. Liz's daughter Beth is a college sophomore and one son, Chuck is a senior at Norfolk Academy. He's in the same class and car pool with Virginia MacKethan Kitchin's son Cameron.

Evelyn Moore Horton and Ham are busy harvesting varieties of vegetables and grapes at their 1830 Moravian farm house in Greensboro. Their daughter Rosalie graduated from UNC-Chapel Hill and now lives in San Diego. Ali Wood Thompson wrote from Kihei, Maui where she was looking after their 2 beachfront condominiums. Ali also maintains an active life in Seattle. Sue Wedderburn Murray and husband are restoring an old water mill north of their home in Edinburgh. It was a "shell" when they started. Sue has a full-time position teaching mentally handicapped children. Their eldest, Dr. Keith, is spending a year in New Zealand. Son Alan, 20, is studying medicine at St. Andrews and daughter Gillian, 23, creates and retails fine knitwear.

Ethel "Ess" Bruner Campbell and Carl are happily settled in a newly remodeled home in Knoxville. Ess continues to teach piano. I was hoping to see Ann Wimbish Kasanin when Mark was in San Diego on business, but plans kept Ann in San Francisco. Their eldest, Marc, is now 21. While Ann and Mark were in the Far East last spring, they visited Shanghai and Macau. Ann had lived there as a child and this was her first trip back in over 30 years. The Kasanins went to Maui in Nov. '86 for the Maritime Law Association meeting. They met Lynn Adams Clark '61 and her husband, Morton, there and the 4 of them flew over to Lanai, which is due to be developed, to get a last look at it in its unchanged state.

I had a three-hour laugh-in with Ann Young Bloom last December when she and Larry were in La Jolla, CA visiting Ann's sister. Ann, Larry and a family group of 10 took a cruise down the west coast of Mexico over Christmas. Ann is very busy with the Philadelphia Orchestra

Susan Perry Farmer and I got together for a game of golf and dinner. Susan enjoyed seeing the scrapbook from the 25th reunion and reminiscing about SBC days. After two years in CA I'm getting settled into a routine. Most of my time is consumed with work as a stockbroker. San Diego is a golfer's paradise with 30 public courses so I don't have to tell you where I am when not working. I was back in Chicago in Sept. to complete the sale of my apartment there and attend my niece's wedding. Elinor and I will be in Freeport, GB for Thanksgiving.

Addenda: The following late news was received in the alumnae office. Pat Davis Suker visited Sweet Briar for the first time since graduation this October. She and her husband stopped by one afternoon and she said it looks even more beautiful than when she was a student. Mary Cooke Carle is still working at West Park Hospital in Philadelphia. Rebecca, 15, loves boarding at the Westtown School in PA where she enjoys hockey and violin. Mary spent a week with Snowdon Kisner in NC in Sept. Elizabeth Johnston Lipscomb's son, George, is a freshman at Davidson and is a classmate of Anne Eagles Carrell's son, William, and Christopher Clarke, son of Kate Wood Clarke '65, daughter of Elizabeth Bond Wood. Elizabeth (Lipscomb) enjoyed seeing Anne, Betsy Smith White and Ruth MacKie Gabay '58 on Davidson's Parents' Weekend (Ruth's daughter is there too).

From numerous newspaper reports, the alumnae office heard that Elizabeth's and Lloyd's eldest son, William Lipscomb, was chosen as one of the 1987 Rhodes Scholars; he is one of 2 Virginians among the 32 Americans chosen. The Americans will join Rhodes Scholars from 17 other countries at Oxford University in England; William, a senior and a physics major at Duke, will study physics and philosophy at Oxford for 2 years.

Victoria Anne Meeks Blair-Smith went back to work after 17 years — she is assistant librarian at the kids' high school, BB&N, in Cambridge, MA. "Now I get to live the life of a working parent with 2 teenagers!" Ann Pegram Harris urges all to save that Big weekend in May of '89 to come to Reunion. "Circle it now in your head and do not go off then on world tours or attend your child's wedding, etc." Virginia Ramsey Crawford and Mac toured Italy in the spring. Mac continues to work as a hospital administrator in Danbury, CT, while Virginia works "on the front lines" of education as a school librarian/media specialist in Greenwich. They are expecting a second grandchild soon. In San Francisco, Gretchen Smith Falk works for California Book Auction Galleries. She published an article describing some of the rare books auctioned by her company (eg. first editions of Heinlein and Tolkien) in Bookman's Weekly, Clifton, NJ.

Your class secretary has been in the habit of sharing news in alphabetical order. This time I will abandon that plan and be somewhat geographical. But don't look for too much consistency since that gets boring quickly.

McNair Currie Maxwell, who lives in CA, had a wonderful summer living in the dorms at Skidmore and studying Classics. She said learning is still possible, barely, but memorizing Latin poetry seemed unattainable. She observed that time is limitless without grocery shopping, preparing meals and carpooling, but she also said life without a car is not possible!

Katharine Blackford Collins has a new-found career as a free-lance writer, mainly articles on public land and natural resource issues for High Country News, a magazine covering environmental issues in CO, WY, MT, ID and UT. She is also chairman of the Democratic Party in her Wyoming county. Katharine and John, who teaches at the local college, have two boys, ages 15 and 13

Leslie Smith Elger lives in Whitefish Bay, a suburb of Milwaukee. Her family includes 2 dogs, 4 cats and a horse, plus her children, 2 in college and a high school senior. Jane Yardley Page and Emily, age 13, live in Minneapolis where Jane is at the Breck School. Lyn Clark Pegg and family have moved to Duluth, "overlooking Lake Superior and within spitting distance of Canada and the headwaters of the Mississippi River." Lyn is director of the Lutheran Social Service Counseling Center in Duluth and John is minister of Peace United Church of Christ.

Pat Calkins Wilder reports that Chris is a sophomore at Wake Forest, Alan is at boarding school near Buffalo and Kelley is a 10th grader at home. Pat has retired from most volunteer projects and is in her second year of photography school in Rochester. Mike Wilder is doing some business with China and Pat is hoping for an offer to pay a visit. Virginia Corwin Millo wrote that she had just returned from a wonderful trip to the People's Republic of China and the USSR as part of the People-to-People program. She works full-time as program manager at Northrop and has a 4 year old son, Gregory.

Prue Gay Stuhr reports that the Lexington, MA school system changed middle school organization. She now concentrates on sixth grade Social Studies with topics of archaeology and architecture! Prue wrote that training her dalmation, Cricket, in obedience is satisfying the way working with horses was at SBC. From CT I heard from two very busy classmates. Meg MacKenzie Nowacki teaches math full-time at New Haven Hebrew Day School, is president of the PTA where son Chris is a 6th grader, is chairman of the Board of Trustees and the financial secretary at Dunbar United Church and is active in the town PTA council. Meg also has a 10th grade daughter, Kate. Nancy McDowell Fairbanks has a senior clinical position in the child and family unit of a community health center. She also has a small private clinical practice. Nancy's "nest" is empty: twins Kathy and Andy are at Roanoke College and Wesleyan respectively and Ted is in Germany for his junior year at Occidental.

(Ed's note: From the Greenwich, CT newspaper, we received an enthusiastic review of Sallie Yon Williams' latest book, The Hay Day Cookbook which she co-authored with Smith alumna Maggie Stearns. A few of the comments were: "... a treasure trove of imaginative recipes ... fun to read, rather erudite in spots and an education in cuisine.")

Barby Rockefeller Bartlett happily reports from Philadelphia that her family is thriving. David is a freshman at Chestnut Hill Academy and Graham is a 6th grader at Benchmark, a special education school for children with reading disabilities, where he is doing so well he will probably reenter a "mainstream" school next year. (Those of us who have children with learning disabilities can identify and rejoice with Barby. My son, Reed, a dysgraphic, is now a junior in college with a 3.4 GPA! I never would have believed it when he was in 6th grade.)

I heard from several classmates scattered around Virginia. Mary Ann Utterback Burritt has moved back to Virginia Beach since Jim retired from the Navy. She is an instructional specialist in Language Arts with the Virginia Beach schools. Her Cheri (SBC '84) is working in D.C., Kiendel graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Wellesley last year and is living in Paris and Jimmy is a high school senior. Elizabeth Randolph Lewis's youngest is a high school senior. Elizabeth works part-time as book-keeper for daughter Anne, who has a "fairly sophisticated" sign company. Son John is working in Wilmington and another daughter is a junior at UVA, headed for the Sorbonne this spring.

Betsy Beale lives in the country outside Richmond being foster mother to thoroughbred racehorse mares and their "babies" for several clients. Betsy has a new barn in progress and still has her children's clothing store. She talked recently to Cathy Detmar Nicholls who is still happily foxhunting in England. Dearing Ward Johns continues to live and work in Charlottesville where she practices cardiology at UVA Hospital with special emphasis on the treatment of high blood pressure. Her husband practices neurology at UVA and does research related to Myasthenia Gravis. Dearing wrote of a "sisters retreat" last fall: "For one weekend, on the Jersey shore, while spouses kept the homefires burning, we gathered. Jessica Bemis Ward from Lynchburg, Anne Ward Stern ('66) from Maplewood, N.J., Nathalie Ward ('73) from Falmouth, Mass. and I. I calculated that Jessica and I talked for 16 hours!"

Ella Brown Hughes said that her big news is that she is a grandmother as of last June and will have second grandchild by the time these notes are printed. She and Ronnie celebrated their 25th anniversary last summer on a delightful Caribbean cruise — without their 4 children. Ella still teaches Latin at a high school just outside Lynchburg. Pete and I continue to enjoy being in Lynchburg in our "empty nest." Last summer he began working full-time for the state health department and loves it. He continues as the college physician at Sweet Briar and we both still think of that as our "community." I am busier than ever at the Lynchburg Fine Arts Center where I now am Coordinator of Performing Arts. I mentioned son Reed earlier. Daughter Elizabeth loves being a sophomore at Davidson College. The son of my sister, Katie Wood Clarke ('65) is also at Davidson, so we have kept some tradition of a family school even if it is not SBC.

Rinda King deBeck and her family moved back to Greensboro last year. That is her home town and she loves being back with family and old friends. Laurin, Rinda's oldest, finished Davidson last June and is doing graduate work at the University of South Carolina. Karla is a sophomore at Davidson and Christian is a high school junior. Also happily back in North Carolina is Lucy Otis Anderson who is on the board of the Mecklenburg Council on Adolescent Pregnancy. She and David were in Williamsburg last fall and had a grand visit with Alvin and Betty Stanly Cates and Allie Stemmons Simon who were there for Sweet Briar festivities and meetings.

From Memphis I had a card from Irwin Leatherman Zanone. Her daughter Mary will be graduating from NYU this May. She writes, "Some of us should be growing up with such grown children, but not me!" Her son Philip is a freshman at Vanderbilt and Katie is a valuable asset at age 11.

Robin Swain Davis divides her time between Memphis and New York. She is trying to promote piano recitals and get her "late-blooming" career off the ground. But her youngest is 15 and that keeps her closer to Memphis. Robin found an '85 alum to share her apartment through the Sweet Briar New York Chapter. The networking does pay off.

Both Julia Fort Lowe and Anne Carter Brothers wrote of a lovely Sweet Briar gathering at the Whiteman's in Nashville when President Fry was there. Afterwards Julia, Anne and Mary Trabue Meyer went out to dinner. Anne's Jay is a sophomore at Centre College, Carter is a freshman at Williams and Cary is 13 and still at home. Anne summed up what several classmates wrote: "Children getting older, parents getting grayer!"

Laura Lee Brown Deters had a good summer with some travel to Harbour Island, Canada and Nantucket. She has been touring colleges and prep schools and had the interesting experience of seeing Sweet Briar through the critical eyes of a prospective parent. Nancy Dixon Brown is still teaching special education in a high school in Atlanta. She and her girls spent a week with Betty Cates in Florida last summer. Julie Arnold Morey and Russ visited Nancy and Don last spring. Julie also visited Betty Cates and has had a visit from Penny Pamplin Reeves recently.

Jean McRae Bailey lives in Mobile where she is an academic advisor to the medical students at the University of South Alabama. She is also working on an MBA. She has two daughters in college and two more children still at home. Carol Cline

Palmer is working for the insurance commissioner in Oklahoma City. Her Meg is at Oklahoma University, Philip is a high school senior and her Patrick just turned 3. She thinks we should have a contest to see who has the youngest child!

Ann Knickerbocker McCulloch wrote from Houston just after husband Bill won an election for county probate judge. He had been appointed to the position earlier and finds the mental health docket especially challenging. Ann's volunteer interests parallel his professional ones. Their daughter is a senior at Baylor and son is a freshman at Texas Christian University. Keitt Matheson Wood's daughter took a semester off from SMU and went around the world on the Semester at Sea program. Son Gordon is a sophomore at Tulane. She said, "Frank and I are staying at home paying the tuitions."

Glenda Carlson Goodman wrote from Dallas that she remarried 2 years ago. Her husband recently had a book on investing, Hyperprofits, published by Doubleday. Glenda said life is much more fun now than it was during the almost 10 years she was a full-time working single parent. And last, but not least, also from Dallas, Allie Stemmons Simon has been working hard for Sweet Briar. She is now a Director, mind you, not just an Overseer. In addition to her travels back and forth to Sweet Briar, last summer she and Heinz went with her parents to Alaska and to Germany to take Heinz's mother on a Rhine cruise.

The next time you read class notes it will be right before our 25th Reunion. So you have a full year's notice to begin planning to be back in Virginia in late May, 1988. More, much more, on all that later.

Thank you for all of your notes and your concern for my recuperation. All is well and I am now gall bladderless. Old age is tough — everything starts falling apart. In two years its been gall bladder and hysterectomy, next will be a lobotomy.

If you haven't heard by now its reunion time. Our 20th will be May 22-24 1987, and many of our classmates are already packed. It will be a fun super time and everybody please try and plan to come. Gretchen

Bullard Barber is our Reunion Gifts Committee Chairman and is doing a great job getting the spirit up. You'll be hearing from Page Munroe Renger and myself again soon.

Kerry Weber Brown has remarried and is living back in her hometown and along with husband Randy comes an added bonus of a son who is 12. In the process of planning on returning for reunion, Kerry is building a new home and will be settled in by April.

Putzi Von Rebhan is still working at the National Gallery of Art in D.C. and is busy taking horticulture classes and acting as president of her condominium association.

Randy Brown Sebren is racing the clock to complete her masters in curriculum and instruction at Va. Commonwealth before her eldest starts college. Besides being mother to 3, Randy is still teaching math, working with the Girl Scouts and helping with the local chapter of the Va. Museum.

Eleanor Kidd Crossley hopes soon to have her own interior design consulting business. She reports that two of her children are married, 1 single and her 11th grader makes her wonder where time has gone.

Lynn Frazier Gas is back in Houston where Francois has a new job. For her 40th, Lynn and her husband are going on the QE II and the Concorde.

Priscilla Blackstock Kurz reports that she is living in St. Louis and nothing will keep her from seeing old friends back at SBC in May.

Sally Haskell Hulcher met with Lindsey Smith Newsom and Page Munroe Renger this summer with husbands and kiddies and she feels 21 forever because their chatter hasn't changed a bit from SBC days.

Julie Bodin Converse ran into Melissa Sanders Thomas and family at Hilton Head. Julie reported that Melissa is as happy and funny as ever. Melissa wrote that Julie's husband George was head of the Pediatric Conference held at Hilton Head and that she and Julie decided that they looked great!!

Barbara Annan's news is that she will receive her M.A. in Pastoral Ministry from Boston College in January and will be visiting her old roommate Mandy Mitchell Hartzog.

Peggy Kennedy Brown finds it hard to believe that she has a son who is a freshman at Davidson and her daughter is a sophomore in high school.

Margaret Mapp Young also is shocked to find that she will be a college mom next year. Her 3 boys give her no chance for an SBC candidate. She says she tried.

Ellen Kelley Widmer brought her daughter to SBC for a prospective students weekend. Ellen is working at the First Union National Bank as a documentation specialist in their commercial loan dept. and is living in Gastonia N.C.

Lyn Milton Walker wrote that she finally completed her M.B.A. after 2 1/2 agonizing years and is working as a strategic planner in the marketing dept. of Zipsort, a presorter of mail. The rest of her family have become very proficient at household chores.

Betsy Kurtz Argo is still a development officer at her alma mater — Columbus School for Girls. Having just sent her oldest off to college Betsy wrote that the memories keep flying back. Husband Jim is a jeweler in a family business and Betsy keeps busy with a country home, the kids and horses.

Diane Mann Lankford lives in Atlanta and continues to renovate and sell old houses and is looking forward to having another driver in the family next year.

Daphne Baynham White and family are still living in Dallas where Daphne has been selling real estate for 9 years. Kemble has a law practice and is Chairman of the Board of a small local bank. Their two children are busy with gymnastics, ballet and swim teams.

Roommate Barbie Tillman Kelley wrote that she has the same 3 kids, the same job, same house and same husband but I guess she has not given up the fight since they're building a hot tub out back of the house.

Congratulations go to Glory McRae Bowen on the birth of their 3rd child, Thomas Jefferson Mott Bowen in December of 1985. They vacationed in Jacksonville and Disney World this summer.

Beverly Bradshaw Blake and Kendall celebrated her 40th by going back to Paris for a wonderful second honeymoon; they met her twin sister there so they celebrated together. Bev and Kendall met there 20 years ago. She is still teaching 8th graders part-time while Kendall practices orthopedic surgery.

Mimi Harrison Rippin Vickers announced that she has remarried and that she and Gary divide their time between Atlanta and their 130 yr. old home in the country. Mimi is now "retired" from her job as director of education for the Georgia Trust for Historic Preservation.

Janie Willingham Glass wrote of the death of her husband Bill from pancreatic cancer and she and their 4 children (16, 15, 12, 10) moved from Houston back to Chattanooga to the home where she grew up. We are sorry to hear her sad news but delighted that in Oct. '86 Janie plans to remarry and between them they will have 8 children.

Beth Gawthrop Riely's book The Chef's Companion: A Concise Dictionary of Culinary Terms was published in 1986 and it contains nearly 4,000 entries for the "new" ethnic styles of cooking as well as classical French & traditional cuisines. John is a tenured professor of English at Boston University and they have 2 sons (11 & 3).

News of the birth of their second child and son came from Kate Barrett Rennie who lives in Scotch Plains, N.J. Their daughter is 12 and Kate says it's wonderful to have a baby around the house again.

Lynn Lyle is looking forward to seeing us all in "full bloom" at the 20th. Lynn taught a graduate seminar in Politics of Higher Education at N.C. State this year as well as being a full-time fundraiser, and loves living in Raleigh. She visited Glory McRae Bowen and family in NJ and their son Hardy is her godson.

Mary Bell Timberlake and Wayt have no children at home this year. Wayt IV is a 1st yr. student at UVA and daughter Julie is a sophomore at St. Catherines. Mary is working as a manager of a small office/retail shopping center and is looking forward to May but wishes it wasn't the 20th.

Katharine Barnhardt Chase and Bob also have a new addition to their family. They have a new daughter born in 1985 and now Bob has a harem. She returned to work as a lead poisoning prevention nurse on a part-time basis and Bob is enjoying the last semester of his sabbatical at UVA.

Susan Tucker traveled to India from the Taj Mahal to the palaces of Rajasthan and it was a fabulous adventure. In Sept. she returned to France to attend the wedding of the son of the family she lived with during her year abroad. Susan was just elected to the board of the Alliance Francaise and is active in the Museum of French-American Friendship in Paris. Her ad. and PR agency moved to new, expanded offices this summer.

Dolly Caballero Garcia and Julio have their daughter Dolly as a freshman at SBC this year and she made the volleyball team. Their son is also at school in Va. while their youngest is still in school in P.R.

Sally Twedell Bagley's daughter (5) and Stephanie Ewalt Ayer's son are in school together. Sally is chairman of AFS for the Collegiate School and also recording secretary for their Patron's Board. Sally also has 25 piano students each week.

Jane Stephenson Wilson reported that all was well with her family.

From Oregon came word from Gene King Leyden who is teaching creative dance movement and ballet to young children 2½ to 9 yrs. old. Gene is also involved as a director for gymnastics for a local club and says that all these young ones keep her young and in shape.

Peggy Minis Trethewey still commutes every 2 months from Sydney, Australia to San Francisco and reports that there is lots of excitement "down under" with the America's Cup.

Planning to come to reunion is Stephanie Lucas Harrison unless there is a conflict with her graduation at SMU. She will be getting her J.D. She wrote a paper that got her on the staff of the Journal of Air Law and Commerce, a very nice honor for her.

Trips to Michigan, Nag's Head, Disney World have kept the Barr's busy. Carroll Randolph Barr and Mike and the Timberlakes (Mary Bell) are doing a lot of tailgating at UVA games. Carroll keeps busy following soccer, tennis and the PTO and is a Sunday school teacher.

Nice to hear from Susan Summers Alloway after so long. Susan is living in Flemington, NJ. and she wrote me on her 41st birthday. She and her husband Evans have 4 sons from previous marriages and they have decided to abandon the relative security of their corporate/academic lives and are gleefully doing what they want to which is raising beef cattle, selling early American antiques and the work of the southwestern American Indians, designing educational software and living at a slower pace. She hopes to attend the 20th to see what's become of us all.

Gracey Stoddard Slotterbeck and family continue to travel to their Vt. home from the Big Apple to get that country air. They traveled to New Zealand in the spring and for 17 days they traveled by camper to tour the glaciers and mountains. Gracey is a training V.P. at the NY Junior League.

Anne Carr Bingham and family moved 2 yrs. ago from Boston to Alexandria, VA where Kim is an attorney with the Justice Dept. Immigration and Naturalization Service and has just published his first book. Anne is an office administrator for a commercial real estate firm in D.C. and is studying Medieval English history and singing in the choir of their church. Their son is at St. Albans and their daughter is a sophomore at UVA.

Also in the D.C. area at St. Agnes's School is Baird Shinberger Bell. Bill received a grant to study at the Rand Corporation in CA and does a monthly commute to Santa Monica. They have 2 sons.

Toni Naren Gates and Bud are still in Wichita and Bud has a new position as president of Rent-a Center, a new business which has just gone public. They also are franchise holders of Pizza Huts in upstate N.Y. Toni states that this midlife challenge has pumped new adrenalin into their veins. Her theatre group, Tales for Tots, has become an institution in Wichita and has a full performance schedule. Her two children (11 and 7) keep her in the car from 4-6 P.M.

Mary Cary Ambler Finley looks forward to seeing us all in May.

Stephanie Ewalt Ayers and Rye took the children to Disney World this spring and they were dragged around so much it took two weeks to rest up. They visited with Lisa Harvey Morton and John for the UVA-Navy game.

The Rengers (Page Munroe and John and their 2 children) and the Hulchers (Sally Haskell and their two children) visited with Lindsey Smith Newsom and Mac and their daughter for Labor Day at the Newsom's lake house. The Newsoms also traveled north to Greenwich to visit Sue Morck Perrin and Bill. Also there were the Hulchers and Gretchen Bullard Barber and David. They are starting to get in the reunion mood.

Lynn Gullett Strazzini and Ed have a real commuter marriage. Ed works in D.C. with the army and Lynn is an organizational development specialist with the Federal Aviation Admin. at JFK Airport in NY. It's a logistical nightmare to see each other but they love it.

Our Prez. Page Munroe Renger spent the summer on the baseball field and when not there, walking the beach and lying in a hammock. Page is working part-time for the Jr. League doing their computer work and seems to be chairman of all kinds of volunteer projects. Page even finds time to jog 2-3 miles a day and even made 10 miles one day this hot summer in NC.

Now it's my turn. We are still living on the L.I. Sound in CT and I am involved up to my neck in club work. I just finished my term as Pres. of Newcomers and am now Pres. of the Women's Club. John swears I'm working my way up to Selectwoman. Quilting has become a fetish and extra time is spent with my 2 grandsons. Oh, how I want a little girl. We just returned in time from Hawaii to allow me to type this epistle and have bought a condo in Jupiter, FL which has been a great get-away. No, I have not found Burt Reynolds yet!

Those that are planning to attend reunion so far are (by maiden name): Bensen, Bell, Ewalt, Stoddard, Summers, Kelley, E., Blackstock, Brown, R., Weber, Carr, Barr, Bullard, Munroe, Smith, L., Barnhardt, Lyle, Blew, Tillman, Kurtz, Willingham, Ambler, Sanders, Darby, Heyward, MacRae.

A reunion Committee made up of Hallie, Gretchen, Dee Dee, Marion, Gracey, Lindsey and Page went back to SBC to plan the events so start packing. You'll be hearing from us all and do bring your families. I've got to lose 30 pounds, dye my hair and find my loafers (weejuns) by then, but I'm ready.

Addenda: Late news received in the alumnae office: Linda Fite and her youngest child, Sarah, spent a week at SBC in August at the Suzuki Institute. They stayed in Manson and Linda said it was wonderful. Husband, Herb Trimpe stayed home with the other 2 kids. Linda is looking forward to reunion. Britton Hassell Nielson has 3 daughters, Britt, 18, Marguerite, 15 and Noni, 12. They are interested in dance, tennis, karate, kayaking, piano and golf. The whole family loves to ski. They spent part of March in Kenya and enjoy their lake house in Florence, where Britton occasionally sees Hallie Darby Smith. She also got together with Miriam Bennett who was in Nashville for a zoological convention. Britton's husband, Norris, is head of asset management and a partner with J.C. Bradford Co.

Pamela Kelley's company, Rue de France, continues to grow. It now has 22 full-time employees in the manufacturing and mail-order processing depts. and the retail store. Pamela also works with her law partner in Howe and Kelley, all in the same building in Newport, RI. Pamela says 2 jobs are no problem — she just works 12-hour days. Judy Schlatter Fogle and Don still have a real estate company near Atlanta and have also gotten into home building. Their 2 sons, 15 and 12, are at The Westminster Schools and Suzannah, 6, is a blonde. Judy does volunteer work and chauffeurs the children to ballet, baseball, Brownies, basketball, etc. Jo Weins MacMichael's husband, Skep, was transferred to Mayport on the GA/FL border but they're looking forward to moving back to Alexandria by mid-May and Jo hopes to come to Reunion. Since she attended 5 undergraduate schools before receiving her BA, she says she has real appreciation for a Sweet Briar education. Jim, 16, is a soccer player, wrestler and 3.5 student; John, 20, is a junior at VMI.

Classmates, you were very patient with my solicitation of your dreams.

Louise Archer Slater would like to realize her dream of hot air ballooning before the year is over. Claire Kinnett Tate dreams that it's time to leave for a grand trip, but she isn't finished packing and may miss the plane. She wonders if she will ever catch up with herself! Preferring news to dreams, Wendy Weiss Smith traveled in Norway after picking up a new Saab. She teaches English as a second language, and her husband Gilbert is in the process of leaving GTE Labs. Rhoda Allen Brooks dreams of reading a book a week without feeling guilty; a long-term daydream is to go trekking in the Himalayas. Jill Lowry Warfel writes from Dade City, FL that she dreamed of making it to the year 2003 with her sanity intact, as that is the year that the youngest of her 4 daughters will be out of the house. It's been a long time since third floor Grammer, or was it yesterday? Betty Duson, a psychologist in private practice, says she had trouble confessing her dreams because she knows what they mean! She should have a field day with our class notes! Betty dreams about hiding places in her grandmother's yard, gardening, screaming at people she is polite to during waking hours, and singing in the choir at Sweet Briar Chapel.

From Jacksonville, Cami Crocker Wodehouse dreamed that a large spider followed her around the house and finally to the car. She has quit teaching and is enjoying all the little pleasures of being a chauffeuring, volunteering mother. Cami enjoyed our Reunion and felt that a few ghosts had been banished. Carolyn Jones Walthall dreams about a train station; she's not trying to catch a train, she's just passing through. If this signifies a mid-life identity crisis, will Betty please get in touch? Anne Sniffen Cates dreams that she will have her boxes unpacked in her new home in Fairfax, Virginia by Christmas, and that she will find some friends and maybe even a babysitter. Ward is teaching at George Mason University; Anne hopes that some of us living nearby will get in touch.

Pam Henery Arey dreams of spending an uninterrupted day with her family; her long-term dream is to live among servants in a country home in England and work on crafts. Louise Jackson has had a dream come true: she has bought and restored an older home on her own. She indicates it has plenty of guest room, for the rest of us dreamers, perhaps? Louise rafted down the Rio Grande last spring and explored Northern CA this fall. Gale Hull Whetzel wonders if her dream really happened because she has had it so often. Gale dreams that she is taking a final for Dr. Rowland's English class, blue book on her desk, when she realizes that she's never attended 1 class! Susan Schmidt dreams of living and cruising on her own sailboat. Susan spent four contemplative months at a Quaker community near Philadelphia recovering from mono. She baked, listened to her inner voice, and began the novel she always wanted to write.

Jill Minnema Worth dreamed that a bull elephant screamed a mating call to its mate about 10 feet from her bed before she woke up and discovered it was her 17-year-old playing his tape deck. She asks us 2 questions we hesitate to answer: Did we listen to music as loud and awful as kids today? Or getting old? Patsy Wheeler Maddox is making her dream come true by returning to Lynchburg College for a Masters in learning and emotional disabilities. Kay Brown Grala dreams that she will someday sleep through the night and actually have dreams! Kay's children are 5 (Broni), 3 (Meg), and newborn (Nicholas). Jacque Penny Goldstone's favorite dream takes place in ancient Hawaii. Pele (I think) danced for her and rows of Hawaiian warriors marched by them as if going to war. The best part of this dream, Jacque says, is that she woke up happy.

Lissy Stevenson dreams of missing subways, getting fired, and escaping to a nice, quiet asylum somewhere! Lissy is still at Audubon and in love with her nemesis, she says: he went to Virginia and isn't a radical. She doesn't know what to make of herself, she adds. Lynne Manov Sprinsky sent a postcard overflowing into a letter. She was amazed at how little everyone at Reunion had changed. She dreams about her first husband (definite hunk material) when under stress, and daydreams about finishing school and driving a car with air conditioning. Long-range dreams include a vacation with her mother and friends (including Mary Helen Layton), floating in a barge through the canals of Burgundy. Her husband had a stroke last May but has made a near-total recovery.

Some non-dreamers in our class also responded. Frances Barnes Kenamer writes from Montgomery that with a 15-month-old and a full-time job, she's too tired to dream! She loved seeing everyone at Reunion. Katie Horan, an account executive with Merrill Lynch, expects work to get busier now that the new tax law has passed. She has 2 new horses, 1 she is doing dressage with and 1 that is "just a baby." Debby Dykes Hill is finishing her Ph.D. in Marriage and Family Therapy at the U. of Florida, raising Jenny (9) and Adam (7), working half-time at the U., being a singing counselor to elementary kids, and (she says) watching soaps and eating bon-bons in her spare time. Mim Washabaugh Meglan has moved to Baltimore and works for Alex Brown and Sons as an investment research analyst. In her frequent travels, she has seen Sioux Greenwald in New York and Robi Randolph, who has bought a beautiful new house in Alexandria.

Kathy Wilson Lamb commented, along with Lynne, on how little most of us at Reunion had changed. Kathy is finishing her 6th grader, Marie and her 2nd grader, Katie, to their afterschool activities when she is not fundraising for her children's school, conducting school tours, or playing tennis. She does dream of eventual peace and quiet. Judy Brown Fletcher is working on an article on teenage pregnancy for the Indianapolis "Junior League Review." She is also processing tons of tomato puree from what must be an enormous garden while the green beans lie in wait. Alix Som- mer Pearce lives in the historic district of Fredericksburg and is Assistant Principal of Drew Middle School, while her husband teaches Historic Preservation at Mary Washington. At Reunion last spring, Alix saw Florence Woelfel (Class of '21) and Gordon Beemer from Crawfordsville, IN, who were married at Sweet Briar House during Reunion week.

Liz Mumford's dreams are coming true: she got married on October 12 on Cape Cod, and she had two paintings accepted at the Mystic Seaport Museum Gallery for their fall international show. Margaret Mackie Sanders started her own radiology practice in Dallas 2 years ago and things are going well. She and her son John are taking piano lessons together. Elodie Taylor Thompson writes from Monroe, VA that she is still librarian at Central Elementary in Amherst and is involved in Brownies and Cub Scouts. Her daughter's Daisy Scout troop was featured in the summer 1986 Alumnae Magazine. Elodie enjoyed seeing everybody at Reunion. In MA, Carol Johnson Haigh helps her husband with his management consulting business when she isn't volunteering at school, race walking, bike touring, or designing quilts. She reports that Jean McIlhenny Gaskins had her 4th child, Charles III, in June.

Alisa Yust Rowe loved my idea of sending in dreams (thanks, Alisa). She would not only like to have a novel published, but she dreams that she will be sitting in a movie theatre and see the words, "Adapted from the novel by Alisa Rowe" flash across the screen. She enjoyed our Reunion, too. Barbie Gracey Backer reports that her husband Ron has left his 20-year job with Pratt and Whitney to join Barbie at Gracey Brothers Insurance. In addition to a one-year-old son, John, Barbie is expecting her 2nd (and their 5th) in June, and she is also hoping that old friends will visit them at their new home in Delray Beach. Melissa McDowell Stevens had her 3rd child last January and has moved to Ft. Benning, GA with her husband who is a Lieutenant Colonel. Terry Lioy Faulkner has moved to Kansas City, MO and is now associated with Kendall-Hall Publishing Co. Cindy Davis Rackley has been hired as Managing Director for Marketing at the International Association for Financial Planning in Atlanta. In addition to her long career in banking and finance, Davis is also on the board of the Atlanta Ballet.

Kathy Jones Youell was stricken by an aneurysm and has been at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond since August. Kathy is expected to recover, but will be in physical therapy for at least six months.

Honey Hammer could not come to Reunion because she was judging a 2-day horse show. She has been promoted to Senior Account Executive at Mead Data Central. Libby Tyree Taylor missed Reunion because of the birth of her 2nd child, Lee: "To ease the pain of having my wings clipped by a new baby boy, my husband and I took a spring vacation in France, now a distant dream as I walk the floor with babe in arms! Recently I had a wonderful visit with Lawson Calhoun Kelly '70 and in April with Anne Milbank Mell, reminding me of my days of freedom at SBC."

I used to dream about Sweet Briar all the time, wandering through the dorms and the academic buildings as the fog lifted from the dells. Since attending Reunion, I am no longer haunted by SBC, but have the usual naked-in-the-subway and naked-at-a-party dreams, nothing too weird. If any of you skiers or vacationers are in CO, please look me up. We have a guest room and access to Killian's.

Reunion was my first return to Sweet Briar since student days. It really was odd to dive into my past and into my dreams during the present and in waking hours! As a class, I thought we looked great and sounded interesting. I love this job as class secretary; I get to see how our lives run parallel and occasionally converge, even in dreams. A note to you non-corresponders: please send in your class notes for better or worse. There are no minimum success qualifications.

Still in NH, Randy Anderson Trainor and her husband stay busy with the farm. Their greenhouses are full of 15,000 poinsettias, not to mention all of the other plants they have for sale. Randy can't believe how fast her children are growing — Cliff is 3½; Cary is 1½.

From Rochester, NY Joanna Arias wrote to say she's finishing her plastic surgery training and hopes to set up private practice in the South.

Bet Bashinsky White is presently building a new house. She's selling the farm and moving in closer to Case's school. Last summer she had a visit from Gail Ann Zarwell Winkler and her new baby, Laura.

In addition to caring for two children ages 7 and 4, Gail Bradley Ledbetter is enjoying teaching at a local nursery school, and finds the children's energy and enthusiasm gratifying to watch.

Carol Brewer Evans enjoys being a full-time mother to a 5-year-old and a 2-year-old. Jim stays busy supervising his group of process engineers at the Union Camp paper mill.

Betsy Brooks Jones writes that she is enjoying tennis, being vice-president of PTA, her Garden Club and church activities. Brownrigg is in the 3rd grade and Thomas in nursery school.

In Chicago, IL Susan Buschmann Curry and her husband are busy remodeling their home in anticipation of a new baby due in January. According to the ultrasound, it's a boy.

Betsy Clay Fernandez wrote from Spain where she and Jose are having a busy year with the kids and relatives. Jose travels quite a bit — Marbella, Barcelona and all the common market countries. The family vacationed for 3 weeks on the Mediterranean. Betsy stays busy teaching English to 7-year-old Martha and 5-year-old Juan.

In CA, Carol Clement Pavia and her husband Frank have bought a new house in Rolling Hills Estates. Their son, Louie, is now walking and talking. Since Carol has been given additional responsibilities in her job, she will be traveling east more often.

Sarah Clement loves living in D.C. — it's so clean and rustic compared to Manhattan where she spent 5 years. She's an attorney doing energy law at a small firm in Georgetown and really likes the technical parts of the practice. She walks to work and runs every day, either in Rock Creek Park; up Mass Ave. past the embassies; or downtown across Memorial Bridge to Arlington Cemetery. When she's in town long enough to train, she also races her bicycle.

In preparation for baby #4, Anne Cogswell Burris and Lon had 2 weeks of paradise in Hawaii and California. Coggs says that 3 little boys aren't hectic enough for her! The new baby is expected in February, with a good chance that it will be another boy! They enjoyed a beach visit from Ann Wesley Ramsey and her clan last August on Sullivan's Island.

Jean Connor Churchill and her husband are pleased to announce the arrival of their 2nd child — a daughter, Mallory Jean, born on June 19th. Their 3-year-old son, Zachary, enjoyed his summer at home with Mommy and the new baby, but was also happy to begin preschool in the fall. Jean plans to return to part-time social work.

Cathy Cowdery Etheridge and Bill now have 3 children — Black (5), Laura (2), and Christian (born May 25, 1986). Cathy says she loves staying home with them; that they are fun and challenging. She and Bill are interested in Home Schooling. Bill now does more appraisal work than real estate sales.

Catherine Cranston Whitham with a kindergartener and a pre-schooler, finds herself very involved with various classroom and fundraising activities. After she and Whit enjoyed a warm weather trip to St. Barth's last winter, they're considering a ski vacation this winter to CO with the children!

When not caring for a hubby, 3 horses, 3 dogs, 1 kitten and 2 children Beverly Crispen Heffernan enjoys foxhunting. After the birth of her son Chris (Nov. 16, 1985), Bev "retired" from the Department of Energy and finds herself busier than ever. She stays in touch with Nancy Haight who is no longer teaching, but now works in her Dad's textile and winery business, and lives in Litchfield, Conn.

Coni Crocker Betzendahl is still doing her free-lance package design for Palmer chocolate. She says to look for "Abigail Magictail" on the shelves at Easter, or on Santa's ski chalet at Christmas. She and Richard have 2 children. Lindsay (4) is a pre-schooler and Ashley (18 months) lives up to the reputation of a red-headed temperament.

Nan Cunningham Watson says that 1986 was a particularly exciting year with the birth of a precious daughter, Hallie Nixon Watson, on May 10. Nan says Hallie is such a delight and has a very special godmother, Jo Ellen Lenoir.

Penny Czarra and Lisa Walker have just returned from a trip to India and Nepal. Their adventures included visits to the hills of Nepal, boat trips through the inland canals of Kerala, excursions through bazaars, teas in the homes of old and new friends, and many, many temples. Now that Penny is back in D.C., she's concentrating on developing "Global View" — the company she's recently started to bring films and news on international issues to the U.S. public on T.V.

Now living in Spring Hill, Florida Lynn Dann is working for the State Dept. of Health & Rehab. Services with the elderly and disabled. Both of her children are finally in school, so Lynn is now involved in Boy Scouts and ballet. Lynn enjoyed a recent visit from Pat Parker and her daughter, Sarah.

Stephanie Dewey Hoffman and her husband still work together in their ad agency/new product development firm. He invents new products and she does the packaging and commercial art for the company. His latest invention is a product called "chipclip jrs." which are resealers for small potato chip bags.

Mary Dubuque Desloge gave birth to her 2nd son, Christopher, whom she was carrying at the Reunion. She and her husband have bought a new house, and now they're expecting ANOTHER NEW BABY! Mary says she's convinced this one is a girl. She and Chris also celebrated their 5th wedding anniversary last May in Nantucket.

Joan Douglas Murray and Chris will be first time parents in December!

Linda Frazier Keith is teaching school again — science to 6th and 8th graders at a girls' school in Bethesda, and really likes it. Next summer they will probably be moving again — this time to San Diego, CA.

Hopefully, this will be the end of moving for awhile

Having just returned from the Riding Reunion at Sweet Briar, Katylou Gray Brittle wrote to say what a blast the Reunion was and how great the campus looked. She said she was floored by the Computer Room. She is still riding steeplechase horses, fox-hunting and managing Dominion Saddlery in Middleburg, VA.

Writing from Boca Raton, FL Lisa Hall is starting back to school (again!). She's entering the Art Conservation Dept. of the State Univ. College at Buffalo. The program is located in Cooperstown, N.Y. Good Luck, Lisa!

With 9-month-old Mary-Carson and 4-year-old Harrison at home, Ellen Harrison Saunders says she feels like a full-fledged housewife. She's retired from most community activities except for church work, garden club and Sweet Briar duties. She and Whitley are looking forward to a trip to Bermuda in November.

Anna Ho Mah sent me a very impressive business card for CIG — Computer Imaging & Graphics, Inc., Effective Visual Communications. Anna is vice president of the company which is located in Research Triangle Park, N.C.

As usual, Chris Hoefer Myers' life is busy and crazy. In addition to her blossoming career at the ETV Network, Chris is president of her Parish Council, co-chairman of a garden club committee and publicity chairman for the Beaux Arts Ball. For the Ball, she's generating newspaper articles and TV coverage on everything from Peter Duchin and his orchestra to ballgowns and ice sculptures.

Ginny Holden was married on Valentine's Day (1986) to Scott Davis Hodes, who is an attorney in Chicago. They've just moved into a new house that is actually very old — built in the 1800s, totally gutted and rehabed with a wonderful little front yard, a tree(!), and backyard with 2 decks. Ginny says it's perfect for the 2 of them, and only 5 minutes from Michigan Ave.

Neil Hunter King has just reopened her exercise studio in an Historic Downtown Mall in Charlottesville. Last May she went to an Aerobic Convention in CA and took the First National Industry Certification Exam and passed it. She said the convention was exciting, with 2,000 people from all over the world, and the opportunity to meet famous people in the Fitness World such as Jack Lalanne and Gilda Marx. She and Chip are enjoying renovating their home in Scottsdale, VA.

Beth Jones Elkins and Steve "could not tolerate the tension of waiting for the gate of Union Carbide so moved on to greener pastures." They now live on the Main Line outside Philadelphia where Steve has a new job with CIGNA. Their best news is the birth of a new son in March 1985. Beth says that "Gregory is a happy, delightful 6-month-old and that when Meredith began nursery school in the fall she cried on her first day. Wait 'till she hits first grade!"

From Fayetteville, NY Christine Kjellstrom Douglas wrote to say she and her husband are really enjoying living 2 hours from the Adirondacks. They've almost finished their first renovation experience.

Carol Leslie St. John says her Interior Design business is busier than ever, and that juggling her family and career is hectic. She and Tommy are off to Japan for 2 weeks hoping to mix lots of pleasure with business. Over Thanksgiving, Carol visited Houston to be the Godmother of Martha French Roberts' new baby boy, John.

Dot Lyons Heffner says she and her husband Glenn have finally settled down in the Cleveland, OH area and love being back home! They have just moved into a new house with their golden retriever, Buckeye. Dot has started her own neurology practice and Glenn is self-employed.

Writing checks and preparing financial statements consumes a good part of Margaret McFaddin's time since she works for a small business, putting inventory and books on the computer, and is also computerizing the Junior League's books. At Thanksgiving, Margaret traveled to D.C. and had a visit with Kathleen Ryan and Jody Anderson Wharton. Jody's son Hank was celebrating his 2nd birthday. Margaret's sister, Jane McFaddin Bryan ('73) had her 1st child on July 20, 1986, Charles William McFaddin Bryan.

From New Orleans, LA Claire Martin Avegno stays busy with her 2 children. She is returning to the Parenting Center, after 1 year off, to do volunteer work with pre-schoolers. In her spare time, she smocks dresses, gardens and bike rides Shari Mendelson Gallery and Phil are now living in the house they built themselves from scratch over the last 4 years. She and Phil split the days in caring for their 2 sons, Matthew (3¾) and Nathon (1¾); she keeps the kids in the mornings and he keeps them in the afternoon so she can handle her consulting and marketing assignments. They're also still raising and selling Christmas trees, peaches and apples in the hills of WV and Shari is very pleased with her first year as a self-employed consultant.

Still living in Paducah, KY Pam Myre Turner and Ray have just added Patrick Ray Turner III to their family (born April 29, 1986). Pam says that 7-year-old Lauren and 2½ year-old-Beverly seem to like their new baby brother.

Mai Nguyen Woo reports that she's quite happy managing her 3 children's schedules as well as her company,

Stock Market Research, which offers everything from refinancing to group life insurance. She and Gene are also enjoying their new dream home in Falls Church, VA

Lynn Norris Pfeiffer's new location sounds ideal. She and her family have just moved onto 5 acres of land. She says they love it — that they can see the stars at night better without city lights. Lynn says she stays busy with gardening and raising her 2 boys

Patty O'Malley Brunger and Mark had a busy summer with a trip to Galveston and a week in MI. Patty is involved in the boys' preschool programs, is a puppeteer for "Kids on the Block" and is working on the Symphony Showcase

Skiing in the morning and swimming in the afternoon keeps Janet Richards Oikawa and her 2 children busy. They moved to Southern CA in Feb. '86 and love the warm weather.

Working in the retail business is very challenging to Carey Ronan. She says there's never a dull moment working in the Personnel Office at Saks Fifth Avenue in Boston.

Anne Ross Shipe and Jim are still working on their house and enjoying Ross who reached the terrible two's last summer, but is still wonderful! Anne says that work at the hospital keeps both of them busy, but they still manage to attend UVA football games and enjoy themselves, in spite of the losses.

Sara Ruhle Kyle and Ted have thoroughly enjoyed their 1st year as parents. They spent a few days last summer in San Diego where little Richard adored the zoo.

Betsy Scott Kimmel and family will be relocating soon in either PA or MD. Kristin (6) started kindergarten this year; Eric (4) goes to nursery school. In her "spare time" Betsy exercises, volunteers in special education and serves as Treasurer of her Jr Women's Club. Last winter she and Dennis introduced the kids to skiing in Vermont and they loved it!

Spending a week in Bermuda and a week in Disney World kept GINNY SHIPE CAMERON and her family busy last summer. Ginny says she heard from Helen Harrison Witty that she gave birth to a baby boy in Sept. She also has seen Heather MacLeod Gale and Barry along with their daughter Megan, who is a doll!

Polly Shriver Kochan and Jeff have moved into their new home in the suburbs of Philadelphia and love it! Jeff began his fellowship in neuroradiology, and Polly began hers in pediatric radiology. They both love it, but spend their spare time studying for the specialty boards.

Congratulations to Terry Starke Tosh and Ed! They adopted their 2nd child last May — Elizabeth Carlton Tosh. She's named after "Edward Carlton Tosh" or at least has the same initials. Since Carolyn calls her Betsy, Terry says they'll probably call her that, too. She's dark-haired, and blue-eyed like Ed

Libby Stough Rush wrote to say "things have been moving and shaking" around her house. She and Noel bought a new house last year, and she became a new partner in an interior design/retail store. She also stays busy with 4-year-old Caroline and 2-year-old William. Libby says she misses seeing everyone!

Barbie Tafel Thomas says that since her 3 children (ages 4, 6 & 8) are now in school and she has free time, she feels she should make up for lost time, and has therefore overcommitted herself: tennis leagues, aerobics, hockey, a museum board and gardening. Her weekends are spent camping, canoeing or sailing with Joe and the children

Gray Thomas Avery and Rusty have exciting news — they're expecting their 2nd baby in March. They moved into town a year ago, and Gray loves being back in the center of Richmond. Since Catherine (3) is in school twice a week, Gray has time for volunteer work. She's also working some (for pay!) at the Children's Hospital. She and Rusty enjoyed a quick getaway last summer to Bermuda.

Marcia Thomas Horner and her family are enjoying country life in the northeast mountains of GA where Jim is principal of a Christian boarding school. They're living in the newly renovated president's house on campus where they have lots of room for their family to spread out! Marcia stays busy with 2-year-old Virginia, while the 3 older girls are busy with school and horseback riding in the school's riding program

Leslie Thornton is still living in DC and working for Hill and Knowlton. She and Wendy White ('74) recently met Linda Lucas ('75) for dinner. She also spent a week in Los Angeles and stayed in Julie Shuer's ('74) wonderful new house in Beverly Hills.

Still in Worchester, OH, Dorsey Tillet Northrup stays busy caring for Tom (7) and John (4½). Volunteer work, part-time computer systems consulting and tennis keep her busy. She stays in touch with Penn Wilcox Branim who lives in Fairhaven, NJ and Rose Anne Toppin Cranz. Dorsey says she still misses Charlotte — only gets home twice a year.

1986 was a true test of strength for Rose Anne Toppin Cranz and her family. Buzz had a mild stroke in June, but has made a quick recovery and will soon be as good as new. Rose Anne says they were very lucky and that 3-year-old Foster was a real pleasure for them throughout the ordeal. We're glad he's alright, Rose Anne!

I ran into Maria Vonetes at the Greek Festival in Richmond. She had come down from D.C. to work at the pastry booth. She looked great — is still working at EPA; Sandra is still doing very well with her own flower shop.

For Beppy Walton this has been a real year of travel. She worked in France & West Germany in March, skied in UT when she returned, visited Switzerland in June, and recently returned from Japan and Hong Kong. Spare time finds Beppy traveling, on the tennis court and visiting with her niece in her hometown of Jacksonville.

Carroll Waters Summerour says her kids are really growing up. Patrick is in the 4th grade; William in 1st grade, and Katie (2) stays home with Carroll. Parents' League activities and the Junior League keep Carroll busy; Toby is still a partner with Arthur Anderson & Co. Their house is on the market — they've outgrown it after living there for 9 years!

Amanda Weber Clark and Russell had a daughter born to them on May 26, 1986. Whitney Edna Cameron.

Sue West Best began medical school at Texas A&M last September. Also, in Sept. she participated in Susan Faist's ('76) wedding.

Big news from Libby Whitley Lam — she was married to Robert Campbell Lam from Lexington, VA on Sept. 6th. Attendees in the wedding were: Cindy Whitley ('78), Randy Anderson Trainor ('75) and Catherine Cranston Whitham ('75). At the wedding were many SBC'ers including Ann Clement Buck ('78 and expecting her third baby), and Fontaine Belford. It must have been a real Sweet Briar reunion

Ashton Williams Harrison was married to David A. Harrison, IV on August 23, 1986. In addition to being married, Ashton has a new business — a unique retail lighting business that includes lamps, lampshades, chandeliers, etc.

Being a Commercial Loan Officer for an Israeli Bank, handling medium to large corporate clients, keeps Worden Willis Galasso busy during the day; she commutes 1 hour and 20 minutes each way into Boston. Her evenings are full from fall to spring with Junior League meetings of the Board, Finance Committee, and Antiques Show and the Training Committee. She also takes her 96-pound, 10½-year-old sheep dog, "Bert", jogging at night!

Nancy Wilson Tucker and family had a wonderful summer with an "au pair" from Holland. Nancy and her family also had a nice trip to Washington, D.C. where they had a chance to see several of our classmates

Betsy Rawles has joined Broughton Systems, Inc. in Richmond as a senior systems consultant. Happy news from Nelly Usinga, who announces her engagement to Lindsay Branson III; they plan an early spring wedding at Sweet Briar. Lindsay is a federal investigator in Washington, D.C.

Patricia Wade Goolsby writes that her 2 children are 9 (Laura) and 5 (Brian). Both Patricia and her husband teach at Monelison Jr. High in Madison Heights, VA. Active in the Junior League in Atlanta, Suzanne Wright Godfrey also has 2 children — Christopher Ryan, 2½ and Graham Leland, 7 mos.

And now for my news. I'm still in Richmond, Va. and love my job and life here. I've been dating Bill Kelly for over a year now. We seem to get along really well, and enjoy each other's company a lot. The highlights of our summer were a rafting trip down the New River with a group of friends and a visit to the horse country in Lexington, KY where Bill's family lives. We enjoy running and swimming together for exercise; dancing at the Tobacco Co. and eating out. Again, thanks to everyone for all the news. I love getting each post card and reading what everyone is doing!

Today's column is sponsored by the letter "T".

Traveling: Pamela Weiler's trip to Germany in the fall was a nice fringe benefit of her job as product manager for a German chemical company. Kate Hardin traveled to China in November as a delegate of the Citizen Ambassador Program after completing her exams to become a certified Financial Planner. Connor Kelly was in D.C. and visited with Cheri Harris, Karen Ries and Susan Lord who is working as an analyst for E.G. & G. Wasci. Connor was elected president of the New England/Canada chapter of the American Dance Therapy Association. Sally Byron LaBarre is doing a lot of traveling for Monumental Life in Baltimore. Vicki Wingate and her mother spent two weeks last September traveling throughout New England and Canada staying in old inns and visiting the small towns.

Trying new territories: Leslie Forbert Miller and her husband Jess (ex-head of security at SBC) have begun Video Design Associates, a full function production house with broadcast ability and consumer offerings. They work out of their house which allows "Pete" to keep a close eye on 2-year-old Victoria. Gretchen Kurtz has left her job at J.G. Hook and is now employed by the Kutztan Publishing Company as a sales representative. She sees Mandy Steel Rich who lives in Rhode Island and hears from Elektra Damianos who is the mother of

2 girls and a boy. Pam Milne has moved from Lynchburg to Charlottesville where she works as a commercial loan officer for Central Fidelity Bank. Katie Ewald has given up on NYC ("Cement City" as she calls it!) and is moving to New England. Laura Evans has moved from Judaica Art to Arcade Furniture at Sotheby's in NYC and has just purchased a family-sized co-op on Park Avenue. SaraLee Cowles is a Foreign Service Officer candidate in Washington and sees a good deal of Anne Garrity Spees who is expecting a baby in May. Nancy Hatch has started a small company called Pet Life specializing in cedar sleepers (aka dog beds!). Wendy Iglehart is back in Illinois working for Leadership — a community leadership development organization.

Taking off: After her maternity leave was up, Susan Andrews Cruess returned to her job at Citibank and was promoted to assistant vice president in the North American Finance Group. Nancy White Bryant writes from Croton-on-Hudson, NY that she was recently named vice president, corporate sales for the Hudson River Gallery. She also sees Maryanne Hutton Felch. Martha Miller is in Georgetown and is now working for a large public relations firm, Fleishman-Hillard. Sally Ann Sells has been appointed assistant vice president of the Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh.

Torts: Laura Crum took a long vacation touring the Orient and is probably the only classmate to have participated in a rickshaw race in Singapore and an elephant ride in Thailand!! Upon her return she became a partner in a law firm in Montgomery. Piper Allan is still practicing law in Orlando and is the proud owner of a new condominium!

Teaching: Clara Jackman Garbett is teaching first grade in King William County and loves it. Long summer vacations allow Clara and her husband the time to go canoeing and camping in Minnesota.

Telecommunications: Amy Smith-Modrick has had a very busy year in the world of T.V. She spent 5 months developing the local coverage of the 1986 Children's Miracle Telethon in Lynchburg as well as hosting the program. She is now the assistant news director and managing editor at a local Lynchburg station. Pat Guild is safely ensconced in her new house in Chevy Chase and her job in marketing with AT&T after returning from a trip to Italy at the height of the U.S./Libyan conflict in the Gulf of Sidra!

Tummies: (not the tucked kind!) Mary Harris has moved to Baltimore for a 3-year fellowship at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Gastroenterology. She spends what free time she has with Chip and Hannah Craighill Moorehead.

Tipping your hat: Sherri Manson is great, nothing to report and sends her regards to all!

Tied the knot: Holly Butler Prather

and husband Stan are living and working in Atlanta where Holly is in real estate and sees Alison Mitchell. Holly sends news that Carol Zimmerman is getting married. Kelly McBride married Webber Hudson last September and they are living in San Francisco. Lynne Einsel was a bridesmaid in the wedding. Blyth Steere was married to William T. Bailey IV last April and fellow classmate Melinda Treutle was bridesmaid. Blyth is second vice president in the Worldwide Insurance Division of Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. Newlywed Leslie Lago Morris writes from Stratford-on-Avon, U.K. where she is doing a lot of adventurous riding. While on riding: Karen Jaffa McGoldrick is working horses for a living and showing her horse "Bodacious" 2nd level very successfully. She daily sees Prudence Saunders who has recently returned from a holiday on the west coast of Ireland. Patty Schrader and new husband Lee Gelatt had an outdoor wedding ceremony in Colorado National Monument and are living and working in Grand Junction, CO. Edwina Gilbert married Jeff Belding and is working as an environmental research assistant with the NY State Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation in Albany.

Twins: Jacquie Kenner Carmody leads the list of mothers with twins! She has three boys: Arthur IV and twins Harrison and Kenner. Susan Anthony Lineberry also has 3 boys Cole and the twins Mark and Patrick. Susan is afraid that the I.R.S. will audit them this year for claiming so many kids! Bridget Wray Gardner will have delivered twins by the time you read this — sorry, you'll have to guess the sex!

Toddlers: Michelle Farley Canning is busy with her son Robbie and is expecting another baby in May but still has time for her antiques appraisal business. Mikki writes that Margaret Hixon Griffith is expecting a baby in March. Laurie Bowen Carmichael and husband Archie have a daughter, Laura, who was born in September. Sandie Eriebach Gershenfeld writes from Yardley, PA that she is busy working as a buyer for a Philadelphia-based department store and taking care of son David. Cindi Little Townsend, Tom and Brittney have moved to Fairfax, VA where Cindi is an accountant with a CPA firm. Irene Rothschild de Dorfzaun traveled from Quito, Ecuador with husband Alberto and 2 children to Florida to visit Pam Ramsdell Mitchell and daughter Elsbeth. Pam is expecting another baby in April. Teresa Marshall Tingley, husband and son Andrew also visited the Mitchells. Phyllis Shelton Higgenbotham is taking a breather from her job as a lawyer to take care of her new arrival that was born in October. Page Breakell Beeler is doing volunteer work with the Charity League working with underprivileged 5th grade girls and the Garden Club as well as chasing after her daughter Kathryn Page. Wendy Attee Woodward is keeping busy with sons Teddy and Hunter. When not running after them, she's busy fox-hunting. Lauren MacMannis Huyett is living in Vienna, VA where husband Bill is a management consultant and she is looking after their two children Kate and Phillip. Day Pritchett Dodson is in Arlington, VA working as a product line manager for Bell Atlantic and taking care of daughter Katherine. Mary South Gaab is in Toledo, OH with husband Terry, son Terry and daughter Meghan. Lisa Hite is in Baltimore working for the Maryland Environmental Trust as a natural resource planner. She says it's a constant struggle to keep up with son Eli. She hears from Caroline White in NYC and Aimee Kass who is finishing a screenplay: "Jimmy Swaggart, Pat Robertson, Jerry Falwell and The Temples of Doom." (Seriously??) Betsy Byrne Utterback, Jim and 3 children (2 boys, 1 girl) are living in Strafford, PA where Betsy has her own interior decorating/art consultant business. Betsy sees Louise Wright Shmucki, Sally Ann Sells and Julie Muchmore Cooney who is a realtor in Bucks County and lives on a farm. An unforgettable Independence Day for Janet Baldwin McColloch. Her daughter Anne was born and Anne and her husband watched the Liberty Weekend celebration on T.V. during labor! Kathryn Leonard DeWitt is living in Indianapolis with her husband and 2 children Rachael and Nathan. Jane Hubbard Sams has given up the sands of the desert and traded in their camels for a new baby boy whose name is Henry. Jane and family are living in Winnetka, IL. Jenny Kelsey Breining and husband Dick are the proud parents of daughter Kelsey. Jenny put on a lot of weight but is exercising daily to get rid of it. As for the Russells, we're still living in sunny Palm Beach where I continue with League activities, teaching Sunday School, playing tennis and involvement in the theatre. As I'm writing Alexander is bugging me to oil him like the Tin Man and Max is an accident waiting to happen so I'd best sign off! Thanks for your rapid responses but there are still some of you we are dying to hear about so please write next year!

Again, many thanks to everyone who wrote, it's been great to hear from you. I hope this, the FOURTH edition of classnotes for the Class of '83, finds each and all of you well and happy. Until next year..

In the Sweet Briar Tradition

People Matter

In 1974 a Pooled Life Income Fund for Sweet Briar College would have been an impossible dream without the help of Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle '35. According to Julia Sadler de Coligny '34, Sweet Briar College's first director of Planned Giving, "When I began to promote a Pooled Income Fund for Sweet Briar, I offered to be a donor, but I needed someone else to join me. When I spoke to the Alumnae Board, Jackie Dwelle, a great friend, stepped forward and made it official by offering to be that someone else — and we were off to a roaring start."

"Jackie," whose memorial was published in the Fall 1986 Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine, mattered to the College in many ways during her life. Her contribution as a first donor to Sweet Briar's Pooled Income Fund, while less public than many of her other contributions, was one of great value to the College, making possible the establishment of the Pooled Income Fund.

Her gifts to the Pool provided income for her during her life, grew in value over the course of their investment in the Sweet Briar Pool, and came to the College's permanent endowment as part of the "Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle Library Fund" upon her death in March 1986. Today many alumnae, parents, and friends have invested in Sweet Briar's Pooled Income Fund. They, like Jackie, matter to Sweet Briar in making this important form of support possible for the College, while reaping substantial benefits for themselves.

Sweet Briar's Pooled Life Income Fund is a grouping of individual gifts in a single fund which is managed for the College by United Virginia Bank to realize a particular investment income objective in much the same manner as a mutual fund. Sweet Briar's Pooled Income Fund provides a yield of approximately seven percent to participants and is managed to maintain a steady level of growth in the Fund principal.

Gifts to Sweet Briar's Pooled Income Fund provide a charitable tax deduction for the donor, income over the lives of one or more beneficiaries, and valuable support for the College's permanent endowment. If you are interested in further information about the benefits of a gift to the Pooled Income Fund, please contact F. Mark Whittaker, Vice President for College Relations, Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595 (804/381-6161).

INTO AFRICA

Text and photos by Marilyn A. Ross
Assistant to the President and Associate Professor, Classical Studies
Sweet Briar College

Those who had been there told me that the landscape of East Africa would look like the scenery in the movie, Out of Africa. Kenya and Tanzania would be just like that, they said. They were right. Yet technicolor images cannot convey what it feels like to really be there; neither can words. Have you ever tried to explain snow to someone who has not experienced it? Or the Canadian Rockies to someone who has never been outside of Brooklyn, New York?

Given its landscape, the special quality of its light and air, the sight and sounds of its manifold wildlife and the collocation of new and old ways of living, East Africa defies accurate portrayal by means of visual and verbal icons. I am pleased, however, to take this opportunity to describe my impressions of my wildlife "camera safari," a vacation trip which has left me with the most vivid memories of any trip I have ever taken. I urge anyone contemplating a similar journey TO GO, as soon as you can (so long as your back is good enough to withstand lots of jouncing), because what everyone has been saying is true: the native landscape and cultures are being transformed into something other.

Upon arriving in Nairobi after 15 hours of air travel, I went to the "Bomas," meaning the villages of Kenya, a large government pavilion and compound where the national dance company of Kenya performs a formal program of tribal dances and music. One can "relive" this experience afterward by bringing along a microcassette tape recorder, as I did, to recreate the complex texture of that musical fabric: the voice line, the drum, the other instrumental accompaniment, the dance steps themselves sounding by means of the tinkling ankle bracelets worn by the performers.

Also on display at Bomas are examples of village architecture from different geographic regions of Kenya, à la the "living Museum" model to which we have grown accustomed in our country. It was startling to learn that this living ethnological museum was begun years ago by a prescient Jomo Kenyatta, president of Kenya, so that the urban inhabitants of his capital could come to know the many distinct tribes which comprise their country. Even more incongruous was the realization that today there are many children in Nairobi who have never seen a lion.

If someone had told me, before I clambered into the landrover, that I would witness a midnight "kill," I would have opted to stay in my tent. Luckily I was unsuspecting and so was given the chance to see something truly remarkable. It happened that we were in a tented camp on a riverbank in the Masai Mara game preserve, the Kenyan part of the Serengeti plains. Under the guidance of a driver and a professional spotter, several of us left camp at 9:00 p.m. in hope of seeing some nocturnal animals. We did, and it was especially interesting to watch small foxes and a "kangaroo" hare, which hops on its back legs in an upright position. In our headlights glinted the eyes of hundreds of wildebeests, unprepossessing antelopes, each animal passing us by in a long queue, part of a great annual migration entering the park in early July. When there was a lull in the game-viewing, I happily tried to find constellations new to me through the roof of the landrover open to the sky.

Menace suddenly entered Eden when we glimpsed a prowling lioness. Quick maneuvering positioned us immediately alongside, then behind her, and, as we watched her determined walk and the rippling power in her shoulders and back, we were certain that her purpose would not be thwarted. She apparently was unconcerned with our voyeurism; instead, she was engaged in an everyday routine no more remarkable to her, seemingly, than catching an early morning train would be for us. Our spotter skillfully played the searchlight over the landscape so that it would neither be too bright nor linger too long in any one place. In light like glimmering moonbeam we watched the big cat hunker in tall grass at the edge of the clearing. Nearest her was a group of about 30 Thomson gazelles, small, gentle and strikingly-marked in tones of tan, black and white. I braced myself for the death of one of these charming creatures.

Quickly, the lioness sprang toward the clearing. She raced through the "Tommies" who leapt about in useless terror — their upward loft was higher than their forward motion. Luckily for them, the cat wasn't going to bother killing a puny gazelle. Instead she ran straight at a lone wildebeest, whose dark coat so blended with the blackness that we hadn't even noticed him. He had no warning of her coming. He wheeled and ran, but after about 50 feet there was a cloud of dust as hunter and prey somersaulted together. Ten seconds later, when the dust had settled, we saw the wildebeest on his side, pinned to the ground. The lioness had her weight on top of him, with one front paw positioned immediately behind his front legs. With the other, she cradled his head and lifted it off the ground, twisting it somewhat so that neck and throat were exposed. She clamped her powerful jaws over his throat. Within about a minute, his struggling ceased and he was unconscious. In another minute he was dead from strangulation. The killing was remarkable for its bloodlessness, efficiency, lack of torment and its naturalness. To the human psyche, the death of this one was somehow balanced by the lives of hundreds who had paraded before our eyes a short time before. And anyway, what was that fool wildebeest ever doing out there all by himself? Was he diseased? An outcast? He should have stayed with the herd: in the jungle, an independent spirit is rarely rewarded!

Many things happened that were hard to believe. Would you believe that a baboon who's invading your room can run straight to where you've stashed your chewing gum, swipe it, and race back out the window all within 15 seconds? Would you believe that you can be looking smack-dab at a huge rhinoceros but not see it because surroundings and beast merge? Is it credible, in the midst of the jungle, to ask the pastry chef to whip up a special cake to commemorate the 38th wedding anniversary of traveling companions and then, when you cut it, to have it float off the plate because it's been laced with so much rum? Does it seem reasonable that a herd of elephants moves so silently that it can come upon the scene, a mere 100 feet away, and you not notice? Would you believe that, after only two weeks in the game parks, you can turn to your companion and hear yourself saying, with blasé familiarity, "Oh, it's only another giraffe!"

People debate about which animal is their personal "favorite." Some say lion or cheetah cubs. I think this is a cop-out: baby anythings are almost always ingratiating. But I must admit that I am partial to cheetah, and to see this rare and solitary cat flash bright golden-orange in the afternoon sun is as unforgettable as sighting your first scarlet tanager; you just didn't think there was a color quite like that in the world. Leopards lazing in the trees, with their paws dangling in the breeze, are good contenders, too. On the other hand, even the warthog has something to recommend him — busy little creature, tail carried ramrod-upright only when he's moving, macho to the point of absurdity! Of course, colobus monkeys or troupes of baboons are infinitely interesting to watch. And who would have thought that hippos could make such an endearing variety of squeals, snorts and snuffles as they cavort with each other! I never before realized how many shapes and sizes antelopes come in — ranging from the eland, which can measure six feet tall at the shoulder and weigh 2,000 pounds, to the shy, ten-pound dik-dik, one foot high; and then there are the impalas and gazelles. Given their beauty and their complex social system based on personal bonds among individuals, the zebras get my vote.

I am pleased to report that I did achieve the goal of seeing the "Big Five" — lion, elephant, leopard, rhino, buffalo. All the wildlife I saw was in seemingly splendid health — glossy coats, well-fed, active. Of course, I traveled right after the rainy season, which last year extended into June, when the living was as easy as it should have been. I regret to say that the people of Kenya, especially those living in the "urban sprawl" on the roads leading to Nairobi, appeared stressed and in distress.

Reasons for this are not hard to find. First of all, there are lots of people to support: status for the vast majority of Kenyan women is still determined by the number of children they bear. Also, the country is caught in a collision between a modern economy, based on money, and a traditional one, based on the bartering of goods (now forbidden by law). Unfortunately there are too few jobs to yield the money needed. I saw a number of large farms, on the scale of "agri-business," which were coffee plantations owned by Kenyan "nationals," the term applied to Europeans who hold Kenyan citizenship. How much prosperity such crops, clearly grown for export, bring to the indigenous population I cannot say. I do know that the game preserves are being hard-pressed by those who want to cultivate more of their lands for food crops.

I believe it will require much wisdom and even greater generosity of spirit to work out ways for the people and the wildlife to prosper together in the future. I fear it is inevitable that the parks will become vast (they cover thousands of square miles) outdoor zoos, sealed off from each other. Many of the migration "corridors" between them already have been put under agricultural cultivation and farmers do not smile favorably upon herds of animals trampling down their crops. But how do you tell wild animals to stay within man-made fences? Do you shoot them when they wander "out"? How do you keep the poachers out when killing rhinos, elephants, leopards, zebras and many others is almost as easy as "shooting fish in a barrel"? (And what about the game wardens who, for a cut of the "take," let the poachers in?) How do you preserve the environment for elephants who literally are killing off their own food supply as they strip succulent bark from all the trees? Must you shoot them too?

Africa has always loomed large in the Western imagination. Its beauty, its otherness, its mystery have sometimes preoccupied us. In our hearts, many of us have promised ourselves that we would go there someday. Go, before it is gone. And when you do, you may see me there.□

TIPS FOR THE WARY TRAVELER

- For half the time you'll be in elevations of at least 7,500 feet, rain forest territory, where mornings and nights are cold! Since you never go out on safari in the heat of the day, when the animals are snoozing, bring your flannels and your woolies for the fashionable "layered look" in clothing. Bring only one dress — the casual look is "in."
- If you don't own a 35mm camera, invest in one and in a telescopic lens (I'd suggest a 200, or at most a 300mm one — one short enough to be used without a tripod.) Do NOT expect to get fine photos of the animals and birds by using a "point and shoot" type of camera.
- When you're about to take a picture, be sure that your guide has turned off the van's motor, else the vibration will cause your pictures to blur.
- The food is European cuisine and is wonderful; the water is completely safe in Kenya, though chancey in Tanzania; the accommodations everywhere are very comfortable, although some places run their electric generators only for a few hours in the morning and again in the evening. Get to the hot water in time!
- Because prescription medications cannot be filled — not even in "pharmacies" — bring all that you need. Take along an antibiotic in case, like me, you come down with a nasty respiratory infection which you caught at home.
- If you travel during the African summer, our winter months, the dust is said to be a real enemy: bring some filtering bandannas to wear over your nose and mouth (and take along plenty of zip-lock bags for your camera equipment and binoculars).

“‘I Speak of Africa and Golden Joys’”

Henry IV, Part II,
V: iii, 100

By Elizabeth Few Penfield '60
Associate Dean, College of Liberal Arts, University of New Orleans

“Traditional tented safari” has an echo of colonial Africa in it, of gun bearers and ivory, Kilimanjaro and the elusive greater kudu. And while my Sweet Briar classmates have engaged in various exotic activities, being a booking agent for a way of life revived by Out of Africa heads the list. Theodora Hill Washer '60, late of Columbia, South Carolina, more recently of New York City, and now of New York, London and Nairobi, is just that. What's more, she has enlisted other classmates in the enterprise, lining up flights through Ellen Pringle Read (who has a travel agency) and providing outposts in Charlottesville (Elizabeth Meade Howard), Lynchburg (Betty Forsythe Harris), Richmond (Jane Ellis Covington) and New Orleans (me). All this I had to see to believe and so was glad to be included in the first expedition of Traditional Tented Safaris, Inc.

Together with Conny Richards Michelsen (Smith '62 and Teddy's partner) and Gail Lindbern Derzon (Vassar '58), Teddy and I flew from New York to Nairobi, where, after a brief period of decompression at the Norfolk Hotel (“Veddy British,” pronounced the Kenyan customs official), we entered the time warp of a luxury tented safari.

Fifty years ago our party of four would have been led by a professional hunter, and we would have traveled with the camp, which would have been hauled in forty-pound loads by dozens of African bearers; now the camp preceded us, packed neatly in a seven-ton truck and accompanied by a staff of nine, while our guide, Robin MacDonald, drove us in a Toyota Landcruiser to meet it. Then our two weeks would have covered a relatively small area; now we would spend most of our time in two widely differing national parks. Meru, our first camp, lies northeast of Nairobi where it is bisected by the equator and sits high at the feet of the Nyanbeni Hills. Amboseli, on the other hand, is south of Nairobi on the border between Kenya and Tanzania, right at the foot of Mt. Kilimanjaro. Arriving at our first campsite, on the banks of Meru's Kindani River, we found that with the exceptions of our means of transportation and our intention to shoot pictures, not game, little has changed about the luxury tented safari.

Meals are cooked out-of-doors on a coffin-sized bank of ash-covered coals and served in the mess tent by the head of the staff. Even breakfast has at least three courses, lunch two more. Drinks and hors d'oeuvres precede dinner — wine and five courses — then coffee and a sweet. Hot, strong Kenyan tea flows throughout the day, beginning shortly after sunup when it's served in one's tent, and of course after siesta, when it's accompanied by freshly-baked cookies or cakes. For those times when the day is going to be a particularly early or long one, the staff packs a breakfast or lunch. Then the meals are only slightly simpler; never a paper plate nor a plastic fork. Fresh fruit is served at every meal — pineapple, passion fruit, melon, pears, oranges — along with various local cheeses similar to rich cheddar and to cream havarti. Ice was a boon we had not expected but were happy to have.

Our tents were as akin to the pup variety I had known as silk to sackcloth. Flanked by its own shower and toilet tents, each sleeping tent comfortably contained two beds (not cots, beds), a dressing table, and enough space for all personal gear. Mosquito-netted windows on all sides let in the breeze while keeping out the bugs (of which there were not many, but then I live in Louisiana). The zippered full-length door led to a protected entryway furnished with another dressing table, two chairs and two washbasins. And yes, we had hot water. Lots of it.

Like those on safaris of old, we went on early morning and late afternoon game drives, Robin, our guide, tracking animals large and small. Although hunting is no longer allowed in Kenya and one cannot travel on foot within the game parks, much of the old excitement is still there on a traditional tented safari. Having a guide to teach you about spoor and the difference between cow and Cape buffalo dung is a far cry from the way many tourists see the parks as they careen about in minibuses; and approaching a rhino downwind, even from the armored protection of a Landcruiser, is far different from the more commonplace static lookout near a salt lick or water hole. Ironically, the ban on hunting combined with the development and promotion of game parks has had the effect of making the animals as unquestioning of human presence as they must have been years ago, before humans became an identifiable threat. In Meru, for example, we kept waking things — a puff adder stretched full-length, sunning itself in the road; a lioness, lying odalisque-like, her eyes shut against the glare.

What with Meru's ample rivers and swamps and Amboseli's plains and alkaline washes, we saw almost every kind of animal, from African hare to zebra (both Burchell's and Grevy's) with dramatic stops in between, notably dik-dik, gazelle (Grant's and Thomson's), giraffe (Masai and reticulated), lesser kudu, lion and oryx. Occasionally we would pass large families of warthogs who galloped away stiff-legged, their tails pointing to heaven, or we'd creep up on shy gerenuks who peered at us as intently as we at them. One day in Amboseli, a large herd of elephants crossed our track, keeping about as much distance from our Landcruiser as between themselves as they sauntered with ponderous grace toward some undefined goal. Another day it was Cape buffalo, who manage to be both bovine and menacing, their curved horns fitting over their foreheads like matador's caps.

But to mention big game in Kenya is only to mention the obvious. Being with a guide in your own transport means being able to get away from whatever other tourists might be around. It means exploring a manyatta — a group of mud huts barricaded by a circle of thorn branches — abandoned so recently by a group of nomadic Masai that a razor blade still glinted from where it was tossed on top of a mud roof. It means getting to know the names of the game birds that run in front of you, that buzz up out of the grasses, that whir off into the bush. It means knowing the birds you dodge are guinea fowl and crested cranes and bustards and secretary birds and frankolines, being able to spot blacksmith's plovers and goshawks and kites and lilac-breasted rollers, seeing saddlebilled storks landing with their feet out in front of them, their wings gracefully back-pedaling. It means being able to stop long enough near a group of vervet monkeys to attract first their attention, then their curiosity, then their expeditionary forces. It means being able to identify the things that go bump in the night.

The four of us embarked on our tented safari expecting two weeks of a way of life few people these days can or do lead, a life of servants and daily laundry and elegant dinners and beautiful surroundings. All that was there, of course, but what we glimpsed, in a small but supremely significant way, was Africa. Not the Africa of luxury lodges and minibuses, not the Africa of film and travelogue, not the Africa of racism and turbulent politics, of poverty and disease, but the Africa of the bush — of birds and animals, flora and fauna, of tribes that go back to prehistory yet leave no monuments and have no written past. It is an Africa, as Beryl Markham wrote, that is "the cradle of mysteries always intriguing, but never wholly solved." This, I suspect, is the Africa of Karen Blixen. It is a privilege to share it. □

Music Library Finds Permanent Home

By M. Alexandra Eddy
Assistant Professor of Music
Sweet Briar College

The Junius P. Fishburn Music Library is now in what will probably be its permanent home. In the 1960s the collection was located in what serves currently as the choir room of the Babcock Fine Arts Center; in the 1970s it moved to the present studio art wing of the building; only in 1984 was it moved to its present location, a pleasant 1,000-square-foot area in the lower level of Babcock. The library's holdings (2,000 books, 2,000 sound recordings and 3,500 scores) include standard music reference works, over 15 current periodicals, biographies of composers and performers, standard literature in music theory and history, study scores, performing editions, collected works of important composers and recordings of classical and folk music. An important large collection of opera, oratorio and vocal scores was donated to the library by a former Sweet Briar professor of modern languages, Peter Penzoldt, from the collection of his mother, Sigrid Onegin, one of the great Wagnerian sopranos of the early 20th century. Much of the piano music collection was donated by former music faculty member Miriam Weaver. The sound recording collection has recently been enhanced by a generous gift of 316 recordings of a wide range of classical and Russian music from Chris Svoboda '84. In addition, the fine sound recording collection donated by Martha Ingles Schrader '41, housed in the Browsing Room of the Mary Helen Cochran Library, will be cross-referenced in the Fishburn Music Library catalogue. The music library has five listening stations with new playback equipment to handle LPs and cassettes; thus music students at Sweet Briar have an extensive range of study materials in the areas of music history, theory and performance.

A systematic overview of the music collection, undertaken during the fall, shows that the library has especially strong holdings in the areas of music reference, history, biography and theory. This is reason for pride, and it is the goal of the music department to strengthen the weaker areas of the library holdings over the next few years, in order to balance the collection and to make it an outstanding one overall. In two main areas there is particularly pressing need for further collection development. These include musical scores (string, woodwind and brass solo and duo music and concertos; string and wind chamber music [trios, quartets, quintets]; musicals and popular songs; piano music [solo piano, two pianos, collections of piano music]; sacred songs; miniature scores) and recordings (new performances of standard classical works; wind and brass music; music by living composers; recent early-music performances on authentic instruments). While the music library holds some 2,000 recordings, the sound collection is generally old and, in many cases, in poor physical condition — for instance, recordings with bad scratches. The bulk of the collection consists of recordings of classical music made during the 1950s and 1960s; thus, newer performances (not to speak of newer recording techniques) are not well represented. We plan to acquire compact-disc equipment and to start a collection of CD recordings.

Plans have been made to fill in the gaps in Sweet Briar's collection of scores and recordings. While we have identified the areas of greatest need, we do not have adequate funding within the regular departmental budget to address them all while maintaining the strengths we already have. We would certainly welcome any gifts of materials or monies to help us reach our goal.

Our aim, now as always, is to make all the best materials available to Sweet Briar music students. □

M. Alexandra Eddy, a musicologist and violinist, has recently joined Sweet Briar's department of music, teaching music appreciation, history and theory. She also plays with the Piedmont Chamber Players of Charlottesville. She holds the Ph.D. from Stanford University.

Galvin Moore Gentry '76

P R O F I L E O F A N E C L E C T I C

By Cannie Crysler Shafer '78

Were you at Sweet Briar to see Galvin Gentry gallop big "Beau" across the Quad on Guy Fawkes Day? Today that abundance of spirit is more productively channeled, but Galvin still has a boot in two worlds, past and present, blending traditional quality with contemporary flair.

Currently the upwardly-mobile yearn for antiques, imitate past fashion and decor and are gratified by renovating old houses. None of this is new to Galvin, who cherishes an abiding interest in fitting the good of the past to the needs of the present. Within her lifestyle lies the quintessence of the "have-it-all, use-it-all, be-it-all" '80s: she is horsebreeder, educator, farmer, entrepreneur, sometime-vet, antiquer, housebuilder, harvest hand, mechanic, weaver, woods[wo]man and riding instructor. Living now in the deceptively peaceful Maryland countryside, Galvin is the ultimate life participant. She lives, enjoys and accomplishes.

Today Morgan horses graze the meadows and gentle hills of Galvin's farm, prize-winning ponies delight all comers, acres of vegetables flourish, a pond beckons swimmers and boaters. This appealing scene was cut from whole cloth for it was not so in the beginning.

Galvin has been working on a small house on her parents' land since Sweet Briar days. The 150-year-old farmhouse needed not only renovation but rebirth. I joined her to peel and pry plaster and lathing until only a shell remained standing. To see the original form of the house unveiled was to relive its history and during our years at SBC, Galvin and I moonlighted at the farm.

We built a 40'x20' bunkhouse, filled the barn loft with bales of hay, moved beehives, dug potatoes with an antique plow and continued to prepare the little house for restoration.

Cold January weekends were spent energetically cutting trees and splitting wood with Galvin's father and learning to weave with her mother. Sheep were brought to the farm to supply wool for the looms and Galvin soon mastered carding, spinning and dyeing. This definitely qualifies as "doing things the hard way for fun"! After work, relaxing by a fire on these winter evenings gave Galvin time to plan the next venture.

Since the essentials were at hand (horses, ponies, our newly-built bunkhouse, fields of food, a riding ring and boundless enthusiasm), why not have a summer riding clinic! And why not add swimming and arts and crafts? All we needed to complete the plan was beach sand for the pond.

That fireside-inspired riding clinic grew into a successful summer camp, sacred to countless Baltimore children. The steady stream of campers has gathered the breakfast eggs from the henhouse, eaten "homegrown" honey on its bake-oven bread, untiringly stroked the pet rabbits and each year has been pulled grandly, if grudgingly, in a cart by the resident goat. More important, Galvin has sought to instill an appreciation of nature, a compassion for animals and an ability to live and play by the rules.

My camp summers meant adventures with the growing herd of cows. Barn chores were constant and in progress long before the first camper woke. We chased wanderers, corralled, loaded, unloaded, fed, watered, groomed, medicated and, on occasion, served as midwives. We delivered my favorite calf, Noah, in the woods during a rainstorm.

Galvin's affinity for animals led her to design, create and market her own line of handmade, handpainted wood toys (using only natural materials, of course). These were also used to charm and instruct the children in her woodworking classes at the Cedarcroft School in Baltimore.

An unrelenting schedule of school hours, farm demands and business obligations also has a slot marked FUN and Galvin shares it generously. One such slot contained a deer (named Delight) that came to the farm via a veterinarian who asked if Galvin would nurture an abandoned hours-old fawn. Delight loved her spot on the hearth, close by the goat, rabbits, cats, dogs and fortunate humans who drove great distances to spend an evening in her company.

There is a serious side to the animal scene. Galvin's intuitive instinct to befriend and train has added good business to great pleasure. Her horses and ponies have always done well on the show circuit, and recently she has created a collection of antique carts, wagons and carriages. Amish friends have made authentic tack and accoutrement. I have contributed my husband, Win, as a willing groom in the carriage entries. Galvin is presently training her Morgan stallion, Brie. He is only eight years old but was Grand Champion of the My Lady's Manor Driving Club Annual Show in June '86. Also, in the spring, he won 3rd place in the Middletown Pony Club Combined Driving Event. This was their first large combined driving event; Galvin and Brie were awarded "Best Novice Entry." Brie recently took the blue ribbon at the Plantation Driving Club's Combined Driving Event. However, Galvin believes that Brie enjoys most taking Cedarcroft and summer camp children for cross-country carriage rides.

The farm and the lifestyle continue to enlarge. A log addition to her original house now holds carefully-collected country pieces, all lovingly brought to life again — chair seats recaned, surfaces shined, atmosphere restored.

A past president of the SBC Baltimore Club, Galvin has been 1976's class president since graduation. Perhaps your paths may cross: if so you are in for the treat of stimulating company and of seeing a liberal arts attitude in action. But don't forget to pack your L.L. Bean boots! □

The photos on these pages show Galvin with some of her menagerie, working on her 150-year-old farmhouse, at Cedarcroft School, and putting her Morgan stallion, Brie, through his paces.

First I Am A Writer

By Pamolu Oldham '71

Picking up the phone months ago to the voice of Nancy Baldwin was a fine surprise. Nancy interviewed me years ago and was largely responsible for my going to Sweet Briar. So once again when she asked me what I was doing with my life, I agreed to tell. So did my turkey, Elvis, gobbling outside the window in his make-shift Graceland.

So what am I up to? First I am a writer. I live in a very small town called Cameron, a Scottish land grant community with its obligatory main street (Hwy 24-27) lined with white clapboard houses, picket fences and churches. At the foot of the hill sits Phillips Store and Grill where each morning I drink coffee with the regulars — pulpwood cutters, farmers and those "working public." It is here that I listen to Thelma who says, "Every man pushes up in my face is a drunk," that is, since her husband died. Or Warren, a 65-year-old ready for summer with his Mohawk, honorary fireman's badge and year's harvest of CROP walk pins, who'll tell who died in a fire over the weekend — only that weekend might have been two years ago. There's Two-Ton-Fun and a semicircle of men out front watching the road, scuffing a foot occasionally, spitting now and then to mark their territory. Mary Childress, patient as the moon, cooks up breakfast for the whole slew and my 30 cent half cup of coffee.

I spend a lot of time listening, closing my eyes and smelling the woodstove in the clothes in winter, the cocoa butter pomade, the sour of oak and maple or the sap of pine. Being a writer means a lot of listening.

Cameron is about 15 miles from Sanford, where I grew up. I am in Cameron because of land five miles away where I built a house — land through my mother's side of the family, the only piece she owned by herself and which she bequeathes to me.

After receiving the M.F.A. in fiction at Columbia University, I came back to this spot, moved a two-story log house (250 years old) from 20 miles away, added on to it, and after a period of three years of restoration, moved in. The corners of the house are dovetailed, the ax marks still in the logs. The walls are boards 30 inches wide. Light floods the rooms — some windows are bubbled old glass, others from an Exxon station gone florist shop. On one window you'll still see "Find us fast in the yellow pages." I live with Lisa Morphew, an artist, and Jess, her daughter. We have filled the house with art — Lisa's large expressionistic paintings, her figurative photographs of older female nudes, Jess's bright wood sculptures, prints (one by Denny Mullen '70), pottery, folk pieces. Over one plate glass window in the kitchen stretches an 8' x 4' cubist fish painted for a fish market nearby. In the bathroom with its 16-foot ceiling are Japanese prints, stained-glass windows from the Methodist church I grew up in and French doors to the flower garden outside, where in a couple of months Lisa will grow outrageous glads, Johnny-jump-ups, iris, bleeding heart, coreopsis.

Beyond the flower gardens stand the pottery kilns, conventional gas-fired and raku. Lisa hand-builds large, fragile pots. These pots are not so unlike poems or stories; in both the breakage is high. And with all, the work must go where it has to go. The surprise is the drip of red, the flash of copper or the phrase that comes off the page and turns your ear. There are also metal sculptures like dinosaurs grazing. One I did several years ago, which was included in a show at the North Carolina Museum of Art, is nothing more than a rusted plow wing with gearshift reaching into space with the bleached, bony fin of a sea turtle.

Together Lisa and I formed Crane's Creek Center for Creative Studies, Inc., a nonprofit arts/education organization which sponsors workshops in writing, pottery, photography and, later this spring, in film. In the house, the yards and the woods beyond, many have found an environment that nurtures risk-taking, vulnerability and companionship. We are fortunate to have lured writers such as Reynolds Price, Doris Betts, Louise Shivers, Bobbie Ann Mason to this place in the country, and they too have benefited; for the audience of writers, housewives, golfers from nearby Pinehurst and Southern Pines, students and farm workers often lack the traditional academic "reverence," which can be so stifling. For instance, when Reynolds Price, in response to the question as to whether there was still a "Southern" literature, answered that he didn't know what kind of literature would be written in the trailer park, a man who loads fertilizer at the FCX pipied up, "I got something right here." He then proceeded to floor us with his novel about a busty neighbor in short-shorts, driving a pink Mustang. At the workshops folks eat quiche and huge salads and spend all day. As a result of the workshops, we're bringing out The Crane's Creek Review which will be on sale by April and which includes poems by Australia's A. D. Hope, a visiting professor of creative writing at SBC in 1971 and through the years a friend.

Another project of our Crane's Creek Press has been Old Age Ain't For Sissies, an anthology of poetry by older poets in Cumberland County, NC, which I edited and which includes portraits of the poets by Lisa. Two representative poems from the anthology show the concreteness, the rhythm and the earnestness of experience:

The Disappearing Husband

*My husband didn't stay home.
I don't know where he went.
I reckon he went every where.*

*After women, maybe.
Maybe, rabbit hunting,
could have been coon, possum.
He was after something.*

*I reckon he found it.
I reckon he did.*

Nola McLaurin

Listen to the wisdom of Leroy Gibson's poem:

*Sugar is sweet,
Lard is greasy.
Honey, if you love me,
don't be uneasy.*

Old Age Ain't For Sissies has sold out, but we plan to republish by the year's end.

In addition to the workshops and Crane's Creek Press, we have also restored a 7,000 square-foot general store into an art gallery. In the 1880s, the building was the largest general store between Atlanta and Richmond. That was back when Cameron was the dewberry capital of the world. Before we began the building's restoration, most of Cameron was boarded up; in the "commercial" district, windowsills were rotting, bricks powdering. With photographs of our building, Lisa lay the groundwork for Cameron to be placed on the National Registry of Historic Sites. Since the opening of the gallery with a national exhibition juried by Beth Schneider, then of the National Gallery, Cameron has slowly been restored — the corrosion both architectural and emotional has been somewhat halted. We are still working for a town where color lines are not denoted by the railroad track and where everyone receives at least minimum wage for a day's work.

We have also moved Miss Vera's house five miles out of town to the farm in order that this quaint two-storied Victorian house would not be leveled. Now we are moving June Belle's for a bona fide office for me and studio space and darkroom for Lisa. Virginia Woolf was absolutely right. We do need "a room of our own." I hope by the time the Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine comes out the house will be firm on its foundation. Moving a house — coordinating movers, power companies, phone company, highway patrol — is as hectic as running the Rose Bowl Parade. And I am pained to mention that our gallery was hit twice by transfer trucks, once after having been open five weeks, the second time only four days later. Breughel would have relished the scene left by the second truck — Superwoman coloring books, Care Bear videos, puzzle pieces of the Eiffel Tower — $77,000 worth everywhere and all the townsfolk "gettin' somethin' for the baby."

In addition to writing, restoring and sponsoring workshops, I am an instructor of English at Fayetteville Technical Institute. The institute borders Ft. Bragg and Pope Air Force Base, so we have a lively and diverse student body — retired sergeants, topless dancers, high school students and old-guard community members. The classroom is rich with experience. Once a major from the Vietnam Army who had had to flee, leaving his family in order to save his life, visited me during a late afternoon office hour. He said he wanted to read my palm and so began. After minutes we both understood. He had only wanted to hold a woman's hand and yet not betray his wife — he had not been telling a future but only his present. I once helped trim a Christmas tree with a brilliant topless dancer from the Pop-A-Top Lounge — a student in the short story course. She had grown up in a very small town called Sparta, NC, in the mountains and said she used to pretend the huge rocks near her house were dinosaurs and that as a child she would ride them. I will never forget her. I was lonely that Christmas too.

At present I am busy working on a novel tentatively titled Luce, for which the National Endowment for the Arts has recently awarded me a $20,000 fellowship to finish. I include the first two pages here.

So, Nancy, I hope these words do the trick and that with them you would let me in again to Sweet Briar. □

Luce

Luce dug into the blue can for another worm. She closed her eyes and her fingers played in the tangle at the bottom where the dirt stayed moist and cool. Finally she stretched one away from the wad and fed him onto the hook and slung the worm and cork into the water where the cork, like a globe shot through by a red axis, sat perky and ignorant on the solid face of the pond.

Then she gave herself to waiting and the sun mild on her face. Shutting her eyes she breathed in the scent of cow from the barn on the hill, the gable barely visible if her eyes had been open. Again she saw Henry Moser's lean body mount the steps to the loft. Through two miles of dark he had come to find her like an egg in a nest.

"Over here," she had whispered. He made his way toward her, mindful of the open shoots above troughs where the cows and mules blinked awake.

"Here," she said. She liked the shape of it out her mouth.

She watched him in the strips of moonlight move toward her. Her whole body breathed for him. Her nose sought his smell above all others. He was odd and she liked his oddness so she gave herself to him. She loved his huge hands that lingered in his pockets when he looked at her. His eyes were blue as chicory that anybody knows fades white and is no good if you pick it, if you demand a single thing from it or transport it. That was his eyes and his hair was dark and wavy. Since he did not talk much and since he had a way it seemed with a cow or a mule, the way he could ease it over with his big hand and his low voice that nobody could make out, easing its fear away, since this was all true, Luce gave him her whole passion. It was bigger than he could know or ever would know, but the time had come and she had given it to Henry Moser because she could not wait.

Pamolu Oldham took as many courses in creative writing at Sweet Briar as she could, and graduated with a major in English. She holds an M.F.A. in fiction from Columbia University and is a graduate of the Radcliffe College publishing procedures program. Her fiction and poetry have appeared in The Brambler, Ink, Columbia Reader, Agora, Shield and Diamond and Spectra and she is represented in the short story anthology Love Stories By New Women and in the poetry anthology New North Carolina Poetry: The Eighties. Author and poet, she is painter, sculptor and teacher as well. The founder and editor of Crane's Creek Press, she is also co-director of Crane's Creek Center in Cameron, NC.

"Yes, Mum, I had a great weekend, we went hang gliding in North Carolina, camping by the ocean, and next weekend we may be going white water rafting. Oh, and then there are hiking trips and...Mum, how about buying me a new parka for Christmas?"

"Joanna, are you at camp or college? Did you win this scholarship just to spend your time with SWEBOP? I thought you were going to become so sophisticated at Sweet Briar..."

Twelve thousand miles and a vast ocean did not lessen the surprise and puzzlement I could sense in my mother's voice as I recounted my first few days at Sweet Briar. Had I really come all this way to America, leaving behind me the windy beach of St. Andrews University, Scotland to be bitten, frozen and bruised on SWEBOP camping trips?

As a matter of fact: yes, I had! Less than eight months before, I had been explaining to a group of erudite British professors why Sweet Briar was number one on my list of scholarships offered, and along with the academic opportunities, its small size and beautiful campus...SWEBOP had indeed ranked very highly.

SWEBOP is the Sweet Briar Outdoor Program, open to all students and offering great opportunities, especially for foreign students like me, to leave campus and spend exciting days or weekends in places as diverse as North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia. A SWEBOP weekend might not turn out to be what you had expected, but with Kim Judy, the SWEBOP director, it is always fun, challenging and very rewarding.

The fall program began with a September 6 hike to Panther Falls: a hearty group of 19 was led by Mary Albergotti (student activities programmer/resident coordinator) and Susan Detweiler '88. The beautiful day allowed us to lie on the rocks and top up the summer suntan, swim by the waterfall or just sit and munch on the famous SWEBOP traditional standby of "gorp" (good old raisins and peanuts), which was in abundant supply.

A week later another seven students were on their way to Annapolis, Maryland in search of fun and excitement on a windsurfing weekend with Kim Judy and Ellen Smith '87 as student leader. Renata Leckzas '85 had kindly invited SWEBOP to spend the weekend at her home, for which the group was most thankful: the trip proved to be a great success (in spite of jellyfish). Everyone enjoyed the wonderful weather, and according to Kim, revealed themselves to be quite skillful windsurfers. Thank you, Renata, for giving SWEBOP this holiday!

Kitty Hawk, NC was the destination for the September 19 trip: hang gliding was the goal. Beth Donald '89 assisted Kim Judy as student leader, and a group of seven other students formed the excited team. After a seven-hour journey (which had numerous 7-11 stops and a picnic in a delightful highway stop), a tired group arrived at Oregon Inlet

Jennifer Munson '90 rock-climbing at Fool's Face, Blacksburg, VA.

Campground, only to find that it was fully-booked! But do not fear, SWEBOPers are a determined bunch; we soon persuaded the guard to allow us to set up camp inside. After much fumbling and an on-the-spot nighttime lesson in tent-erecting SWEBOP was finally ensconced and we fell into our sleeping bags. Next morning, after a walk on the beach and a paddle in the ocean (which for me was a first), we set off for the Hang Gliding Center. We began with a film on safety instructions and techniques and a glimpse of enthusiasts soaring off mountaintops and across valleys. The professionalism of the instructors, their knowledge and helpfulness were most impressive, allaying some of our fears. Our mountaintops turned out to be a series of very large sand dunes: unfortunately, due to the lack of wind, the top is where most of the group seemed to spend the afternoon. Some of us were lucky enough to have a couple of flights, however. In my case that is somewhat of an exaggeration; more like a run, a jump, a few nervous pushes and pulls and before I knew it, a rather awkward landing headfirst on the golden sand. We did have a few stars in the show, among them

Cathy Killick, a visiting student from Royal Holloway in England, who gracefully glided through the air, landing feet first each time and without a hair out of place! "Let's hope Sunday is more successful for me," I sighed that night as we fell off to sleep, having spent the evening in the cinema after a delicious outdoor Mexican dinner and a tent-moving session to a more secluded spot nearer the ocean. Little did I know the drastic effects of mosquitoes in one's tent all night...next morning as we set off at 7:00 for the center, I discovered rather nasty bumps all over my legs — and I wasn't the only one! This put "paid" to my hang gliding career, but left me the chance to bask in the sun and watch the rest of the group become quite proficient hang gliders, as that day the winds were a little more favorable.

Indeed the weather did not seem to be much on our side fall semester. Some of the trips planned had to be cancelled at the last minute, for example caving and white water canoeing trips, which Kim hopes to reschedule for spring.

For me the best weekend was the early October white water rafting trip down the Yough River in Pennsylvania. A convoy of vans and a car, packed with 21 SWEBOPers (from Spain, France, Germany, England and the USA, led by Kim Judy, Mary Albergetti and Mina Von Voss '87) traveled up to Ohiopyle State Park and spent the night under the stars and between the trees. After a hearty meal cooked over the fire, ghost stories and much laughter, we turned in to sleep before the big day. And then came the rain...Cathy Killick and I could have felt rather at home in this weather had it not been for the fact that I was sharing one sleeping bag between two and Cathy's tent was flooded. She was spending the night in the van! "This is the outdoor life, it's what SWEBOP's all about, it's fun," I tried to persuade myself. Finally I resorted to "Well, it's character-building at least!"

Such horrors were soon forgotten when next morning we set off for the river (which had risen quite high overnight), donned our wet suits and waterproofs and climbed into the rafts. Life really began to get exciting then: a journey which usually lasts five hours took us two as we sped down the river. Always taking the "hero's" route, we crashed through the waves, swerved round rocks, dived into rapids and paddled madly along the quieter stretches. With only one "Girl overboard!" we reached the end of our journey far too quickly and, despite the rain, I am sure everyone would have liked to go back and do it all again! We were wet, cold and tired, but very happy.

Sweet Briar is most fortunate in having its very own outing cabin on campus. October 17 Kim Judy, assisted by yours truly, took 13 students up there for a cabin-orientation overnight trip so that they may become cabin leaders themselves and enjoy using it throughout the year. It is a great opportunity for us just to "get away" sometimes and is always a lot of fun. This trip was no exception; everybody chipped in to help light the wood fire and stove, cook a lovely spaghetti dinner, followed by banana boats, and listen to the all-important safety instructions and rules which make the trips possible and successful. But SWEBOP is not just a survival course in outdoor life, helping us to learn about our own physical skills; it is also a time to make new friends, enjoy the company of those who share common interests, exchange ideas with people from other areas and countries and have lots of fun and laughter. We left with memories (which we will cherish for a long time) of lying and chatting in our sleeping bags in front of the fire, packed in like sardines.

Another part of the outdoor program provides study breaks during the week, such as the trip to Charlottesville to learn about the National Outdoor Leadership School and the experience of spending a month camping in Alaska. We had the wonderful opportunity to visit the home of Carolyn and Curtis Crump, listen to their personal tales of life in Alaska and see their beautiful slides of the countryside. In November Kim showed us an excellent film about the thrills and dramas of white water kayaking, aptly named Liquid Madness.

As a foretaste of the semester's weekly skiing evenings at Wintergreen, a group of us watched

Ski the Outer Limits, a breathtaking film about acrobatics on and above the snow. And for those whose parents were unable to come to Parent's Weekend, Kim arranged the annual Orphan Annie Hike to Peaks of Otter on the Blue Ridge Parkway. Although fog obscured the beautiful views which make this area famous, the students still managed to have a good time.

Whilst many were enjoying the glitter of the Fall Dance Weekend, a small group of us headed for Cole Mountain and a hike along the Appalachian Trail. Once again this was an international group, playing the guitar and listening to Spanish songs along the way. After an exhilarating hike to the top we had a beautiful panoramic view, with wisps of mist, and rewarded ourselves with handfuls of the perennial supply of "gorp." Due to the thawing snow the trail had become a little slick, making the descent somewhat faster for me, so busy talking that I slipped, stood up and slipped again, to the amusement of fellow hikers. But it wouldn't be SWEBOP if I didn't return dirty and bruised!

The last trip of the fall was the day spent rock climbing and rappelling with Ferrum College at Fools Face, Blacksburg. This was a challenging but satisfying day for those who braved the face, climbed to the top and rappelled down again (Marta Hernandez, visiting student from Spain; Jenny Munson '90; Beth Nelson '87; Kim Judy). The rather more experienced rock climbers from Ferrum were very friendly and patient with the SBC novices and Kim was an admirable instructor, constantly encouraging us and giving support. As SWEBOP photographer (i.e. too much of a coward to participate), I felt proud to be part of this group representing the College in such a healthy and positive light; SWEBOP '86 finished on a happy and successful note.

Thank you, Kim, and all the student leaders who helped you! □

Joanna Moseley

P.S.

On Saturday May 2nd I finally overcame my fear of heights and climbed a face at Raven's Roost on the Blue Ridge Parkway. It was a personal and fulfilling achievement indeed, and yet, without the encouragement of Kim Judy and her fellow SWEBOPers, I would not have made it.

Without Sweet Briar, I would never have had the opportunity.

Digging the Past

By Sarah Leach Davis
Assistant Professor of

Sweet Briar College

Sarah Leach Davis

Winter Forums, sponsored by the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association and begun in 1974, are a series of Wednesday morning lectures focusing on a theme of general interest to Sweet Briar and the surrounding community. The Winter Forums Committee, which selects the topic and the speakers, consists of Sweet Briar faculty and staff, alumnae and members of the Amherst and Lynchburg communities. Members of the 1987 committee were: Sarah Leach Davis, chairman; Jean Love Albert '46; Dean A. Robin Bowers; William Fell; Janet Lowrey-Gager; Helen Smith Lewis '54; Mark Magruder, assistant professor, dance; Elvira Whitehead Morse '48; Noreen Donnelly Parker; Harriet Pollack, assistant professor, English; Ann Morrison Reams '42; Betty Frantz Roberts '40; Marguerite Trotter; and Kenneth Wright, professor, classical studies, with Frances Swift as secretary.

The January '87 series drew overflow crowds; even the last lecture, which took place during our infamous '87 "snow season," was very well-attended.

Catherine Seaman

What do tree rings and family trees have in common? Or the yard of the Peyton Randolph House in Colonial Williamsburg and the banks of Partridge Creek at Stapleton, Virginia? Each provides a context for discovering the past, the theme of the 1987 Winter Forums lecture series. Under the title, "Digging the Past," the program examined fertile ground in four areas: family records, tree-ring patterns and excavation of both historic and prehistoric settlements.

Sweet Briar's own Catherine Seaman, professor of anthropology and sociology, and a beloved friend to many in Amherst and Nelson Counties as well as to the Sweet Briar community, opened the series on January 7 with her presentation, "Digging for Ancestors." Using for her example the family tree which she produced as a result of her recent study of the Lee family in 17th-century Virginia, she encouraged her audience to organize both their inquiries and the results and directed them to the various public sources of family records in Virginia which might aid their research. Admonishing them to remember that there are skeletons in every family closet and that traditions often improve in the telling, she nevertheless urged them to search for and to delight in the unexpected.

Explaining that "archaeology without dates is like a railroad without a timetable," Peter Kuniholm, associate professor of classical studies at Cornell University, delivered an explanation of dendrochronology (tree-ring dating) and the fruits of its application in Turkey, northern Greece, Yugoslavia and northern Italy. Armed with wood samples, a magnifying glass and numerous slides of Byzantine buildings whose construction dates had been determined by study of the tree-ring patterns on interior beams, he moved from the historic into the prehistoric past and demonstrated the precision and potential of such a technique in dating buildings for which no documentary evidence of a date exists. Shortly before his arrival at Sweet Briar on January 14, the Alumnae Association was delighted to discover that he is the nephew of Elizabeth Lankford Miles '29.

The history of excavation at Colonial Williamsburg and, in particular, on the grounds of the Peyton Randolph House, was the subject of the talk given on January 21 by Marley R. Brown, III, director of Colonial Williamsburg's Office of Archaeological Excavation. Mr. Brown discussed the Foundation's change in focus in recent years, from restoration to reconstruction, and the resultant re-excavation during the past five years of some areas first explored in the '50s and '60s.

Completing the series on January 28, Claudia Chang, assistant professor of anthropology at Sweet Briar, whose energetic leadership as excavation director on the Sweet Briar campus is already known to Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine readers (cf. Winter 1985), joined her husband, Perry Tourtellotte, in presenting a report of last spring's excavation of an Indian site beside Partridge Creek at Stapleton, Virginia. Small mounds uncovered there by receding floodwaters in November 1985 proved to be trash pits and a burial left by members of the Late Woodland culture, who lived along the eastern seaboard of the United States between 900 and 1600 A.D.

From Dinners to Directories: Club News

By Ann Morrison
Reams '42,
Director, Sweet Briar
Alumnae Association

A few different approaches have added to the success of some of our club programs this year. Perhaps these will suggest something your club can do which will be fun and new and supportive of Sweet Briar. Several groups which had not met for some years are again getting together.

Brief summaries of each club which had some formal program during the past year follow. Those marked with an asterisk include something slightly unusual.

AMHERST/NELSON COUNTY had as its speaker Tom Connors, the new vice president for business affairs and treasurer of the College, when members met for a noon luncheon at the Wailes Center on campus to celebrate Sweet Briar Day. Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80, assistant director of the alumnae association, was chairman. A spring meeting was held in the Alumnae House lounge in April for the bulb project. Sandra Stella Horwege '74 is president of the club.

ANNAPOLIS Club has become revitalized this past year with Pam Henery Arey '71 as president. Members decided that although they had been meeting with the Baltimore group, they would like to have their own additional meetings several times a year, primarily to help interest prospective students. Members celebrated Sweet Briar Day with the Baltimore group, and were invited to a lecture-tea in Columbia, Md. in March with them and with Washington, DC. alumnae. This special occasion came about due to the meeting of presidents of women's colleges being held in Columbia. The Honorable Barbara Mikulski, United States senator from Maryland, was the speaker.

ATLANTA CLUB has been compained the group on the tour. Rossie Ray Speel '74 and Anne Edmunds Hansen '82 along with Nancy Hatch '79, club president, and Kathy Taylor Erickson '80 did a fine job of pulling this valuable program together. The club also had Dean Bowers speak to them at a cocktail buffet in April.

BALTIMORE, in addition to the Sweet Briar Day luncheon and its participation in the Columbia, Md. gathering, had a very successful, different kind of program. The group had a special tour of the Backermann House arranged by Kathy Kavanagh '74 who is now director of development at the Walter Museum. This was followed by luncheon. A spring meeting was also held with Margie McGraw McDonald '60, club president, in charge.

BIRMINGHAM, AL celebrated Sweet Briar Day with a "Bloody Mary" luncheon at the home of Cheryl Viar Upchurch '74 to which everybody brought part of the menu. Lochrane Coleman Smith '76 was in charge. Harriet Pascoe '82 is president.

CENTRAL OHIO (Columbus) participated in an Old Dominion Day last September. Gale Hull Whetzel '71 was the contact for this affair. Betsy Kurtz Argo '67 and Muffy Hamilton Parsons '78 are working to revitalize this club.

CHARLOTTE held a wine and cheese gathering in February at the home of Frances Shannonhouse Clardy '66 to plan spring programs. The club is in the process of developing a networking or research directory which should be ready by summer. Betsy B. Liles '82 and Perry Liles '85 serve as co-presidents.

CHARLOTTESVILLE used a slightly different format in celebrating Sweet Briar Day this year, with a morning coffee held at the home of Elizabeth Copeland Norfleet '30. This small group of alumnae which doesn't consider itself a club, celebrates this occasion every year very successfully with good attendance. They also do a wonderful job of selling bulbs under the chairmanship of Betsy Williams Gilmore '30.

CHATTANOOGA had a very busy year. Hedy Edwards Davenport '45 and Joe entertained President Fry, Mark Whittaker and me with a lovely cocktail buffet at their home. There was an excellent turnout. Molly Johnson Nelson '64 was elected the new president. Joe took us visitors on a grand tour of the city, including a visit to the Girls Preparatory School. Sweet Briar Day was celebrated with a supper at the home of Peggy Johnson Curtis '72.

CHICAGO Club always has the pleasure of President Fry's presence at its Sweet Briar Day luncheon. Chicago is her home and she goes there to spend the holidays. Karen Kuhlman '78, president of the club, was chairman of this event. Karen will be joining the board of the alumnae association this fall as chairman of region VII.

CINCINNATI is another club which participated in Old Dominion Day. The October event was an afternoon riverboat cruise with a band and cash bar. The club also hosted a dinner party for President Fry and me in mid-March — a beautiful affair. Winsy Walker Johnson '75, club president, was in charge.

COLUMBIA, SC participated in the third annual Commonwealth Day for all alumnae living in South Carolina. It was an early May barbecue with a band and cash bar. Ann McCullough Floyd '58 was Sweet Briar's contact for this event.

DALLAS had a fall luncheon to plan programs for the year. It was held at the home of Lisa Wray Longino '78, co-president; each person was asked to contribute a specific dish. In January, the group met at the home of co-president Ellen Sellers McDowell '77 to hear a program presented by Rebecca McNutt, assistant professor of music at Sweet Briar. Professor McNutt talked about the music department at the College and its renewed offerings. She gave a demonstration lecture which all found delightful. A bulb kickoff luncheon was held in April with Lucy Darby Cole '78 handling arrangements. Dallas alumnae also participated in the Texans in Virginia party held last summer. They are very proud that Ouija Adams Bush '43 was a recipient of the Outstanding Alumnae Award presented during Founders' Day last fall.

DENVER entertained Nancy Church, assistant director of admissions, last October. Nancy was on a recruiting tour for prospective students. Alumnae enjoyed hearing late news of the campus at an evening gathering.

DETROIT alumnae participated in a November Old Dominion Day cocktail-buffet. Ethel Ogden Burwell '58 was the Sweet Briar contact. The 10 or so alumnae who attended had a fine time. In late April, Alice Love, director of admissions and financial aid, was the speaker at the spring meeting held at the home of Nancy Hudler Keuffel '62. Bulb information was also given out; all were encouraged to increase bulb sales this year because of the great demand for additional financial aid.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY, CT held a lovely dinner honoring President Fry, Mark Whittaker and me in October at the Country busy, as usual. The year started with a meeting of a planning committee which was composed of alumnae who had responded to a questionnaire asking who would be interested in becoming involved with club activities. Highlights of the year included another successful visit to Atlanta by SBC seniors who met with alumnae in professions and fields of special interest to the students. Carter Hunter Hopkins '68, director of career planning and LIFETIMES Center, worked with alumnae in setting up the program and ac-

Club of Darien, CT. As is the usual format, President Fry spoke briefly about the latest news of the College. Lynne Gardner Detmer '68, club president, was in charge of arrangements. Alumnae gathered again in April at the home of Ginny Squibb Flynn '32 to discuss bulb sales, pick up books and enjoy getting together.

GREENSBORO held a morning coffee at the home of Rinda King deBeck '63 in celebration of Sweet Briar Day. Audrey Betts '45 is president of that group.

GREENVILLE, SC alumnae journeyed to Spartanburg last October to join alumnae there for lunch with Judy Greer Schulz '61, president of the alumnae association and me, director. We were attending a meeting at Converse College of women's college alumnae association presidents and directors. All had a grand time, especially since it had been quite a while since anyone from the College had paid a visit to that area.

HOUSTON alumnae are in the process of putting together a resource directory. They gathered during the Christmas holidays for lunch, arranged by club president, Martha French Roberts '75. The group is looking forward to having Dean Robin Bowers visit them next October when they will have a family barbeque at Carl Detering's father's plantation. Kit Newman Detering '76 is the newly elected president of the group.

HUNT COUNTRY (in northern Virginia) instigated its first Family Day last summer. It was held at the Middleburg Tennis Club, where everybody enjoyed tennis, swimming, picnicking, ball games, etc. Each family was assigned what to bring. All present and prospective students were also invited. It was so successful that it has been established as an annual event. Charlotte Taylor Miller '55 is president of the group. Alice Love, director of admissions, was a special guest this spring and talked about the enrollment situation at the College. It was also the time to discuss bulb sales and scholarships.

INDIANAPOLIS alumnae celebrated Sweet Briar Day with a luncheon at the Woodstock Club. Judith Brown Fletcher '71 was in charge of the event. Mary Virginia Grigsby Mallett '49 is club president.

LYNCHBURG alumnae gathered in mid-December at the home of the club president, Debra Marks Bryant '77 to celebrate the holidays with a late afternoon business meeting, wine and cheese. In early January, Sweet Briar Day was observed with a cocktail-buffet at the home of Pam Larson Baldwin '64. Rebecca McNutt, assistant professor of music at Sweet Briar, gave a lecture/ demonstration, talking about the current music department, and ending the program by playing a selection of pieces on the piano. The spring meeting was at the home of Mary Morris Gamble Booth '50 in the late afternoon at which time bulb materials were given out, and a discussion was held about how to increase sales. Each alumna present was given a workbook with instructions. The speaker was Dean Robin Bowers who explained the strategic planning program which has been in process all year at the College.

NAPLES, FL and near-by alumnae were treated to a luncheon at the home of Mary Whipple Clark '35 in late January. Elizabeth Vanderbilt Crampton '39 was chairman of the event.

NASHVILLE alumnae enjoyed a party honoring President Nenah Fry given by President Emeritus Harold Whiteman and Deedie. Mark Whittaker and I were also included. This was held in mid-

October in their lovely town house. A spring meeting for "bulbs and business" and tea was held in late April at the home of Nancy Keene Butterworth Palmer '51. Nashville is proud that Dotsie Woods McLeod '58 will start serving her four-year term as an alumnae-elected member of the Board of Overseers of the College July 1.

NEW YORK got started last fall with a meeting held at 6 p.m. at the apartment of Toni Santangelo Archibald '80. Two Sweet Briar video productions were shown, one of President Nenah Fry discussing the College, and the other, of the general college program, prepared by the admissions office. The resource directory was updated during the winter months. The November meeting was held at the office of Claire Dennison Griffith '80. Cocktails were available at 5:30 with the meeting starting at 6:00. Sweet Briar Day was held at the Princeton Club with Alice Love, director of admissions, as speaker. Club members always entertain Sweet Briar students who are working as interns in New York during January; this was done at the home of Sarah Porter Boehmler '65. The spring meeting was held at Fran Griffith

Laserson's home. Each spring this club sponsors a big benefit. This year it was held in May at the Richard York Gallery.

*NORTHERN NEW

JERSEY had a late summer picnic which was called a "back-to-school-send-off." Beverages were provided and all were asked to bring their own picnic and either hors d'oeuvres or dessert to share. It was held at the home of Anne Milbank Mell '71, president of the club. Anne also hosted the October prospective student party. Donna Walker, assistant director of admissions, was there and showed the VCR Admissions tape which is always well received. Sweet Briar Day was observed in January with a Sunday afternoon party at the home of Claire Dennison Griffith '80 in Summit, N.J. The group also held a spring meeting. They were pleased that Adelaide Boze Glascock '40 was a recipient of the Outstanding Alumnae Award presented last fall on Founders' Day.

PENINSULA, VA alumnae had a luncheon at the James River Country Club in Newport News. "Wheats" Young Call '45 was chairman. Susan Anthony Lineberry '79 is president of the club.

PHILADELPHIA club reserved a block of tickets for a special Philadelphia Orchestra concert in January; this was a good way for alumnae and their families and friends to get together during the dreary winter. Robin Christian Ryan '74 was in charge. She and Laurie Krecker Stulb '74 share the presidency.

PRINCETON started its year off early in September when Martha Ann Fuller, assistant director of development (who is in charge of the planned giving program at the College), and I attended a delightful

Sunday brunch at the home of Helen Cornwell Jones '40. A December Sweet Briar Day Luncheon was also held at Helen's. Special comments were made about the excellence of their student speakers. The club always has a very successful bulb selling season, thanks to its president, Helen Jones, who comes up with new ideas for promoting the project each year. The Shore area alumnae were included in this meeting.

RICHMOND alumnae have really been busy this year, and have done a good job of informing their own members what has been going on. Their news sheet which comes out every couple of months is eye-catching and full of information, not only about Sweet Briar and its local activities but also about their own members. One feature is a brief "profile" of new alumnae in the area. Alice Dixon '82 puts this together. Club officers include four "industry" chairmen who work in four professional areas and who plan programs for alumnae interested in those particular areas. This is part of their networking program. In October, Aileen Laing '57, Sweet Briar professor of art history, along with Virginia Museum docents conducted a tour of the new wing of the museum. A new club program is organizing a monthly luncheon at different restaurants, mostly in the downtown area, so that working alumnae can get together. This is strictly social. Margaret O'Connor '84 and Mary Earle McElroy '84 are in charge of this. The club had a late summer joint barbeque with Washington and Lee at the home of Sally Kabler Fiedler '66. About 100 people attended and had a fine time. In November the group held a wine and cheese gathering at the home of Sally Twedell Bagley '67 at which time they enjoyed a slide presentation and talk by the Magnolia Center for Special Equestrians. Alice Love, director of admissions, was guest speaker at the club's prospective student party held at 7:30 one Thursday evening in December. Guidance counselors from local high schools were also invited. Allie made another visit to Richmond as speaker for Sweet Briar Day at the Woman's Club. In January, Rebecca McNutt was scheduled to give her lecture-demonstration which she had done so successfully for several clubs during the Winter Term, but this was cancelled because of critical snow conditions. Several professional alumnae welcomed a select number of Sweet Briar seniors for a day of visiting, talking and consulting about careers. A spring meeting was also held. Becky Trulove Symons '79 is president of this group.

ROANOKE invited Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80, assistant director of the alumnae association, to speak at the spring bulb meeting. Jocelyn Palmer Connors '62, wife of Sweet Briar's new vice president for business affairs, also attended. The meeting was held at the home of the club president, Molly Talcott Dodson '38.

ROCHESTER, NY observed Sweet Briar Day with a luncheon held at the home of Mary Whipple Clark '35. Addie Kamke Cook '62 is president of the group. Pat Calkins Wilder '63 was in charge of the spring luncheon held at the Genesee Valley Club.

SAN DIEGO was part of the Sixth Annual Old Dominion Day Reunion last October. It was held at 6 p.m. at the Fairbanks Ranch Country Club. Lola Steele Shepherd '50 was the Sweet Briar contact.

SAN FRANCISCO had an October luncheon at the home of Frederica Bernhard '24. The Sweet Briar Day luncheon was held at the La Mere Duquesne Restaurant during the Christmas holidays. Penn Willets Mullen '66 is president of this club as well as a member of the board of the alumnae association as chairman of region X, the western part of the country.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA group, though small, has a lot of fun together. Last fall they held a summer picnic at the home of Polly Benson Brown '58 in Santa Monica. The Pasadena contingent hired a bus and drove over together. Katzie Bailey Nager '53 is president of the club. Jean Ryan Kehl '44 hosted the fall luncheon at her home.

ST. LOUIS celebrated Sweet Briar Day in October this year since Tom Connors, our new vice president of business affairs, would be in town for a professional meeting and would be available as a dinner guest and speaker. Both Tom and the alumnae reported a successful and enjoyable time. Jane Piper '74 was in charge of the arrangements. This group also took part in the Old Dominion Day last November. The bulb project remains a priority for these alumnae.

TIDEWATER (Norfolk/Virginia Beach area) group invited Ann Marshall Whitley '47, director of the Sweet Briar museum and historic properties, to be the speaker at its Sweet Briar Day observation in early December. In late February, they had their most successful project ever. The Sweet Briar alumnae tennis "team" challenged the Mary Baldwin alumnae tennis "team" to a match at the Princess Anne Country Club. The event took place from 7-10 p.m. Refreshments were served and everybody had a grand time. Happily, Sweet Briar won. It was so successful that plans are afoot to make this an annual event. Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80, assistant director of the alumnae association, was the guest speaker at the April bulb luncheon. Jon Ohms, our bulb supplier, also attended and answered questions. The club has come up with some incentive prizes to help encourage bulb selling among its members. Sally Old Kitchin '76 is president of the club.

WASHINGTON has been very busy this year. Alice Love, director of admissions, spoke at the fall meeting at a coffee/dessert at the home of Dianne Cassedy Lambert '69. The guest for Sweet Briar Day was President Nenah Fry. Dianne Lambert, Anne Noyes Awtrey '43 and Betty Gibson '48 handled the arrangements for the cocktail buffet held at the Washington Club. Several Washington alumnae joined those from the Baltimore and Annapolis areas in participating in the reception held in late March when presidents of women's colleges met in Columbia, MD. The spring meeting was the bulb kickoff meeting hosted by Nancy Pesek Rasenberger '51. Several professional members also participated in the visit to the city by Sweet Briar seniors who appreciated the opportunity of talking with alumnae in a variety of professions and positions. This is part of the club's ongoing networking program. □

Slate for Board of the Alumnae Association

The slate shall be approved by the Board at its spring meeting and upon approval will be published in the alumnae magazine. If there are no further nominations within four weeks, the slate shall be considered elected by consent. If additional names are received, the decision for the selection of the candidate will rest with the executive committee of the Alumnae Association.

Dorothy Jester 1916-1987

"In Thanksgiving" for Dorothy Jester

A tribute by Richard C. Rowland, Charles A. Dana Professor of English Emeritus, Sweet Briar College, delivered at the Memorial Service in Sweet Briar Chapel, March 27, 1987

Dorothy Jester came to Sweet Briar in 1947 and, except for a single year when she briefly defected to William and Mary, she remained at Sweet Briar until her retirement in 1981. For 20 of those years she was dean of students, the first person to hold that title at the College. It was fitting that she should have devoted her working life to helping women to develop responsibility. She herself had attended a women's college. Her mother, she once told my wife, had the interesting distinction of having been the first woman to cast a vote in the city of Lynchburg; in 1920 when the 19th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States first gave American women the right to vote, it was Lucie Withers Jester who rose early to go to the polls and become Lynchburg's first enfranchised woman.

Dorothy's role as dean of students was never an easy one. Faculty are likely to look upon that function as much less essential than the teaching they do, forgetting that the life of the dormitory, especially in such a college as we are, is often more decisive in its influence upon students than that of the classroom, forgetting too that deans of students do not get regular sabbaticals to recharge their batteries, that some of their most important work is done during the long hot summers when, oddly enough, there are no students on campus. Students are likely to find deans of students guilty for the rules which they are charged to enforce, although students and academic personnel have had an equal hand in formulating them.

It was with quiet grace and tact, through many changes in customs and rules, some of which she cannot have endorsed, that Dorothy, year in and year out, performed this often-thankless task. She had a remarkable eye for the student who was different — foreign, non-conformist, homesick, shy — and long before we used the term "peer counseling" and certainly before it was officially organized, she would cannily drop a word in the ear of a well-adjusted and comfortable fellow student to ease the path of some lost freshman. I never heard her speak unkindly of a student or faculty member, neither of which groups is universally loveable; the worst she would say of a student who was demonstrably circumventing the regulations was "Oh, that little rascal!"

One of the events in the academic year that I was most happy to leave behind upon retiring was the periodic appearance of those lists of room changes. The search for the perfect roommate was touching and endless. Some students must have spent more time moving their clothes from one closet to another than they did in class. And all of this turmoil had to be watched over hopefully by the office of the dean of students. With what patience Dot presided over these oftentearful scenes; how gently she could suggest that one must learn to live with oneself if one was to learn to live with a roommate. The wisdom she had accumulated over the years was impressive.

Students did not always appreciate her quickly; she was such a lady and long before the bedraggled era of the '60s young women had to be reminded to be ladies. Dorothy did not alter her own high standards, but she had a great sense of fun. She wore the white gloves we associated with her in more than one faculty show for us to laugh with her. The perceptive student learned to find beneath a certain surface primness her steadiness, her good humor, her quiet warmth.

Faculty too sometimes need the help of a dean of students. Shortly after her death John McClenon said, "I never went to her that she wasn't helpful." On the surface, mild praise. But beneath the surface it touches on something more serious. She demonstrated to us all that "manners," which we are often in danger of belittling, are not really a different department from morals; that to have good manners is to think always not of oneself but of others. It was in this way that Dorothy lived. As we grow older, we recognize that when we lose someone of whom we have been fond in a particular way our grief is often because we remember times when we were short, impatient, irritable, at odds in spite of our affection and now we cannot cancel out those hurtful moments. Why, we ask ourselves, were we so thoughtless? I cannot believe any of us can feel that particularly painful grief at Dorothy's death; her good manners — which were quite simply true goodness — made us good, or at least better than we were ordinarily.

She was loyal to her family, to generations of students who came to recognize her for what she was, to Sweet Briar College. We are thankful for her quiet service to our college; we are happy that in the years since her retirement she so obviously enjoyed her family, old and new friendships, travel and relaxation, though for too brief a time; we are deeply grateful for having been allowed to share so many years so happily with her.

Martha von Briesen '31 Remembers Dorothy Jester

One evening in 1947 the newly-appointed assistant to the dean, Dorothy Jester, was brought to the faculty table in Reid Dining Room to join the several "regulars" already seated there. She later told us that her initiation was rather rugged. She was the only native Virginian at this table at the time, and she took with grace and good humor all the ribbing and teasing to which she was subjected. She soon became a welcome member of the group. Before coming to Sweet Briar she had served as assistant dean of students at Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

The Sweet Briar students quickly learned that they had a new friend in "Miss Jester," who was always ready to listen patiently to their ideas or their problems and to work out practical solutions with them. They also learned that she could be very firm when firmness seemed to her to be needed in opposition to ill-advised projects.

Always impeccably groomed and beautifully dressed, this fragile-looking lady (and I use that term advisedly) possessed great inner strength with a highly-developed sense of duty as well as of humor. She must surely have been the only person at Sweet Briar who ever turned up at a 5:00 a.m. fire drill on a chilly day wearing white gloves. She said she just happened to find them in the pockets of the coat she had put on.

(1947-1981) she filled in as acting director of admissions (1953-54) and one year as cashier at the student bank. In 1954 she joined the staff of the College of William and Mary for one year and then, to our great joy, she returned to Sweet Briar as the first dean of students, to remain until her retirement. She was named assistant dean of the College in 1974.

After her retirement she had time to indulge in her fondness for bridge and played regularly with a foursome in Lynchburg.

Natural phenomena were among Dorothy's unexpected interests, thus it was at her urging that three of us drove to Rocky Mount, North Carolina to experience the eerie sensations accompanying a total solar eclipse in March, 1970. Last year, with a friend who is an astronomer, she left the city one day at 4:00 a.m. to view Halley's Comet from an open-country vantage point.

Other facets of her personality and her sense of fun were evident in the energy with which she entered into acting in faculty shows. She drew wild applause as she danced across the stage doing the latest dance fad, the Twist in 1962.

Dorothy Jester took great pleasure in travel and as I learned during trips we took together, she was an unusually enjoyable travel companion. In 1962 we and two other friends crossed the continent by train, choosing the route through California's Feather River Canyon. In a rented car we explored Yosemite and the Sierras, the Redwoods, coastal Oregon, the Olympic Peninsula, then east to Glacier and Waterton Lakes Parks. We returned to Monroe, Virginia by train. Remembered 25 years later, this still ranks as a great trip.

We also traveled in South America in 1968, in Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia; three years later we toured South and East Africa. Even when her suitcase was among several off-loaded in Uganda and didn't reach her in Nairobi until nearly a week later she never lost her aplomb or her good humor.

In recent years, Dorothy became seriously interested in calligraphy and in watercolor painting. With Ruth Firm, emeritus professor of art history, she attended painting classes at Elderhostels, in 1985 at Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, and in 1986 in Boston. Returning to Sweet Briar as a student last fall, she enrolled in Loren Oliver's class in drawing, which she greatly enjoyed.

Perhaps her turning to the art and craft of calligraphy is but a further development of interests which led her to serve two years as crafts counselor at Camp Allegheny, where she had previously been a camper for two years.

A graduate of Agnes Scott College, Dorothy had been looking forward to attending her 50th reunion this spring.

Now many Sweet Briar alumnae and colleagues mourn the loss of a cherished, delightful friend, while at the same time they remember her with joy.

Eleanor Dodge Barton 1918-1987

Leal Souvenir!*

A tribute by Richard G. Carrott, Professor and Chairman, Art History Department, University of California, Riverside

Less than a week shy of her 69th birthday, Eleanor Dodge Barton died on January 18 at a Windsor, Connecticut nursing home, after suffering from a progressively-incapacitating illness for several years.

Born in Willsborough, New York, she attended Plattsburgh High School, going on to Vassar where she received her A.B. degree with honors in 1938. In 1942 she earned the Master of Arts degree from the Institute of Fine Arts (New York University) and received her Ph.D. from Harvard in 1952. She studied at the University of Paris as a Carnegie Scholar in 1939 and was awarded the prestigious Paul Sachs Travelling Research Fellowship for study in Rome in 1949-50. She was employed at the Yale University Art Gallery and at Smith College where she taught for 11 years before coming to Sweet Briar in 1953. She remained until 1971. Subsequently she taught at the University of Hartford until her retirement. She also held visiting appointments at

*"loyal memory" in 15th-century French: an inscription appearing on one of Eleanor's favorite paintings.

Vassar and Wellesley.

Her research centered on the sculpture of Bernini and more particularly on that of Alessandro Algardi, but her scholarly interests ranged well beyond 17th-century Italy. She published in The Renaissance Quarterly, Magazine of Art, Marsyas and the bulletins of the Smith College Museum of Art, Rhode Island School of Design and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. She also contributed to The Arts of the United States, Encyclopedia of World Art, New Catholic Encyclopedia and other similar publications.

A member of several scholarly professional organizations, she was a director of the College Art Association of America in the late 1950s.

It was, however, the teaching mission of her profession that most fully and passionately engaged her remarkable energies. Never one to pursue the easy path of "popularity" or "charisma," she devoted herself to inculcating a sound methodology and clear rationality to the way in which her pupils experienced art and verbalized their understanding of it. Under her tutelage those who were able to learn to look with thoroughness and to see with sensitivity reaped rewards that can never be lost. To be able to understand how the style of a work of art can carry its meaning was a major tenet of her teaching. The other was her insistence on being able to express an idea, an experience or a commitment. Surely the development of such a skill is a cornerstone of education. The high standards she expected of her students were only a pale reflection of what she expected of herself. Even the chore of grading papers and examinations was, for her, an exercise of selfless responsibility which all too many of us slough off. Each exam and paper would come back fully annotated with comments which were almost as long and certainly as thorough as the work being graded. Indeed, each was an essay in itself.

Besides art, she was deeply concerned about politics and liked to discuss such issues. In fact, her discussions sometimes seemed more like fencing matches for she loved to argue; not because she was irascible but because, for her, debating was a sport.

She also enjoyed pre-1940 films, certain types of mystery stories (preferably taking place in a 19th-century parsonage), charades, "Botticelli" (the prefiguration of "Trivial Pursuit"), zoos, amusement parks, Vivaldi (of course) and good theatre of all types. Above all she was a raconteuse par excellence for she actually would listen to the stories others were desperate to tell before launching into her own.

Those of us who knew her will always have that memory of her seeking the ideal — toujours l'ideal — in all aspects of her life. And that lesson can never be taken from us.

For someone like myself starting out on a teaching career, there could not have been a more helpful, knowledgeable or tactful mentor. She never told me to do anything (although, of course, she was certainly entitled to do so). She would only ask that if she would do so-and-so (usually a list of about ten chores), could I do such-and-such (usually about two items). She never interfered in how I taught my courses, but was always willing to give advice and help when I asked. When we "team taught" the survey course, however, she would give me thorough (and often devastating) critiques — suggestions I still find myself attempting to follow. In some 30 years of teaching I have found only one individual who was her equal as a treasured colleague and dear friend.

I had no way of realizing what a formative experience awaited my next three years when I arrived at Sweet Briar with a stack of notes from graduate school, a boiling-over radiator and a letter from Eleanor Dodge Barton welcoming me aboard and ending with "Now that the amenities have been met and decorum thereby satisfied, I propose that we move on to first names. Sincerely, Eleanor."

And so I joined a department which operated with such day-to-day terms as "deleterious" and "antepenultimate," and whose chairman wore three-cornered hats with veils, fox furs and a green plaid cloak. She also drove a red sausage-shaped Nash and was given to statements (immortalized by Helen Wolfe Evans '56) like "Just for the record" and "It falls out that...". The operative word for approbation was "posh"; and for disapprobation, "squalid."

By the time I left for Yale to pursue a doctorate I had begun to learn the craft of teaching and had been given the topic of my dissertation. I had passed into adulthood. These, for me, momentous actualities had occurred only through "the good taste and good judgement" of Eleanor Barton.

Ella-Prince Trimmer Knox '56 Remembers Eleanor Barton

She stood in front of her first class of Art 111-112, held up a reproduction of a Rembrandt etching and asked, "What do you see?" What we saw on that September Tuesday in 1953 was a woman in sensible shoes and a seersucker suit, with a string of pearls and matching button earrings — someone who appeared plain yet classic, earnest and intent on teaching us to look. In the years that Eleanor Barton chaired the history of art department at Sweet Briar College, that was her mission: teaching students to see, to use their eyes wisely, to develop what Cézanne saw in Monet as "only an eye, but what an eye!"

Students who enrolled in what had formerly been called a "cocktail-party-conversation" course soon found themselves with lower grades than they had anticipated. Beneath a devastating grade the slanted script might begin, "This is the finest work I've seen you do," and continue with a full-page discussion of errors and misjudgments as well as suggestions for improvement. When a disgruntled senior once remarked, "You certainly don't have much nice to say about me," Miss Barton replied, "You must assume I like you without my spelling it out."

Under her aegis, the courses offered in the history of art department increased both in number and in variety. She encouraged independent projects and the correlation of courses; Nineteenth-Century Painting matched with Ethel Ramage's Romantic Poetry and Lysbeth Muncy's European History After the French Revolution formed one of a number of heady combinations. In addition, single works of art began to appear in the foyer of Benedict: Thomas Eakins' oil sketch of Walt Whitman borrowed from Randolph-Macon Woman's College, a della Robbia bust of a child, a student's photograph, each accompanied by a carefully-worded analysis so that passersby might know what to look for, how to see.

Never afraid to express herself or to stand by her convictions, she was at the same time cheerful and hospitable. A senior seminar might meet in her book-lined apartment on Faculty Row and stay on for sherry and a glimpse of the original prints she prized or the photograph of her, in flowing dotted gown, arriving at a party with Salvador Dali. She was involved in the life of the College, in khaki Bermuda shorts on Patchwork Day, in camel's hair or Black Watch plaid at meetings of the Curriculum Committee or the Friends of Art. She was serious without taking herself so. Fond of scarves and capes in winter, she brought down the house at one faculty show, imitating herself, with an art lecture-cum-dance of the seven veils. She expected excellence and demanded it. On an academic leave to teach at Wellesley in 1956-57, she was called into the Dean's Office there and presented with a number of complaints about her low grading. Drawing herself up, she inquired, "Would you have me grade the girls of Wellesley with standards different from those I use at Sweet Briar?" No one questioned her grading again.

Eleanor Barton's legacy lies in the strength she brought to the history of art department during her tenure at Sweet Briar and in her encouragement of excellence in all aspects of the College. Many of her students, whether majors or beginners in the basic survey course, have her to thank for urging them on to look, to analyze, to express themselves clearly, to see the work of art in its context and to treasure it for itself.

Editor's Note: A fund to support the History of Art Department has been established in memory of Eleanor Barton. Contributions to: Sweet Briar College, Box G, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595.

Irén Marik, pianist, whose musical career began at age 17 with a concert tour of major European cities and who taught at Sweet Briar for 23 years before her retirement in 1970, died on November 12, 1986 at her home in Independence, California. Known for the consistently musical quality of her playing and her sensitive control of tonal nuances, she gave an exceptionally fine interpretation of the music of Liszt, Debussy, Schumann and Bartók, with whom she studied in her native Hungary.

A graduate of the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest, Miss Marik played regularly in England with the BBC before her career was interrupted by World War II. She came to the United States in 1946 where she played with the National Symphony Orchestra and at the National Gallery and Constitution Hall. She managed a busy concert schedule during her years at Sweet Briar and in 1967 was awarded a Ford Faculty Grant for her research into contemporary music and her fine performance of 20th-century composers.

Explaining that "piano playing is my great physical exercise," Miss Marik maintained her 6-hour per day practice schedule even after she retired, always beginning her practice with the music of Bach "because he is so logical. I sit down. He's there with me."

In 1972 she inaugurated the "First Tuesday of the Month Concert Series" in her California home, where guests from all over the state came to hear her provocative piano playing and sample the Hungarian delicacies prepared by the musician before her concerts.

Miss Marik made several recordings, from which two Bach Chorales and the Chopin "Aeolian Harp" Etude were played at the Mass of Christian Burial celebrated for her in November.

Sue Reid Slaughter Events 1986-87

- Puccini's opera in three acts, "Tosca," was performed in Babcock Auditorium by the Southwest Virginia Opera Society September 25.
- George Plimpton, sports journalist and special contributor to Sports Illustrated, gave a lecture October 7th entitled, "An Amateur Among the Pros."
- Winter Term brought three different events to campus: an American film series showing 11 films, a creative writing course taught by Michael Brondoli, author of Showdown and Other Stories, and lectures on the historical and cultural background of East European countries and their relations with the Soviet Union since World War II.
- "Sweet Honey in the Rock," a black woman's gospel group, performed during Black History month in February.
- A Literary Festival was held on February 11-13 with readings by Bobbie Ann Mason, Jay McInerney, Sharon Olds and Robert Pinsky and a critics' panel with Richard Eder and Stephen Tapscott.
- A conference which brought 17 anthropologists to campus, "Pastoralists and Markets: The Articulation of Pastoralism with the Nineteenth Century World-Economy," April 3-5 was funded in part by Sue Reid Slaughter monies.

- Margaret Rhea Seddon, astronaut and physician spoke April 14 on "A Career As A Woman Astronaut."

(Miss Sue Reid Slaughter, a graduate in the class of 1913, left in her will funds to be administered by the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association. The Board of the Association determined that the income should be used "...to bring distinguished scholars and prominent national and international figures to Sweet Briar." A committee of alumnae, students, faculty and administrators welcomes proposals and decides which should be funded.)

Sweet Briar Dance Concert, Spring 1987

Artists arrange space on canvas with a brush and paint. Dancers arrange space on stage with their body movements and create kinetic art.

Our dance department gave us another typically excellent and exciting evening of modern dance at the annual spring dance concert performed in Babcock Auditorium March 6 and 7. A large lit background of moving flame shapes surprised the audience and was a perfect companion to the opening piece, Ritual Fire Dance, choreographed by Madeleine Blanchard '89 and Lelia Haller and danced by Madeleine Blanchard and Ann Richardson '90. The concert continued with dances that displayed refreshing variety and effectively showcased the talents of current dance students. Highlights of the concert were Pulse, choreographed and danced by Zandra Taylor '88 with music by Vicki Hubbard, dance department accompanist; and the closing piece, Let's Go To The Hop, choreographed by Mark Magruder, assistant professor of dance and danced by April Ballard '89, Madeleine Blanchard, Misha Boyd '89, Ann Richardson, Zandra Taylor and Pamela Ward '89 with music by Vicki Hubbard. Let's Go To The Hop played with the antics of abstracted frogs and exhibited a sense of humor, while being an intense and lively finale.

D. Hubble Wilson '77 Rejoins Admissions Staff

After working in admissions at Sweet Briar and at Rosemont College in Pennsylvania, D. Hubble Wilson was director of sales for the Hilton Hotel Corporation and a southeast regional director of sales for the Radisson Hotel Corporation, both posts in Lynchburg. Following these assignments, she managed an import specialty shop in Lynchburg and started her own marketing consultant business.

In March 1987 she returned to Sweet Briar to fill the newly-created, much-needed position of alumnae-admissions coordinator. The admissions office always has worked closely with many alumnae during the travel/recruitment process, but until now there has been no specific staff person to monitor and enhance the very important relationship between alumnae-admission representatives and admissions functions. Alumnae are a key resource in attracting top-quality prospective students: Hubble will oversee the alumnae-admission reps and will keep close contact with club presidents, key alumnae and Alumnae Board members. In addition she is responsible for a monthly newsletter, A-AR workshops and regular updates on alumnae-related prospectives.

An economics major at Sweet Briar, she notes that she is "utilizing [her] liberal arts degree to maximum profit" — by supplying a demand! Telephone her toll-free with queries or to request information for prospective students: 1-800-537-4300 outside Virginia or 1-800-533-1593 in state.

Dear Editor:

I am absolutely delighted that you ran "An Appeal" by Eduardo Peniche in the Winter '86 edition!! Every word of what he says is 100% true and noteworthy...it is a subject that deserves more serious nationwide attention in our school systems. As you probably know, the good private elementary schools in this country still provide mandatory foreign language training for all grade levels. However, as a nation we are still enormously short-sighted in cross-cultural affairs and how important it is for all Americans to cultivate a solid understanding of some other part of the world. As Dr. Peniche so clearly pointed out, these skills broaden one's perspective on the world while reinforcing one's own cultural heritage.

Above all else I hope that Dr. Peniche's article will help encourage SBC students to continue majoring in or avidly studying languages. When I majored in French ('78) Sweet Briar didn't even offer the now-popular major in business administration or marketing. I hope that SBC graduates-to-be will come to realize that majoring in such areas is not the only way to become gainfully employed these days. My language studies at Sweet Briar were challenging and fascinating and my degree has served me very well so far including a recent bi-lingual assignment with my ad agency to our office in Brussels.

Thank you, thank you, Dr. Peniche for your compelling appeal...and my heartfelt thanks to the Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine for running this terrific article!

Sincerely,
Leigh S. Ramsay ('78)

...I thought the Winter issue was super — my neighbor took it home to show Eduardo Peniche's article on the importance of language study to his "next year high school freshman."

Our reunion in '84 was #60. In just 2 more years, we will have another 5-year reunion in May '89. Hard to believe? Let's join forces from 1924 and meet at our alma mater for a few exciting days, drink in the beauty of the campus and those Blue Ridge Mountains, get news of the latest happenings at SBC and reminisce about "way back then."

Betty Guy Tranter's husband, Parke, died 2 years ago after a long illness. She is still in her home; went to FL last spring and spends summers in Canada. We send our sympathy.

Carol Flynn Eley is happy and busy with her family and gift shop. El Harned Arp is on the go between her home in IL and her winter place in FL. Clara King Maxwell still lives in her home in Charlotte but hopes to settle ere long in a condominium or retirement home. Janet Schureman Wilson lives near her son and family in IL and sees her grandchildren often — such fun. Lillian Everett Blake '23 is now in Keswick Home; her son and family are here in Baltimore and see her often. Muriel MacLeod Searby is not well; she is still living in the retirement home, Roland Park Place. Susan Simrall Logan finds life in a nursing home very expensive. Eleanor Sikes Peters, at 83, is well, active and happy. She has 6 grandchildren and numerous greatgrands. As for Jean Grant Taylor, I called her today but no one was home in Ann Arbor; hope all is well with our ever-steady fund agent and her family. (Ed's note Jean sent a note to the alumnae office saying that she and Randolph have a nurse's aide every day and that is a great help. With Randolph 91 and Jean 85, the latter feels they're doing all right.) We Robertsons are "holding in there;" Bob was ill last spring; due to time, Rx and strong determination, he's doing wonders now. I am involved with my 13 grands who all live nearby; Robby III is a busy and fun-loving son and bachelor.

Let me again remind you of our 65th in May '89. Give it lots of thought and plan to meet at Sweet Briar. Love to you, one and all

Constance Furman Westbrook is well except for arthritis; Joe had a double heart bypass in the spring and is recovering nicely. They see Mary

Earle Kaminer '30 when they're in Sea Island, and Augusta Porter, Sarah De Saussure Heath, Teresa Atkinson and Boyce Martin (all from the class of 1930) in Atlanta. Virginia Van Winkle Morledge is hoping to get to SBC this spring. She talked to Sarah Everett Toy recently and sees Margaret McWilliams Rentschler and Susan Simrall Logan '24 often. Grace Solitt says she is "still around, even if I now have to drag 'Junior' (my oxygen tank) around with me wherever I go." Grace is running her farms as usual.

Your response to my plea was wonderful and with great pleasure I report your news. Marion Malm Fowler wrote happily that two grandsons married lovely girls during the past year. In March she and Mac are taking a cruise to the South Pacific. They keep busy with golf, clubs, church and socializing. They see Stuart Groner Moreno at parties. She hopes to get to our 55th reunion in May. Suzanne Gay Linville, looking back over the past 55 years, says the good luck has outweighed the bad; her husband is well, sons doing well and "not the least of the good luck has been the time I spent at SBC." Jane Hays Dowler exhorts us all not to ever think we are too old! She drove, alone, 1000 miles and back to Walnut Creek, CA at Christmas and loved it! She very diplomatically turned away would-be hitch-hikers with a smile.

Marcia Patterson's devoted cousin, Beth Zehnder, wrote again this year giving us news of Marcia, and Marcia sends love to all of us. She is now on the nursing floor of her retirement home and spends much of her time in bed on account of the arthritis. She still delights everyone with her wit and humor and non-complaining nature, grateful for the tender, loving care lavished on her. Beth's mother is also in Westminster and she and Marcia enjoy each other. Elizabeth Young Faulk says her health prevents her from coming to our 55th in May but "have fun and know I am thinking of you." Her husband is retired executive editor of the Jackson, Mississippi newspaper but still writes a weekly column. They have 3 children and 6 "grands". Virginia Squibb Flynn, Squibby, says she and Jim definitely will be at reunion. She misses getting back on campus since her tour of duty as a member of the Alumnae Board is ended. She is still selling bulbs (you remember she won the trip to Holland last year!) and seeing Sweet Briar friends in CT. Her roomie, Sue Burnett Davis, and I will get to reunion whether by Amtrack, auto or airplane from Atlanta. Sue and Frank last summer traveled with Catherine and Roff Sims in Europe on a German ship from Passau to Budapest and back on the Danube, then a trip through northwest Germany. Several years ago they moved from their lovely home to a lovely condominium and Sue substitutes bridge for gardening. She and her partner won the duplicate tournament at the Cloister (Sea Island) in January '86 "A fluke," she says, but I know better!

Connie Fowler Keeble says she has changed from a bird walker to a bird watcher and will not be able to make it to reunion in May. She sends her best wishes to all surviving '32ers. Henrietta Bryan Alphin divides her time among the children, her vegetable garden, their Goshen camp and Ivy Creek Natural Area, and a bit of church work. Henrietta hopes to be at Reunion. Amalie Frank Kohn says her travels are limited to visits with her children and grandchildren. She is still recovering from two hip replacements, but is setting her sights on our 60th reunion and will be thinking of us in May. Elizabeth Job Jopp is most contented living in Pikeville, Kentucky (pop. 5,000). She's a deacon in the Presbyterian church, teaches Sunday school and plays a lot of bridge. She regrets that she will not be at reunion. Dot Smith Berkeley hopes to get to reunion. Her and Edmund's biography, Moses Ashley Curtis, A Yankee Botanist in Carolina, was published by a West German firm last July and the Univ. of Alabama Press has accepted their biography of George William Featherstonhaugh. They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in April '86. Anne McRae is taking a course in "Creative Writing for Pleasure and Profit" — "So far," she says, "just pleasure." She also Brailles books for the blind. Courtenay Cochran Ticer is into painting and having a wonderful time with it. Her S.B. roomie, Peggy Hall, became an artist after college days and built a pleasant and rewarding career around it. Go for it, Courtenay!

Charlotte Magoffin stays snug and warm in her apartment during the frigid Minnesota winters and often sees her sister who lives nearby. Her devoted brothers and their wives call often on the phone to keep in touch. As you remember, Alice Dabney Parker lost her husband, John, last year, so 1986 was a bad year for her. Also, in the spring her daughter Fleming was seriously injured in an accident, and simultaneously Fleming's younger daughter had a malignant brain tumor. Both are now much better, Alice reports, thankfully, and Alice was able to take a much needed trip to London and southern France and in November a visit in the Berkshires. In April her granddaughter, Heyward, is to be married. Our love and sympathy to you, Alice, and may 1987 hold good things for you and yours. Helen Pratt Secrest is still in her Washington, D.C. house but wonders how long she can keep up house, yard and gardens. Her daughter and son-in-law recently visited her from Albuquerque, New Mexico and she happily reports that he seems fully recovered from his heart attack of last year. She is very involved in her church and is a member of 4 volunteer organizations, plays a little bridge, goes to the ballet and enjoys cooking. She saw both Eleanor Wright Conway and Ted Clary Treadwell during the past year. Helen, with your youthful energy, I believe you will be in that house for a long time yet! Marjorie (Pat) Ward Cross is still a museum guide at Winterthur, taking courses and doing some volunteer work. Her trip to Egypt last year was cancelled so she went back to Scandinavia in May. Billie Hancel Pearson wrote from Los Angeles that she will make every effort to get back for our 55th reunion but bemoans the fact that she lives so far away. Mary Page Siebels's granddaughter is being married on May 23 so getting to reunion would be impossible for her — but she hopes we'll all have a great time. She is living at the South Carolina Episcopal Home in West Columbia. Hazel Stamps Collins still spends half the year in Naples, FL and the other half in Atlanta. She and daughter Cecil Collins Scanlon had a lovely trip to New England in late September to see the leaves. I saw Hazel over lunch right after she got back and Lib Douglass Foote and I had a run-down on the trip. I see a lot of Lib. We are close neighbors. She is happily busy with her 4 granddaughters and 2 daughters.

Ted Clary Treadwell reported a good year starting with a drive to Naples, FL to visit Nevil Crute Holmes ('33). Ruth Remon McRae was Ted and Ben's co-driver as Ted had not had her cataract operation then. The operation turned out most successfully. She had a nice visit with Barbara Fowler Wilson. Marion Malm's daughter, in Lakeland, FL. In June she and Ben flew out to the high school graduation of their first granddaughter, who is now at Coe College in Cedar Rapids, IA. Eleanor Wright Conway, our outstanding Fund Agent, wrote that their big news is that in May 1986 Ted received his Ph.D. in history at Duke University. Ted is a four star general, too! Their 2 daughters, Laura Conway Nason ('61) from Buckingham, Pennsylvania and Ruth Conway Willons and her husband, Colonel Walter Willons, plus their two granddaughters from Indianapolis joined the Conways in Durham for the celebration. Cards from Mildred Hodges Ferry and Mildred Larimer told me that they are coming for reunion. Mil Ferry hopes Larimer will come to Birmingham first to visit her and they can drive up to SBC. Having those two will really jazz things up! Mildred Larimer, who is retired from her career and lives in Honolulu, has become a real world traveler. Last year, in spite of the terrorists, she went to Europe, alone, and had a great time. Holland, London, Paris, and Nice. Played a lot of duplicate bridge last summer and read over a hundred books! In spring of '87 she plans to come back East, lease a car, travel around a month, then go to reunion.

Eleanor Franke Crawford wrote, "My dentist says I've outlived my teeth, my M.D. keeps the frail body functioning with a battery of pills." Nevertheless, she went by wheelchair and airplane to spend Christmas with her eldest daughter and grandson in Fort Worth. She sends her love to all the brave souls who return for our 55th. Jean Hathaway Temple wrote from CA that she lost her husband in 1976 and has 2 children, a son, Geoffrey, and a daughter, Sara, and 3 grandchildren. Betsy Higgins Plummer says 1986 was a good year for them. To South America in February with a carnival in Rio, then Montana in the summer. In September to Bermuda for three weeks, then a week in London; Christmas at Hilton Head with family and friends. Barbara Munter Purdue was in Atlanta the first part of November. She has made a wonderful recovery from 2 broken ankles and back surgery. She and Bob came to Atlanta to see their oldest daughter Susie whose husband was an assistant Georgia Tech football coach. Susie and Andy had just gotten settled in their new home when the great game of "Football Coach Musical Chairs" took place and they are now transplanted to Tuscaloosa at the Univ. of Alabama. I feel cheated! I'd counted on the Purdues' getting to Atlanta more often. Was so happy to hear from Stuart Groner Mareno in Coronado, CA. She and Jack took a lovely trip to France in late August

Paris, Lyons, Cannes and a 5-day trip on the Rhone in a brand new riverboat

Anna (Gussie) Gilbert Davy had a busy year with lots of travel. New Orleans and Mobile last spring, a Baltic study cruise with Stanford University in July. Spent Christmas week at The Wigwam near Phoenix with their children — all of them golfers. In June to Hawaii for 3 weeks. Nell Colgin Miller said they were looking forward to a great family gathering of 18 for Christmas at her daughter, Cynthia's, who is a gourmet cook. In fact, the whole family are gourmet cooks. Nell loves to cook, Cynthia likewise, granddaughter Elizabeth, and great-granddaughter Elizabeth, (age 4) who makes beautiful fancy cookies and begins breakfast! A real joy of cooking which Nell said her mother passed along to her descendants. Marjorie Miller Close and Jack celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in June with their 4 children, 5 grandchildren and many friends. It was a gala dinner party in their garden where they were married. Before that they spent the spring in the south of France and on a small Yugoslavian island that was covered with wildflowers. They also visited a son and daughter in Victoria, B.C., then journeyed to the great Pacific Rim Park. Their main interests are farming and gardening and work in the Morgan Arboretum where they help with woodland chores and take groups on nature walks. And they still play tennis. Nancy Wilson Mann, artist and poet, says that last summer was full of art shows in the gardens of Norfolk, and at the end of August she went to a poetry conference in FL where she received an award with about 500 others. Quite an experience. However, after that she was stricken with flu, at home for about 2 months and in the hospital with pneumonia. She's all right now but at writing had not gotten back all of her strength. We surely do hope you are feeling tip-top now, Nancy. I was saddened by the death of Jeanie Boatwright Yarborough. She was at SBC only one year. She and I grew up together in Wilmington — our nurses used to roll us out together in our baby carriages (wicker, I have a picture!) When she married she moved to Raleigh, and was widowed many years ago. The last several years of her life were clouded with illness. She leaves two lovely daughters and several grandchildren.

Doris Wenning Hodgdon lost her husband last September and is leaving her home in Winter Park, FL for Stamford, CT to be near her children. Our love and deepest sympathy to you, Doris. Marjorie Blaikie Barber lives in Williamsburg, VA now after remarrying in 1984. She and David, both lifelong residents of Englewood, NJ, moved to a brand-new retirement community in Williamsburg and love it. Sally Ainsworth Glass had a marvellous but exhausting summer taking courses for the most part in Wales and in Devon. I wish she'd written some details. Sadly, she said there wasn't a chance she could make it to reunion but sent everybody her love. And now for yours truly. The grandest thing that happened to me in 1986 was the purchase of a closed caption attachment for my television. Simply marvellous and has re-opened many doors to me!

How pleased the new secretary is with the response for news of the 36ers! And how interesting to find that most of us are pursuing the same interests, travel chief among them. Because of a fabulous two months in New Zealand and Australia where she saw the World Day Equestrian Championship, Corinne Fentress Gray missed the big 50th reunion. Soon "down under" will be Louise Damgard Eichelkraut. "This year is our 'biggie'. In January we'll be sailing under the Golden Gate Bridge on our golden wedding day, destination Australia with stops in Hawaii, Fiji, and New Zealand." And also off to fabulous Australia and New Zealand in February are Logan Phinizy Johns and Bill. How eagerly Logan is anticipating the trip. After an absolutely splendid reunion Kathleen Donohue McCormack spent the summer in a cottage at Elkhart followed by a trip in September to Nova Scotia

Martha Horner Maxwell also thoroughly enjoyed reunion and followed it with a trip in the summer to Wyoming where she crossed paths with Connie Burwell White '34 and husband Bill. With them having fun at the reunion was Polly Rich Ewing who in October took a tour of the Canadian Maritime Provinces; a lot of family visited later. Emily Muller and George had 6 weeks in China this year. He went trekking in Tibet with son Chip while Chip's wife and Emily visited 11 Chinese cities. The highlight was a visit to a remote village, Simao, where George was stationed during World War II. Emily took the natives prints of colored slides from that time. Also in China and Tibet in September were Lillian Cabell Gay and husband Jim with the Sweet Briar tour group

Europe was the destination for Peggy Huxley Dick and son Ned who went to Munich to pick up a car which they drove 2,500 miles before coming home. Then they had the energy to take her youngest grandchild to CA, Vancouver and Victoria. Also in Europe was Elizabeth ("Pinkie") Scott. She and Eve Turnbull went to Spain and Portugal in late September for 3 weeks. Before that, for the first time since her wedding trip in 1939 she went out to Santa Fe for the last opera weekend. And tripping in October 1985 to London for 2 weeks where they lived "in a flat in Bayswater with a dozen different nationalities in the surrounding neighborhood-fascinating" was Fran Baker Lamb. England also beckoned Mary Virginia Camp Smith for a month in August when she, her brother and sister-in-law drove around in a Volvo station wagon. And at the English Speaking Union Triennial International Meeting in Edinburgh. Mary Virginia had dinner with Prince Philip and the Duke of Athol who owns Blair Castle

There is an author among us!

Elizabeth Morton Hodges has written a book of much interest in Lynchburg, a book about her grandfather Charles B. Fleet and the company he started and made nationally known for such products as Chapstick and Phospho Soda. Characteristically Ruth Gilliam Viar writes humorously that after winterizing the car, etc., she needs to be winterized herself. She continues her genealogical work both for Jones Library and her DAR chapter. Just moved! Mary Vogdes Haines, to 413 Williams Rd., Wynnewood, PA 19096 Katie Niles Parker and Dodie Burrill Walker had lunch together soon after the reunion sharing pictures La Donohue McCormack had taken. Dodie and Basil moved to Lexington, MA last year near their doctor son and family Katie and Frank have a new little La Sharo Winnebago motor home in which they plan to tour this spring, possibly parking it in the Thomassons' Lynchburg yard

Margaret Roberts Whitney writes glowingly of Reunion 50, her first return to the "spend campus we now have." After 50 years in New England she and Al are planning to move into the new Goodwin House in Falls Church, VA. Also moving to a retirement village in Boca Raton are Dorothea McClure Mountain and Bill Our scholar Chic Gregory is back in Cambridge for the winter. For her the SBC group in Williamsburg in September was very rewarding. Peggy Lloyd Bush gives news of her sons one works for his father and the other teaches history at the U. of Miami

Sad is the news from Mary Hesson Pettyjohn, the death of her mother on Oct. 1st, a few days short of her 98th birthday. This year brings two signal events in the lives of Margaret "Smitty" Thomasson and Ruby, their 50th wedding anniversary in October and retirement at the end of the year Far from retiring is Constance Warner McElhinney who is going "to be marketing some really super luxury condos in Leesburg." What a clever idea those who had to miss the reunion had: Chloe Frierson Fort, Jane Shelton Bowers, Ruth Robinson Marshall, and Mary Poindexter Willingham. In February they had a mini-reunion at Sea Island with Chloe as hostess in a lovely rented house. On account of a broken hip,

"Muggy" Gregory Cukor also missed the "biggie". Her good news is that she is almost normal again. From Dobbs Ferry, NY, Suzanne Mool Strother writes to say that she would always be happy to see any of us traveling that way. They have plenty of room and are only 35 minutes from NYC

The secretary has good news that Robert has recovered very satisfactorily from a broken hip. Our goings have been to plays and operas in New York and Washington.

The gleanings from your returned postal cards were most interesting, telling of many activities in your communities, mostly in libraries, museums, with historical associations and other cultural groups. Now that most of us/our husbands have retired, our main interest is in our families, especially our grandchildren

Kathleen Ward Allen moved with her husband in 1978 to Green Valley, AZ, after he retired from a professorship in the graduate school of library science at Syracuse U. After Kathleen received her master's degree, she taught math for a year at SBC while Miss Morenus was on sabbatical leave. They have a daughter. The Allens now travel about 20,000 miles a year, to Sanibel, FL, Cape Cod and to their camp in the Adirondacks.

Janet Martin Bennett resides in Siesta Key, FL, but she and her husband spend about 5 months each year in Indianapolis, IN, where 5 of their 9 children live. Janet is tutoring a blind child weekdays in FL but otherwise they are beach bums. Blair Bunting Both continues her volunteer work in the field of Bereavement with Families through the Delaware Hospice, as well as cooking for the Emmanuel Dining Room (soup kitchen) in downtown Wilmington. Husband, Rich, still propagates wildflowers for Brandywine River Museum and Winterthur. They expected their first grandchild last January. A daughter, Blair, SBC '65, is to finish in May at Trinity Episcopal School of Ministry in Pittsburgh and return to NC to be placed wherever Bishop Estill decides

Agnes Spencer Burke writes from Washington, D.C. that her husband, Jack, died quietly in his sleep while the whole family of 3 children and their families were on vacation last August at Squam Lake, NH. One son is from Mill Valley, CA; a daughter and family are from Rockville, MD; and the third daughter 'Aggie' was married a year ago and now lives in

Keswick, VA. Virginia Leggett

Cameron says she lives a quiet but busy life in the bright Lake Park, FL, sun and balmy air by the sea. Her first grandchild was due last April and all 32 godchildren are now grown. Her IBM-XT home computer is helping her do away with the long lines at the bank. Clara Sasser Chandler sent from Chevy Chase, MD, a NY Times Sunday, Dec. 7, 1986 article written by Mary Lee Settle about pianist Bobby Short. Clara and Mary Lee were in Mr. Bennett's Freshman English class together

Majorie Lee Stock Clemens now writes from St. Joseph, MI, where her family of 4 children and their children and friends have helped during this year of adjustment after Joe's death Besides being on the board of directors of Fort Miami Heritage Society and helping promote her city through St. Joseph Today, Marj volunteers in the library and researches genealogy Hortense Powell Cooper's Christmas card from Shelbyville, TN, told of middle son, Jim's being reelected unopposed to his third congressional term He is married to an SBC graduate, an ornithologist with the World Wildlife Fund, thanks to SBC's Dr. Edwards Two other sons live in NYC and in Nashville. Jacqueline Sexton Daley's Episcopal rector husband's health keeps their life quiet, but they do go to FL once a year from their Belmont, CA home. Jacquie heads the local blood bank and works in their church's thrift shop. While they were in FL, Mariana Bush King came over from her home in Avon Park. They were bowled over by the fact that they have now known each other for 50 years!

Mary Sue Kilham Davis had 3 accidents several years ago and has been very ill but says she is now slowly feeling better. It has meant cancelling all her community services in the Washington, D.C.-Alexandria, VA area, though she does keep up 2 houses without help, sits for her grandchild and enjoyed her 50th St Cats' (Catherine's) Reunion in '86 Nancy Haskins Elliott's husband, David, retired in July, 1986 but both are very busy, and especially enjoyed the SBC-sponsored Illiria cruise in July, '86 from Lisbon to Bergen. They have lived in a retirement home in Pasadena, CA for 14 years now, and always welcome old friends

Constance Currie Fleming's middle son's wedding in Riverdale, NY in '85 brought several '40 classmates together. She hopes that now that she and El live in Stuart, FL from after Christmas until May each year that they will see even more classmates May through Christmas sees them 'at home' in Chatham, NJ from which they travel. In June '86 they took 2 grandsons out West for a rafting trip on the Colorado. Ellie Snow Lea said that a grandson of Connie and El's played in the Volvo Tennis Tournament in VT last Aug. and all families were there to cheer him on

Joy Carter Forse still is happily doing volunteer work in San Antonio, TX and enjoying her granddaughters, one of whom at age 7 is writing poems. Clara Call Frazier returned to Richmond, VA to attend her 50th Reunion at The Collegiate School. Returning to CA, she and husband, Bill, spent the hot and humid desert summer months at their new condo near the ocean in Encinitas, San Diego County, away from their Palm Desert home. Five of their children live in the Encinitas area, and Bill loves the horse races at Del Mar racetrack. Mildred Mitchell Gillis still enjoys after 11 years working at the same job at Stepping Stones, a program for pre-school and kindergarten children with learning and/or behavioral problems in Ormond Beach, FL. Husband, Watson, retired some time ago but still keeps his hand in his sales business. Their condo overlooks the ocean which they enjoy as much as their 5 grandchildren. Mickie says she is going to try to make it to our 50th.

Adelaide Boze Glascock is still busy in the real estate field. With such dedication, no wonder she was chosen to receive SBC's Outstanding Alumna Award (see alumae magazine's winter issue). That ceremony was also attended by Helen Cornwell Jones, Polly and her husband, Jim, now retired from law practice, take many trips together, and also visit their son in NYC. Blanche Evans Fleming Gray's 94-year-old father passed away, leaving a void in her life. Her 2 sons are a great joy to her, but they do not live near enough to her in Memphis, TN Reba Smith Gromel is doing church and other volunteer work as well as playing excellent golf, having had 2 holes-in-one since moving to Sarasota, FL with husband, George, who is retired. Their daughter graduated from SBC in 1966; a son, from UVA in '68 and UVA Law School in '71. Their 4 granddaughters help Reba grow older gracefully

Jane Hopkins Hanes is still doing the same old things in Winston-Salem, NC — a little golf and some volunteer work. Jeanne Harris has had a most interesting career since SBC days She continued for a master's at Columbia U., NYC, in the Chinese and Japanese dept. After employment at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in NYC, Jeanne moved to Kansas City, MO, joining the staff at the Nelson Gallery of Art in the Oriental Dept. A Fulbright Grant sent her to the University of London, after which she went around the world on a professional trip, visiting every art museum and archeological site possible. She has now returned to the newly-named Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art in Kansas City, where she is the associate curator of oriental art. Sometimes she is the museum's courier, taking exhibits to other museums, world-wide. Georgia Herbert Hart was recently inducted into the SC Golf Hall of Fame and had two poems written to her and one dedicated to her at the banquet Georgia's mother died at 92 last October and her home is now the 'new' home of Georgia and George's three youngest grandchildren with their mother and father. Georgia is very proud of the achievements of her grandsons, one in the National Honor Society and another in two-mile cross-country track meets. Elizabeth Ivins Haskins had a wonderful trip following posadas into Northern Portugal last year. Ivy and her husband are now moving into a smaller home in Concord, MA. Six of their grandchildren live in Los Angeles and in Denver; others live in Boston and Carlisle in the East. Bill is still working at Harvard and Ivy is active at golf, tennis, church and being on some boards.

Jane Burnett Hill sent in a lovely tribute to her husband, Perry, who died in November in Tucson, AZ, where they had lived since his retirement from active newspaper editor life. Because of his fragile health, they traveled to warm spots to keep him warm, carrying their house on their backs, towing a little car with a sailing canoe on top. Jane spent this past holiday with a son in Wellesley, MA, then stayed in Alexandria, VA, with relatives, returning to Tucson afterwards. Rosemary Bjorge Johnson and husband, Dick, spend Christmas each year with their son and family in Berwyn, PA, where this past year their 2 daughters from Denver and Minneapolis joined them. Rosemary attended her 50th high school reunion in the Black Hills of South Dakota last June and then did some motoring from Canada to FL. Helen Cornwell Jones sent in two photos of Polly Boze Glascock with her Outstanding Alumna award in hand. Afterwards, Helen and Homer drove on to North Carolina, to visit a Presbyterian college for international students in the Asheville area. Barbara Smith Whitlock wrote of the grand SBC gathering held last June at the Jones' home in Princeton, NJ. Charlotte Knox Lane is still the executive director of Washington, PA, county tourism. Life is still exciting and full of fun, especially as two of their grandchildren live next door; the others include one in the Marines, and one at Adelphi College on Long Island.

Eleanor Snow Lea sent a lovely photo of herself and husband, Tat, with a Christmas letter from Pawlet, VT, telling of daughter, Ann — whom many of us remember meeting at our 45th SBC Reunion in '85 — expecting her first child. Another daughter lives in Fayetteville, NC, while a son lives nearer in Dorset, VT. Ellie attended her 50th reunion at East Orange, NJ, High School. She volunteers at the local library while Tat makes wooden toys for their local craft shop and refinishes furniture, now that he's retired! Maria Burroughs Livingston still resides in their NYC apartment as well as at "Oak Hill," a family home on the Hudson River, near Hudson, NY. Phoopey has retired from the Development Office of The Brearley School but her husband is still active as V.P. and Sr. Securities Analyst with Kidder Peabody, Inc. Being on the Board for Olana and a Friend of Clermont, Inc. (both museums in their area) keep her busy. In 1986 the founding of Livingston Manor had its 300th anniversary, which included a portrait and artifacts exhibition at the New York Historical Society. Their family includes 8 — 9 by now — grandchildren. Her gardening interest means being her real self, especially when putting cow manure — 640 lbs of it — on her garden. Beth Thomas Mason's big news is that she finally saw Williamsburg last September. She traveled from her home in Seattle, visiting children and grandchildren living in VA and D.C. areas.

Mildred Moon Montague, after attending the Chattanooga SBC alumnae affair last year, to which President Fry came, helped to reactivate the Chattanooga SBC Alumnae Association after years of dormancy. Mildred and Bill traveled with their 3 sons and wives to London before Christmas, and loved it so much that they plan to repeat the trip in '87. Mildred is President of the T.C. Thompson Children's Hospital Foundation, which, by participating in a network TV telethon a year ago, raised over $145,000 for needed hospital equipment. Marion Daudt McBride of Chesterfield, MO, had a full house over this past Christmas, as 2 daughters and families gathered there for the December 26th wedding of son, Tom. She loves traveling on her TWA pass. Martha Smith McGowan attended her 50th high school reunion in Detroit, though she now lives in Rialto, CA. Their only son, Michael, died at 36 in January '86. The oldest daughter is now back at the Univ. of Wyoming, majoring in parks' administration. Their other 2 daughters and 8 grandchildren are flourishing, and Martha still enjoys being a library volunteer in San Bernardino County. Elizabeth Gockley McLellan was the 1985 winner for selling the most SBC bulbs that year. Nickie's prize was a trip to Holland, which she took in May of '86. Besides seeing fields and fields of bulbs in bloom, she also visited Copenhagen, Stockholm and London. Even after 6 trips to London, she still wants to return to see the rest of it. She and Bob now have 8 grandchildren and enjoy them when they visit in Garden City, NY.

Clara Neel wrote of Alice Gass Dornberger's death in July '86 from a heart condition, just after Alice had redecorated the lovely big old home she and husband, Dr. Ray, had bought in Durham, NC. C.P. is always on the go, traveling to Cozumel last January. She attended her 50th high school reunion and then went with the Atlanta Chapter of the International Friendship Force to W. Germany where she used her German learned in Frau Huber's class. C.P. reports that her health remains quite stable and so far her tumor has not spread. Laura Dickie Neil and husband, Bill, have lived in Wyckoff, NJ for 20 years now, Bill having retired 15 years ago. They built a summer house on Block Island, RI, several years ago. A son and daughter live and work in NYC, while Nan still loves her hospital volunteer work near home. Louise Patrick Newton and husband, Francis, are still in Durham, NC, where he is a Professor of Latin at Duke University. Louise is still looking after grandchildren as well as studying Arabic. During Francis' sabbatical year in 1986, they traveled throughout Europe for 15 months, staying mostly in Italy. They visited over 80 libraries, with Louise driving most of the 30,000 miles while Francis snoozed. Her favorite spot is Mycenae, Greece.

Dorothy Campbell O'Connor and William are still in Mamaroneck, NY. Her husband is a partner in a security analyst firm, Fourteen Research Corp in NYC. Their son farms in Vermont, while one daughter is in publishing and a second one is rearing 2 grandchildren. Ruth Mealand Schwartz and husband, Laurence, had a truly super 1986, with much traveling and hosting friends and relatives at their home in Cleveland Heights, OH. One highlight trip was to England, where they were guests of British friends at their Henley Royal Regatta Pavilion. Ruth attended her 50th Shaker Heights High School Reunion and before Christmas, visited daughter and family near Newport, RI, where son-in-law Rich, Lt. Cdr. USN, was selected to attend the Navy staff college for a year. Son, John, announced his engagement with a June wedding in 1987. Ruth's 95-year-old father passed away just before Christmas. Katherine Hodge Soaper has had marvelous trips to Australia and more recently to The Far East countries. C.P. Neel, while visiting, gave her news of our 45th Reunion. Katherine has 3 sons, now all married, and 2 grandsons. Ann Adamson Taylor lives in Baltimore, MD, in the same house she has been in for 34 years. This 1830 house has loads of charm but little comfort. Ann is in her second term on the Baltimore City Republican Central Committee. Daughter, Sally, a free-lance writer, returns to her mother's from travels all over the world at least twice a year. Ann also frequents her Richmond, VA, apartment to see many friends and family.

Helen W. Taylor, M.D. retired from her medical practice in May 1986 after developing an obscure disease, polymyositis. She is much better now though there is still some muscle weakness. Helen says it is wonderful to not have to arise at 6 a.m. anymore, and when she feels up to it, she does some volunteer work in Norfolk, VA. Mary Lee Settle Tazewell is now living in Charlottesville, VA, after having written her 10th novel Celebration and other works. Anne Conant Weaver has just finished a stint as D.A.R. Regent and so can do more sailing, skiing, swimming and other sports. She saw EXPO '86 with Aleise McMinn Young's second son and family. Anne had to get rid of her horses because of creeping urban blight and resulting fences on her Grand Lake, CO, property. It pleases her to still have some wildlife around. Barbara Smith Whitlock read about Mary Lee Settle's new book in the N.Y. Times and in Newsweek, which called Mary Lee "A Master Storyteller". Barbara and husband, Jim, have lived in Hillside, NJ, for 46 years and have had their summer home on the ocean at Mautoloking, NJ, for 20 years. She celebrated her 50th reunion at Vail-Deane School in April '86 at the same time daughter, Nancy from Maine, attended her 20th. Jim was given an award for his service to the school at that time and Barbara was chosen the Alumna of the Year in 1982. She has served 30 years on the Board of the Visiting Nurse & Health Service and still finds time to see several SBC classmates especially in NYC.

Emory Gill Williams's daughter was married last December in Richmond, VA. Emory's husband, Carrington, a surgeon, retired in July, 1985. They both do volunteer work now, mostly with their local Episcopal church, as well as spend their summers at their cottage in ME. All 6 children are now married, giving them 11 grandchildren. SBC is high on her list of priority interests as well as golf, tennis, sailing and family and friends. Louise Pugh Worthing divides her time between a home in Cincinnati, OH and a summer place in Union, ME. This past summer Lisa was a guest choir member of the Bishop's Choir of the Cathedral Basilica of Covington, KY, which toured around Italy. She had a whale of a time. Her daughter, Barnard '75 and Fordham Law '78, was married last June in New York, where she is a lawyer. Cynthia Noland Young writes from Roxbury, CT, that son, Bill, having received his MBA in May '86 from Northeastern U., Boston, is working in the academic services dept. there. A daughter in Houston and another daughter in Middlebury, VT each had a baby girl — to add to their 3 grandsons. A third daughter, Mary, is a V.P. with Chrysler Capital Corp., Greenwich, CT, while her twin sister is flying 737's for Piedmont Airlines out of Charlotte, NC, plus DC9's for the Navy Reserves. She says the passengers are getting used to her voice coming out of the cockpit. Cynthia reports that C.P. Neel looked great while visiting her in Feb., '86.

As these class notes came from one-third of our active classmates, perhaps two-thirds will respond next year, so that by our 50th Reunion in 1990, we might achieve a complete class response

The first two replies to my pleas for news were from Lucille Christmas Brewster and Betty Haverly Smith. Lucille and Bill continue to travel together and separately. They journeyed to Papua, New Guinea and Australia in the spring of '85; in Nov. Lucille had just returned from a month in 6 West African countries, in her terms: "a very different experience!" They were planning to spend Christmas in the Bahamas with another couple and all the children of both families.

In August Betty and Alex Smith celebrated their 40th anniversary by taking their sons and daughters and their spouses to Callaway Gardens for the weekend. At Christmas the entire Smith family, 24 strong, spent the holidays together in Woodstock, VT. Betty said it was a fantastic, wonderful vacation!

A few nights ago Hughes and I went to see Crimes of the Heart, starring Sissy Spacek, Diane Keaton and Jessica Lang. One of the smaller parts was acted by Tom Mason. Emily Ann Wilkins Mason's husband. He took the part of Uncle Watson. As you may recall, Tom has been in several theatrical productions since retiring several years ago. He also did You Can't Take It With You at a dinner theater in Panama City, FL. Em went through Chattanooga not too long ago and called Jane Williams Bradley, who seems to be so very happy since her remarriage two years ago.

January 1986 began with sadness for two of our classmates, Millie Brenizer Lucas and Mimi Etheridge Wood. Millie's husband, Ed, died early in the month. Ed had never completely recovered from a heart attack the previous Sept. Mimi's husband, George, also died in Jan. I know all of you join me in sending love and our deepest sympathy to both of them. Mimi, at this time, is taking a three-month trip to India with her daughter. When she returns, she will move from Louisville to Nokomis, FL.

Marjorie Willets Maiden retires in Feb. and is looking forward to traveling with her sister and having more time to do volunteer work at her Episcopal church.

Kay Mensing Teitgen reported a wonderful year for her family. She and Ralph welcomed their first grandchild, a boy weighing over 10 pounds. In Feb. '86 they took a trip to Kenya where they photographed many magnificent animals and birds. Kay even received an appreciative kiss from one semi-wild giraffe she had fed. She was also very excited over her state league tennis team winning their division in August.

The only news received from Barbara Duncombe Stolp came in the form of an invitation to the wedding reception of her daughter, Lindsey Lang, last June in Bethesda, MD. Very thoughtfully included was the information on a block of rooms reserved for wedding guests at the Hyatt Regency at a special rate, a map from the Regency to the reception and the possibility of an outing to the Orioles/Red Sox game on Sunday following the big event.

Jane Rice McPherson told me of the mini-reunion which Sloan Hawkins Ward hosted in New Orleans in April of '86. It was attended by Jane, Ann Moore Remington, Libby Vaughan Bishop, Jean Blanton Murphy and Evie Pretlow Ormiston. Sloan, who is quite knowledgeable about New Orleans and environs, took her guests on an extensive tour of the area, and they all had a wonderful time. In September Ann visited Jane in Atlanta, and Jane had several of us for lunch. Jane's daughter, Heather, is getting married in Feb. to the principal oboist of the Indianapolis Symphony. Heather is an attorney and serves as chairman for the Indiana Advocates for the Arts; Jane's son, Duane, is working on his doctorate in neuro-science; and son Bruce has his own publishing company in New Platz, NY. Jane had recently heard from Evie Ormiston that Evie's daughters had given a trip to the Caribbean to her and Pat for their anniversary.

Ann Remington is taking a group on the Royal Viking Sky this summer to Alaska. She has concluded her term as president of Central Atlantic Chapter of ASTA, a travel agents' board, and "can now do what I want when I want."

Libby Bishop spent 10 days in Santa Fe in August. She is also serving as a director of the Garden Club of America and, as such, travels to NYC about once a month.

From NYC comes news of Murrell Rickards Chadsey. Ricky and Ted spent 3 weeks in April touring northern Italy; they had such a marvelous time that they hope to return this spring. They spend their summers in their home in VT, where Ricky enjoys gardening in a big way, planting many summer bulbs and evergreens.

Norma Bradley Arnold and Joe took the SB Danube trip last June and had an interestnig and educational experience. Their youngest son, Doug and his wife have a son born in Jan '86 and are expecting twins in Feb '87! (Joy, best wishes, understanding and sympathy from me!)

Marty Falk Vallery told of a busy summer following their three year old

trotter to Toronto and New York to see him race and win. In Aug. they journeyed to Alaska, and then returned by way of Vancouver and the Canadian Rockies. Marty and Val stay in their home in Deerfield Beach, FL, all winter and early spring and usually about 8 to 10 weeks in the fall.

Tee Tift Porter called the other day to announce that her son, Jimmy, and his wife had just had the first Porter grandson. James T. Porter III joins the other 5 to make 6 grandchildren for Tee and Jimmy.

Another traveler is Pat Whitaker Waters, who had trips to New England, the beach and 3 weeks in Devon, England, where she and John rented a cottage. Her oldest son has a new book on the market called Crackpot. One daughter lives in Charlottesville, one in Baltimore and her son, Stephen, is now president of John's company.

Dot Denny Sutton keeps very busy serving as a volunteer at a hospital information desk, in the office of a small home for the elderly and at church. At Christmas she visited her son, Ed, in Berkeley, CA, and then was off to Hawaii.

Martha Lee Hoffman McCoy and Harry have been enjoying retirement since Dec. 31, 1980. They have finally finished with educational expenses, for their son, Harry, is in his 2nd year of residency at the U. of FL Hospital in Gainesville. She is very proud of her 3 beautiful grandchildren. In 1985 Mary Churchill Walker Van De Water and Ken eased into retirement by taking 3 trips abroad. In '86 they chose to "See America first."

Another proud grandmother of 4, 3 girls and a boy, is Connie Sue Budlong Myrick. In her own inimitable words: "I stagger from crisis to crisis, volunteer a bit, work a bit at a local children's store and am dedicated to survival of the most graceful sort I can manage."

Last Sept. Alice Johnson Fessenden visited in Atlanta. It was good to see her looking so well and enjoying her retirement as principal of an elementary school in Ogden, UT. Before Christmas she wrote to say they were off to Tucson for a few days and then to Mexico for 2 months. This summer they are going to Australia and New Zealand.

Alice Hepburn Puleston sent greetings. She lives near her son and his family, serves on the vestry of St Paul's Parish, sings in the choir, swims 20 lengths five to six times and enjoys feeding the birds. She terms it a predictable existence, but she likes it.

Since Dot DeVore Platt's husband, Harry, retired in 1979, they spend a good bit of time in their home in the mountains of western NC. Her son and his wife, Carol (SB '76) have 3 daughters and her daughter, Robin (SB '82), is married to an astronaut and has one daughter.

Marian Shanley Jacobs expressed her feelings about this stage of our lives: "We feel blessed with good health, friends, time to enjoy, enjoy!"

Bill and Helen Gravatt Watt had no exciting foreign trips this year, but they did enjoy a trip to Yellowstone when Bill had a meeting nearby. They had a brief visit with Billy and Ellen Boyd Duval Miller in Dec. and also saw Pete and Alice Lancaster Buck when they were visiting in Lexington. The Bucks had a trip to Hawaii early in '86. Their youngest, Kat, is hoping to be accepted in vet school at VPI; their son, Blair, continues to teach at Episcopal High where he is also very active in other student affairs; and Dorsie and her husband are now in San Antonio where he is an oncologist at Wilford Hall Medical Ctr. Alice has 10 grandchildren!

Dykie Watts Fournier and Paul are hoping '87 will be uneventful for them. On Aug. 1st Dykie had surgery on her right hand and on the 11th Paul had open heart surgery. Both have survived beautifully and Paul was back on the tennis court in 3 months.

All is well in Montgomery according to Nancy Scott Shashy. After July '87 5 of her 6 children will be living in Montgomery. The sixth is in Atlanta where he is in real estate.

Both Snookie Woods Williamson and Pat Patton Odell have discovered Elderhostel trips. Snookie and Rush went to the U.K. for a month and have signed for 2 more trips to England. Pat praised the program saying that the professors are high-quality and the experiences well planned. The Williamsons are busy "working out" at the Y with the Hilltoppers 3 days a week and joining in the programs at the Chicago Art Institute and the Botanic Garden. Pat is now Director of Senior Services for Family Service of America and hopes she never has to retire!

Jinnie Noyes Pillsbury has been so busy since retirement that she doesn't know how she found time to work. In Nov. she went to Nicaragua for the 5th time, will be off to Haiti in Feb., an Elderhostel in Great Britain in March, and Australia and New Zealand in the fall of '87. Daughter Jeannette ('72) is now Director of Instruction at Manassas Park, VA. school system; Hannah ('74) is ass't vice president of Security Pacific Bank in L.A., and Jaquie is starting her M.Ed. at the U. of Wis./Milwaukee.

Hannah Mallory Perkins is semi-retired after 26 years of teaching at St. Margaret's School. She considers herself so fortunate to be associated with the school and living in one of the pre-Revolutionary residences. On visits to her daughter's home in Richmond she sees Peggy Gordon Seiler and Ellen Boyd Miller from time to time.

Paul and Carol Myers Hunter are moving to a high rise condo overlooking the James River and a marina where they will keep their sailboat. In cleaning out to move she found a 1940 Student Handbook!

Muriel Abrash Schapiro is still busy with bookclubs and her library work which includes helping out in the library at the Women's Resource Center at the U. of Richmond. She is still being grandma and enjoying travel with husband, Irwin; last summer they went to CA, Jackson Hole, WY (Teton Village), and Yellowstone Park. Muriel is putting out the bulletin for Hadassah and finds it satisfying to write an editorial.

Elizabeth Williams Gookin loves having daughter Betsey and her family back from CA and living nearby. Rick has a good job and Betsy is teaching in the kindergarten at Highland School in Warrenton. With daughter Kim in Potomac, now all 5 grandchildren are within range.

Harriet Tavenner Owens lives at Smith Mountain Lake 8 months of the year and in Charlottesville for 4. Bob is semiretired and teaches only the spring semester at UVA. They enjoy their big family — one son and his 4 children, 3 of whom are married. There's one grandson, aged 2, living with Harriet and Bob indefinitely. The Owenses like to garden, entertain, and travel — they spent 2 months in Europe last year.

Greetings also arrived from Adeline Taylor Nunez, who, like me is enjoying a bit of "roots-searching," Margie Ridgely Keith, one of our most recent grandmothers, Louise Smith Barry, Cecile Waterman Essrig, who praises SBC for the lifelong value of a liberal arts education and Paulett Long Taggart who is so enthusiastic about teaching drama integrated into the classroom.

I will be spending a couple of weeks in France in March visiting my daughter, Anne. She has been there since Sept. gathering material for her doctoral dissertation in art history. This trip will be sandwiched in between Parents's Weekends at Rhodes College and Vanderbilt.

I love and appreciate all of the cards and letters you have sent Nancy Moses Eubanks and I get together and after reading all of your news, we tend to wallow in nostalgia.

Let me extend deepest sympathy to Maddin Lupton McCallie and Patty Traugott Rouse. Maddin lost her son, Freddie last October after a long battle with cancer. Patty's son, Tom, died unexpectedly in April 1986 from an asthma attack. Patty wrote "it's coincidental that Maddin and I, who had roomed together during our sophomore year at SBC, should both lose our youngest sons in 1986."

At this point in our lives we all seem to remain very busy. We travel — we are involved in our communities — some of our husbands have retired — we stage weddings and have grandchildren.

Molly Coulter Bowditch has all of the ingredients for the golden years: a retired husband, no children in the nest, 5 months spent off the coast of ME and future travel plans. She also still keeps her small interior design business running.

Dickie Life Hartman is another one who is living the good life. She and her retired husband are living off the coast of Washington in Friday Harbor, San Juan Islands. They raise wild ducks, geese and peacocks and have a plant business. She writes, "It's beautiful — peaceful."

Ann Paxson Gail and her husband have just bought a 17-foot sail boat — "it's fun times ahead." They live in Falmouth and "totally enjoy our view of Martha's Vineyard as well as seeing all of the Canada geese, swans, ducks and blue heron in the salt pond across the road."

Vickie Brock Badrow and Ned are still "in our old Michigan farmhouse" but are contemplating a move to the South since Ned is retired. Vickie is still teaching and thinking of retiring, herself. Ned was due to have knee replacement surgery around Christmas.

Closey Faulkner Dickey's husband retired from the business world but not from the fun. Lots of travel and keeping up with 6 children and a first grandson is just the beginning. Closey does volunteer work with the United Way, the hospital board as a board member and she sings in a chamber group. She also has tennis and skiing on her list of activities and her vegetable garden. She and Whit are "making no major changes in our happy way of life — we are basically contented homebodies."

Sylvia Saunders Davis writes "children launched and civil — grandchildren beautiful and brilliant and the empty nest a glorious reality." Amen Teeta!

Jane Miller Wright and Howard are still on the move on Compadre. "We are still studying Western Civilization 1B by boat," she writes. Last summer it was Mallorca, the British Isles, the west coast of Spain and Portugal to Brittany, Normandy and Ireland which they love

Jane Luke is another traveler. This year she has been to New Zealand, Australia and London. She also managed to see Halley's Comet; another comet viewer was Marguerite Rucker Ellett and her husband

Ann Rowland Tuck and Connie Hancock Getman celebrated first grandchildren this year. Connie also had two weddings and was off to Russia in '87 to recover

Meon Bower Harrison and Arch are moving. They have bought a house in Charlottesville, VA. "I am so excited," Meon writes, "am planning all sorts of new careers."

Martha Davis Barnes is also moving from Macon to Atlanta. Martha's daughter, Sara and husband are moving to VT and Closey Faulkner Dickey and Whit were "wonderful to them — instant rapport." I always knew we girls of '48 were the best!

Ann Orr Savage is a busy volunteer for church, garden club, and hospital and the Pierpont Morgan Library. Ann and Bob had a wonderful trip to France, visiting Paris and floating on the canals in the Loire Valley region for 2 weeks. Sally Davis Spender and Kyle were also in France, on a barge in Paris and studying French at Berlitz. They also spent 3 weeks in Oxford taking a course, then on to Kenya and Tanzania for 3 weeks — "all of it quite wonderful."

Josephine Neal Peregrine and Suzanne Hardy Beaufort had a wonderful visit together last summer in Michigan. Josephine continues to teach children with learning problems. Suzanne also enjoyed a trip to China this year via Los Angeles and Tokyo and despite 2 rounds of foot surgery in 8 months she made it to the top of the Great Wall.

Jane Johnson Kent and Beezie Devore Towers ran into each other on the QE II returning from Europe. They were seated next to each other the first night and had to take a "second look" before they realized. Jane still works part time for a doctor and Beezie and her husband are grandparents to 9, 3 girls and 6 boys. I believe that is the class record. Beezie also has a leadership role in Bible Study Fellowship. Liz Barbour McCrea runs Beezie and Charlie a close second, with 7 grandchildren. Liz has retired from her government job and is now consulting plus traveling to Scotland and England and seeing the Farnborough Air Show outside London.

Murray Armstrong James, Blair Graves Smith, Qui-z Lloyd and Jody Vestal Lyon were cell mates in the "Dungeon of 1946." They had a reunion this year and Blair wrote "we just started talking where we had left off in 1946." Blair's husband still teaches, the children are "gainfully employed" and she's into computers. Murray also had a trip to Kenya last year. Liz Graves Perkinson has seen a lot of SBC friends: McCall Henderson Revercomb, Judy Blakey Butler, Connie Conover and Martha Schmidheiser DuBarry. Liz also managed 7 days in Japan and then joined the SBC group for the trip through China and Tibet. "It was absolutely fabulous" she writes. Connie is a graduate student in the Department of Dramatic Art at Chapel Hill, N.C. She will do some teaching next semester. McCall is still living at Peacock House, their 18th - 19th century home. McCall's husband, a judge and lecturer at UVA Law School was appointed to the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C. Betty Leffel Wingate celebrated her 60th with 4 wonderful days at Epcot.

Harriette Bland Coke is a woman of many talents. She is a psychotherapist by profession but in her off moments she's been mountain climbing in ME and scuba diving in the French West Indies.

Peggy Sheffield Martin and Tom are enjoying having all the children and their families in Atlanta. Their daughter Lisa received a kidney transplant in July, donated by Tom. Both are doing fine. And speaking of Atlanta, Ruth Faulkner Howe spent a week there with her sister enjoying the Metropolitan Opera. Evie Sharp Vidal is still with the French crystal and glass company. She writes she remains active in county Republican politics and interested in historical restoration and preservation. Vi Whitehead Morse is also involved in historical preservation. She has been working to keep a 200-year-old inn from being torn down and for a larger building for the Amherst Historical Museum. Another history buff is Jeanne Morrell Garlington. She stays very busy with the Historic Savannah Foundation. She is also on the vestry at her church and is leading groups in the E.F.M. Program, a 4-year program which studies the Old and New Testaments and church history. Henry is retired and both daughters are married. Jeanne sees Mary Barrett Robertson and Jane Johnson Kent and Warner when they are heading to and from FL.

Judy Perkins Llewellyn is involved with the church, garden club, investment club and golf plus some house construction. They added a new room and a deck last summer. Also into additions is Sally Smith Williams who added a new room and a swimming pool. It must be a wonderful pool. Marguerite Rucker Ellett wrote she and Taz have been enjoying it, too.

Martha Sue Skinner Logan and Robert traveled to: Opryland in Nashville, North Carolina and Hot Springs, AR. Helen Pender Withers and Burks are enjoying retirement which has included a trip to the west coast and are expecting a third grandchild.

Eleanor Potts Snodgrass is busy this year being chairwoman of the Garden Week of Virginia Beach, and Betty Kernan Quigley is recording secretary for the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of VA and the vice chairwoman of the Republican party of Fauquier County. Other busy volunteers are Caroline Rankin Mapother who is involved on community boards, and Carolyn Haskell Simpson, who writes she's in "too many activities to mention." Tommy Porter Mullen, is president of a board of a retirement home. She's learning lots about the Division of Aging and the law. Tommy's daughter Betsey is at home, working as assistant manager in a law office; son Jim is in Long Beach, CA with wife, Cindy and daughter, Kimberley.

As for me, I'll quote George Burns who said, "It's been a good year. I started it and I finished it." And that goes for this too.

Ed's note: The alumnae office received the sad news that Janet Smith Means lost her life in a car accident in Dec. '86. Janet's daughter, Patricia Means Johnston, sent us a nice note with a contribution to the College which Janet had completed before her death.

Many of our classmates in the Washington area now have careers Peggy Nelson Harding is a CPA working with a firm in Georgetown. Her husband has retired from the Navy and is teaching engineering at Northern VA Community College. Linda Brackett Mendelson is a social worker at George Washington University Hospital. Polly Plumb Debutts, in addition to having 3 married children and twin grandchildren and being an elected member of the McLean Governing Board, is pursuing a career with the DC public school system, as a private sector relations coordinator. Polly's son-in-law, Russell Marcus, writes scripts for TV's Golden Girls Lynn Mitchell Riddick is still working for a law firm in Vienna and Jane Ramsay Olmsted has recently joined the work force.

Of course, we have working classmates in other areas too. Pat Beach Thompson is back on the stage and appearing as Emily Dickinson in The Belle of Amherst. Grace Jones Fishel has travel business and conducts tours on the eastern seaboard —

Savannah, New Orleans, Winterthur, etc. Ruth Edgerton Boyer has a consignment shop called "Second Fling" in Goldsboro. Janis Thomas Zeanah is director of publications for the Cancer Center of the Univ. of Alabama

Susan Otis Thompson is on sabbatical, writing another book on book design. This last bit of news was reported by Benita Phinizz Johnson who had lunch with Susan on one of her trips to NYC. Although still teaching piano lessons, Benita probably wins the prize for the most traveled member of our class in '86. In May, she and Tom took a month off and went to Switzerland, Northern Italy and Yugoslavia (where, Benita says, everything closes from 12:00 noon to 6:00 pm). In August they went to Canada (EXPO included) and Alaska. September took her to NYC to be baby nurse for new granddaughter. Their third son was married in Ithaca, NY in October and from there the Johnsons flew to Naples, FL. November brought another trip to NYC and a trip to Honolulu. The Johnsons seem to have singlehandedly made Atlanta such a busy airport.

Jane Mattas Christian is still selling real estate. Son Phil is now with American Express in NYC, son Matt is job-hunting, daughter Gigi is an account executive with Paine Webber in Denver and husband Phil thinks about retirement. Mary Miller Carroll's son Stuart was married June 21 to a fellow Cornell grad, and daughter Lois was married Jan. 3 to a fellow IBM'er from Cincinnati. Hugh and Mary spent 2 glorious weeks in Europe on a house and garden tour. They're also building a house in FL in the New Port Richey area, north of Tampa. Three of Mary Grate Warren's 5 daughters are now married. Mary and Joe are delighted to have 2 grandsons by their eldest daughter, Joe, 3 and William Warren, 5 mos. Martha Yost Ridenour is threatening to adopt a grandchild if her daughter doesn't get busy! The daughter is still working 2 jobs — one with the Dept. of Human Resources, the other at the local college, teaching ballet at night; her husband works for Phillip Morris Co. Martha has spent the last year remodeling — her daughter's and her own house and one of the rental buildings.

In April '86 Anne Garst Strickland, Jackie Thornton Laramore, Catherine Yerkes Grant, and Jane Carter Ogburn and their husbands had a mini-reunion at Grandfather Mountain near Linville, NC

I always wondered why Byrd Stone had to have our news in January and we never saw it until summer. Now I know that she wasn't using an acquired slow-paced southern style but had a February 1st deadline. This will arrive in simmering summer but as I'm collecting your Christmas cards and messages, it's Super Bowl time and icy outside. The 30th Reunion last May is a warm memory of a group that grows more attractive with the years, not from face lifts (I don't think). It's maturity, diversity, continuing enthusiasm for new challenges. That's us?! The 30 who came back had a ball and the rest of you were missed. As always, the most personal and relaxed time was on arrival; the picnic at Byrd's house, where we felt welcomed back to the fold immediately. Sitting around browsing through the scrapbook, we connected up with many through the questionnaires and pictures of past and present.

Thanks ladies of '56 for having mercy on me in following Byrd. There is no way to match her humor, so I'll just report your news. Your response was so generous that I'll have to condense where possible and concentrate on a few we haven't heard from recently.

Laura Hailey Bowen wrote "Finally a grandmother!" Laura Hailey Carmichael, to be called "Hailey" was born Sept. 26 to Laurie Bowen Carmichael SBC '79. Welcome to the ranks! Carolyn Dickenson Tynes has a 3rd grandchild — 2 girls and a boy now. What fun!

Debby Brown Stalker moved to Montecito, CA following a year's sabbatical in London and France. Her husband, Peter, is an antiquarian book collector and she is chief construction boss at "Casa Chaos" — a year's remodeling job. They love CA but anticipate returning to a London pad for May and June. From TX, Lot-tie Lipscomb Gulttry writes of her musical comedy Boom! which was produced in Longview October 24th. It is based on history of the East Texas oil boom, 1930-31. Congratulations! She is teaching English at U.TX and finds the academic climate stimulating Kay Newman Yonge congratulates me for taking on this job because of deciphering bad handwriting but since I can't read my own, I'm not able to complain. Kay loves Austin, TX, playing tennis, learning golf, and going to an inter-denominational bible study. She hopes to be a grandmother before she's too old to run after a babe. Her husband, Michael Adrian, flies a traffic helicopter and dabbles in the movie business. Kay votes for our time of life as "a truly great one!"

Ann Train Ross was sorry to miss Reunion but couldn't leave Sultanate of Oman in May. The Sultan Qaboos University was handed over in June and classes started in September. They had a wonderful holiday in Thailand, Burma, and Hong Kong, and then 10 days in Britain with their children. Ann particularly enjoyed the Botanic Gardens near Mandalay in Burma which she had heard about at SBC from Dr. White, a botany professor

Margie Manget Lyman is enjoying husband, Guy, of 30 years alone without all 5 children. Kevin, 16, is the only one at home. Chris is a junior at UVA; Guy III is married and living in Dallas; daughter, Eugenie, is married and living in New Orleans and Kimberly is a ski instructor in Taos, NM and plans on graduate school in fall. Also looking forward to empty nest is Meredith Smythe Grider. Her oldest, Gaines, likes working in Washington, DC but is applying to law school in the fall. Lisa is engaged to be married May '87 and youngest, Meredith, who is at Tulane, spent last semester in London, where Meredith was planning to visit her

Harriet Cooper looked smashing at Reunion and says New York is super and she is working hard on her dissertation now. She has seen Carter Nelson Sullivan and reports she's looking as great as ever. Sherry Patton Henry is still a dynamo with her radio interview show on WOR in NY. Her son, Emil, was married last summer. She sees Virginia Nelson Self occasionally. After husband, Henry's death, I was happy to hear that Ginny has rebuilt her life with marriage to James Manire last summer.

Jane Slack Sigloh's daughter, Sally, graduated from SBC '86. Jane wore her vestments, as a seminarian at Yale Divinity School, to baccalaureate. She gave a prayer and Byrd Stone was faculty marshall. Byrd's comment on the picture of them together was "who would have believed this of us 30 years ago?"

Pryde Sullivan-Brown says her Princeton photography business has tripled in the last 4 years. Her oldest, Laura, was married in August and teaches college in Boston; Sarah is pursuing a doctorate at Columbia and Jenny is doing the same in Paris; Martha is at Bowdoin and Joan, 13, is at home. There are 5 stepchildren who are busily involved too. Marty Field Fite came to Charlottesville in June to hear Dr. John Stott, an Anglican preacher who was teaching a seminar. David and I had told her about it at Reunion and were delighted when she signed up too. Eve Altsheier Jay's daughter, Carter, who has her masters in social work, is in Louisville, as is son, Edward. I see Mary Pender Warren, who lives at Virginia Beach. She has 3 fine children and has added a pool to their wooded house

Joan Clarke, 29, works in Nashville in film; Jimmy Jr. and wife, Sharon, are in Dallas with two sons; Joe, 27, is in Memphis with Houston's restaurants. Her Christmas card with grandsons was beautiful. Prince Trimmer Knox writes that she and husband, Joe, are enjoying his academic year as a Klingenstein Fellow and that dorm living at their age is an eye-opener. Julie Jackson Nichols and husband, David, are enjoying life in WV with labrador Mammy. His 4 children visit often and the Nichols traveled to Ireland, England and Scotland. They are involved in community activities, like to garden, and entertain. Mitzie Djerf Deriddder missed Reunion when she attended a Brahmin wedding of close friend's daughter in India. She had a wonderful month there. her son, Jake, 29, is working in electronics; Karl, 23 is learning about the world of antiques. Helen Turner Murphy sent a picture and daughter, Ann, is a beauty. She attends St. Pauls School, is goalie in field hockey, cox on the crew team, and plays squash in the winter. Among other community activities, Helen and Tayloe are involved in efforts to Save The Chesapeake Bay.

Leila Thompson Taratus is glad that they are finally out of education business, with all children gainfully employed. Kenneth is with Drexel-Burnham in NY; Helen is with Dorey Publishing in Atlanta, and Leila is with First Union Bank in Charlotte. Peggy Pattillo Beckham's project for the year is to become computer compatible. She teaches a weekly bible study in Episcopal church, gardens, and tries to keep up with 4 children who have left the nest. Three are married, and she has 3 grandsons, which she finds a wonderful experience. Macie Clay Nichols was a gracious Louisville hostess to Ann Stevens Allen when Ann's sculpture of Gen. George Clark was dedicated at Locust Grove, the general's last home. Ann sent a picture of the handsome sculpture, flanked by Ann, Macie, Meredith Smythe Grider, and Barbara Collis Rodes. Cissee Pfeiffer Ward and Ann Hodgkin Williams also attended the unveiling and dinner; Eve Altsheler Jay had to miss it because she was out of town. It was a very special occasion for the entire class.

Pictured on Tom and Joan Roberts Slatery's Christmas card was a handsome family: Megan, 25, works on drug rehabilitation program; Paul, 22, doing last year mechanical engineering; Marc, 26, teaches scuba and underwater environment and works part-time for the 2 year old construction company that keeps Joan and Tom very busy. Peggy Anne Rogers, a retired Truant Officer for Philadelphia School Board, has spent 32 summers in England. Her news is mind-boggling, so I can't use 1/5 of it. She's doing a special project on adolescent deaf and hard-of-hearing children who are "mainstreamed." She plans to write a book on this and would welcome any personal experiences anyone can send.

Byrd received 2 long letters from Jolly Urner and Lee Chang Crozier last year after our column was finished. Jolly is still in Pasadena and interests include running with her husky, sailing in regattas, playing the cello, serving her Episcopal church, doing volunteer work in a Hospice, and traveling all over Europe. She works as Director of Lower School at Polytechnic. Lee Chang Crozier missed Reunion as daughter, Diana, was married in May. Diana has moved to Puerto Rico; son, Daniel, is finishing CSU's 5-year program in electronics; Linda graduated UC at Davis in Physical Education and will get MA in Exercise Physiology. Linda was instrumental in saving the lives of two hikers who had been struck by lightning on an 8,800 ft. peak in Yosemite in 1985. Two other boys died before she arrived. Linda was commended by state legislators for her use of emergency medical training and valor. Lee and Al are busy with community and church and singing in an opera chorus. Lee sings in church choir and a quartet too!

Karen Steinhardt Kirkbride missed Reunion due to a business trip to Amsterdam. We heard about Frances Gilbert Browne's three sons in the last issue. Judging by the scrapbook picture, they are handsome boys. She and Herb had a fascinating trip to France and Russia in the fall. Betsy Meade Hastings is full of news. Her husband, Don, is in the Philippines, studying the feasibility of establishing a 2,000 acre farm there to export vegetables to Tokyo and Hong Kong. His Southern Gardening book is scheduled to come out in Fall '87. Betsy is secretary at Lovett Preschool in Atlanta and son, Don III, is interviewing for college. Chris, a high school sophomore, is on varsity wrestling team. I'll have to agree with Byrd on Parksie Carroll Mulholland's handwriting. It's worse than mine. I only got patches of it. Daughter, Randie, SBC '80, and husband, Ben, moved back to DC area where she is working in private education consulting. Son, David, works for Multigraphics in sales in Baltimore; Jeffrey is first year med student at UVA. Parksie and Jack have taken up golf and are a menace on the course. They spent a happy week at Sanderlin Inn, Duck, NC hiking and bird watching. They also had trips to CA this year and declared this a good year for the Mulholland clan.

Gwendolyn Hoffman Lamb graduated from Chapel Hill law school in May '86 and was taking the Bar exams in Feb. She plans to join a group of solo practitioners and concentrate on property law and estate planning. With their eldest in the last year of UVA law school, their middle son in Raleigh and the youngest a freshman at UNC, the household is fairly quiet except at weekends when the kids descend with friends. Nancy Howe Entenmann's Christmas, which she spent in Puerto Rico with family and friends, was warm (86 F) and really nice. Nancy's job on the Alumnae Association Board will be finishing soon but she's looking forward to seeing many of us at Council meetings. Alice Guggenheimer Mackay has an exciting part-time job as a research assistant with a heart surgeon, doing studies on open-heart surgery patients.

We enjoyed meeting Helen Wolfe Evans charming brother, Tom Wolfe, when he spoke at the Norfolk Forum. Since both older Clark girls are expecting babies, we will have 5 grandchildren under 3½ years by July. That's 12 of us for the holidays at our house! David and I are considering taking a room at the Country Club for a few good nights sleep. We had a grand trip to France in September. We enjoyed Paris and drove over 1000 miles through Loire Valley, Normandy and champagne country, staying at chateaux en route. It was a fun and romantic trip, broadening both our experience and waistlines. Daughter, Ashby, SBC '85, lives at Virginia Beach with three roommates and her yellow labrador. There is still much news, but I've overused my space, so forgive if your news is cut. Love and blessings to all of you.

Rhett Ball Thagard (Mrs. T.W. Jr.),

Your wonderful notes, letters, pictures and cards brightened my Christmas! Some of you I hadn't heard from in years or seen since we were at SBC, and hearing from you brought back many happy memories. Some of you have wondered if you are only to write of unusual trips, accomplishments and happy events and that if you mentioned sad parts of your life that news is not included. By the time we are in middle age we've all gone through hard times with family illness, separations and divorce for some of us: I want you to know that you can write about the main thing happening in your life, what is part of your regular activity — the news doesn't have to be fantastic! We are all too busy to keep up with friends by correspondence, and these Class Notes are a good way to keep in touch. The Class of '60 is a wonderful group of people who really do care.

Dottie Barnwell Kerrison is keeping young and busy with a new horse and puppy! She has a very active life in Charleston, SC. Barbara Beam Denison has a thriving picture-framing business in Bethesda, MD; she and George had a marvelous October trip to Kenya! Her daughters are at an exciting stage in their lives with Dolly studying in Luxembourg for the January term, Heather interning at OMB office at the White House and graduating from Denison in June '87, and Tracy working for the House of Representatives Minority Leader, Rep Bob Michel.

Lura Coleman Wampler in Wayne, PA is chairman of both the Valley Forge National Historical Park Interpretive Board, which owns and manages the Visitors Center bookstore, and the Philadelphia Committee of the Garden Club of America. She makes frequent trips to Richmond to see her oldest daughter, a sophomore at the U. of Richmond. She enjoyed seeing Dinny Muldaur Dozier in a recent TV special movie.

Nancy Corson Gibbes writes from Columbia, SC that her daughter Ellen (24), a graduate of Smith College, is a financial analyst with Morgan Stanley in NYC. Her daughter Laney (22) graduates from Davidson in May '87 and plans to go adventuring in Africa for two years, with Kenya her first choice.

Judy Cowen Jones won the VA State "Old Ladies" (45 and over) Doubles Championship this year and wears a lot of hats in the Mid-Atlantic Tennis Assn. Judy loves her tennis business-promoting and consulting for tennis-oriented programs. She volunteers for the Hospital Auxiliary and SPCA in Waynesboro, VA. She and Mac traveled to Hawaii and Hong Kong in February; in June the whole family will visit daughter Allison (22), UVA '86, who is working in Madrid for an Arab import-export firm.

Daughter Deb (24), SBC '84, works in Richmond in Secondary Marketing with Investors Operational Center. Son Greg (20) is at Hampden-Sydney ('89) majoring in Economics and Computer Science.

Ellie Crosby Erdman has a successful interior decorating business in Princeton, NJ. She wrote an excited postcard from Australia on a tour sponsored by the Metropolitan Opera Guild taking in Tahiti, Melbourne, Sydney, Perth for the America's Cup, Bangkok for the Opera Ball, Singapore, and Hong Kong, where she will see Katie Mendelson McDonald. Her sons are Ian at Skidmore (I wasn't sure since the writing was over some printing — hope that's right.), Jay at Roger Williams in Rhode Island, and David working at home in Princeton.

Lee Cullum is excited about her new job as editor of the editorial page of the Dallas Times Herald, which also includes the op-ed pages and a weekly by-line column that she writes! Son Cullum Clark is a sophomore at Yale.

Liz Few Penfield is so modest and funny that we'd never know about her extraordinary professional accomplishments except that the U. of New Orleans News Service sent SBC a press release announcing that besides being chairman and professor of English, Liz has been appointed associate dean of the U. of New Orleans College of Liberal Arts. Ed's note: Don't miss her article in this issue of the magazine, and see the biographical note! Next time I'm being lazy I'll think of her working hard.

Maline Gilbert McCalla wrote her occupation on the Alumnae fund envelope as "Artist, dancer, do-er of good works — Gorilla fan." It arrived on a day I needed a laugh! Her sons are at Tulane, Hamilton and Avon Old Farms Prep. She enjoys visiting them and also her Goddaughter Maydelle Fason, daughter of Maydelle Foster Fason, at the School of American Ballet. Austin, TX is lucky to have Maline.

Carolyn Gough Harding teaches Adult English as a Second Language in Fairfax County, VA. Husband Dick works on India for the Dept. of Commerce. Sons: Nicholas will be starting Yale in the fall of '87 and Jamie is in high school at home.

Shirley Hayman Sudduth had a full year with son Peter's marriage, being a grandmother, her own mother's death. Daughter Linda lives in Minot, ND and Robert is a college student in San Diego. Shirley loves her rewarding job as coordinator for the Arts in the Schools program for the Madera City Arts Council in Madera, CA, especially since there is no formal art curriculum in the school system. She sends love to our '60 classmates.

Susan Hendricks Slayman completed her MBA from Syracuse University and is a budget analyst at the Pentagon, living in Alexandria, VA. She, Kelson and Beth, SBC '84, had a wonderful visit with Becky Towill McNair in Charlotte, NC.

Janet Holmes Rothard has had a fantastic year selling $3½ million in real estate. In her first month with Murphy/Realty Better Homes and Gardens sales office in Kinnelon, NJ she sold over $1 million! This was in a news release sent to the college; Janet is described as being one of the highest-producing real estate executives in New Jersey. Janet wrote that she is taking the brokers course in 1987, and with her youngest son finishing college in '87 she's hoping to be able to take some of the lovely SBC trips.

Mary Laird Silvia and Pete have returned from England to their home in Falls Church, VA. Enroute they visited in Portugal north of Lisbon where Pete's ancestors are from. Her mimeographed Christmas letter was full of fascinating comparisons of life here and in England.

Annie-Laurie Martin Carlton is enjoying life with her family in Chesterfield, MO and doing substitute teaching in both elementary and high schools.

Lucy Martin Gianino has been a guest artist-in-residence at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music doing a new play, Madonna-in-Exile. Husband Jack stage-managed On Your Toes in the West. With two teenage daughters, Gemina and Antonia, and a 9-year-old son, Gian-Murray, the family stays hopping! Lucy has many volunteer activities including being a board member of Parents-in-Action, a drug prevention program where she goes into NYC private schools and runs parent discussion nights.

Mollie McDonald Brasfield's advertising agency thrives in Charlotte, NC where she entertained over the holidays sons John and Evans. Evans is finishing his film work at his alma mater (the U. of Bridgeport, CT) and is working on commercial film jobs.

Marjie McGraw McDonald is president of the SBC Baltimore Club and was glad to see Barbara Murphy Hale and Julia Scott Todd Kappler at the SBC Day luncheon. Marjie teaches at Friends. She enjoyed rooming with Ginger Newman Blanchard at Alumnae Council.

Elizabeth Meade Howard is collaborating on a book for Barlana Books on the bisexual spouse, to be published in '87. She is also working on an exercise video which may star Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Son Jamie is at UVA, and daughter Muffy is graduating from high school at home in Charlottesville, VA. John has joined the Nature Conservancy.

Katie Mendelson McDonald sent a marvelous picture from Hong Kong of her and Marilyn Dreesman Chuang, SBC '61. She was looking forward to visits from Ellie Crosby Erdman and Judy Cowen Jones. Katie's daughter Courtney loves SBC. Youngest daughter Eavan is on the cross-country and ski teams at Le Rosey in Switzerland. Katie and Jack enjoy hunting trips to Spain. Her educational consulting business in Hong Kong is growing and it gives her great pleasure to assist so many teenagers in their school and college selections.

Jean Morris Stevenson has had an exciting year with husband Don. They spent a month enjoying San Francisco, Christmas in Texas, with skiing afterwards. Daughter Robin graduates from St. Mary's Hall in San Antonio this spring.

Barbara Murphy Hale visited son Lee, Sewanee '87, at St. Andrews in Scotland last year. Barbara and Philip, Lee, Maggie Fogarty '87, and Elizabeth Fesser Macleay '36, all had a bonny time at the St. Andrews Society Tartan Ball in Washington, DC. Barbara said that SBC should be very proud to send young women like Maggie Fogarty out into the world. Barbara's family gathered at Christmas for a rare reunion, including Lenetta Archard '85, John, who's in the U.S. Coast Guard, and Carlton, who's in the Army.

Ginger Newman Blanchard, '87 Reunion Gifts Chairman, had a wonderful trip to New Mexico visiting son Rob, who works in Albuquerque for a radio station, and Sante Fe, where she had lunch with Peggy Cook Montgomery. Ginger's daughter Melinda graduated from Salem College in Fine Arts and from Parsons in NYC. Wil is a junior at Drew U. in Madison, NJ where Ginger has her part-time dress business and Bob is enjoying his easier commute to Morristown with the Knit Apparel Industry office. They sent a wonderful mimeographed Christmas letter with a picture of the family taken in New York Harbor on July 4, '86. Ginger is one of SBC's most enthusiastic fund raisers — in fact, I noticed that our '86 class gift, in a no-reunion year, had increased about five fold from our usual gift.

Robin Ould Sabin and daughter Brook have had a great time scuba diving on some fabulous trips, including 110 ft. off the continental shelf wall into "blue holes" with a school of 15-20 black tip sharks cruising nearby. Robin says, "it is cooler, cleaner and involves more men than horses!" Robin is active in the U.S. Pony club and foxhunts in Northern Virginia. Brooke is enjoying life at Williams College.

Anita Perrin Grymes is busy teaching 6th grade boys at Collegiate in Richmond, VA and keeping up with three teenage sons. She has enjoyed seeing Grace Suttle, who is an internist in Amelia County near Richmond.

Pattie Powell Pusey and Bill are having an exciting year with a great SBC trip to China/Tibet last fall. Bill has been made head of the Corporate Law section of Hunton & Williams in the Fairfax, VA and Washington, DC offices. They have bought a home in Arlington, VA where Rue Wallace Judd '61 and husband are neighbors and have been marvelous introducing them to friends. Patti and Bill plan to make Northern Virginia their permanent home and will move from Richmond when Glenn graduates from Collegiate in May. Brent (23) is in law school at the U. of Montana and Biff (20) is spending his junior spring and summer terms from Duke studying in Strasbourg and London

Ellen Pringle Read and Mayo are running the Palmetto Travel Agency in Charleston, SC. They rented a house in France last summer, went to Australia and Southeast Asia in October and Mexico in February! She discussed planning a trip for our class — great idea!!

Patricia Russell Binnie wrote a wonderful letter from Toronto: her right arm which was paralyzed in a bad accident has completely recovered. Pat celebrated by buying a new Steinway concert grand! She's having a great time renovating another lively early Victorian home. Pat has two articles being published this year — one on the metaphor of the "leap" in Virginia Woolf's To the Lighthouse and another on the metaphor of the "rope" in Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot. She also has a book forthcoming, Entertainments for Queen Elizabeth I. Son James is 12 and earned highest honors in his last year at Huron School

Beverly Schuemann Wirth's career as a gifted artist includes being an illustrator of children's books, book-covers and filmstrips, as well as doing religious art in collage form, graphics and stained glass which can be seen at the Washington Cathedral, Washington, DC and at the United Church Board of Homeland Ministries and the American Bible Society in New York. She has relocated to the Philadelphia area and lives in Paoli. Her firm is called Beverly Wirth Designs

Ann Smith Bretscher must be a marvelous teacher! One of her former high school math students lives in Rock Hill, SC — Janet Yoder-Lesslie — and told me at a Sierra Club meeting that Ann was one of her best teachers, that she made math fascinating and fun. Ann teaches now in Developmental Studies at the U. of GA in Athens and Bob is a psychologist at the U. of GA Health Center and has a private Marriage and Family practice. Daughter Christine graduated from Davidson in May '87. Susan's back from London, living in Atlanta, and Prentiss graduates from high school in June '87

Gwen Speel Kaplan is busy in Wilton, CT with her job in sales, working for Survey Sampling, Inc

Jane Tatman Walker continues her job in the Education Department of the Indianapolis Children's Museum, is president of the Board of the Coleman Adoption Agency and has just joined the Indianapolis Arthritis Board. She helps husband Frank, who is chairman of the Board of Directors of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce and other boards. Her daughter graduated from the Indiana U Business School; son Kevin graduated from Indiana U. and is now stationed in the Army in Germany. She loved seeing Winnie Ward Henchey at their Abbot Academy reunion in Andover, MA and Betty Forsythe Harris at an SBC event in Williamsburg

Bill and Becky Towill McNair's daughter, Harriet, received one of the highest honors at the '86 SBC graduation — congratulations! Harriet spent several months in Australia where she had a marvelous experience as a governess for a family in Sydney. Will is in Germany for his W&L spring term and has a job there for the summer. Virginia is home in high school where she, Becky and Bill have many Charlotte, NC activities

Sally Underhill Vialut — I've been very busy this winter working part-time doing proof-reading for a printing company on a short-term basis. I'm also on the boards of Hospice, the Sierra Club, a Circle chairman, active in an American Cancer Society support group, a member of two book clubs and a discussion group. My volunteer work is on a monthly basis so I still have time to enjoy Bert's and my friends!

Winnie Ward Henchey is living in Old Lyme, CT and finishing her last year of grad school as an art major at Wesleyan. She loves it and plans to get a job in June. Daughter Winnie is living in Boston and working for a magazine, and daughter Hope is a Communications major at the U. of CT

Dotty Westby has an adventurous life flying. Her card had fascinating descriptions of flights she's made, including one in a 1943 Piper Club, another to Crooked Island, Bahamas for scuba diving over Hallowe'en. Thanksgiving she visited one of the most beautiful places I've ever been, Lugano, where son Rob (18) is at T.A.S.T.S., the American School in Switzerland, as well as Innsbruck and Munich. Daughter Kristen (20) is a junior at Colo. U., and Dotty spent Christmas with family in Tulsa

Nina Wilkerson Bugg had fun with a mini-reunion prompted by Margot McKee's visit to Atlanta, when she and Bill got together with Linda Sims Grady and Robert and Ann Crowell Lemmon and Phyz.

Heidi Wood Huddleston in Bowling Green, KY has just completed a history degree in addition to her nursing degree. She works for a cardiologist as a cardiac clinician and assists the cardiovascular surgeon, a very demanding, challenging and rewarding career which she loves. Husband Joe has been sworn in as the new Circuit Judge after 25 years as senior partner in his law firm. Their oldest daughters are married and living in Nashville and Atlanta. Their youngest is graduating from high school, having also gone to the local university for the last 2 years, and will enter college with 21 hours of college credits plus A.P. credit. Heidi's and Joe's careers will keep them from feeling the empty nest syndrome too much!

V.M. Del Greco Galgano (Mrs. Michael J.), 1174 Nelson Drive, Harrisonburg, VA 22801

I am pleased to pass along news from 41 of you this year...many of whom we have not heard from in many years...thanks for writing. William, Guy and I have had our usual fine and busy year. We had a wonderful visit with V.M. Del Greco Galgano and family in Harrisonburg, VA last summer while on our college pilgrimage (oh, those application essays!). It was gratifying to witness our big children getting along (I should say carrying on!) as well as our little children, did not too long ago. V.M.'s big news was a 50th wedding anniversary celebration (her parents') in Italy last November. The entire Del Greco clan (seniors, daughters, husbands and all the grandchildren) took Rome by storm. Elsewhere in the southeast U.S., Mary Peeples De Vries and Cory have moved from Ft. Lauderdale to an apartment in Miami, temporarily, while their new, very old home is being remodeled, complete with studio to accommodate Mary's painting. Laurie deBuys Pannell, Clifton and four boys enjoyed the frosty slopes at Lake George over the holidays, leaving the warmer Athens, GA weather behind. Son Richard is in his second year at West Point. Gail Sims Furniss reports from Atlanta that she and Pete have become judges for the American Orchid Society. A recent orchid-judging trip took them to Thailand, Bali and Hong Kong. Their children, Michael and Melissa, are both at U. Va. Also in Atlanta, Nancy Hall Green is busy doing volunteer work for Spelman College, the High Museum of Art and the Atlanta Symphony. Both boys are away at boarding school, Holcombe at Taft and Frank at Eagle Brook. Happy news from new Atlanta resident, Gail Anderson: she and Robert Ramey were married in October. He is a Presbyterian minister teaching at Columbia Seminary

lege in the fall; Thad and James are both at Episcopal High School. Obstetrician William is busily delivering babies in hopes of paying tuitions. She reports that Dottie Norris Schipper darts into town (from Greenville, SC), taking precious school pictures, and that Lee Huston Carroll and John, and Harriet Houston Shaffer and Charlie all are fine and look terrific. Kate-Roy Massie Christian writes from Richmond that she is dedicating a great deal of time to studying French and German, while Dixon's hobby (in addition to his 35 ft. powerboat) is photographing young (ages 15 to 30!) women. In Charlottesville, Frances Johnson Lee has opened a children's ballroom dancing school. (I'm impressed!) and also raises horses. Son Chris plays polo at Cornell, where he is a junior; Alletta is at Wittenberg

Anne Stanley has purchased an old Victorian home in Alexandria, VA. She wrote on very official stationery announcing that she is the national political director of the Jack Kemp for President Exploratory Committee. In College Park, MD, Grace Mary Garry Oates gloats that she and Wally are through with college tuitions, his daughter having graduated from Stanford last June. Already an M.D., Nancy Arni Briggs has earned a master's degree from the University of MD. Daughter Elizabeth is 16, driving, and looking at colleges. A 7-year old quarter horse has joined 4 cats, 3 dogs, 12 rabbits, a guinea pig, and a squirrel on M.C. Elmore Harrell's farmette in Severna Park, MD. Husband Martin is marketing manager for an ocean research company. M.C. teaches college accounting and computer courses, and not surprisingly (!) is executive director of the county S.P.C.A. Margery Fleigh is substitute teaching and is involved with art and girls' clubs in Hagerstown, MD. She keeps up with all the good shows at D.C. museums. More wedding bells... these for Mary (Dootsie) Duer who was married to Joseph Colen last November. Her daughters are now 16 and 13, and Doots continues as director of marketing for a construction firm. Lynda Overly Levensgood is amazed that so many of us are into college applications...her youngest is 3 and just starting nursery school! She and Richard have purchased and renovated an older home in Lancaster, PA. Pemmie Mercur Cleveland and family journeyed from Bethlehem, PA, to their country home in Italy last summer. Pemmie is hopeful her daughters (ages 6 and 10) will choose SBC in a few years

Several of you wrote from the New York City, suburban NJ area. Jean Walker Campbell, whose daughters are also 10 and 6, is embarked upon a painting career. She had a solo show on New York's 57th Street last spring. Kit Snow Laudati is working as a programmer/analyst for a publishing company in Scotch Plains, NJ. In nearby Short Hills, Lynne

Smith Crow has finished work on Chartered Life Underwriter and Financial Consultant degrees from the American College, Bryn Mawr, PA. She was recently installed as a director of the Newark, NJ Association of Life Underwriters. Children David, Sandy and Margaret are 16, 15 and 13. Hedi Haug White and Tom are still in Manhattan, as are Tina Patterson Murray and Brean, and Frances Hanahan. Hedi comments that no sooner does she get one of these cards filled out for the Alumnae Magazine than another one arrives (Amen!). Tina and Brean have 3 children between them; Tina's daughter, Renee, is a senior at Ethel Walker in CN. They escape to their newly purchased property in Sun Valley as often as possible. Frances continues to enjoy selling coops, condos and townhouses in the city.

Anne Booth and friend, Robert Hauser, have purchased a "passive" solar house in New Bedford, MA (very passive in New England winters, Anne comments). She lives there on weekends, and on weekdays in Boston, where she is Historic Preservation Consultant to the MA Dept. of Public Works.

Moving to the midwest, Penny Utley Shyja teaches a pre-school class in Columbus, OH, in addition to chasing after her own 4-year-old daughter. She also has girls aged 15 and 18...one more college-bound offspring. In the Cleveland area, Penny Writer Theis and Frances Mallory Meyers are both active in garden clubs, do volunteer work for the Holden Arboretum, and are avid tennis players. Fran's oldest is at Denison Univ.; the other two are in 8th and 9th grades. Penny's husband, Stu, attended M.I.T.'s Sloan School for nine weeks last year. Son Jeff is at Bowling Green U., Tim is a college-hunting senior, and Ginger is a 7th-grader. Alice Fales Stewart and family have spent the past year in Chicago (home is Cambridge, MA), where husband Dick is visiting professor of law. Alice has seized the opportunity to enroll in an American History masters' program at the U. of Chicago. She somehow finds time to keep up with three children, in 10th, 8th and 1st grades. Alice, always upbeat, says, "surely the 40's are the prime of life!!"

Heading south central, Gerry Bailey has been heard from for the first time in all these years...which have been spent teaching in Greece, serving as a bi-lingual secretary, and obtaining a master's degree at the U. of GA. She currently is teaching French and Spanish at Bright-School in Lookout Mountain, TN. Johanna Nicol Shields teaches history at the U. of AL, Huntsville, and has written a book on maverick U.S. congressmen, which in 1983 won the National Ralph Gabriel Prize for Best Original Manuscript in American Civilization! Also in Huntsville is Caroline Tate Noojin.

Husband Frank and son Tate are still at home; Frank, III, is in his first year at Davidson and loves it. I generally get together with Caroline for dinner, conversation, and seeing who is the worst at remembering names!...when I am in Huntsville on business. On a recent trip we had a lively phone conversation with Josephine England Redd. Josephine, Uhlund and youngest son are in Florence, AL, where she is teaching classical piano. Their older boys are at U.Va. and Vanderbilt. She gave a detailed account of their marvelous around-the-world cruise last summer. Caroline Keller Theus reports that being director of an oil corporation has been challenging and frustrating; however, duties as director of the New Orleans branch of the Federal Reserve Bank have been more pleasant. A bank-related trip took her to Atlanta where she saw Nancy Hall Green, Harriet Houston Schaffer, Susan Bronson Croft and Jane Bradley Wheeler. She also saw Margaret Street Wilson at an Episcopal H.S. parents' weekend. Another college freshman next year will be Genie Johnson Sigler's daughter, Beth. The family traveled from Little Rock to NC and VA last summer looking at colleges, including SBC. Nancy Banfield McIlhaney says she is happily single and working as a manufacturer's rep selling designer T-shirts and other quality souvenir items in Houston.

Further west, in Greeley, CO, Mary Green Borg is teaching several classes at their local community college to people over 55. Husband Andy was appointed to four more years of judgeship after winning his retention vote. Their five boys are healthy, athletic, doing well in school and "mostly pleasant to live with." This fall the oldest will be in college, the youngest in 1st grade! Sharon Van Cleve Cipriano is still commuting weekly between Los Angeles and Scottsdale, AZ, as well as traveling regularly to remote Indian reservations. She and her husband have purchased a 15th-floor penthouse in downtown L.A., quite a change from living at the beach...Then there is Carolyn Peyton Walker, full of impressive news as usual. She left Stanford last year for San Jose State Univ., where she is associate professor of English and newly appointed director of the Steinbeck Research and Writing Center...and continues as president of her educational consulting company (Stanford is the main client). Four years of research have produced a manuscript which has been accepted for publication in the journal, Research in the Teaching of English. Carrie and mathematician friend Rick plan a relaxing trip to England, France and Spain this summer.

Last, but by no means least, three of you reported in from across the sea. In Oxford, England, Nancy Lynah Hood is curator of two small museums and has big plans for redevelopment and expansion at Abingdon and The Vale, and Downland Museum. Wantage. A sideline is writing books on the area, using old photographs. Tria Pell Dove and Guy are in London, where he is opening an office for his finance company. Their children are in college, Guy, IV at Georgetown and Hilary at Ohio Wesleyan...and...Marsh Metcalf Seymour and Jack are trying to do it all in this, their last year of a foreign service tour in Brussels. They have enjoyed trips to Germany, France, Holland, Wales and Italy. Marsh is teaching art in an international school and swimming 500 meters a day to compensate for living in the culinary capital of Europe. Oldest son, Peter, is studying Chinese and economics at Stanford.

That's my news from you. Next year why don't more of you write...make me work a little harder!

Hello again! This year flew by for me, as I am sure it did for you. I started a new business this year, creating fashion jewelry. It has been an exciting, successful year — learning about design, retailing, marketing. Great fun! Also continue to sing professionally in the area and am in the thesis stage of my master's degree. Busy!

Barbara Baur Dunlap wrote last winter to report that Barrie Trimmingham Van Dyck and Mary Cantley Dunn and she had a ball while they were out in Arizona visiting. They look fabulous — "young and gorgeous." Mary has a demanding job as Picture Editor for People. Barrie is busy with three little boys. Pamela Boyd Daniel and her husband, Dave, are finishing a two-year tour of duty in Okinawa, Japan. Dave is the Executive Officer of the Naval Hospital there. Pam has been teaching Math in a high school. She hopes to come to our 20th reunion.

Melinda Brown Everett was recently promoted to Public Relations Manager at Worcester Memorial Hospital. She was formerly the writer for Worcester Memorial's Pacemaker magazine which twice won an Award of Excellence from the New England Hospital Public Relations Association. Suzanne Evans Reeves moved from California to Wellesley Hills, Mass., where she plans to both renovate a house and continue with her design business. Judy Harbottle says she's "never" been happier." She is doing kidney research again along with running her children's store. She travelled to Germany and Italy this winter during the record breaking cold. She also has two ballet students living with her and her daughter.

Frances Kirven Morse is enjoying her third year of teaching computer education in the Brookline public schools. In addition to teaching children in grades 7 and 8, she writes computer curriculum for students in grades 4-8. This past year she served on an Applications Software Research group affiliated with Harvard University. She studied difficulties that students encounter when using database software.

Christine Kulczycki Murray has retired from banking for the moment to tend her toddler daughters, Jessica and Liza. She is also enjoying gardening and renovating her house. She regrets that she and her family were unable to join Anne Hinshaw Vanderweil and Pat Montrey Neeley and their families on Nantucket in August, as they had done the previous summer. Suzanne Little Jones says that she's still trying to adjust to Houston. "Too flat, too big." She misses the mountains and open spaces of New Mexico. Her husband, Robert, is Assistant Professor of Anesthesia at Baylor.

Linda Mallon Krulwich continues raising her four boys (ages 17 to 3), doing freelance artwork, taking graduate courses at the Visual School of Art in N.Y.C., and long distance swimming regularly. Mary Matheson has moved to Ct. where she has bought and redecorated a house. Ann Peterson Griffin reports "No big news. I feel fortunate and blessed to maintain status quo. Still in outreach program (Go Van Gogh) with Dallas Museum of Art. Proud of my girls and still in love with my husband. It's a good life." I'm sure many of us echo her sentiments! Yay, Ann!

Bonnie Pitman Gelles is Acting Director of the Seattle Art Museum during their major building campaign. She was also appointed to the Accreditation Commission of the American Association of Museums. She's having a good time "learning how to juggle the jobs at the Museum with being a mother." Vicky Pitts Hildreth remarried three years ago, and now has six children from age 19 to 9! Except for the endless winter she loves Colorado. She gets back to S.C. each summer, visiting with relatives, and is hoping to get back for our 20th. Vicky does all the paperwork for Bob's business, renovating vintage racecars. She also works in the community Bible Study program for children. Catherine Porter is still working as tax counsel for Senator John Chafee. She reports being exhausted after her "fabulous" year working in the tax reform bill. She's looking forward to having more time with her daughter Terrell, born in July, 1985

Amy Thompson McCandless and Peter are still teaching history at the College of Charleston. She received a summer grant to do a seminar on the "Woman Question in Western Thought" at Stanford University. The whole family enjoyed their summer in California. Suzanne Torgan Weston and Steve, recently returned to the Denver area from Alaska, opened a BMW motorcycle shop, and built a southwestern passive solar house of their own design. She continues to consult in the scientific data processing market. They miss Alaska, but find it nice to be back with their daughter and son-in-law, their many friends in the area, and to be able to motorcycle year round

This past fall Chris Witcover Dean ran for District Court judge for Wake, N.C. We hope she won! Last May she was named vice chairman of the Governor's Council on Drug Abuse Among Children and Youth. She's been on her own in private law practice since her husband became state secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety

Lorna Allen married Michael J. Sorley, a commercial real estate broker in October '86 and acquired a 12-year-old daughter, Summer American Capital Management and Research, Inc. went public and as of February '86 is listed on New York Stock Exchange. Lorna notes: "As controller of Company — exciting time!"

Sandy Waters reports lots of skiing this year during weekends in the mountains. She is still "lawyering" and is now in her fifth year with Opera Colorado. She's "looking forward to our next big reunion!"

Barbara Johnson Prickett's Allison is 6 now and Clay is 3; all had a wonderful Christmas in their new home. She's "still involved in too many community events" but expects soon to "just be carpooling."

After the summer in Aspen, CO as a photographer and nature guide, Kate Buster has returned to Caracas, Venezuela as a private English tutor for the children of prominent Venezuelan families. Her newest hobby: scuba diving and studying the ecology of the Coral Reefs.

The rest of you: I hope that no news is good news! Remember to reserve time and energy for our 20th Reunion in 1988.

By the time you read this we will have had a grand and glorious 15th reunion; much of what you read may be old hat, but for those of you who couldn't come or who didn't get all the details, here is what the class of '72 wrote to me in January

Out West, Patricia Brown writes from Oakland, CA, that her second daughter, Robin, joined the family on Sept. 4, '85. Sister Amelia is now an active 4-year-old. Trish also says that after some agonizing, she has resigned her job as assistant professor at the U. of CA to do educational policy analysis for Cray Research, Inc part time. Vivian Finlay continues her work as an outpatient mental health psychotherapist in Wasilla, AK. She and husband, Chuck Vancura, continue to add to and improve their self-built rural home and to enjoy the Alaskan lifestyle, despite a poor economy since the drop in oil prices.

Looking South, Cutler Bellows Crockard, Liz Clegg Woodard, De De Conley ('73), and Ellen Moore Miller had a December mini reunion in Houston. De De is married to Gerard Guizol and is living in Houston, selling wine and enjoying America after many years in Ivory Coast, Africa. Ellen's husband, Rodney, is with a new company, APL, and they are coming home, relocating to Chicago, after 5½ years in Asia and 2½ in the Middle East! Liz, Woody, and their three little girls (8, 7, 4) are great! She and Woody have planned a trip to Hong Kong. Cutler writes that she and Doug have acquired a beach house in Galveston and that the Crocks and the Woodards enjoyed a visit from Susan Waller Nading and family last summer. Patti Reardon and daughter, Gloria, also visited last summer. Patti is a hospital administrator in New Orleans. Also in Houston, Carol Cody Herder writes that her second child, a son, was born on Nov. 12, '86. Her daughter, Sarah, is now 4. Carol reports that after 12 years of banking, she has retired to become a wife and mother. Rhonda Griffith Durham writes from Midland, TX, that her children, Trevor (13), Caitlin (8), and Jonathon (4), are all blessed with happy, busy lives and that she and husband, Lynn, had a treat last year, as guests to the Chinese government, on a trip to the People's Republic. Eliza Walbridge is living in Fort Worth, doing computer graphics for aviation simulators. She spent most of last year in Salt Lake City on a special project, went to England for the Farnborough Air Show and spent her vacation in China on a mountain bike trip especially the children's program of Bible Study Fellowship. She also works at son Jay's (10) elementary school.

Leslie Armstrong Ramsey is still in El Paso, married to William K. (Rex) Ramsey IV for almost two years and working as an escrow officer for Lawyers Title of El Paso

Moving East, Betsy Butler Williams reports from Shreveport, LA, that she received her Ph.D. in clinical psychology in July '86. Her dissertation topic was "Archetypal Dream Images During the Menstrual Cycles of Infertile vs. Fertile Women." She also fulfilled a life's ambition and performed on stage with dancers from Ballet West and Solid Gold! Here in Mobile, Elizabeth Smith continues as a senior partner in her medical group, which is based at a 650-bed hospital designated as a community cancer center. Her specialty is radiation therapy. Betsy's husband, Peter Dingwall, is in the retail florist and greenhouse business. Elise Webb Neeland writes from Montgomery, AL, that she gave a prospective student tea with Sweet Briar's alumna representative in her home last November and that the video shown about SBC was excellent! Marion Walker, still in Birmingham, has made a career change to Investment Broker with Morgan Keegan, Co. Marion took a trip last July to a camp-like resort in the Adirondacks, where most people thought her Alabama accent was the most unusual part of the trip! In Chattanooga, TN, Libby Wann Duff continues her newspaper reporting, writing lots of political stories and dividing time between Tennessee and Washington. She and Frank, president of Duff Brothers, a wholesale drug distribution company, now have two children, Hamilton (4) and Lizzie (1½).

Up North, Gail Garner Resch and Michael are in Cleveland, OH, and adopted a son, Garner, in May, '86. Gail writes that they had only nine days notice: it was a scramble to get ready for the baby, but now it's difficult to remember life without him! Emily McNally Brown continues as an adult education counselor, working with adults getting their high school diplomas, learning to read, etc. Her husband, Jim, is still with Ford in Dearborn, MI, and is enrolled in his third Japanese language course. Their two sons, Peter and Chris are 12 and 6. In NYC, B. J. Martin is the national sales manager for Pierre Cardin knits, and Georgie Vairo says she is still "professing" at Fordham Law School, has had many publications and was quoted in the New York Times last year in a lead article about "hot" legal issues. Susan Desmet Bostic, in Shrewsbury, NJ, has returned to teaching full-time after taking a 2-year leave to stay home with her daughter, Rosalie. Husband, Gordon, has completed his master's degree and is working on a doctorate.

Steve and Cynthia Heye Hopkins are still living in Montclair, NJ, where he practices law, and she is in marketing as group product manager for Howmedica, the orthopaedics division of Pfizer. Settling into their new home in Newton Centre, MA, Dale Shelley and James Graham had their first child, a son, Fielding Ruddell, on Nov. 27, '86. Kathy Upchurch Takvorian planned a baby shower for Dale and Eileen Gebrian Barberich, who had her second child in February '87. Penny Walsh, Pam Drake McCormick, Mercedes Gravatt Grandin, and Hillary Mankin planned to join the honorees. Kathy remains busy with Sam (3) and Kate (1½) and her rheumatology practice

Nancy Hagar Bruetsch has moved to Shiremanstown, PA, and writes that she is beginning to get her life in order after separating from her husband last year. She gave up a budding real estate career for a more consistent income as assistant manager for a retail fabric store. Children, Kimberly (11), Kelly (9), and Matthew (5), are coping with all the changes pretty well

I was so pleased to hear from Donna Deblois that she has remarried, in fact eloped, with George M. Kudra, Jr., a builder and developer, on Christmas Eve, '85 to Captiva Island in Florida. George and Donna now have a daughter, Caitlin, born on Sept. 13, '86. They are restoring an 1870's home in Yardley, PA. Ginger Upchurch Collier writes from Chestertown, MD, that they had a good time visiting Jeanie Mann Hardesty, Ben, and their three children, Margaret (8), Gray (6), and Ashby (1). Ginger's three little girls, Louise (14 mo.), Katherine (3½), and Ann (5), also enjoyed the West Virginia trip!

Kitty Adams plans to marry Patrick Herrington Murphy on 1/24/87 and honeymoon in The Barbados ("It's tough to leave Rochester in January, but someone has to do it!" she notes.) She has switched her career to Interior Designer — "challenging, satisfying and just plain fun!"

Karen Medford Distelhorst reports from Baltimore, that she, Bobo Ryan Hoyt, and Carter Frackelton all plan to attend Kitty Adam's wedding in Rochester, NY. I also hear from Carter that Jill Johnson was remarried last year to an airline pilot. Grace Sherly Straszheim, in Washington, D.C., had a second child, David, on Aug. 26, '86. Daughter, Rebecca, is now 3. Her three step-children are all away at school now, and she continues to do Estate Planning. Anne Garrett Burfield spent last summer moving to a new house, closer to Washington, where she's started work at Catholic U on a joint law degree and Ph.D. in anthropology. Husband Rod is in his 10th year as the lobbyist for Metro (mass transit). Evan (10), Alison (8), and Morgan (6) are all doing well writes, "my husband (since March '85) and I bought and moved across the street — how's that for adventurous!"

After "13 years in my snug little apartment," (D.C.) Cissel Gott Collins

Jeannette Pillsbury is in Northern Virginia, near Manassas, where she moved in '85 to become principal of a school for grades 4 to 6 and for a special education pre-school to kindergarten. She is now the Director of Instruction in The Manassas Park, VA School System. She and Briggett Keith went to the Baptism of Muff Bugg Hughes' second child. Ginnie B. Payne Sasser divides her time between her two daughters, Nancy (4) and Virginia (2), and running her farm outside of Fredericksburg, VA. Ellen Apperson Brown is teaching German classes at VES in Lynchburg, where her husband, Kirk, is the college counselor. Ellen says she had the novel opportunity to be a dorm master when VES accepted its first female students last fall. Her daughter, Kate, is in kindergarten, and David is 4.

Susan Snodgrass Wynne in Virginia Beach, VA continues to be involved with families who have children with cancer since losing her son, Lee (6½), to leukemia two years ago. She is on the board of the Ronald McDonald House in Norfolk, and has found teaching a course, "Communicating With Children About Death," to be fulfilling. Sons, John (11), and Brad (6), are doing well.

Moving on south to Wilmington, NC, Marty Neill Boney writes that the highlight of '86 was a whirlwind tour of Disney World and EPCOT. Marty says she's become a jock in her old age, taking up tennis and skiing. She and Bill planned to hit the slopes in January. Carter Frackelton visited the Boneys last summer and, according to Marty, has become quite the executive with the block company in Fredericksburg. Deborah Wilson Hollings reports from Camden, SC, that the '86 Senatorial campaign they'd worked on so hard was a success and Christopher (5) went to his first election-night victory party. They had a great trip to Disney World and EPCOT last year! Alice Johnson Krendel moved to Atlanta in May, '86. She and David had their first baby, Carl Spencer, in June '86. Alice and David are both on the faculty at Emory U.

Mary Pat Varn Moore started her last semester of law school at Florida State U. in January. She is also doing an Externship with the bankruptcy court in Tallahassee and will take the bar in July. Her husband, Paul, and 3 others are forming a new financial services corporation and her son, Warren, is now a big first grader. Daphne Drennon Gatlin in Jacksonville, FL, reports the birth of her son, Douglas Stuart Gatlin, II, on July 16, '85. He joins his big sister Claire, now 3½. Deanna Boggs Lewis writes that after ten years of moving, due to her husband's internship, residency, and Navy obligation, they are at last settled down in her hometown of Jacksonville. In fact, they have even bought her childhood home!

Across the Atlantic in London, Holly Smith and Neil recently bought a South Kensington flat, which is surrounded by lovely gardens and gives the feeling of the country with all the benefits of the city. She is freelancing for The Sunday Times, The Financial Times, and several U.S. publications. Holly travels with Neil on some of the trips he takes as editor of Euromoney Magazine. Stephanie Harmon Simonard is a new SBC alumnae representative in Paris. Last year she was made a partner in her company, Peat Marwick — "a goal since I joined the firm after SBC graduation." She's the first woman partner in France and the fifth in Europe and notes "maybe now I'll be able to afford sending Sophie (11) and Vanessa (9) to SBC!" She is still (third 2-year term) president of AARO (Association of Americans Resident Overseas) and "feels strongly that SBC grads should provide some time (not just money) to a worthy public service cause."

As for me, my husband, Bill, has moved from credit administration to heading up the commercial loan department for the southern region of AmSouth Bank. We still are enjoying Mobile and sailing on the Bay; I recently took up golf, but most of my time is spent with David, my sometimes-precious 2-year-old son. This is my swan song as your class secretary and, as I put my pencil down, I would like to thank you all for sharing your lives, your achievements, and your goals with me these past five years. We have a wonderful class and it has been a pleasure!

Cynde Seiler Eister (Mrs. Ronald N.), 1001 First Avenue, Williamsport, PA 17701

Was our 10th Reunion a great time, or what? It was a treat seeing the 52 of you who came plus about 20 spouses and one fiancé. And the '75ers who joined us — Penny Czarra, Lisa Walker and Cora Snyder — were a great surprise. A bunch of us brought out old pictures (how crazy to see the way we used to dress and wear our hair — and look at those weird dates we had!), our old records (remember "39-21-40 Shape"?), and of course, cocktail supplies for the old dorm party! They put us in Grammar and we took over the whole dorm. It was simply a riot pretending nothing had changed (except parietals — as you passed husbands in bathrobes on the way to the showers in the morning). Yes, the men were troopers, putting up with all of our screams of hello, dancing in the halls and picture taking. A couple people even brought VCR cameras. The rest of you have no idea how much fun you missed and how much we missed you. There will be no excuses tolerated for opting out of our 15th.

The Alumnae Office began sending me info almost as soon as I arrived home. The first was the June 14th news clipping of Felice Ludington Taylor and Jim's wedding with — natch — a stunning picture of Felice. Jim owns a boat building business and is Operations Manager of the San Francisco entry to the America's Cup. Word has it they were in Australia for the competition. Not bad! News from Schenectady, NY is that Robin Imschweiler got a certificate in Roling from the Rolf Institute in Boulder and has a lucrative practice going. No, no, no...it's a relaxation technique, like a very deep massage. Another clipping was about Liz Farmer Jarvis who is the curator of the Historical Society in Philadelphia and was a judge at an arts festival in Lancaster County. Liz's husband Andrew is an architect and their daughter Judy is now 15 mos.

Keedie Grones said her only news was of a successful fall riding term at SBC. She added the following itinerary only as an afterthought: Her summer vacation took her to Nantucket for Toni Brenden Massie's ('77) wedding, to NYC to visit Denise Etheridge Kassell ('77), then on to Aix-en-Provence, France and the Cotswolds in England with 4 other SBC alumnae. Rough life! Keedie's old roommate, Sally Old Kitchin, tells me she, Jim and children Maria (4½) and Leggett (2) are househunting in Virginia Beach. Also in VA Beach are Russ and Roberta Hauck Gribble with their children, Rusty (5) Bradley (3½) and Katie (1½). Roberta is with AT&T in marketing and Russ works for Dynalectric. Another "near Beach" dweller is Ann Kiley Crenshaw who is an attorney with McGuire, Woods and Battle in Norfolk. Clark and Ann have planned a trip to the Far East in February, and I assume will have to leave Clarke, Jr. (3) behind.

The Montana Cattlewoman's Assoc. is keeping Cheryl Lux active in the "wild life" arena. (Post SBC we assume!) Cheryl and husband John Cobb are trying to computerize their ranch where they raise cattle, elk, deer and sheep. Sharon Ruvane Nelson lives in Vermont with husband Rob and children Gretchen (3) and Harry (1). Rob is a sales rep for Nestle-Beiche and Sharon owns a shop in Stowe called "Everything Cows" which was mentioned in the NY Times front page travel section. Is Cheryl Lux aware of this?

How does Lochrane Coleman Smith do it? Her job as Alumni Director at Cumberland law school sent her to Snowmass, CO! She has 3 sideline businesses and is learning to handle a computer. Fortune 500 beware! I heard Linda-Jean Smith sing at Joella Schneider Samp's ('77) wedding in July. She is also working as a law firm librarian and is on the library council for Pennsylvania. Rowena Van Tuyl Schubert and Bill had a travel schedule beyond belief in '86. Their first stop was New Orleans where she got to see my Chicago Bears win the Super Bowl (not so lucky in '87), then to San Diego for 2 weeks in June, to Boca Raton and the Keys, to a beach house in San Francisco with their children (Larissa, MacKenzie, Lindsay and Patrick) and finally to Las Hudas, Mexico and UT. Somewhere in there was a skiing trip to Vermont Marriage news came from all over Kelsey Canady Griffo and Kevin were married on Nov. 1st and honeymooned in Maui. Kelsey has left AT&T after 7 years to become the marketing director for an oil equipment company. And remember cute Dixie Torbert? She married Steven Anthony Martino on Dec. 6th and is living in Mobile. They are both attorneys. Lisa Schubert, who works at the Museum of Modern Art in NYC, married a sculptor who is also a member of the Ordinaires, a nine-piece instrumental group. Lisa and Jim Thomas were married on June 21st. Elliott Graham Schoenig and I attended the wedding of my wonderful pal Peggy Weimer Parrish to John on Aug. 16th. They've bought a new home in Falls Church, VA and Peggy continues work at the Federal Reserve Board where John is also employed.

Mary Woodford is doing strategic planning for a hydrogen peroxide product line in Philadelphia. She is also working on some foreign investments in Mexico, Thailand and Japan and is looking forward to her annual ski outing in Switzerland this spring Virginia Spangler Polley and her husband were transferred to Valley Forge, PA almost as soon as they landed in Manhattan. David was promoted to president of the residential carpet division of Burlington and Gina hopes to keep her position as contract representative for Couristan Carpets in the new locale. Gail Ann Zarwell Winkler is expecting her second child in April to join Laura (15 mos.). Unfortunately, she missed Reunion because of a planned trip to England which was cancelled anyway. Just goes to prove, there is no good reason to try to do anything but attend the 15th!

Two of my favorite pieces of news came from Terese DeGrandi and Dede Ryan. Terese is engaged to be married in Oct. or Nov. to an orthopedic surgeon at Scottish Rite Children's Hospital where she is a pediatric physician. Unfortunately, I don't have Mike's last name yet. Now, T-bird, does this mean you won't be sending those wild X-Mas cards next year? Dede will be marrying John Ale in March of '87 and they plan to honeymoon in Tahiti, New Zealand, Australia and Hong Kong. John is a UVA boy (as Dede put it) for both undergrad and law school and is a partner at Vinson Elkins in Houston. Guess Lochrane will happily eat her words about Dede's wedding plans after our 50th Reunion!

Teesie Costello Howell and Caroline Bickel McLoughlin both are expecting their first children this year after long waits! Teesie and Chris' is due about the time of their 10th anniversary in June. "Mom" plans to stay with her job at Investors, too! Caroline and Hollis expect baby McLoughlin in April. Caroline is a kitchen designer and has had work in both NYC and their home of Summit, NJ. She hopes to take the baby on site during future projects. Hollis is with Puroator Courier. They saw Ookie Hays Cooper and Jim in Chattanooga over the Christmas holidays.

Galvin Gentry is teaching 30 riding students a week along with successfully showing her Morgan stallion "Brie". And check this: she's just completed a 3-story log addition to her home! Chardon Harrigan Jenks, whose children are now 3 (son Story) and 15 mos. (Elizabeth), sees a good deal of sister-in-law Liz Jenks Coggin even from Albany. Perhaps Chardon and John's pending move to Philadelphia will allow them to do so more often. Liz and husband Turner, who live in Baltimore, have 2 sons, Ames and Jenks. Cathy Slatinshek has really taken up this riding thing with a vengeance. Those little birdlegs we saw in breeches at Reunion have taken her foxhunting since she's joined the Fairfax Hunt. Slat is working in the Government Affairs Department at US Air. She sees Tricia Talbott Reed who is the national association accounts sales manager with Hyatt Hotels. Tom is working such long hours at VP Finance and CEO of Autometric, Inc. that Tricia says he doesn't get to see their 15 mos. old daughter Meaghan as often as he'd like. Mary Weston Streitz and Rick are hoping to move from Joliet, IL to Milwaukee this year. They have two children, Christopher (2) and Chapin (1). Russ and Debbie Massie Thurman had their first child, Jennifer Kay on July 17th. Russ is Managing Editor of Horse and Horseman Magazine and a media consultant in San Diego County. Suella Epple Behrns teaches music at Christian Fellowship School to grades K-10. She also teaches 14 piano students and is responsible for a 40 voice choir and a 25 piece orchestra at church services

From Williamsport, PA came word from Cynde Seiler Eister that she and Ron are expecting #3 to join Ronald (3½) and Sarah (1½). Cynde continues her work with the church and the medical auxiliary. Ron is in family practice medicine. Kari Anderson Shipley and Ron had their 3rd son (Matthew Anderson) on Aug. 20th. They've bought a new house — and good thing. It must be full with 3 boys, a 16 yr. old stepdaughter, an 18 yr. old "helper" from Austria, Kari's brother and their pointer's 7 new puppies. They're taking the whole family (dogs, too?) to ski in UT this spring and to France in the fall. Katie Mikell Cochran says she was back to work 4 mos. after delivering Thomas Farish, Jr. on Aug. 31st. Where do these guys get that kind of energy? San Antonio brings word of Norris Judd Ferguson and Grant Norris has been with the McNay Art Museum for 4 years as Curator. She plans a trip to NYC in March to pick up a Van Gogh! This past year Mare Moran bought a new co-op (with a pool!), traveled through Scandinavia and in January, Readers Digest sent her to St. Thomas. She hopes to get Ann Hawkins back from Portland to visit her in NYC this summer. Jennie Bateson Hamby and Lou are surviving the terrible two's with son Allen. "No one tells you, but they really last about 3 years," she cautions. Jenny is working in sales at her dad's real estate office in Palm Beach and Lou is a partner with Alley, Maass et al.

Margaret Milnor Mallory (who looked terrific at Reunion) and Bart are expecting child #2 in February to join Barton (20 mos.). Hmmm. About 9 months before the due date Margaret and Bart were at SBC! Anyway, they bought a new house in Memphis and had a visit in October from Lochrane Coleman Smith. Karina Schless is still working at Wyeth Labs in personnel and riding/hunting "Drambuie" near her home in Phoenixville, PA. And the lucky stiff said she had a blast on a cruise in the Caribbean over Thanksgiving Laurie Lenkel is working at the Schwartz College of Pharmacology in NY as Assistant Director of Student and Professional Affairs. She continues her work toward her M.S. degree in Pharmacology Administration and Marketing. Whew!

More children to report on, I'm getting depressed! Catherine Adams Thompson and Michael have two Sally is 8 and Preston is 4 and will be attending nursery school in the fall. Chatherine works part-time for a G.P. in The Plains who still makes housecalls. (I'm ready to move.) Susan Verbridge Paulson and Larry's children are now 4 (Christina) and 2 (Danny). Susan adds, "We have a new lifestyle as my husband Larry is a full-time student for the next few years." Laurie Fitzgerald Nowlan tops them both with 3 children. (Though no one beats Kari Shipley's full house!) The newest, Michael Fitzgerald (born Aug. 17th), joins Patrick (4½) and Carly (3). Twelve days before Michael's birth the Nowlan's moved to a new house in Bryn Mawr and reportedly are still getting settled

Melanie Archer Graetzer missed Reunion because her daughter Emily (6) had a dance recital. And after a good year of paying for those lessons, Mom had better show! She and Tony also have a son, Ian, who is 10 mos. Mel is back to work part-time at the hospital she's been with for 5½ years. She also sent word that Carol Ann Ferrer Macy had her second child last summer. Kit Newman Detering had her second, Carl, III, on Oct. 28th, which is his father Carl's birthday! The Deterings spent New Year's hunting at their ranch in the TX hill country and hope to get to Germany and France this year. It was a busy fall for Lynn Kahler Berg who not only serves on the board of Friends of Art at SBC, but also has started her own business, Art International Services, which assists museums with exhibitions. She was named Director of the International Exhibition Foundation and will serve through Dec. of '88. Andie Yellott and fiancé Ben claim they're "considering going for Sherry Buttrick Reback's old engagement record" and are having a great time in Baltimore where Andie teaches H.S. English. She is still riding and writing fiction. Ann Works Balderston and Biv have a 14 mos. old daughter, Sarah, who is Andie's godchild. Sarah has been known to "sing along with Ann". Do we have a future Sweet Tone here? Biv and Ann are planning a trip to their family ranch in Jackson Hole, WY this summer with their two children.

All the way from England came word from Sharon Coe Glen, Jonathon and daughter Grace that they are expecting a second child at the end of May. They've recently moved to an old English country house built around 1288! Sharon is in touch with Lola Brock Meakin ('77) who also lives in London and had a little boy in Nov. When Sharon was in NYC at Christmas she saw Allyson Wilmer Jacobs and Sue Walton. Sue tells me she went heliiking in the Canadian Rockies this past year. She was dropped off by helicopter, hiked for a while and was picked up at another point. She is keeping up with her ballroom dancing and has joined a Cycle Club in preparation for rides through Westchester and Long Island this summer. Another classmate expecting baby #2 at the end of May is Treacy Markey Shaw. (Boy am I behind!) She and Mark spent 2 weeks in London and the Cotswolds just before Christmas while little Morgan stayed with grandparents in Atlanta.

Treacy is freelancing in public relations work and Mark is an international executive with Robinson Humphrey

Demi Georgis Bowles and husband Henry bought back an old family ranch for weekend and summer escapes to the country. They live the rest of the time in San Francisco and are busy chasing after their 2½ year old, Henry, III. A trip to Vail and a fun visit with an old roommate, Meg Shields Duke and husband Jamie, caught me up on several pieces of news. Jamie has been promoted to president of a women's retail clothing chain and Meg is active in the Denver SBC Club now that Jamie, Jr. (4) is in school and Margo (2) is in play group part-time. Meg told me that Lisa Nelson Robertson and Tim had a son, Willis Hunt, in July to join their two girls. Ann Stryker Busch and Adolphus had a girl, Katrina. Meg also saw Debbie Vatterott Ruck and Tom at Thanksgiving and this past Feb. in St. Louis. Megan Morgan Fisher and Craig's 2 yr. old, Lincoln, is a movie star! Well, he's doing commercials, anyway. Craig and Megan try to keep up with their famous son, he by publishing a criminal justice newsletter and she by working at the Children's Museum in Manhattan.

Cissy Humphrey in Dallas is freelancing as a paralegal. Cissy took "the vacation of her life" to Europe last June with an SBC group. (The details are worth a long-distance phone call to TX!) With Dr. Hapala as lecturer, they flew into Istanbul and toured Romania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Austria. She's also been to Salt Lake City and back to The Briar several times, including a visit for Alumnae Council. Quite the world traveler. Kay Elisor Hopkins was such a cute expectant mother at Reunion and she now has John Christopher, her 3rd, born Sept. 11th, to show for it. Kay remains active in Dallas' Pi Beta Phi Junior day group as Projects Co-Chair and with her church choir and Board. Cissy, Kay, Tennessee Neilson Indorf and Beth Bates Locke get together for lunch every few months. Beth has resigned her job in advertising and missed reunion because she was in the hospital giving birth to Matthew Joseph on June 5th. Well, Beth, THAT is an "acceptable" excuse for missing the weekend! Cissy is godmother. Tennessee has a new job as Asst General Counsel for Thomson Components-Mostek Corp. She and Cissy went to VA Beach in Nov. for Kelsey Canady Griffo's wedding to Kevin. Tennessee's daughter Kelsey (Kelsey's godchild), was flower girl Candi Casey is working for a brokerage firm in San Francisco. Her territory is Italy, France and England, which means she has to be at work at 4:00 am. But the perks are worth it as her first business trip is to Italy in October. Pat Dean is living in W. Falmouth, Mass. and selling real estate. She recently made a VERY hefty commission. I'd print the amount, but we'd all be calling her for loans

Business and pleasure travel has kept Robin Rodger Heller busy. This year alone she's been to Boston, Dallas, Toronto, San Diego, Phoenix and sailing for a week on Lake Huron, just to name a few. She and Bill are decorating and landscaping their home this year. Between her marketing position at General Motors and many volunteer activities she wrote of, where does she find the time! Terrible news from Becky Burt of Houston of her second burglary in 3 years. She says she got tired of buying stereos so she moved to a more secure place in January. Becky is in her 5th year with American General Insurance as an information center analyst, coached the company softball team last fall and makes stained glass in her spare time. She hears from Christy Mills Allen who has bought a townhouse with husband Dave. Susan Ray Karlson and Ron spent several months in Australia last year with children Henry and Tavenner, who have both learned to say "G-day". Susan hopes Ron's business will send them back soon as "it's a great place for a mother with a new baby — petting zoos in every town."

I got to see Elliott Graham Schoenig and Jerry several times last year. (Boy have I attended my share of weddings!) Elliott and Jerry have moved to what sounds like an incredible new home in Charlottesville, complete with pool and all. Should be a great place to visit, and as a bonus you get to see their cute daughter, Sarah Q. Another one of my roommates, Margot Mahoney, has been promoted to partner with The Washington Consulting Group. She took a wonderful cruise on the Mediterranean this past year with stops in France, Spain, Portugal and Morocco.

Manhattan dweller Ainslie Jones Uhl wrote that she is volunteering as editor in chief of a senior citizens newspaper with a circulation of 200,000. She and Robert took a trip this past Oct. to Brussels (where they had been married) and the Riviera. Robert is a Securities Analyst with Eberstat and Fleming. Sallie Hill Bernard Armstrong started a new job in early June with the law firm of Hale, Lane, Peek, Dennison and Howard in Reno, NV. Melanie Coyne Cody reported the birth of her second child, Sarah Chittenden, on July 30th. Melanie has returned to work part-time as an executive recruiter for the advertising and marketing industry. I heard through the grapevine that Sally Mott Lawrence had a beautiful picture in Dossier magazine for a write-up on the Washington Junior League Christmas function that she chaired. I am still with U.S. Senator Alan Dixon as finance director, but now that our campaign is over, I'm job hunting in the private sector for a position in Gov't. or Public Affairs. And I'm absolutely thrilled to announce my engagement to William George Finke from Chicago. Bill is a stockbroker with E.F. Hutton. We are hoping to be married in late summer or early fall...and I can assure you he's just wonderful and well worth the 32 year wait!

There were so many of you I didn't hear from this year. If anyone wants to send me late news — or an update — SBC will let me send one more letter this year just to our class members. So, if I hear from enough of you by Aug. 31st or thereabouts, I'll write the additional news.

Finally, all of our most sincere condolences go to Alix Collie Wilson who unexpectedly lost her husband, Steve, in the spring of '86. Our prayers are with you and the children, Jennifer and Garrett.

Denver is the greatest, please come out for a visit! Thanks for all your great responses — very truly yours, Patsy Roby

Your Will, Your Way.

Making a will is often relegated to the bottom of lists of things to do. Witness the fact that 70 percent of all Americans never make a will, leaving their families to cope with needless administrative expense, red tape, and sometimes the tragedy of needs left unmet.

Over the next few issues of "In the Sweet Briar Tradition," we will be highlighting representative members of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates. Every member of this group has included a will as part of her or his long-term financial plans and has designated a bequest for Sweet Briar. Lu Litton Churchill '78, one of the youngest members, is one of a growing number of recent graduates who are making this kind of decision early.

Lu graduated from Sweet Briar with a multi-disciplinary major in biology, government and environmental studies. Currently working as a marketing manager for Alba-Waldensian Incorporated, she has worked in marketing, planning and development for several North Carolina based corporations. According to Lu, "I am accomplishing what I had hoped to, professionally. I chose a liberal arts major rather than a business major because I believed that I could receive business training on the job and that is what has happened. My liberal arts background has given me a breadth of outlook which helps me in my job and serves as a source of great personal satisfaction and fulfillment."

These same planning skills are evident in Lu's approach to financial planning. As she explains, "I was fortunate enough make a sizable profit from the sale of my first home when I changed jobs, and I invested in real estate. Even though I did not have much, I realized that for my parents' sake I needed to take what I did have, my real estate, my car, insurance and other assets, and have them all organized in one place. So I had a simple will drawn up making all my assets payable to my estate for my parents' benefit. When I married, my needs changed. My husband and I revised our wills at the same time. It cost under $400 and future revisions will cost less. Jim and I have set up wills which function jointly under certain circumstances, but separately under others. Our wills reflect the fact that both of us have careers and individual interests and commitments; they also reflect our wish and need to care for each other.

"When I made this will I was finally in a position to do something for Sweet Briar. I have made a provision that a percentage of my total estate will come to Sweet Briar to establish a scholarship. I chose a percentage rather than a fixed amount so that the College would not lose through the effects of inflation if my will were not updated. I know that my circumstances will change over the years and that Jim and I will need to change our wills, but for now we have a plan to protect ourselves and to see that our commitments and interests are met."

Sweet Briar is grateful to Lu and to all the members of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates for their long-term commitment to the College.

Lu's planning illustrates two important points about wills: you are never "too young" to need one, and the will needs to be updated frequently to reflect significant changes. Recognizing the interest and questions that many people have about the art of making a will, the Planned Giving Committee provides as a service to alumnae, parents and friends information about wills and estate planning. SWEET BRIAR ALUMNAE COUNCIL

September 27-28, 1987

Please mark these dates on your calendar and plan to be at Sweet Briar for this important meeting. It's a beautiful time of year to be on campus. You will be a guest of the College and your only expenses will be for travel.

Alumnae Council is for all alumnae who wish to attend and is of special importance for Club Presidents, Key Alumnae, Admissions Representatives, Bulb Chairmen, Solo sellers, the National Bulb Committee, the Planned Giving Committee, Class Fund Agents, Class Secretaries, Reunion Chairmen, Reunion Gifts Committees, Networking Chairmen, members of the Board of the Alumnae Association, members of the Board of Overseers, Alumnae Career Advisory Board and the President of the Senior Class. A program and reservation form will be mailed in late August.

If you do not receive a form and wish to come, please write to the Alumnae Office, Sweet Briar, VA 24595.

Distinguished Alumna Award

The Board of the Alumnae Association is pleased to announce the establishment of the Distinguished Alumna Award to honor alumnae who have brought distinction to themselves and to Sweet Briar College through outstanding accomplishment in a volunteer or professional capacity.

The award may be conferred annually and will be presented at Opening Convocation by the president of the Alumnae Association or if this is not feasible, by the president of the College.

The Nominating Committee of the Alumnae Association will receive nominations for this award and send recommendations to the Selection Committee. This committee will consist of the president of the College, the president and the director of the Alumnae Association, the first vice president of the Alumnae Association, an alumna overseer, the editor of the alumnae magazine and one faculty member appointed by the president of the Alumnae Association.

All alumnae are urged to send the names of candidates and sufficient information to establish their qualifications for the award to the Alumnae Office. Nominees' files will be kept active for three years and considered each year. They may be renominated.

Note: The Distinguished Alumna Award differs from the Outstanding Alumna Award presented at Founders' Day. The Outstanding Alumna Award recognizes service to the College. The Distinguished Alumna Award recognizes any kind of unusual achievement.

Semester at Sea

BY KATHRYN INGHAM '88

When I first laid eyes on the S.S. Universe in Vancouver Harbor, I pinched myself to make sure I wasn't dreaming. Was I really going to travel around the world on a ship? It had been six months since the University of Pittsburgh notified me of my acceptance to their Semester at Sea Program, a three-and-a-half-month tour of the world while taking a full load of courses. There was a variety of classes to choose from; I signed up for international finance, art history, international business and the required sociology course. As if the course work wouldn't keep me busy enough, I would be visiting, along with 350 other students, 11 countries throughout the world. Our first stop would be Japan, followed by Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, China, Malaysia, India, Turkey, Russia, Yugoslavia, Spain and the final port, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Not too bad for a girl who had never been off the East Coast of the United States!

September 11, 1986 we set sail from Vancouver, British Columbia. My roommate (Shawn McCoy, a UVa student from Wilmington, Delaware) and I spent the morning trying to figure out how we were going to live in a cabin that wasn't big enough for the Borrowers, and exploring to see where all the narrow corridors led. The first day hadn't gone by and already there were challenges to conquer! That night as we drifted away from Vancouver, a number of us gathered on the bow to witness our first of many sunsets. Watching the sun slowly sink into the sea, I wondered how the voyage could get better.

Kathryn Ingham (r) and roommate Shawn McCoy prepare for drill aboard the S.S. Universe.

The two-week trip to Japan was filled with introductions: introductions to our faculty, to our life aboard ship, to our traveling companions who soon became friends. The people we met were from all stages of life; there were adult passengers as old as 79, faculty children as young as two weeks, students from all over the United States and from South America, Hong Kong, France and India. As different as some of us may have seemed, we all had this voyage in common, making our friendships strong and special. I still hear the words of fellow student Craig Deen (from Ft. Worth, Texas and the University of Oklahoma) the first night on board: "I think it's really neat how yesterday none of us knew each other and today we've become lifelong friends."

When we arrived in Japan the air was full of excitement. The trip across the Pacific was accompanied by rough weather and loads of classwork, so everyone was glad to get off the ship. My friends and I spent the next five days racing from city to city, trying to see and do as much as we could in the short time we had. Everything we experienced, from the serene rice fields in the country to the hectic streets of Tokyo, was like opening a present on Christmas morning. The best present of all was meeting a group of children in Osaka Castle. While I was waiting for my friends, a class of schoolchildren shuffled by. One brave little boy looked at me and said, "Hello!" Suddenly I realized how special I felt to have an American identity. He didn't look at me and say, "Bonjour" or "Qué pasa?"; he looked at me and said, "Hello!" When I returned his greeting he roared with laughter and soon all the schoolchildren were shouting, "HELLO! HELLO!" They wouldn't stop until I greeted each and every one of them, and even then they giggled and laughed endlessly. When two young girls from a different school shyly asked my roommate if they could shake her hand, the pride I felt sent chills down my spine. It was an exhilarating feeling to know that such a simple thing as a word or a handshake could put a smile on so many young faces. Thinking of these children as our ship quietly sailed away from Japan, I smiled because I knew my experiences weren't ending at this port — they were just beginning.

China was the place that I found the next most intriguing. Because we arrived at night, it seemed very solemn. There were a few people out for an evening bike ride but for the most part it was empty, quiet and dark. Looking at Beijing out of the bus window, I thought about what the Chinese would see if they were arriving in Washington, D.C. at night: it would be quite a different picture. We drove through downtown Beijing to get to Peking University where 50 of us would be staying during our five-day visit. The city was unlike any I had ever seen. The streets were very wide and clean, there were no neon signs or advertisements, very few cars and almost no people. Looking around, it hit me that I was in communist China, a place as different and as far away from home as I would ever be. The next few days we were guided from sight to sight by Chinese students from the university. I soon learned that Beijing during the day was nothing like Beijing at night. There were people everywhere! Most of them were on bicycles but a few were walking or pushing carts. It was easy to tell that this country was one which did not cater to the American way. As the days went on we visited all the touristy spots and giggled at all the stares directed our way. We were as curious a sight to the Chinese as they were to us. On our last day we made the long-awaited trip to The Great Wall. After seeing pictures and hearing stories of how it draped over mountains and into the horizon, we couldn't wait to see it ourselves. When we arrived, however, we couldn't see much at all. The fog was so thick it was like looking through a shower curtain. With each step we took, The Wall grew with us and disappeared behind us. We never knew where we were. It was a unique experience. Although it was disappointing not to be able to see the view, the fog lent a mysterious, eerie feeling, a fascination, a feeling of unreality in being there.

No sooner had I finished writing about China in my journal than we arrived in India. We had been warned by the ship's doctor what we shouldn't eat and shouldn't wear and then were turned loose to explore Bombay. India was definitely the most culturally different place we went. Seeing elephants and cows in the street and people wearing turbans was like looking at a page from the National Geographic. Unfortunately we had only one day in Bombay before flying off to Delhi and traveling to Agra to visit the Taj Mahal. Our flight left Bombay at 4:00 a.m., which in any other place might have been an unpleasant experience. In Bombay it was a different story. Driving through the city this early in the morning allowed us to see a part of Indian life that not many people have a chance to see. Covering the dimly-lit sidewalks were people peacefully sleeping. They slept under tents, on top of taxis, under carts or simply on the sidewalk. The silent, somnolent atmosphere was so different from the fast-paced Bombay I had first seen that I wondered if I were in the same place. This early-morning view made me realize how many people in this world don't even have a bed to sleep in and how fortunate I am to have a roof over my head, not to mention an opportunity to travel around the world!

When we arrived in Odessa, U.S.S.R. I quickly felt lucky to have been born in the United States. The day was windy, cold and cloudy. Russian soldiers wearing their long brown coats and fur hats paced along the pier, ignoring our smiles and greetings. It was exactly as I had imagined it would be. Going through customs was an experience: Security went through every bag, reading journals, address books, magazines, and even listening to tapes. Books a class was reading about Hitler were confiscated, as were books about the Russians. The woman checking my bag was amused by my deodorant, as well as by my sheet of Russian translations, but didn't find anything worth keeping. I was amused by the whole scene. Once we arrived in Leningrad things weren't quite so dismal, despite the freezing, cloudy weather. The city was gorgeous, all the buildings were decorated in the same style, and quiet canals meandered throughout the town. The next few days were spent sightseeing. We were taken to the Summer Palace, St. Isaac's Cathedral, the Hermitage and many other fascinating places. Once again it was the people who caught my attention; the older people didn't give us a second look but the younger ones were eager to meet us. They would get into our hotel by dressing like Americans and then try to "make trade." One night some friends and I were taken to the apartment of some Russian students to share vodka and fruit. While walking to the subway we were told that there must be no loud laughing or talking. They warned us that if anyone asked, they were simply helping us find our way. We quietly made our way across town to the apartment but once inside we bombarded them with questions about everything: school, religion, work, families, their government. They knew what our impressions of the Soviet Union were and liked to tease us. For this reason we were left more confused than enlightened. Later that night at the hotel I saw the KGB catch a Russian boy trading with a visiting student. As the boy was taken away I wondered what would happen to him and if acquiring American clothes was really worth the risk.

When people ask me what the most memorable part of the voyage was, what usually comes to mind first are the magnificent mornings on board the ship. Often we would sleep on the deck at night under the stars. Early in the morning when the darkness turned to day we would stand huddled together in sleeping bags and watch what seemed like a miracle occur. At these moments I would reflect on the times which had so quickly become memories and anticipate the times toward which we were slowly sailing. And when the sun finished climbing over the horizon, it was like the end of a beautiful performance; a performance that made me want to cheer and applaud, to laugh, and to cry. Looking back on these mornings, it is easy for me to see that the most memorable part of the voyage was witnessing the creation of each new day.

The last morning as I watched the sun rise over Ft. Lauderdale, I thought about the cold weather and faces of Russia, about the cheerful voices in Japan and about the curious stares in China. As the sky slowly turned from orange to blue I reflected on all the places I had been, the people I had met and the things I had done. Probably never again would I experience such an incredible voyage or see some of the unique people I met. I knew there would be an emptiness inside me because of this, but I also knew there would be a feeling of fulfillment which would outlast the emptiness and remain with me forever. ♦

Kathryn Ingham shown here in Red Square, Moscow, is an economics major at Sweet Briar and will receive a certificate in management upon graduation in 1988. She first heard of the Pittsburgh Semester at Sea from Sweet Briar friends who had been on the program. During the fall term (September-December, 1986), she attended two to three classes per day while aboard ship, spending two and a half to three and a half hours in class, plus about two hours of study time for each class taken. She received full credit for the semester's work.

BY JOANNA MOSELEY
Exchange Scholar, St. Andrews University, Scotland

On April 21 and 22 Sweet Briar held the seventh annual Ewald Scholars Symposium focusing attention upon one of the most critical and controversial issues of this century. Sweet Briar audiences had the rare opportunity to hear a series of lectures and discussions by American and British authorities in international relations, intelligence, Russian diplomacy, weapons research and Star Wars technology.

MS. BETH MASTERS, assistant for strategic defense and space arms control policy, international security policy, from the office of the secretary of defense at the Pentagon, was Tuesday evening's kick-off speaker, offering a perspective on the Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly known as Star Wars. According to Ms. Masters, SDI is an integral part of arms control, designed to deflect missiles launched from the Soviet Union before they enter U.S. airspace, thereby rendering them ineffective. She stated that through the use of deterrence SDI was intended to be a form of "mutual protection and not a mutual threat." After a detailed and articulate lecture the audience took the opportunity to question Ms. Masters regarding doubts voiced by a number of scientific experts about the feasibility, cost and efficacy of the use of deterrence as a means to secure peace, as well as the political ramifications of such a system.

DR. PAUL F. WALKER, a nationally recognized expert and speaker on nuclear war and national security, opened Wednesday's program with his presentation "Race to Oblivion." A former arms control director for the Physicians for Social Responsibility and for the Union of Concerned Scientists, and visiting lecturer at Harvard's School of Government, he is now president of Klein Walker Associates. A Vietnam-era veteran who served as a Russian intelligence specialist, he is co-author of Winding Down: The Price of Defense (1982) and "Smart Weapons in Naval Warfare," Scientific American (May 1983). Walker presented a brief, informative history of nuclear weapons, using slides to illustrate the design, potential for destruction and aftereffects (known as the Nuclear Winter theory) which missiles such as Pershing, Cruise and Trident are capable of producing. In his opinion the improbability of SDI ever being technically feasible necessitates a demand for a nuclear freeze and a ban on nuclear weapons testing (such as the current testing in the Nevada region). He asked the audience to remember that this issue is literally "a matter of life and death" and one with which the American people should be very much concerned. Asked during the question period if he felt that mass demonstrations could be an important instrument in the debate, Walker asserted that action from the grass roots level is needed, on an individual, local and community level. Addressing students in the audience, he declared that more women should voice their opinions. "The choice is yours," he said. "You can make a difference on college campuses."

The symposium's third speaker, DR. ROBERT M. BOWMAN, has had a distinguished career in the U.S. Air

Beth Masters

Force, including 101 combat missions over Vietnam as a fighter pilot. Former manager of Advance Space Programs at General Dynamics, a man who once controlled half a billion dollars worth of space programs for the Air Force and DARPA (the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency), including what are now called Star Wars programs, today he is dedicated to combating the "weaponization of space," and is founder and president of the nonprofit Institute for Space and Security Studies. The most dramatic of the symposium's speakers, Bowman compared the SDI with the human body: if certain parts are destroyed, the whole system will fail. SDI, he said, could be annihilated simply by "a bucket of sand" or even "a thimble of sewing machine oil." He explained features in the design which would make it vulnerable to decoys, strategic cruise missiles carrying warheads, and fast-burn boosters. In contrast to Masters, Bowman concluded that SDI would make a first strike easier and more likely, that its only useful purpose is as an aggressive weapon. It is, he stated, "a blatant attempt [by the United States] to regain total military superiority," "a deadly weapon" and not the "crayon rainbow" that President Reagan has described. He called for the U.S. to stop being a "great and powerful nation" and to return to being a "great and good nation."

DR. FRANK BARNABY, a British nuclear scientist, former director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute and professor of peace studies at the Free University of Amsterdam presented the next address. Having had long experience working for the United Kingdom's Atomic Energy Authority, the British Medical Research Council and as executive secretary to the Pugwash Conferences on Science and World Affairs, Barnaby focused upon European concern about the threat to international security that such rapidly-advancing technology in nuclear weaponry presents. This causes, he explained, a move away from conventional defense deterrence (making tanks obsolete and inefficient), leading to an "automated battlefield," an era of "new barbarism," thus increasing the chances of a nuclear exchange. Reminding the audience that in Europe there are now 10,000 nuclear warheads and half a million Soviet troops positioned along the border between East and West Germany, Barnaby said that any political tension which might escalate into nuclear or even conventional exchanges could "kill us," the threat of war is one "we face." Barnaby explained that present-day national security means not only defense against an invader, but defense of the "political and social values of the country" and the preservation of the supply of necessary raw materials and strategic markets. He added that there is a concern in Europe with environmental threats such as acid rain, increasing global population pressure, economic low growth and high unemployment, shortages of nonrenewable resources and escalating north/south tension in which the superpowers could become involved. It is Dr. Barnaby's feeling that Europe must return to conventional defense systems, which are economically more viable and also a "nonprovocative" type of defense.

The final guest speaker was DR. ARKADY N. SHEVCHENKO, former under secretary general to the United Nations and Kremlin adviser, and the highest ranking Soviet official to defect to the West. Hailed by President Reagan as a "man of authority...with untold information regarding the real plans of the Soviets toward the Free World," Shevchenko knew all of the Kremlin leaders from Krushchev to Gorbachev and was the protégé of Gromyko. Now an American citizen, Shevchenko has written a best-selling autobiography, Breaking with Moscow, published in 1985 in 12 languages. During his presentation, "Gorbachev's Russia: SDI, the Realpolitik," he discussed current relations and diplomatic initiatives between the superpowers. He believes that the Soviets are more serious about control and verification of arms control than ever before. Furthermore it is his belief that SDI has played and can continue to play a useful role and that research must continue in space programs. From his personal encounters with Mikael Gorbachev, Shevchenko described his view of Gorbachev's future within the Soviet political system: "His chances are 50-50...[there is a] big danger because he will be accountable for problems in the Soviet Union...If he can modify, then we might have a new Soviet Union, particularly with the new generation." With less optimism than Dr. Walker and Dr. Bowman, Shevchenko concluded that "total elimination of nuclear weapons is an illusion, a naive illusion... we don't trust Soviets and we will never have a total friendship with the Soviet Union." Although time did not permit a formal question period, some fortunate audience members were able to discuss issues directly with Shevchenko and other speakers at the reception after the final lecture — a fitting and most interesting conclusion to the 1987 Ewald Scholars Program, the impact of which continued to be felt amongst faculty and students for many days after the speakers had left Sweet Briar's campus. ♦

Dr. Arkady N. Shevchenko

The Ewald Scholars Program was established in 1977 by Jane Roseberry Ewald Tolleson '52 and her late husband, John A. Ewald, Jr. In 1981 Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ewald, Sr. permanently endowed the program honoring their son. The first Ewald Symposium in 1981, "Hominids and Pongids," featured Jane Goodall, Biruté Galdikas, Francine Patterson and the late Dian Fossey. In 1982 the symposium on "Early Man" brought anthropologists Richard E. Leakey and Donald C. Johanson to Sweet Briar and in 1983 the symposium on "The New American Architecture" featured some of the country's leading architects, architectural historians and critics. "Foreign Policy in an Age of Economic Interdependence" in 1984 provided a platform for experts from business, labor, government and academia. In 1985 the Southeastern Historical Keyboard Society joined Sweet Briar College in celebrating the tercentenary of Bach, Handel and Scarlatti. In 1986 the program included lectures by three prominent women active in public life: Isabel Allende, noted Chilean novelist and niece of former president Salvador Allende; Maureen Reagan, special consultant to the Republican National Committee for Women's Issues; and Shirley Chisholm, America's first black congresswoman.

The Sweet Briar chapter of the American Association of University Professors was organized in 1946, 41 years ago; in July 1986 Sweet Briar's Gregory Armstrong, Charles A. Dana Professor of Religion, embarked on his year's tenure as president of the Virginia Conference of the AAUP. At the end of that year it seems appropriate to pause and consider the role that the AAUP plays in the life of the academic profession in general and, more specifically, here at Sweet Briar.

AAUP:

Alive and Well at SBC

BY RICHARD C. ROWLAND
Charles A. Dana Professor of English Emeritus
Sweet Briar College

This role has often been misunderstood by students, alumnae, governing boards and members of the general public, for the AAUP rarely receives much notice in the press except when it is involved in seeking to assure that reasonable procedures are observed in a highly controversial case; the impression is easily created that the Association's purpose is to defend the "kooky" fringe of academia. But a large part of the Association's work is quiet and unpublicized; many of its statements of policy were created in cooperation with such other respected bodies as the Association of American Colleges, the American Council on Education and the U.S. National Student Association.

The Association was founded in 1915 in order (in the words of its constitution, adopted in 1916) "to facilitate a more effective cooperation among teachers and research scholars in universities and colleges, and in professional schools of similar grades, for the promotion of the interests of higher education and research, and in general to increase the usefulness and advance the standards, ideals, and welfare of the profession." Among "the founding fathers" of this organization were such eminent figures as John Dewey of Columbia University, perhaps America's most influential philosopher (who became the first president of the Association) and Arthur O. Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins University, a distinguished literary scholar, whose The Great Chain of Being is still a familiar friend to most Ph.D.s in literature.

Over the years it has become nationally known primarily through two activities. In 1940 representatives of the AAUP met with representatives of the Association of American Colleges to formulate a joint statement on academic freedom and tenure, which has become the basic document defining standards by which teachers should be hired and fired. The existence of this document has been instrumental in encouraging many colleges to codify and regularize the machinery by which they perform these necessary functions.

Annually the Association receives reports on specific cases which may lead to "censure" of the governing body or administration of an institution which has violated the principles of this joint statement. Such censure, of course, has no legal force; it is merely a warning signal to the profession. Nor is it automatic; the writer was present on one occasion when the membership did not sustain its committee's recommendation of censure of a well-known university.

Since 1958 the Association has conducted an annual survey of faculty compensation at all American institutions of higher learning, which records comparative figures for base salary, as well as total compensation (including those fringe benefits which have often been a very important means of bringing faculty members to smaller colleges). There is no way of determining the role this survey has played in improving the financial condition of a notoriously poorly-paid profession, but surely it has been considerable. Locally, average compensation for the faculty at Sweet Briar was $9,654 in 1964-65; by 1984-85, it was $34,500.

These are the highly visible parts of the Association's activities, but largely unknown to the public are the many times when staff members in the Washington office are consulted about individual problems on campuses across the country. The only public evidence of this is the report at the annual meeting which describes anonymously the Association's role in some of these cases; for instance, in 1985 the national office handled 1,222 cases and complaints and helped to resolve many of them to the satisfaction of both parties. In such litigious times as ours this represents an enormous saving to both teachers and institutions, not to mention the potential damage to both parties in the publicity attendant upon public charges and counter-charges. This past year the Association has removed more institutions from its censured list than it has had to add, three versus two. Two cases held over from 1985 were successfully resolved and the imposition of censure was avoided. These results are a sign of quiet off-stage work, resulting in improved conditions on several campuses. With an ever-increasing burden of such work the Washington office has been unfailingly cooperative and patient; most of us who have served as presidents of the Sweet Briar chapter have at some time called upon the people in Washington to hold our hands. We believe that this has been part of the reason that SBC has never had a major or damaging case brought to public attention.

During the 1960s when all sorts of pressures were felt by all sorts of American institutions, the National Education Association and the American Federation of Teachers began to unionize the teaching profession on the college level. It became a matter of concern to the AAUP; their intention had never been to be a "labor union." They had defended the rights of teachers whether they were members of the AAUP or not. But in spite of fears that the movement toward unionization would drain financial resources needed to perform the functions defined in their constitution, the Association, after bitter debate, agreed to create a collective bargaining section to perform this role for faculties who preferred to elect the AAUP as the agent in negotiating contracts. There are now some 40 American colleges, universities and multi-campus systems for whom the Association plays this role. This change has been at a cost; membership has shrunk as certain members did not believe that their dues should be used in a way they had not endorsed. But collective bargaining remains a minor part of the concerns of the Association. It has over the years endorsed statements on a wide variety of concerns: discrimination; sexual harassment; the government of colleges and universities; the role of faculty in budgetary and salary matters; faculty status of college and university librarians; professional ethics; rights and freedoms of students; faculty workloads; teaching evaluation; academic retirement and insurance plans among many others.

Sweet Briar's involvement in AAUP matters began before there was a chapter at the College, for Miss Meta Glass, the College's third president, was a representative of the Association of American Colleges on the committee which wrote the 1940 Joint Statement on Academic Freedom and Tenure. In 1977 at the 63rd annual meeting of the AAUP Mark Ingraham, Professor of Mathematics Emeritus and Dean Emeritus of the College of Letters and Sciences at the University of Wisconsin and president of the AAUP from 1938 to 1940, paid charming tribute to Miss Glass's work on that committee:

"Meta Glass, whose opinions were about as conservative as those of her brother, Senator Carter Glass, made a great contribution through her ability to read a statement literally. Time and again she made it clear that none of us was saying exactly what he meant. I believe she was a successful college president, but I am sure she would have been a great book editor."

In spite of her participation in the formulation of this statement, Miss Glass saw no need for a chapter of the AAUP at Sweet Briar and discouraged efforts to form one; perhaps it is a natural failing of all governors to believe that such documents are written only for institutions less wisely governed than the one he or she administers. It was therefore in 1946 in the brief interval between Miss Glass's departure and Miss Martha Lucas's arrival to become the College's fourth president that a group of faculty members got together and organized the Sweet Briar chapter with Lysbeth Muncy of the history department as its first president. When Miss Lucas assumed office, members of the chapter visited her to inform her of its formation; Miss Lucas expressed her delight and asked if she could become an associate member (faculty members who assume an administrative post are eligible to become associate members;

Meta Glass, Sweet Briar's third president, participated in the writing of the Joint Statement on Academic Freedom and Tenure but opposed the formation of the Sweet Briar chapter of the AAUP.

Lysbeth Muncy, Charles A. Dana Professor of History Emeritus, served as the first president of the Sweet Briar chapter of the AAUP.

others of our presidents and deans have been associate members).

Since then, the Sweet Briar chapter has flourished. There are few veteran faculty members who have not at some time served as its president or secretary. Perhaps its most significant achievement was in 1966 — we seem to crop up with 20-year cycles of significant events — when the Sweet Briar chapter visited the president and dean to urge that the College should prepare a faculty handbook bringing together various kinds of information about college policy, faculty benefits and community affairs which would be of value to all faculty, but especially to newcomers. The absence of such a handbook had been noted in 1960 by the Visiting Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools during its reaccreditation visit; the committee suggested that one should be prepared. When it became clear that the administration did not find itself able to do so, the AAUP chapter undertook to produce one at its own expense. The creation of such a handbook is a very time-consuming job but a committee was formed and, led by Barbara Blair, professor of chemistry, wrote a thorough and useful handbook. The following year the handbook was taken over by the president's office and a new edition has been prepared each year since.

In the past Sweet Briar faculty members have participated on both state and national levels (the writer, for instance, has twice served on special committees to investigate a complaint to the national office, though one was a true comedy of errors as, upon arrival at the campus in question, we found the administration unwilling to be interviewed and the plaintiff almost equally uncooperative). Now Greg Armstrong has just completed a year as president of the Virginia Conference.

One fact, surely a significant one, Mr. Armstrong calls to our attention: Sweet Briar College has a higher percentage of its faculty members in the AAUP than any other institution in Virginia. Sweet Briar has 40 members, Hollins has 9, Washington and Lee 12, V.P.I. 63, the University with its large faculty only 111, William and Mary 51.

How does one explain this unusual record? — for similar figures have existed certainly back into the '60s. Some interpreters would say that Sweet Briar's high membership is a danger signal, and it is probably true that a real crisis on campus is likely to lead to a sudden dramatic increase in AAUP membership. However, a steady involvement is different. We believe that the high Sweet Briar membership is due to the fact that the faculty members who have led campus opinion over the years — people like Beth Muncy, Lucy Crawford, Harriet Rogers, Carol Rice, Elisabeth Möller, Laura Buckham, Jane Belcher and Milan Hapala, and more recently John McClenon, Margaret Simpson, George Lenz, Aileen Laing, Susan Piepho and Greg Armstrong — have believed in the importance of the AAUP's mission, in the importance of faculty participation in college governance, in clearly stated and carefully observed regulation of the process by which an able faculty is recruited and in a climate in which the teaching profession is seen to be a dignified and honorable one. ♦

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS
BY MARGARET A. FOGARTY, president of the Class of 1987

"...We're turning the last page of a wonderful chapter in our lives...A chapter of intense self-growth, hard-won successes and tremendous learning experiences."

"The Sweet Briar experience is certainly a rich one...The Sweet Briar community is a uniquely warm and supportive one."

"...We've had such wonderful women mentors...Dr. Fry, Susan Lehman, Dean Lohner and our women faculty. These people, with their gentle but firm guidance and their truly admirable example, have shown us what it is to be feminine and every bit an equal — someone to be reckoned with."

"...With our sense of what is moral, just and worth having, we're ready to make our mark in the best way we know how."

"Our generation faces issues such as AIDS, crack, one in two marriages ending in divorce, a breakdown of family values, a serious nuclear threat. It's scary; it's darn scary. But we'll...face it with a sense of mission, a tolerance for nothing less than justice. This isn't really a choice — it's a responsibility."

Reunion:

A Time of Refreshment and Recreation for Mind, Heart and Soul

BY THE REVEREND
SUSAN LEHMAN
Chaplain, Sweet Briar College

In Christian churches, Protestant and Roman Catholic, this sixth Sunday of the Easter Season is our occasion for hearing one of the great "I Am" passages from the Gospel of John. "I am the true vine and my father is the vinedresser. Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit alone, neither can you. I am the vine, you are the branches. He who abides in me, and I in him, bears much fruit." The Church's long devotion to this passage is well deserved, for in each of the great "I am" statements we are given an image for expressing who we believe our God to be; what we know about ourselves; and a confession of our own possibility.

God the vinedresser is an image consistent with the Church's understanding of God as transcendent, watchful, judging and caring. Jesus as the vine expresses our historic understanding that in Christ, God is organically, incarnationally related to the creation of which we are a part. And to call ourselves branches, capable of bearing fruit, is a particularly apt, albeit partial, way to define the human condition. As the branch cannot survive apart from the vine, so it is true that none of us can survive alone. We have life, not of our own making, but as a gift, given to us. As the vine thrives because the soil yields its goodness, and there is water enough, and not too much sun, and nighttime rest, so we too are dependent on complex systems—familial, economic, political and social—working together to produce an environment wherein we thrive. Branches capable of bearing fruit remind us that in our very nature we are born to be makers and doers, building and shaping. Not only are we born to be productive, but the way we understand our destiny is commanded by the text. As branches, each intended to be productive from what is given, we are saved from reducing the human community to a dull monotony of sameness, for each branch is required only and ultimately to produce out of its unique possibility. By the same token this image taken out of nature protects us from the tyranny of competition. The fruit we bear from the resources given to us is sufficient. The artificial values that men and women impose on one another are not the standard by which the watchful vinedresser tends his vineyard.

In any congregation on a Sunday morning the Johannine text serves as an appropriate vehicle for rehearsing the fundamentals of the Christian faith. On the occasion of a college reunion there is a special opportunity to detail the process whereby faithful men and women appreciate what it means to live fruitful lives. In fact, reunions may be the best possible setting for recognizing what the gospel means by its command to bear fruit. We come together out of a common past that was at the most only four years long, and since then, whether for five or 55 years, we have lived apart from this place and the social organization of the College. Reunions bring us back, reminding us of how difficult it is to get to Sweet Briar, via Lynchburg. We unpack our suitcases in dormitory rooms that are at once strange and perhaps uncomfortable, given our present style of life, and yet familiar as we recall moving in as freshmen, seeking to make a home for ourselves. We tour a campus that is essentially the same and yet for some of us, different. Drive-ways that were once there now are gone; where we took our meals is now an art gallery; where we once prayed is now the Information Center. Settling in for a couple of days, our senses are awakened to the time of our youth, and our en-agement with each other is marked by efforts to find continuities between who we were then and what we have become. We are helped by our classmates who can sometimes recall what we had forgotten: our idiosyncrasies, our youthful hopes and aspirations, our longings, fears and disappointments. The guiding questions they ask us include: "Do you remember when. . .?"; "Whatever happened to. . .?" These serve to recall for us who we were and what we were struggling to become. And as reunions make their first appeal to our sense of the past, so are they intensely focused on the present. Our classmates inquire, "Where are you living?"; "What work are you doing?"; "Do you have a family?"; "Have you seen so-and-so recently?"; "Do you have pictures of children/grandchildren?" These are the questions that guide us to an appreciation of how fruitful our lives have been. They permit us to acknowledge where we have accomplished what we once said we wanted, and thus where we have fulfilled our youthful longings—and where circumstances have altered what we once desired, and what we now know to have been inappropriate or not possible. The very process of narrating to one another how we happen to be in our present situations gives us the opportunity to embrace our triumphs and our failures, our experiences of pain and pleasure, delight and disappointment, life and death. . . the very fruits of life itself.

My perception is that a reunion is a bracketed block of time that reactivates our memories in search of the past; requires of us an accounting of what we have done with our lives to the present; invites us to state our intention for the future. By next reunion, we declare, we will. . . have completed an advanced degree. . . have changed jobs. . . have children in school all day. . . have married grandchildren.

In many ways a reunion is like a retreat in the religious tradition. It is a time apart in a far-away place. Its purpose is to remind us of the gifts we have been given: the faculty and staff who made the difference in our lives, helping us to see ourselves more accurately—our possibilities, our limitations—teaching us to appreciate the world in new and more profound ways; the friends and classmates who loved and cared for us when we were lonely or afraid; the institution itself that challenged us to do good academic work and taught us to live close at hand with people we liked and found appealing, and with people we did not particularly like and whose habits irritated us. Like a retreat, a reunion gives us a time to count our blessings. Through the process of talk—conversations at picnics, in the dorms, on bird walks, over cocktails—we give an accounting of ourselves, a confession of sorts. And in the tradition of the religious retreat, reunions call forth acts of thanksgiving and the offering of ourselves, our time and money, as a dedication to give back a portion of what we have received. I am persuaded that the churches I have worked with over the years could learn much from reunions at Sweet Briar about what it means to give back in dollars and cents a fair portion of what we have been given, and to do so generously, publicly, proudly and with such playfulness.

And finally, we judge the usefulness of a retreat by how refreshed the participants are at its conclusion. In body, heart, mind and soul, the success of a retreat, like a reunion, is measured by the extent to which we are renewed by energy because we have experienced at a deep level a reconnection to the source of our lives. Although some of you may leave weary in body from having spent too much of the night awake, my hope is that this reunion has been for you a time of refreshment and recreation for your mind, heart and soul, and that you will go forth from here abiding in the giftedness of this most privileged time and place and will continue to bear much fruit on behalf of God's World.

W e came on the train, like lambs to the slaughter;
 I was scared to death, timid, quite shy.
 Didn't know how to act, wished I could go back
 And was trying so hard not to cry.
 But I'd love it!

Sweet Briar is certainly not Broadway
 Nor Paris, Hong Kong nor Malay.
 It's out in the sticks and a hard place to find
 But I'd rather have had it that way.
 We loved it!

The food was not always the greatest.
 Didn't taste like a French chef to me.
 We ate it, complaining the whole time,
 But none of us died, as you see.
 We loved it!

The classes were small and demanding.
 They knew when you sneaked in or skipped.
 I tried every way to play hooky
 But somehow I always got nipped.
 We loved it!

The profs had illustrious titles
 From Masters to Ph.D.
 We knew we knew more than they did,
 In spite of the doctorate degree.
 We loved it!

There's one great thing about Sweet Briar—
 Its climate is indeed sublime.
 I've tried to find something ugly—
 You've really got me this time.
 We loved it!

A hypnotic thing about Sweet Briar
 Is the mystical hold on us here.
 We thought we had outgrown our school days
 But look where we're sitting this year.
 We loved it!

You'd have thought with such admiration
 Wild horses couldn't tear us away.
 But we went up the road every weekend
 Or over the mountains to play.
 We loved it!

With white heads and gaits grown faltering,
 We can still toddle over the place
 And brag of what we did in our day—
 How can we have the face!
 We loved it!

I hope that you feel as I do—
 My child, then her child took my place.
 They followed my footsteps to Sweet Briar,
 So three of us now sing her praise.
 We loved it!

From Monument Hill to the orchard,
 We hope we've not missed any spot.
 We can feast on those places we've dreamed of,
 Whether this is our last fling or not.
 We loved it!

Auf wiedersehen!

Memorial day weekend was another beautiful reunion at Sweet Briar. Alumnae from the Class of 1927 to the Class of 1982 returned to campus—to visit old friends, to see familiar sights, to become reacquainted with the College. There was a record turnout of alumnae, husbands and children (630+!).

One reason for the phenomenal attendance each May is the Reunion Giving Program. The key aspect of reunion giving is that classmates call classmates, not only to encourage financial support for the College, but also to stress the importance of remembering Sweet Briar in many different ways—by volunteering service, recruiting students, selling bulbs and making monetary contributions. These contacts renew ties with and interest in Sweet Briar.

The Alumnae Fund Committee has set the policy for Reunion classes that all classes from the 5th through the 45th Reunions count only unrestricted Alumnae Fund gifts toward their Reunion class goals. They also count gifts only in the Reunion year. Fiftieth Reunion classes and beyond are permitted to count all gifts for all purposes over several years.

The Nancy Dowd Burton Award is presented each year to the class which raises the largest unrestricted gift in that year.

Ginger Newman Blanchard '60, National Reunion Giving Chairman, spearheaded the program for 1986-87.

Her successor, Claire Cannon Christopher '58, will assume the post on July 1, 1987. Both of these alumnae work hand-in-hand with each Reunion class to develop class leadership, enthusiasm and support.

The highlights of each class's special Reunion program follow. The class totals listed indicate the gift announced by each class at the Reunion Convocation on Saturday morning, May 23.

Class of 1927

Back for their 60th Reunion, members of the Class of 1927 announced a gift of $34,691 in restricted and unrestricted gifts over a two-year period. Class officers for the past five years were Emily Jones Hodge, Class President; Jeanette (Dan) Boone, Fund Agent; and Kitty Wilson Garnett, Class Secretary.

Class of 1932

Fund Agent Eleanor Wright Conway worked with Class President Ruth Remon McRae and Secretary Em Green Kennon to raise an incredible gift for their 55th Reunion—$104,598 in restricted and unrestricted gifts over a two-year period. This represented the largest 55th Reunion class gift in Sweet Briar's history.

New Class Officers

Eleanor Wright Conway, President
Marjorie Ward Cross, Fund Agent
Em Green Kennon, Secretary

Class of 1937

The Class of 1937 broke all records for a 50th Reunion class by presenting a gift of $238,193, representing restricted and unrestricted gifts over a two-year period. Led by Reunion Gifts Chairman Nancy Nalle Genung, the committee contacted each member of the class. Peggy Cruikshank Dyer, Reunion Chairman, Ellen Lee Snodgrass Park, Class President, Lib Lee McPhail, Fund Agent and Margaret Cornwell Schmidt, Secretary, ably assisted Nancy in her efforts.

New Class Officers

Lillian Lambert Pennington, President
Nancy Nalle Genung, Fund Agent
Natalie Hopkins Griggs, Secretary

Class of 1942

Betty Hanger Lippincott, Reunion Gifts Chairman, Sally Schall Van Allen, Class President, Si Walke Rogers, Fund Agent and Sudie Clark Hanger, Secretary, joined forces with an outstanding Reunion Gifts Committee to put 1942 on the map by announcing the largest 45th Reunion gift in the College's history—$75,404 in unrestricted gifts for the Alumnae Fund. The Class of 1942 also had the distinction this year of having the largest participation of any Reunion class—89%!

New Class Officers

Eugenia Burnett Affel, President
Si Walke Rogers, Fund Agent
Polly Peyton Turner, Secretary

Class of 1947

The Class of 1947, under the leadership of Jane Warner Williams, Reunion Gifts Chairman, undertook their second special Reunion Gifts campaign. Jane, joined by Class President Kay Weisiger Osborne and Secretary Carol Blanton McCord, worked with her committee to contact every member of the class. Their goal was twofold, to raise giving sights among classmates and to bring class members back together in celebration of their 40th. They presented the College with a special Reunion gift of $53,514.

New Class Officers

Judy Burnett Halsey, President
Janet Amilon Wagner, Co-Fund Agent
Eleanor Crumrine Stewart, Co-Fund Agent
Saravette Royster Trotter, Secretary

Class of 1952

Kitchie Roseberry Tolleson and Sally Fishburn Fulton, Reunion Gifts Co-Chairmen, worked with a committee of 15 classmates to raise a special gift in honor of their 35th Reunion—$52,000.52! The class also boasted a high level of participation from its 139 classmates—71%.

New Class Officers

Class of 1957

Led by Reunion Gifts Chairman Nannette McBurney Crowdus, the Class of 1957 claimed the Nancy Dowd Burton Award for the largest unrestricted gift this year—$78,000. Their gift also represented the largest 30th Reunion gift in Sweet Briar's history. Char Heuer de Serio, Fund Agent, Diane Duffield Wood, Class President and Marjorie Whitson Aude, Secretary, were there providing support and help whenever called. Being one of Sweet Briar's most spirited classes, participation and enthusiasm were high throughout the year. Special thanks go to the 1957 Reunion Gifts Committee for making an extra effort to contact each classmate personally.

Class of 1962

The Class of 1962, under the leadership of Nancy Hudler Keuffel and Ann Ritchey Baruch, Reunion Gifts Co-Chairmen, undertook a very special 25th Reunion Gift to Sweet Briar. With class participation of 70%, they succeeded in raising $62,355 in unrestricted funds for the College. Enthusiasm was high throughout the year—25% of the class returned for Reunion!

New Class Officers

Brooke Hamilton Cressall, President
Anne Parker Schmalz, Fund Agent
Kim Patmore Cool, Secretary

Class of 1967

The first 20th Reunion class to formally join in the Reunion Giving Program, the Class of 1967 was led by Gretchen Bullard Barber, Reunion Gifts Chairman, Page Munroe Renger, Class President, Lindsay Smith Newsom, Fund Agent and Judi Bensen Stigle, Secretary. They worked with a committee of 26 classmates to contact every member of their 199-member class and presented the College with a gift of $22,413. Twenty percent of their classmates returned for Reunion.

New Class Officers

Judy Powell Martin, President
Sue Tucker, Fund Agent

SWEET BRIAR HOUSE:

A Testament to Loyalty

BY ANN MARSHALL
WHITLEY '47

Director and Curator
Sweet Briar Museum

Photos by David I. Abrams

In midsummer of 1983 Sweet Briar was preparing for the arrival of its seventh president, Dr. Nenah E. Fry. Sweet Briar House, home to Sweet Briar presidents, was in need of considerable attention inside and out. Recognized as the finest country Tuscan villa in the state of Virginia, the house is a Virginia Historic Landmark and has been on the National Register of Historic Places since that organization was started.

President and Mrs. Harold Whiteman, its last tenants, had loved every nook and cranny of the warm old house and it had been well used. However, tenants, guests, time and events had taken toll. To make way for the vast amount of worldly goods belonging to the Whiteman family in 1971, many of the antique and historic pieces of Sweet Briar furniture, which had been in the house since the Fletcher and Williams families lived there, had been dispersed to attics, offices and other storage areas. Twelve years later when the Whitemans left, Sweet Briar House's many rooms were in need not only of refurbishing but of restocking.

President Fry was accustomed to apartment living; her belongings fulfilled only her personal needs. Many of the scattered pieces were returned to the house from other areas of the campus, but there were still gaps, bare spots and empty walls. Carpets, pictures, assorted pieces of furniture, draperies, bedspreads, china, crystal, linens and a myriad of other decorative items were needed to bring the proud old house back into its own.

President Fry suggested that since the house is of the Victorian era we make every effort to return it to that period in furnishings and decor; thus the Victorian antiques came home again after a 12-year absence.

Dean Fontaine Belford suggested we decorate the mansion in-house, saying, "We are as good as any decorator!"—so a loose committee (Dean Belford, President Fry, Marilyn Ross, assistant to the president, and I) assembled from time to time to look over books of wallpaper, paint swatches and fabrics. Frequent conferences over a period of many months with Charles Kestner, director of buildings, resulted in a new look for the house.

Walls were scaled, painted and papered. Worn rugs were removed and oriental carpets were laid over scrubbed and polished dark pine floors. Woodwork was painted and 84 pieces of antique furniture were refinished, re-upholstered, mended and polished.

We still had many needs. Our small committee decided to sound out the alumnae to see if they might share some of their lovely possessions, things befitting an elegant and historical 19th-century house. The call went out via flyers in alumnae packets at Alumnae Council, overseers' meetings and class reunions and by requests in the Alumnae Magazine. In due time our hopes began to be realized.

Beautiful, valuable articles arrived by moving van, mail, private car, the college van—and some were hand-carried. Benches, couches, tables, chairs, linens, rugs, pictures, silver and china appeared. Most gifts were announced by phone call or letter from Maryland, Michigan, Illinois, Virginia, Ohio, the Carolinas, Pennsylvania and D.C., as well as from friends living nearby.

Our first grand surprise, 'though a long time "on the way," came at the beginning of our project quite by chance. Margaret Thomas Kruesi '12 had died in the early '70s. In her will she left "a desk" to Sweet Briar. The lawyers who settled her estate sent this information by letter upon her death, but the letter apparently was filed and forgotten and the desk never arrived. In early 1983 the letter from the lawyers surfaced and after nearly eight years a tracer was sent. The desk was found in a storage warehouse in Chattanooga. Just before President Fry's inauguration (October 1983) two great crates were delivered to the back porch of Sweet Briar House—the desk. And what a magnificent piece of furniture it is!

We uncrate a c.1775 English Chippendale Chinoiserie secretary-desk. The glass-front bookcase sits atop a slant-front desk. Both pieces are enameled a soft cream tan with touches of sage green. Appropriate European versions of oriental scenes are painted inside and out; there is much gold leaf and the original brass drawer pulls are still in place. A similar handsome desk is in New York's Metropolitan Museum. We are elated with our rare and valuable prize.

Next, a telephone call from northern Virginia told us we could have the Sweet Briar sofas back. We had no idea what these were but discovered that in the early 1930s two grand Philadelphia-type Empire sofas with heavily-carved legs and arms had been sold from Sweet Briar. We assumed that President Meta Glass probably needed money at this period of the Great Depression; Sweet Briar House at that time was a rooming-house for several members of the faculty. The sofas resided with members of the family of Emmy Lou Thomson '47 for more than 50 years but now adorn the east parlor.

Mary Anderson (Sally) Bowley '44 presented a round cherry Queen Anne bird cage tea table. It is late 18th century, possibly from New York's Hudson River Valley. Sally also gave an exquisite mahogany Sheraton drop leaf dining table c.1820. A New England piece, it is used as an extra table in the dining room for serving and buffets.

Edith Durrell Marshall '21 sent a pair of mahogany Centennial Sheraton benches in the Federal style. These are copies of a New York design of 1805, made for the 1876 Philadelphia Centennial Exposition. Edith also sent a pair of glass oil lamp bases in the Lincoln Drapery design of 1865. Now electrified, they light the bedroom in the west tower.

One of six Elephant Folio-size original lithographs from Audubon's series of American quadrupeds. A gift from Jean Van Horne Baber '33.

Top: This mid-19th Century American silver service graces the dining room. A gift from Jean Van Horne Baber '33. The Victorian tray once belonged to President Harold Whiteman's grandmother. Gift of President and Mrs. Whiteman.

Right: A sterling silver repoussé punch bowl (English) is the gift of the Mellen children in memory of their mother Frances Burnett Mellen '25. The bowl sits atop a late 18th century cherry bird cage Queen Anne tea table. Gift of Mary Anderson Bowley '44.

When Jean Van Horne Baber '33 asked if we could use some Audubon pictures, we said "Yes," thinking of Audubon's bird engravings. The pictures turned out to be original Elephant Folio-size lithographs from the Quadruped series done in Philadelphia in the 1830s and '40s. In mint condition, they were presented to Sweet Briar on the 200th birthday of John James Audubon and now grace the dining room. Jean also gave one original Elephant Folio engraving of Havell's tern, which is in the president's library. As a lovely extra, Jean sent a needlepoint picture that she designed and stitched from a photo of Sweet Briar House taken by Martha von Briesen '31.

A great barrel of china came from Martha Holton Glesser '45—a complete set of the Sweet Briar china of the late 1920s. Made for the College by Royal Cauldon in England, it is blue and white. Martha's mother, Rachel Lloyd Holton '17, purchased the set; Martha inherited it but felt it would be more useful at the College. "Besides," she said, "my sons aren't interested in Sweet Briar china." President Fry is enjoying this gift especially for luncheon use. Martha also noticed that a big mirror was needed for the back entrance hall and brought from Michigan a fine large mahogany-framed mirror to hang over a Hepplewhite chest of drawers of the 1820 period.

Melissa Ann McGee Keshishian '71 helped by covering the floor in the Pannell bedroom with a lovely soft Persian carpet. Its muted tans, reds and blues on a cream-colored ground are perfect with the great mahogany Fletcher tester bed with its blue embroidered hangings, a legacy from President Pannell.

Each of the guest bedrooms in the house has been named for one of our past presidents and in each room hangs a picture and biography of the president for whom the room is named. When the Refectory was transformed from dining room into the Pannell Center Art Gallery, the heavy, solid brass push plates from the swinging doors were recycled into nameplates for the bedroom doors.

Another carpet was given by Nannette McBurney Crowds '57. It is an awe-inspiring 23-foot Sarouk, c.1880. The varied blues and pinks in a tight pattern would have been perfect for the east parlor, but we discovered that it was too long for any room in the house. Instead it graces the period parlor in the Sweet Briar Museum, where we have 15 choice pieces of antique Sweet Briar furniture of the 1820-1840 period on display.

More pictures came. Dr. Elizabeth Tidball (Board of Overseers 1978-1984) sent a pair of bird prints and a silk screen print of musical instruments. These joined a very large needlepoint portrait of George Washington from the estate of Mary Clark Rogers '13, a needlepoint of the Sweet Briar seal by Carla de Creny '51 and an antique English sampler (1797) given by the Whitemans, as well as a number of prints from the Whitemans and from Ann Marshall Whitley '47.

Jeanette (Dan) Boone '27 donated a beautiful carved 19th-century Philadelphia Chippendale armchair and a Japanese tea caddy of porcelain and silver. Helen McMahon '23 gave a Sheffield carving set and a folding gold fan for the west parlor fireplace.

Virginia Foster Gruen '34 shipped two huge boxes of assorted table linens from Indianapolis; these receive rave reviews every time there is a party in the house. There are many bridge table sets of exquisite lace and embroidery, full Army-Navy lace cloths, damask cloths and napkins of all descriptions. Added to these are damask napkins from Suzanne Wilson Rutherford '35. Sally Bowley '44 donated a large round damask cloth for the Fletcher dining room table. Other lovely linens came from Deborah Freeman Cooper '50 and Martha von Briesen '31. Stainless steel for the kitchen came from Mary Huntington Harrison '30 and Edith Durrell Marshall '21.

Pieces from a large service of late 19th century Chinese rose medallion porcelain, a gift from Anne Lauman Bussey '37, are displayed throughout the house and museum.

We have received gifts of silver. In addition to a sterling silver tea and coffee service in the Adam style from Helen Finch Halford '26 and a superb repoussé punch bowl from the family of Mary Ann Mellen Root '53 in memory of her mother, Frances Burnett Mellen '25, we have a pair of Gorham sterling sweetmeat dishes on pedestals from Helen B. Wolcott '35 and nine various plated articles from Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle '35, which include serving pieces, a breakfast coffee set, bowls and cake plates. Just arrived is an American Victorian coffee and tea service, another magnificent gift from Jean Van Horne Baber. It is a nine-piece service complete with coffee urn and tray, manufactured about the time that Elijah Fletcher was remodeling Sweet Briar House in the mid-1800s—another prize for the dining room. Martha von Briesen and Deborah Cooper also contributed silver articles for the dining room.

During the tenure of President Anne Gary Pannell in the '60s a number of exceptional antiques came to the house from Mary Clark Rogers '13. These items remain in place throughout the house and include chests, desks, tables, oil portraits and a number of French prints primarily of the Napoleonic period.

The Harold Whitemans left the house a legacy of candlesticks, Wedgwood pieces, mantel garniture, china plates, silver and furniture. They felt that these should stay to add to the charm of the house. Books for empty shelves in guest chambers have come from many sources to add a touch of warmth to the rooms and for the enjoyment of those visiting.

One other dramatic item that is most eye-catching is the beautiful Belgian crystal chandelier hanging in the middle parlor, a gift from Cornelia Wailes Wailes '26 and her husband, Edward Thompson Wailes.

This sounds like a flood tide of gifts—enough to fill the average house—but then Sweet Briar House is not the average house. Including the basement level, it has 23 rooms, eight bathrooms and five halls. Under other circumstances I would call the house a wife-killer!

So many have done so much to make Sweet Briar House worthy of its National Register plaque. The love and affection that goes with these gifts is ever a heartwarming reassurance: with such love we can achieve anything. Sweet Briar House stands proudly, refreshed within and without—a testament to the loyalty of its wonderful and generous alumnae and other friends. ♦

The Wilmer and Pauline BLACKWELL Fund

BY MARY HUGHES BLACKWELL '28

Wilmer Carter Blackwell came to live in the Farm House at Sweet Briar with his wife, Pauline (Polly), and sons, Wilmer Alexander (Sonny) and James Hancock (Jimps), following his appointment as farm manager of the College in 1925. In those halcyon days between two world wars Sweet Briar was a very tight-knit community with most of the faculty and staff living on campus. The small student body (referred to as "the girls" in those days) was restricted to the environs of campus by college rules as well as limited transportation facilities.

Shortly after coming to Sweet Briar, "Pop" Blackwell, as he was affectionately called, bought out the livery stable in Amherst and brought the horses to campus where they were stabled behind the Farm House. These horses were the nucleus of the riding program which was later incorporated into the physical education department by Miss Harriet Rogers.

While "Pop" was running the farm, "Ma Black" was making a place for herself in the community by offering T.L.C. to the lonely, the troubled, the homesick and the ill. She was a one-woman social services program, especially for the lowly-paid farm workers, procuring medicine for the sick and food and clothing for the needy. All the while she was managing a household, attending to the needs of her family and providing three meals a day for a varying number of appreciative guests.

"Pop" Blackwell prepares for the hunt.

From time to time a few students lived with the Blackwells because of a shortage of dorm space or some physical problem incompatible with dormitory life. Many other students found their way to the Farm House to enjoy the warmth and joie de vivre of this household, which was noted for its bountiful table, its wit and good humor and its informality.

It was only natural that faculty, staff and students join forces in their leisure hours to amuse themselves in various ways. Those who were interested in riding were drawn to the Blackwells, as "Pop" was an excellent horseman and enjoyed all activities associated with riding. He occasionally took a group of four or five riders on an overnight ride to their "camp," an old cabin about 10 miles from campus. "Ma Black" would ride to the cabin in a truck with stable hands to set up camp and have a hot supper awaiting their arrival.

Fox hunting was a favorite pastime. "Pop" kept his own pack of hounds, who were often named for some of his friends and riders: "Muddy Boone," "Gert" and "Dan" joined "Sweet Lips" and others to give chase and lift their voices in jubilation when they had a hot trail. "Pop" knew each voice. His greatest delight was to sit quietly astride his horse and listen to his hounds in pursuit. "That's Sweet Lips," or, "That's Dan," he would say as he identified one after the other.

As the riding program evolved and flourished under the guidance of Harriet Rogers, "Pop" continued to ride with the students and took part in horse shows and hunts on and off campus.

Tales about the Blackwell family days at Sweet Briar are legend. Whenever two or more "girls" of a certain age gather, stories about them invariably begin with, "Do you remember the time 'Pop' took us on a moonlight ride to..." or, "Do you remember the time 'Ma Black' took me in when..." and memories come rushing back about dozens of experiences which enriched their Sweet Briar years.

Liz Stevenson Tate '30 and Winnie West Morris '28 are two such alumnae who often reminisce about those days and cherish happy memories of their years of riding at Sweet Briar. A few months ago they sent a gift to Sweet Briar to establish "The Wilmer and Pauline Blackwell Fund" to be used in the riding program "to perpetuate fox hunting by the Sweet Briar students." Liz and Winnie stated that because expenses related to fox hunting are escalating and could become beyond reach of many, they hope that other contributions to the fund will be made so that money will be provided for "capping" fees and other expenses. The fact that these two alumnae honor the memory of "Pop" and "Ma Black" after a lapse of more than half a century confirms the lasting influence of those two remarkable people. ♦

After reading the article entitled "Working Mothers and Their Children" by Catherine Seaman in the spring issue of the alumnae magazine, I very much want to respond at least to some of what she says. I do this not only because I feel an obligation to express my values, which I believe many other people share, but also because I hope you may be interested in publishing future articles which support women and men who are "unpaid homemakers" and believe that what they are doing is very important.

The main thrust of this article seems to me to be that women's self-esteem and feelings of competence suffer when they stay at home tending their marriage and families, and because of this other people or agencies should be willing to support a child care system so that these people can fulfill themselves whether there is a financial need or not. Since Mrs. Seaman's references are not listed, I cannot tell how her sources were measuring self-esteem. Among my own personal acquaintances, however, there are many women who are "unpaid homemakers" and seem as content with their lives and their choices as those mothers I know who work outside the home. In fact, the latter are often quite stressed, especially when their oldest child reaches 3 or 4 years old, and many of these women do not feel they are living up adequately either to their job or to their families.

Perhaps self-esteem was being measured in terms of how one views one's self and believes in the importance of what he or she is doing. It seems to me that women who are homemakers are often not so exuberantly self-confident as women who want to "get ahead" in the work world. It is also, I believe, part of the nature of the beast, that when one spends his or her time serving others as spouse, parent, and, oftentimes, volunteer, that person does not regard his or her needs as the most important. As for believing in the importance of his or her tasks, that is dependent not only on the person performing the task, in this case the task of devoting full time to raising a family, but also on society's belief in the importance of that endeavor. The women I know who are full-time mothers are, for the most part, convinced that they are doing an important job. However, it would be better, in my opinion, if this society, which puts so much emphasis on the "right" ways of bringing up children, could stop equating prestige and self-worth with making money; perhaps more women might feel better about being a full-time mother and wife, when they don't feel they should try to prove their monetary worth.

Mrs. Seaman also cites evidence that women who have never worked outside the home feel the least competent, even at child care. Although I did work before I had children, I have many times had feelings of uncertainty as to the best way to react to and discipline my children. Whether or not this is a feeling of incompetence, I believe that the more time one spends at raising children, the less sure he or she becomes of the perfect method. This is not to say that we shouldn't keep trying.

And most importantly to me, Mrs. Seaman does not seem to be able adequately to assess the effects on the children of parents who both work and must depend on day-care, their friends, and, later, leaving their children to their own devices. What is the self-esteem of those children? How are they turning out as "competent, responsible, ethical, drug-free and mentally healthy" citizens? Does she really feel that we can depend on day-care to produce these qualities? In any case, it is not at all clear to me why our society should support a day-care system. If what is needed is better child care, then those individuals who want to take advantage of it should be willing to support it, instead of seeking an ever higher standard of living. To me, Mrs. Seaman's evidence is just not strong enough to support her conclusion that working mothers should be supported by the government.

I know what I have to do to meet up to my expectations of myself, just as I realize that those mothers who work outside the home know what they must do. And I am not against their having careers per se. I also recognize that there are many women who must work just to provide their families with the bare essentials. But what I am concerned about is the attitudes of young women graduating from college today. I believe they need to understand they must make choices. The idea of the super mom is slowly being retired. I think we need to emphasize more and more that adequate time and attention need to be put against one's family by both the husband and the wife in order to nurture that family toward an evolving unit and individuals who are well adjusted, contributing members of society. And before a couple decides to have children, they should set their priorities and realize the great responsibility that comes with creation. It is no use to blame each other or the employer or the government later on when no one seems to have time to care for the children. I believe that women and men should meet up to as many of their potentials as possible, but it is also their deepest responsibility to make sure that their offspring are brought up well. I wish that you would publish some articles to this effect and thereby show more support for a

Ann Aiken 1931-1987

Ann Aiken was more than a friend and adviser. She was—and I'm sure all Turning Point students feel the same way—an essential part of my Sweet Briar education.

When I started classes at Sweet Briar, I worked as a student assistant in the joined offices of career planning and financial aid on second floor Fletcher. It was the late seventies, and as I sat in the career planning library licking file labels and stapling papers, I would read the covers of the endless books and other self-help materials devoted to the improvement of women. There were lots of magazines with advertisements featuring female executives in blue suits and wing tip high heels pushing shopping carts with briefcases stashed in the compartments where babies used to sit, buying frozen gourmet dinners for two. There were articles about changing roles, insecurity, stress and time management—all very scientific—all based on the notion of getting ahead.

These images and ideas were new to me at the time. I wondered how accurate they were, to whom they applied, or more precisely, toward what market they were aimed. I wondered because, looking up and to my left out the library doors, there would be Ann Aiken, standing hand-on-hip in her flip-flops, talking on the phone, the pinnacle of confidence, looking back at me over her reading glasses. She was my boss—the first female I'd ever worked under—and in a very short time she had won both my respect and my affection.

Yet, according to the latest books and magazines, Ann was a "don't." She did not own one sheet of personalized "to-do" stationery. She walked around in her stocking feet and ate peanut butter and jelly sandwiches for lunch. If she owned a blue suit, she never wore it.

I can still picture Ann leaving late, juggling a stack of files and a milk pail from the dairy, heading home to figure out dinner and brood some more over her students. (That's + 5 points for leaving late; - 20 for carrying loose files, toting an unsightly milk pail, brooding after 5:00 p.m. and having no pre-planned menu.)

In a short time too, I discovered just how privileged I was in my access to Ann. There was always a steady stream of students, faculty and staff stopping in, sitting, waiting to see her. They had stories they knew Ann would appreciate, problems they knew she could solve, frustrations they knew they could air comfortably in her presence.

For older students like me, Ann stood in opposition to the still popular notion that husbands and children, classes and jobs, homework and housework were separate issues that could be "managed?" Rather, she knew that each affected the others in ways that could never be sorted out, and she countered that chaos with patience, humor and good faith.

The career planning library is now located on the lower level of the Chapel. This summer, the financial aid office moved together with admissions into newly-renovated offices in Hill House. These are welcome changes. But then, I don't look for character in places or solidity in things.

Instead, I depend on finding, wherever I go, those qualities in people.

And the next time I visit Sweet Briar, winding up the drive at 45 miles per hour despite the rocks, I expect Ann will be there.

Mary Molyneux Abrams '86

Ed. Note: Contributions in memory of Ann may be made to the Turning Point Program at Sweet Briar College.

Class Notes

Academy

An article in the March 12, '87 Pittsburgh, PA Post Gazette pointed out that the Georgetown house tour was started by Juliet Parris Gill to raise money for the welfare fund of St. John's Episcopal Church. Juliet, who lived most of her life on P Street in Georgetown, died in 1981. The house tour was "a howling success right from the start and has continued so for 60 years."

One of Adah Schafer Smith's granddaughters, Jean Hayes, sent news of Adah who came from Carrolton, IL to attend Sweet Briar academy in 1912. In 1916, Adah married Robert Leo Smith and they resided in Jerseyville, IL for most of their 48 years of marriage. Mr. Smith died in 1964. They had two daughters: Roberta, with whom Adah lives, and Jean who died in 1976. There are 60 grandchildren and 7 great-grandsons. Adah has been a very active worker for civic, church and women's groups. She tells her granddaughters about her fond memories of SBC and recently recalled the flurry when her formal dress for a dance was lost in the mail and she had to borrow a dress from a friend who owned a dress shop in Lynchburg. Adah reads and enjoys the Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine.

Miriam Vander Voort has been living with her daughter and son-in-law in Pompano Beach, FL since last year when she suffered a broken pelvis that has kept her in and out of hospital. The daughter has a big house and a swimming pool and Miriam is happy there, especially since she has transferred her U.D.C. membership to the Fort Lauderdale chapter.

Ruth A. Venning celebrated her 97th birthday on Nov. 1, 1986. Her mind is still sound and she has never forgotten her happy college days at Sweet Briar.

Edith Durrell Marshall (Mrs. Edward C.), 3550 Shaw Ave., Apt. 155, Cincinnati, OH 45208

No one keeps in touch with her classmates more than Edith Durrell Marshall. She is happily situated in the M.D. Lee Episcopal Home in Cincinnati where there are three more SBC girls. Handicapped by a troublesome back, she still keeps mobile with a cane or wheelchair and does a considerable amount of traveling. She took a trip to the College and spent several months in Amherst with her daughter, Ann, of SBC museum fame, attended her grandson's graduation from Sewanee and went to Williamsburg where her granddaughter is getting an M.B.A. (she was delighted to see a "fabulous" new gallery of decorative art there). Edith also visits the museums in Cincinnati and attends Cincinnati Orchestra concerts. Mary McLemore Matthews, one of the "Lettes," writes from Norfolk, VA, with a happy lilt saying she is "on the go" most of the time but trouble with her eyes has cut down the frequency of her favorite games, bridge and mah-jongg. Mary remembers the beauty of springtime at Sweet Briar. Her longtime friend, the other "Lette," Elizabeth Shoop Dixon, lives near her family in Suffolk, VA and especially enjoys her grandchildren. She loves to relive "those four wonderful years at SBC."

Louise Pochat Hattersley, after her husband's death and 67 years of marriage, has moved to the Scarlet Oaks Retirement Home in Cincinnati. It is near the Woman's Club where she frequently sees several girls from SBC. Louise's penmanship is sturdy but, like most of us, she admits to deterioration of both seeing and hearing. Catherine Hanitch appreciates the good care at the retirement home, Chapel Hill, in Hopkins, MN. She enjoys activities like teas, meals out, and shopping tours. Our bouncy Gertrude Anderson is still driving and living in her own home in Findlay, OH. She enjoyed being "queen of the ball" at her 88th birthday and receiving showers of cards, telephone calls and invitations. Marion North, who lives in Fairhaven, MA, finds her traveling limited but attends meetings and concerts. Her only complaint is that she is not very agile — most of us empathize with that!

Emma Adams Kyle doesn't read or write but sends us a message through a friend who visits her often in Kimberley Hall, her nursing home in Windsor, CT, where she is well taken care of. Emma's only daughter lives in NM and her grandchildren are scattered throughout the West. All seems "go" with Gertrude Pauly Crawford who divides her time between Grosse Point Woods in MI and Lake Worth for three months in the summer. She enjoys both places but top priority goes to her grandchildren who are at the age of romance.

Frances Evans Ives, my sister-in-law, has a sombre tone this year. After settling in a delightful apartment in Southold, Long Island, only 10 miles from her daughter, she experienced a heart attack. She suffered a relapse in the hospital and spent over a month in the hospital. When she was able to have visitors, her family flashed to her side. Her son came from Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, where he is with the U.S. Embassy, her grandson and granddaughter from CA and a second granddaughter from Brooklyn, NY. She is on her feet again and looking for a place near her daughter where she will be free of housekeeping activities. The second Ives, Florence Ives Hathaway, your secretary, is happy in her daughter's home in Needham, a delightful New England town 20 miles from where I lived for 58 years and 15 miles from Boston. I have joined a choral group of my peers called "The Songsters" and am enjoying it as I enjoyed the choir at SBC. Nellie MacCaa Cole is adjusting to living in Shreveport, LA. Her son visits her every day and her sister, Mary Deal, SBC '19, age 90, came from VA to see her recently.

Nellie is active in the altar guild of St. Mark's Episcopal Church. Her health is excellent — she has never been hospitalized except for the birth of her 2 children. Florence Woelfel Beemer writes of a triumphal year in spite of having had to battle two surgical episodes; after one of them, she had to relearn to walk. The Beemers still cherish the memories of their marriage at Sweet Briar House, the first and only wedding there; after the ceremony they were showered with rose petals. They live in three homes at different seasons: one in Crawfordsville, IN, where they attend commencement at Wabash College encircled by hundreds of SBC tulips; one in Chicago for the season of symphony concerts, operas and charity balls; and their newest home in Delray Beach, FL. It's good news that Florence is able to pursue her extraordinarily mobile life, one of such generosity to the College in the name of our class. Edith (Betty) Coleman of St. Cloud, FL, thoroughly enjoyed her trip back to SBC for her 65th which she celebrated with Florence and Edith Durrell Marshall. Betty speaks of her good recovery from eye and knuckle surgery (we are indeed a "husky bunch"). Betty is chaplain of her D.A.R. chapter and enjoys crafts and ham radio. She is going to visit her brother in WI with whom she keeps in close touch because he, too, is a ham operator.

Secretary

Cordelia (Deedie) Kirkendall Barricks (Mrs. Arthur A.), 100 Bay Place, Apt. 2101, Oakland, CA 94610

I'll write my news first, saving yours, the best, to last.

Last June my bachelor son, Fred, who lives at the Veterans Home about 60 miles away, and I went to Washington State to see part of the family, and especially to meet Gregory, my youngest great-grand, a darling Korean child adopted by my oldest granddaughter and husband at five months. Now, as quite often happens, Gregory will have a brother or sister in July. Everyone is so thrilled. Lana, the mother-do-be, is a school-teacher and will take a leave of absence for a year. In September my youngest son, Bob, and I enjoyed a trip on the Mississippi Queen from St. Paul to St. Louis. I'm busy all the time with chores, duties and pleasures, grateful I can be so active. In November I thought my life would be drastically changed. I had a heart scare and thought I might have to have open heart surgery, but it turned out I didn't.

Thanksgiving and Christmas were even more joyous than ever. I attended the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in San Francisco in December. We numbered about 15. Penn Willets Mullin, class of '66, continues her good leadership of our group. Randi Miles Long, '66, was good enough to chauffeur me. I still drive but appreciate a capable driver. I no longer work at our church's thrift shop, but continue to haul the donations there. I was still asked to be in the spring fashion show and could wear a size 12 denim dress costing $810.00! No wonder it was cut generously.

In late March part of my California family and I went to my oldest son's retirement party in Richland, Washington. It was a gala reunion of family and friends put on by Buck's two daughters. I'm shocked that I'm the mother of a retired man. Buck worked for 40 years and only missed 1½ days of work. I am proud of my family.

I want to thank all of you who wrote in, and Sharon, my daughter-in-law who did the typing.

Does anyone know anything about our Dorothy Leatham (Mrs. Thomas Nelson)? Please inform the alumnae office.

Ione McKenzie Walker and Giddy Kinsley Whitehead died in 1986.

Louise Wolf Arnold had a slight heart attack in October 1986 and now is fine and thinner. Her granddaughter, Emily, is to be married in May or June 1987 in Syosset, Long Island. Her son, Fritz, from Spain, was visiting the Arnolds in Palm Beach in March and brightening up the house. Husband, George gets about fine with a three-pronged cane. Marjorie Leute Crouse is recovering from a broken hip and hopes soon to return to her active life. After Sweet Briar days she continued with her music (piano) and had the joy of raising her sister's children after the death of their parents. Nancy is a busy mother as well as being a librarian in PA. Robert is a retired Marine Corps colonel and, with his wife, lived in Moscow twice as attache at the Embassy. Later, while teaching Russian they returned to Moscow to see friends and take students on tour.

Mary Reed Hartshorn, in a retirement community in Milwaukee, is enjoying good friends, entertainment, good meals and, of course, cocktails. She was glad for the mild snowless winter. Her seven grandchildren are doing well, apparently too interested in their careers to produce any "greats" for Mary.

Marion (Sis) Reaves Utterback has moved to a beautiful retirement home in Little Rock. She hated to leave her lovely home, but rejoices that a friend bought it. In a letter to the editor which appeared in the Arkansas Gazette in Jan. '87, Marion recalled her student summer jobs on that paper, her 13 years on its editorial staff and the historical and genealogical columns she originated.

Gertrude (Jerry) McGilfert MacLennan and husband have had to slow down a bit (who of our vintage hasn't?). To me they sound so active, having had 15 houseguests since Christmas, not more than six at a time. Some of the children came twice. Jerry was knitting for her number six great-grand, due around June 15, her own daughter's birthday. The MacLennans have three children. I love the squib about Jerry's power mowers. Jerry was asked to sell her number one walking one when she got her riding one. Her answer was when you get a new baby you don't sell the old one.

Elsie Munro Haller has had many ups and downs what with foot and eye surgery, and her faithful dog's having to undergo surgery too. Now Elsie is enjoying her activities, including church, D.A.R., and driving a car. Everything, at last, is "coming up roses."

Almena Perkins Gudas's husband has been retired from the English Department at Louisiana State University for two years and they are both enjoying his retirement. He still has an office on campus; also, he helps her with their garden and is learning to tell flowers from weeds. Their yard is lovely in the spring when all the azaleas, spires, etc., are in bloom. She stays busy with housekeeping, gardening and civic and cultural organizations, as well as playing in two regular bridge foursomes. For a number of years her favorite pastime has been birding. In April they went to southeast Arizona, which birders call a "hot spot," because it has many unusual and exotic birds. Their two daughters come for visits and Almena and her husband visit them. They have two great-granddaughters; of course they are beautiful!

Virginia Burke Miller's daughter, Mrs. Boswell, writes that her mother is in a new nursing home in Denver. Virginia had very successful cataract surgery in January right before the Denver Broncos played in the Super Bowl game. She watched the game (especially her buddy John Elway) intently with her orange Bronco eye patch on. We hope she will soon be reading again. She has five great-grandchildren now. Two grandchildren will be married this year — one in Denver at Thanksgiving time. Virginia has had many family visitors this year which she loves. She so enjoys reading the news from Sweet Briar.

Mary Elizabeth Welch Hemphill has no close relatives left. She has an apricot poodle for a companion. Even though she is a doctor's widow she stays away from doctors. She does have some arthritis but just takes one pill a day for that. She doesn't have to count calories and wears a size 10 or 12. Although she did not go to FL this year, she had several nice trips visiting friends in Blacksburg, VA, and a young cousin in Salem. She hopes to visit Sweet Briar soon. She goes to lots of brunches, luncheons, and cocktail parties. There are always lots of interesting things going on as Danville, KY, is a college town (Centre College).

Dorothy Herbison Hawkins is still in her home and is enjoying Sweet Briar bulbs. They are less active with advancing years but feel very blessed at 86 (her husband) and 83 (Dorothy). With grandchildren graduating from college and three others enrolled they are kept interested in the younger generation.

Margaret Hogue Pfautz has slowed down, partly due to trouble in one eye. She is still driving, playing bridge and gardening.

Ruth Pratt Jones's news is sad: her husband, Paul, died in February after a massive stroke in December 1986. Although her daughter and son have both asked her to live with them in either NY or Chicago, she prefers to remain in FL as she is accustomed to the climate there. Although alone, she is well cared for. Her only outing is to be picked up and taken to the beauty parlor on Saturday mornings. She is a rabid soap opera fan, reads a lot, and writes letters. She uses a walker and is thankful to be able to heat her TV dinners, but needs help for groceries, getting in and out of the tub, cleaning, etc. She will be 84 in April and believe it or not — not a gray hair! She often happily remembers our days at Sweet Briar.

An update from Dorothy Herbison Hawkins states that the Sweet Briar connection is going well in Rochester thanks to Nancy Jones, Mary Clark, and Pat Wilder ('63). The club had a beautiful luncheon in December 1986 at Mary Clark's home with 15 present. They have a president, Addie Cook ('62), and bulb chairwomen, Pat Wilder ('63) and Ann Oates ('71) Dorothy and her husband, Howard, had lunch with Mary Bristol Graham '26 and Mary's husband, Larry, and had an enjoyable afternoon. The Grahams are keeping interested in following the careers of their seven grandchildren.

In the summer of 1986 the San Francisco Bay Area Alumnae Club had a delightful luncheon in Penn Mullin's lovely garden. Mary Sturr Cornelius ('72) drove me. I had to miss a fall 1986 luncheon at Freddie Bernhard's ('24) in her new condominium in San Rafael.

Please start now to save your highlights for next year's column. Thanks for reading my scintillating chit chat!!!

You were terrific in your response to my plea for class NEWS! It is inspiring to think how much Sweet Briar College has meant to so many of us during the more than 60 years since we entered college. Last fall, while attending the College Council meetings, it was a delight to stay with Helen McMahon ('23) and Jeanette Boone ('27). It was the second time Lucy Hoblitzell ('35) and I had roomed together. I keep hoping some of our class will join me for these very enlightening and informative College Council meetings.

Adelaide Henderson Cabaniss

writes: "Bill and I have moved to a retirement home near our son and his family. Our daughter, Eve, is married to a minister, Raymond Webster, and lives on Cape Cod in Osterville, MA. We plan to spend Easter with them. Mary Virginia Dudley is still 'recalling with pleasure fond memories of our class reunion (the 40th). All fine here with children and grandchildren."

Janet Bruce Bailey had an opportunity to go to Florida this winter and get away from the cold, visiting friends in Naples and Sarasota. "The weather was not like St. Thomas where we wintered for some 20 years. But it was a welcome change. My daughter and husband, and myself, are going to Bermuda the end of April, where I look forward to seeing Jane Wilkinson Banyard with whom I roomed for 2 years at S.B. Another granddaughter is getting married in October. That makes 4 (1 not married). I have 2 great grandchildren (a boy 4½, and a girl, 1½). Unfortunately they live in Michigan. I plan to go to Ireland this summer." Mildred Lewis Adkins writes: "With friends I am planning to take the Alaskan cruise in August. I lost my husband last April and will move into a new retirement home (Goodwin House West, Alexandria, VA) in the fall." Elizabeth Lankford Miles: Keeps hoping to see the Eppes when we pop in and out of S.B. and Lynchburg! She and John are very happy in their Westminster-Canterbury home near Virginia Episcopal School. They spent 6 weeks in September and October in Owl's Head, Maine. They would love to have any 29ers in the area get in touch (Lynchburg phone: 386-3601). Anne Gochbauer just celebrated her 80th birthday. Her nieces and nephews gave her a "wing ding party." Nora See Antrim, Margaret Moncure Johnson, and Margaret Green enjoyed joining 85 guests! (They drove up from Richmond for the event.) Mary Archer's sister, Helen Bean Emery ('34), had a nice telephone contact with Anne and learned that Anne's great niece, Meg White, is at Sweet Briar and very happy there. Claire Hoyt Gaver is "still working, still enjoying it, but contemplating retirement. I am a widow — not so merry. I have 3 sons, 5 grandchildren and one great grandchild which sounds like a dynasty! My interests expand each year — travel diminishes. Eleanor Duval Spruill writes: "This has been a rough year for us...much traveling back and forth from Cheraw to Columbia Hospital...such a beautiful spring in Cheraw." Martha Dabney Jones says: "Nothing new here. Though at my age the fact that I am blessed by being still vigorous and involved may rank as news!" Ella Parr Phillips Hotchkiss: "My new husband and I spent all winter in Stuart, FL, but go back to CT in May. We plan a trip in August to the Canadian Maritime Provinces...We have never been to that area. Last summer we went to Alaska and it was great." Adaline Hoffman Allen writes: "I am a widow and live in Clearwater, FL. I have one son, Col. Richard H. Allen, and two grandsons, ages 13 and 10. I like to travel; in 1960 I cruised through the Panama Canal. Also had a flying trip to Australia and New Zealand."

Anne Conway Whitehurst's husband, Jimmy, wrote that Anne had died December 1, 1986. "During a trip to the West Coast this summer, Anne was taken sick after leaving the Grand Canyon." We all send sympathy and love to Anne's family. Jimmy Whitehurst was one of the ushers at our (Eppes') wedding and we have kept up sparsely since then.

Frances "Petty" Guthrie had "no news of my generation and just a little of the younger ones. My niece by marriage, Essie Campbell's daughter, Dorothea "Tia" McMillan ('66), and family moved to Martinsburg, WV. Kay Beury McFall's ('31) daughter, Beury, was married 4 April during our worst snowfall ever!" Isabel North Goodwin writes: I left town during master's and went to N.C. where I saw Sarah Dodgen Gordon and we had a good time reminiscing. My granddaughter, Sarah Goodwin, graduates from Agnes Scott in May and will be married in June in Marietta, GA to a boy she met while he was at Georgia Tech. Another granddaughter graduates the next week from Converse College, and a grandson graduates from prep school. Hope to be present for all events! Elizabeth Lockhart ('32) plays bridge with me frequently! I'm busy and doing fine myself!" Helen Bryan Yankee has a new address after more than 60 years in Rome, GA: Alinian Village, 100 James Blvd., Apt. 214, West Signal Mountain, TN 37377. She will be near her son, her 2 sisters and 1 brother. She has 3 great grandchildren and 3 great great grandchildren. Lee Sidman Smith: "During the winter I visited Hawaii and 5 of the islands, where we saw the humpback whales sporting around!" Lee plans to go to Utah this summer to visit her daughter who has a condo on a ski slope. (She has wisely decided to give up that great sport!) Meredith Ferguson Smythe says: "Since I love to hear from others, I will send this along, although our life is pretty routine these days. We spend the summer in Northern Michigan where we usually have a few days with John and Sally Jamison, as they had relatives at Torch Lake. This year we went to the Canary Islands, a change from the mainlands of Portugal and Spain."

Kathleen Firestone Carruthers is busy keeping up with 3 grandsons, 3 granddaughters, 5 great grandchildren (all girls). Frank just gave her a surprise 80th birthday dinner. Fifty people came in spite of 13 inches of snow and blizzard conditions. Mallie Bomar Johnson keeps in contact with a large family of children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, although her state of health necessitates nursing care and restricts her activities. Edith Roache Tollefsen is a docent at Wilton, the state HQ of the Colonial Dames in VA. Edith went to Alaska last September and is going to France in May. Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins writes: "Jo Mason was here for a few days, so Louise Ross ('27) and I had dinner with Midge and Jo and their friends. Mary Archer Bean Eppes comments "Jimmy and I find no lack of activities to keep us 'busy'. On a recent trip to Richmond, VA to visit Jimmy's sister, I saw Lisa Guigon Shinberger (who is recovering nicely from a broken hip) and had brief contacts with Maria Bemis Hoar, Nora Lee Antrim, and Margaret Johnson. "When we were visiting family on Sanibel Island in March, we drove to Naples for a lovely visit with Jamie and Sally Jamison. Their new condo is very attractive and Sally joined a lovely lunch for us. We enjoyed hearing about the celebration for Jamie's 80th birthday. 'Jo' Tatman and Mace Mason were on hand to help celebrate the birthday before they began traveling again! We also saw Virginia Chaffee Gwynn in Naples. 'Ginny' loves to travel and play bridge. Her garden is lovely and her home is beautiful. Hope to see more of these S.B. devotees in FL next spring! Last August, Jimmy and I spent several days in Lexington, KY. I called Anne Mason Brent Winn, who took me around that beautiful Blue Grass area. I had no idea Lexington itself was such a charming town. Anne Mason has bought a duplex after selling her old home of 41 years, which was becoming a burden to keep up. She keeps in touch with her children and grandchildren and has finally given up riding to the hounds!"

genealogy and travel. A daughter and two sons have produced seven wonderful grandchildren. Janet Bogue Trimble and her husband have enjoyed several trips with Virginia Rutty Young, '36, and her late husband Frances (Boots) Bogle Shea and her husband, a retired Navy Captain, live in Honolulu. They have two sons and two grandsons. Jeanette Bowen Runyan is widowed and lives in Topeka, KS. Brad (Margaret Bradley) Forsyth is a farmer's wife living in Bremono Bluff, VA. She has a son and a daughter and four beautiful grandchildren. Mary Jane Carney Hart is now a widow and lives in Paducah, KY. Nina Cauthorn Jarvis, a retired teacher (26 years!) is enjoying church work, gardening, volunteering at the Crisis Center and as a Pink Lady, and also camping with her husband and/or some of her three children and five grandchildren. Anna Mary Charles Straub and her husband live in Bausman, PA. She is an executive secretary, he, an administrator at Penn. State. They have three fine children — a legal secretary, a diagnostic radiologist and an attorney — and two wonderful grandchildren, 16 and 10. Jackie Cochran Nicholson and her husband, Chink, spent the winter in Florida and Georgia. They are planning a trip to England and Wales this fall. Jackie sent some treasures for our Reunion Scrapbook, as well as snapshots of her beautiful grandchildren. Agnes Crawford Bates lives in Gloucester, VA and her daughter in Madison Heights (just down the road from SBC). Her son and his family live in CA. Church and flowers and children and grandchildren are her main interests. Peggy Cruikshank Dyer reports the only great-grandchild! She has five children and nine grandchildren. In spite of a total knee transplant last Oct., she and Holmes enjoy a wonderful, active life — sailing, playing tennis and traveling. Harriette Dyer Sorensen and her husband live in N.J. and have a 180° view of New York City and the ocean. Her three married children and seven grandchildren live nearby. Lucy Gore Stead served as Chief Occupational Therapist at Mare Island Hospital while a lieutenant in the US Navy, and later as a professional psychologist. She and her Canadian husband, a Lt. Comm. who twice earned the Distinguished Service Cross, now live in Vancouver. They have two children and two soccer-playing grandchildren. Faith (Syd) Gort Herpers has traveled extensively since becoming a widow — most recently to the Panama Canal. Her two sons each have three children

Molly Gruber Stoddart and her lawyer husband, John, had a wonderful study-travel trip to Britain last summer, pursuing her interest in historic architecture. Their daughter, Nancy, is an interior decorator. Rosalie Hall Hurst and her husband, both retired, live in Hendersonville, NC. She continues to pursue her interest in mental health and special education. Nat Hopkins Griggs husband, John, died last summer — and her 12th grandchild was born. A wicker shop in NH was an interest for the whole family for a number of years. Nat is now living in Wilmington, DE. Barbara Jarvis Thomas, also a widow, lives in Kamuela, HI. She is an active volunteer, and has gone on several wonderful trips, including the Sweet Briar trip from Lisbon to Bergen, a tour of China and most recently, a 2½ month cruise around South America and across the South Pacific to Hong Kong and Thailand. Frances (Sissy) Johnson Finley and her husband, Jimmy, are enjoying his retirement. They go often to Virginia Beach and to Boynton Beach, FL, and occasionally on a "real" trip. Sissy is busy at home with golf, church and garden. Frances Kemp Pettyjohn still lives in Lynchburg. She is proud of her five children and seven grandchildren. Her husband Walker, died in April '86. Lillian Lambert Pennington is a widow busy with many things — volunteer jobs, garden and visiting her son, daughter-in-law and nine-year-old, wonderful grandson in Naperville, IL. Polly Lambeth Blackwell's main interests are her lawyer husband, Winfield, her three children and nine grandchildren. She serves as a university trustee, and is active in church and the Arts. Anne Lauman Bussey's husband is a retired Army Colonel. They have two children and two little grandchildren. Two years ago Anne had the honor of placing a wreath at the site of the sunken Japanese POW ship at the Philippines in honor of her late brother, Major Philip Lauman. Lib Lee

McPhail and Fred have moved from their home of 35 years to a two-bedroom townhouse. They spend five months a year at their mountain home. Lib loves grandmothering. She has two sons, a daughter and four adorable grandchildren. Marion Leggett Whyte describes herself as a "retired housewife." She enjoys traveling, golf and volunteering at Bethesda Hospital. Maggie MacRae Jackson had a bout with polio in Shanghai in 1946 which seriously affected her legs and back. In San Diego where she moved in 1951, she has been active in social rehabilitation of the physically handicapped. Her husband, Charles, died in 1971. Barbara Munn Green opened a knit shop in Steamboat Springs, CO, following her husband's death in 1977 and has made a wonderful success of it. For many years she transcribed and taught Braille. (She was the only person in the country who could transcribe Greek into Braille.) She has 16 grandchildren from four daughters (three attended SBC) and loves visiting them. Nancy Nalle Genung tries to keep in touch with five sets of married children and 12 grandchildren. She and Al have been traveling in the USA and abroad. They enjoy Alumni Colleges — the latest one in Maui. At home in Princeton, Nancy is involved in church, Garden Club and SBC alumnae. Isabel Olmsted Haynes is a widow living in Pound Ridge, NY. Her two handsome sons, both Dartmouth graduates, have beautiful wives. Izzy is busy with volunteer activities, sports and travel. Dottie Price Roberts has been widowed twice. She has a son and a daughter and two grandsons. She is active in church work, adult education, gardening and biking. Dottie Prout Gorsuch, another widow, still lives in Atlantic Highlands, NJ. She has retired from landscaping, but gardens and freezes her produce. Her little granddaughter who had a difficult start, is fine now — beautiful and smart at two years old. Norma Rogers Cook lists "housewife and grandmother" as her occupations. Although retired, her lawyer husband is still very busy. They have four children and six grandchildren. Jessie Rose Harvin lives in Hendersonville, NC. Her husband is no longer living. She is planning a trip around the world via the Supersonic Concorde. Her two sons have five children between them; her two girls are not yet married.

Margaret Sandidge Miller now lives in Annapolis, MD, with her husband, George, Rear Admiral, USN, ret., who is now a defense consultant. They have a son and a daughter and two grandchildren, 18 and 16

Vera Searcy McGongle's husband is a retired Navy Captain. Vera spent 3½ years in the WAVES. They live in Corpus Christi, TX. She is a "professional volunteer." Their two grandsons are special! Elizabeth (Biddy) Sicard Sita taught French and Spanish and was head of the lower school at Buckley in NYC. She and her husband, Grant, lived abroad for many years, and Biddy was active in various American Women's Clubs, as well as The National Council of Women and Women for United Nations. The Sitas, parents of two and grandparents of four, now live in Naples, FL. We are all proud of Ellie Snodgrass Park who is the Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia. Although she has only one child (Houston Park, IV), she has five grandchildren, from 22 to 1! Mary Turnbull Barfield, now a widow, lives in Jacksonville and enjoys traveling and volunteering. She has two children and three grandchildren. Marie Walker Gregory enjoys her condominium in Richmond. She is interested in decorative arts (her own collection and others!) and enjoys decorating old homes for tours. Her son, John, has a little daughter, Talley. Our deepest sympathy and love goes to Wes Ward Francis, my roommate, who recently lost her husband, George. Wes leads a very busy life, particularly as a board member of the National Recreation and Parks Association, and of the Gulf Stream School in Delray, FL. She makes frequent visits to England, and in the U.S. divides her time between homes in Bryn Mawr and Delray. May Weston Thompson and her husband, Barton, have raised five very active children, and now have a grandchild, Elizabeth. May retired three years ago from her job of 21 years as school secretary. Elizabeth Williams Allison was the recipient of a commendation medal as a 2nd lieutenant in the army nurse corps in WWII. She married a flight surgeon and their wonderful life together produced three daughters and one son. Her husband died seven years ago. Elizabeth's poor health prevented her from attending our Reunion

Helen Williamson Dumont has been an active volunteer, and has enjoyed traveling with her husband, Wayne (NJ state senator for 33 years), on his political tours. Their son, Wayne, is U.S. Attorney for N.J. and the father of an adorable, 14-month-old daughter

Eleanor Wright Bean of Wilmington, NC, is president of the National Society of the Colonial Dames in the State of NC. Margaret Merritt Haskell was disappointed that arthritis kept her from coming to Reunion. Poor health also kept Julia Dearmont Fisher away. Julia's husband died in 1985 and she lives alone. She has two sons (Russell, of Atlanta and David, of Santa Clara, CA), three grandsons and one granddaughter. Alice Danzer Fletcher has taken several world cruises but a broken leg prevented her from taking one last winter. They still spend their summers at Blue Ridge Summit, enjoying the mountain breezes.

As for myself, I am retired from a long career in school administration and am busier than ever. My daughter, Ruth, and her family (three children) live in Killingworth, CT. Thanks for all your prompt responses Love, Maggie

P.S. Our new officers elected at Reunion are: President, Lillian Lambert Pennington; Secretary, Natalie Hopkins Griggs; Fund Agent, Nancy Nalle Genung.

Our 45th reunion was a great success exceeding all previous ones. How much we missed those who were not with us! Let's hope that everyone can attend our big 50th Since reunion many mini reunions have taken place. In the Adirondacks Butch Gurney Betz and John, Decca Gilmer Frackelton and Robert, Betty Doucett Neill and John, Mary Scully Olney and Jim, Barbara Nevins Young and Ralph, and Marie Gaffney Barry and Ted held a gathering on Fourth Lake. It was disappointing that Chee Chee Brown-Serman Hayes and Frank and Edge Cardamone O'Donnell and Ted being in the area were unable to join the group.

New Years week-end in Birmingham, AL brought an unforgettable reunion of Lillian Fowkes Taylor and Tyler, Tish Seibels Frothingham and John, Pat Potter Duncan, Emory Hill Rex and Daniel, Ruth Hemphill de Buys, Marie Gaffney Barry and Ted

Edge Cardamone O'Donnell has seen Pi Dowling von Wellsheim. She lunched at the Cape with Charley Davenport Tuttle, Lou Lembeck Reydel, and Jean Ruggle Hall. In Naples she reunited with Pat Sorenson Ackard, Ann Burroughs O'Connor, Helen Gwinn Wallace, Jean Ruggles Hall, Helen Anne Littleton White, and Lucy Parton Miller. She and Ted spent a day with Ellie Damgard Firth and Swede. Ted has been hospitalized four times this year

A California reunion took place in the spring with Pat Potter Duncan, Edie von Gehr Bridges, Jackie Sexton Daley (Class of '40) and Ruth Hemphill de Buys. Ruth and Pat had a fun week together before Ruth visited her son on the west coast.

Ellie Damgard Firth held a reunion in Ft. Lauderdale with Lou Lembeck Reydel, Martha Jean Brooks Miller, and Charley Davenport Tuttle. She had wanted to get both west coast classmates and east coast classmates at the same time without success.

Shirts Shaw Daniel is a member of the Board of Managers of the Colonial Dames and serves as chairman of the Headquarters Garden Committee. She is taking a seven month course at Scott Arboretum of Swarthmore College to become a volunteer aide. She finds time to tennis twice a week. She and her husband Richard had dinner with Helen Anne Littleton White and Logan following reunion and had a full report.

Elizabeth Hudson Boba is administrative assistant to the Dept. of Classics, University of Washington. She is considering retirement in another year. She enjoys the SBC contacts in Seattle

Horticulture and flower arranging are major interests of Helen Carmine Barber. Since 1970 she has served on the Civic Beautification Committee of her Cambridge, Md. Garden Club. She has been responsible for planting over 600 trees. She is also a founding trustee of the Adkins Arboretum, Maryland's largest. For several terms she has served on the vestry of the Episcopal Church. The Dorchester County Historical Society keeps her busy too. Her husband John and she sing in the church choir and the Easton Choral Society. John is a retired Foreign Service Officer. They travel to Europe every other year. Classical music, reading, knitting, cooking and four grandsons take up the rest of their time

Our deepest sympathy goes to Barbara Seales Parrett upon the loss of her husband Gaylord in April. She spends a lot of time visiting her children. She attended the wedding of her niece Carol Seales (Class of '80). All the bridesmaids were classmates and they were a stellar group

On the move is Pat Sorenson Ackard. They have bought a house in Denver at 3333 E. Florida Ave. Their house in Naples is at 3333 Gulf Shore Blvd. N — such a coincidence!

Judith Davidson Walker was sorry to miss reunion but had a fine trip to Scotland and England. Her family of three sons, their spouses, and grandchildren are all doing well.

Charley Davenport Tuttle and John had a great trip to England and to Paris to visit son Ty and his wife. The highlight was seeing their two grandchildren, Solange aged 3 and Lippie aged 1½. The Tuttles continue to boat in West Palm Beach in the winter and to reside in North Chatham, Mass. in the summer. They cruised for two weeks to the west coast encountering many friends en route this past winter Margaret Craighill Price keeps active with her family. She went to Coronado to assist her daughter Margaret (Class of '69) with the care of her newborn grandson Nathan Karl Tobiason. She took her daughter Sharon (Class of '66) and her grandson, Brian skiing for a week.

Chee Chee Brown-Serman Hayes and Frank are giving the Eastern Shore of Maryland a full-time trial. Their new address is: Rev. and Mrs. Francis W. Hayes Jr., Box 550, St. Michael's, Maryland 21663. Their telephone number is: 301-745-5706. She calls St. Michaels "The Land of Pleasant Living", water, wild life, and space.

Though still a secretary at Stanford University Edie Vongehr Bridges is seriously considering retirement this year. Her activities include cross country skiing, sailing, and travelling. For a grandmother of eight it is remarkable to think she bicycles to work each day. Six of her children live in CA. One is travelling through South America as a freelance journalist. He writes mostly for The Washington Post quite successfully.

Our condolences to Martha Jean Brooks Miller on the loss of her mother. This past winter she spent some time at Indian River Plantation in Stuart, FL and at the Cloisters, Sea Island, GA. She golfed with Connie Currie Fleming (Class of '40). The summer was spent in Blowing Rock, NC where she rented a house.

Evie Cantey Marion and Andrew are moving back to Columbia, SC where they will be near two grandchildren plus other family. Her new address is Mr. and Mrs. Andrew B. Marion, 9 Quinine Hill, Columbia, South Carolina 29204. She was very disappointed to have to miss reunion.

It has been a year of reunions for Wilma Cavett Bird. First she went to Honolulu for the Women's Air Raid Defense gathering marking the 45th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor. Later it was with Jean Ruggles Hall and Hunt in Naples and Nevins Young and Ralph over Christmas in TX

Betty Blount Kempson and husband are enjoying the quieter pursuits in Pensacola, FL now that their family has grown and departed. Betty spends a lot of time in bed with a bad back but still manages to knit and crochet. She loves crossword puzzles. (Does anyone remember how we struggled with the Sunday NY Herald Tribune's?) The Kempsons have 4 children: a lawyer, 2 schoolteachers, and a housewife (mother of five), and 11 grandchildren

Jane Loveland Byerts is an active Red Cross volunteer, gardener and needleworker. A large family reunion was held with her sister's family and her own four children plus spouses and grandchildren at Destin. Helen Anne Littleton White and Logan stopped to see the Byerts en route home from Marco Island

M. Adela Diaz Eads was re-elected to the Connecticut State Senate for the fourth time. She is now Deputy Republican leader and the ranking member of the Education Committee. She also serves on the Judiciary and the Banks Committees. The Connecticut Association of Boards of Education honored her with "The Distinguished Service Award". The Eades have celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary

Lou Lembeck Reydel and Charles have their first granddaughter, born to their second son and his wife after 10 years of marriage. Their youngest daughter Barbara was married in June 1980 on Cape Cod. The Reydeles continue to winter in Tequesta and summer on the Cape

The Children's Hospital Guild and The Episcopal Church Guild in North Hollywood, CA claim a lot of time from Louise Hathaway Norman who is a very active volunteer. She was bitterly disappointed to miss reunion

The SB alumnae cruise to "Europe's Green and Gentle Lands" found Joan Meacham Gay aboard. It was a great trip. After her return home she was hospitalized with viral pneumonia and asthma. She nurtures the Christmas Tree Farm all year with the financial rewards collected only in December

Doris Huner Swiech and Stanley have four grandchildren. Two girls are in NH, one boy is in San Francisco, and one boy is in Albuquerque. The Swieches travel frequently coast to coast. Their family all summers with them at Lake Toxaway, NC. They had 14 in July. One son-in-law is an avid golfer. He and Stanley play in each other's member guest tournaments in NC and CA.

The Spring Alumnae Association Board meeting was attended by Betty Doucett Neill and Anita Loving Lewis. The campus was buzzing with talk about the Strategic Planning Process that was going on. There is increased emphasis on academic excellence at the College. Anita and her Bill are tied down by two very old mothers who are in poor health. She is hoping for a reunion with Helen Gwinn Wallace and Margaret Craighill Price.

The QE 2 held a memorial service aboard ship for Louise Kirk Edwards with the flags flying at half mast. Another memorial service was held in New York City at the instigation of Louise's friend Dennis Cooney. Many of Louise's friends from her QE 2 travels attended the service.

Betsy Tower Bennett and husband Charles travelled to San Francisco for a Savings Bank Convention. Charles' publication, The U.S. Banker, won the Neal Award in the financial division. He is the mid-Atlantic editor. Their son Randy conducts career seminars for the National College of Education in Evanston, IL. Their son Ben continues at the Faith Christian Center in Tulsa and the City of Faith where he works. Betsy is involved with the Garden Club, Bible Study, and Christian meetings. She has recently shed 50 pounds. Congratulations!

Pat Potter Duncan travels extensively to fascinating places. She has taken a Danube cruise and a cruise on the Sea Cloud sailing from Tahiti to South Sea ports this year. Mary

Scully Olney and Jim also cruised on the Sea Cloud in the Mediterranean and reported a delightful trip

Lillian Fowkes Taylor and husband Tyler have a very busy schedule with the Senior Southern Golf Circuit. They have many fun trips to lovely golf courses in different southern states. Lillian underwent surgery for a hernia from which she recovered nicely

Alpine Martin Patterson has played golf with the Taylors and with Butch and John Betz and had dinner with "Dousit" and Jack. Pat has just built a martin house and they are waiting for tenants. Piney is involved in bridge, mah jongg, Garden Club and church and spends a lot of time cherishing her two old ladies — her mother, 96 and aunt, 92. Frances Watkins Centilli is still running her ceramics business. Bill had a colon operation in June and is recovering very well — needed no post-op treatments of any kinds

Tish Seibels Frothingham and husband John had a marvelous skiing trip to Zermatt with most of their children last winter. Tish crosscountry skied while the rest of the family did downhill. Tish and Marion Webb Shaw and Marie Gaffney Barry had a luncheon date in the spring

Butch Gurney Betz's middle son married Jessica Swift in August 1986. The Frackleton family (Decca Gilmer Frackleton) attended the wedding in Vergennes, Vermont. Decca took video pictures of the happy event and presented the results to the bride and groom

Ruth Hemphill de Buys travels frequently about the country. Besides her visit to Pat Potter Duncan in CA she has been to Virginia Beach, Epcot in Orlando and Lake George in the Adirondacks.

I appreciate all your cards. All of us are so interested in keeping in touch and seeing each other whenever possible

Heartfelt thanks for your love and support after my Herb died of a heart attack last August. I keep busy as I "learn" a new life. Last fall I drove to Charleston, WV to stay with cousins. Highlight of the trip was visiting with Jodie Morgan Hartman and Jim, Jodie's mother and Ade Jones Voorhees ('46)

Hedy Edwards Davenport writes of the wedding of #8, son John; her six children who live on Lookout Mt. and the 14 grandchildren who run in and out. Joe Davenport continues to work for Sweet Briar on the Board of Directors and they have been in FL and CA recently

Lyn Dillard Grones is busy as usual. She's on the board of both Stuart Hall and Sweet Briar, chairs the local Red Cross chapter and runs her tree farm. Anne Dickson Jordan, also of Virginia Beach, is involved with Red Cross too, as well as keeping up with grandchildren

Tutti Hall Peckham, of nearby Asheville, NC travels, hikes in these beautiful mountains and runs out of time as I do. However we managed a reunion of sorts at a NC Symphony concert

Dale Bogert Baldwin of Savannah, GA volunteers at the SAFE shelter and the Emmaus House, a soup kitchen in her church, and keeps up with two grandsons there. She took the Sweet Briar trip to Istanbul and up the Danube to Vienna last summer. Norma Bradley Arnold ('44) and Joe were also on the trip. Dale also had a month in Spain last fall.

Caroline Parrish Seager's husband retired from the Univ. of Kentucky and they moved to Marion, VA. Catherine Waddell Spencer, a musician, has moved from Richmond to Bristol, VA

Esther Cunningham Shay of Scarsdale, NY is seeking reelection as a member of the Planning Board of the village. She has long been an active volunteer and civic leader

Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill also continues to give much volunteer time to a new Art Center in Hickory, NC built in her old restored high school, as well as helping at the hospital and church. She also sings with the Choral Society there.

Jean Moores McCulloch raises beef cattle on a 130 acre farm south of Springfield, OH. Her three sons are in Montana, Minnesota and Guatemala. She also plays the dulcimer!

Irene McDonnell Hill had a visit from Mary Kritser Miller and George in Hot Springs, AR during the racing season. Dale Saylor Morgan was visited by Wylene Chapman Saylor in Savannah and stays occupied with gardening and church work besides grandchildren

Alice Nicolson McIlvaine (Steve) has a far flung family — husband leading a safari in East Africa, son touring India and Nepal and daughter studying rain forests in Belize, but come summer they will be sailing up the coast and back for four months.

Sadie Gwin Allen Blackburn of Houston is first vice president of Garden Club of America. She also helped author a book on residential architecture of Houston (she did the garden section) and co-chaired a project for the Office of Horticulture — Smithsonian; a Slide Library of Notable American Parks and Gardens.

Julie Mills Jacobson was reelected to a second term on the Town Council of Bethany Beach, DE and reappointed chairman of Budget and Finance. You never know what an AB in Art History will lead to! She also works for Sweet Briar in Washington and on a project, "Women in Chemistry" which includes Sweet Briar and five other colleges

Carol Cox MacKinnon has retired from St. Agnes School in Alexandria, VA and she and John have moved to a condominium. He has been ill, so they are taking it easy enjoying their children and grandchildren.

Harriet Willcox Gearhart (Lovah) and David took a 3000 mile circuit this winter visiting Cappy Price Bass in FL and seeing Kathryn Agee Atkins. Lovah and her daughter, Mary went to England but now she's settling in at her new house in Centreville, MD. Cappy Price Bass also had a trip to the Galapagos and Quito and is back in KY. Kathryn Agee Atkins (Kagee) also winters in FL and returns to Huntington, WV for the summer. Her two sons and grandchildren are also in FL

Margaret Swann Norris keeps busy with her practice (psychiatry) in Nashville, TN and enjoys her grandchildren nearby. She had lunch with Anne Buggs ('47) in Washington.

Marty Holton Glesser had a nice trip to Spain in the fall and was looking forward to the return of her youngest son from two years in Germany.

Betsy Smyth Brown lost her husband this past year, as did Harriet Hazen Schmoeller and I can sympathize. The Schmoellers had moved to Boulder City, NV last summer and loved it. She has been doing lots of traveling with a trip to Israel plus trips in the USA. Also Ann McLean Loomis (Slug) lost a 17 year old grandson in an auto accident. She designs toys and enjoys her children and grandchildren.

Lile Tucker Bell's Tom has retired and they hope to have a long trip out west this summer.

Perk Traugott Brown still teaches and has 7 grandchildren

Betty Avery Duff writes of her children and grandchildren and says there is no exciting Duff news.

Jean Portman Allen visited Pat Carr Bowie in California. Pat is a professor at Loyola. Jean's husband is retiring soon and they have a new place on Cape Cod where they will spend summers Elizabeth Zulick Reuter (Zu) should be in her new house by now. It's also the year of the baby in her family, as it is with Betty Healy Cutler who has had two recent additions. Mia Hecht Owens is another one enjoying her grandchildren.

Diddy Gaylor Thompson will be on Long Island for the summer and is thankful that Arthur is well now after a winter of health problems

Antoinette Le Bris Maynard has changed jobs at the Library of Congress from Descriptive to Subject Cataloging. Their three children all came to visit this spring: Libby from Eureka, CA; Carol and Joe Barber (with Claire, 3 and Nicholas, 3 mos.) from Bremerton, WA; and Philip, a marine guard home on leave from Geneva.

I had a nice ten day birding trip to Trinidad and Tobago in March and will head for Scotland, Ireland and Wales in June-July. In between there is much to learn about so many things from investments to wildflowers. Good to hear from you all and would enjoy personal visits anytime.

Writing this news column in April to be published in September necessitated the invention of a new tense, the passee preperfect future, to accommodate these circumstances. Lindsay Coon Robinson used this tensification in writing that the sailing trip to the Windward Islands that she shall soon take in May, will be old news in the fall, but that she's excited about it now in April. An earlier communication from her said simply — Two daughters' weddings, two weeks apart, two weeks before Christmas, too weak to write more. This latter phrasing obliterated the whole tense problem — no verbs. So my route could be — for the great escape, from February, Catherine Barnett Brown, Mary Louis Stevens and Alice Trout Hagan, in the Browns' house, at Johns' Island, FL, with Libby Trueheart Harris and Hiter's place nearby, beyond wonderful time

And it was! The very first evening there, we went next door for a drink with Bunny's neighbor from Omaha, NE, who not only knew Sally Searle Clarke, but also showed us a copy of a charming cookbook compiled by Sally's daughter, Christie Clarke Hedgpath.

From Libby, we learned that Pat Brown Boyer and Jean have bought a house in Orlando, FL, with plans to move there in the spring. And that Anne Bush Train's son, Kirk, is teaching architecture at UVA. Bunny Brown's mother, artist Catherine Sitzler, does the covers for News Leaf, a bi-monthly publication of the Garden Club of New Jersey. A spray of Sweet Briar roses was featured on the May-June issue. Due to an unfor-fortunate misunderstanding with the printer, the roses came out green! Still, New Jersey gardeners now have Sweet Briar roses on their minds.

We are all visiting each other. Caroline Casey McGehee and Jackie Tappen Kern visited briefly in the Miami Airport, both returning from vacations in the Islands. Caroline fills her time with church work, singing in her choral group, and serving as chairman of the SB Friends of the Library. Jackie has a new first grandson named Kyle Kern.

Sally Melcher Jarvis and Beth Jansma Gorter visited each other for the first time since 1948, and it took some doing. Sally and John were leading a museum tour in London and had one night free. So Beth and her husband, Kas, sailed their boat across the English Channel to St. Catherine's Dock on the Thames, where the Jarvises and Gorters dined together on the boat in the shadow of the Tower of London.

These long distance logistics in meeting to eat were challenged by the large group logistics involved in meeting for lunch at the Cosmopolitan Club in NYC. Ruth Garrett Preucel, Margaret Towers Talman, Carter Van Deventer Slatery, Ellen Ramsay Clark, and Polly Plummer Mackie accomplished this latter feat. Carter wrote that it was the farthest she had ever traveled for lunch and justified the trip by spending the weekend with her brother in Summit, NJ. Ellen expects her first grandchild in September.

Polly had visited Mary Sommers Booth Parker in Charlotte, NC in the fall and would be joining Ellen and Ken Clark for a visit with the Slaterys at Hilton Head in the spring. Polly and Carrie Beard De Clerque had just returned from an archaeological trip to Guatemala and Elizabeth Hancock Fritzsche hopes to have her own private dig in New Mexico, complete with shards, clovis points, and maybe even mammoth bones, while helping her daughter, Liz, build an atelier on her back forty outside Santa Fe.

Marie Musgrove McCrone and Richard had a lovely visit at Betsy Dershuck Gay's home in Armonk, NY, and Betsy will return the visit when her youngest son graduates from the University of Richmond this spring. Marie has resurrected some pieces from college years for use in playing at weddings. Betsy's son, Jack, is in NYC and Frank, Jr. is interning in Philadelphia, PA. The Pelham, WY Sun reported that teaching artist and water colorist, Betsy Gay, a graduate of SBC, the NY School of Interior Design, and the National Academy of Fine Arts, will stage an exhibit of her works along with those of her students in Pelham. Mrs. Gay's impressionist images of nature are well known and have been included in many prestigious group shows.

Ann Henderson Bannard and Yorke visited Preston Hodges Hill and Gene in Denver, CO. Ann is still and, even more so, sculpting with a yearful of commissions to tackle, but managed to work in a trip to Yucatan and a move to the dream house near Tucson, AZ. Preston reports that Gene's new business is going very well, allowing for a two-week trip to Spain. The Hills will visit the Webbs in May. Both generations of Webbs in Charleston, are still happy with each other, with Mary a Public Defender, and young Rutledge an electronics expert and salesman in the environs. And the Webbs bring us back to Johns Island in February. Bunny's main topic of conversation was the birth of her sixth grandchild — equalled only in quantity, as far as I can ascertain, by Joan Becker Taylor with her sixth. My main topics were flowers and that my son is coming back to Roanoke to practice medicine. I am practicing my tap-dancing lessons in the same city. We missed Patsy Davin Robinson who couldn't join us in FL due to Sandy's being ill at the time. (Ed's note: Just before press time, Alice asked us to add the sad news that Alexander C. Robinson IV (Sandy) died on June 28, and to send sympathy to Patsy from the whole class who knew Sandy during their years at Sweet Briar.)

Some of our classmates are performing out of order for this stage in our lives. Ann Doar Jones and Frank have retired — to the river as have Marilyn Hopkins Bamorough and James, to the Lake Michigan shore. And, on the other hand, there's Mary Virginia Grigsby Mallett starting a new job and Sarah Gay Lanford's daughter starting SBC in the fall.

Anne Fiery Bryan went to Phoenix, NM in January, grandmothering daughter Posey's new baby girl. Anne came home to Charlottesville, VA and had such a successful cataract operation in February that she and Dick had house-guests continuously for the next two months. And, for a topper, will have their two-year-old grandson for a month, while his parents are on an African safari. Foamie relayed the news that Susan Corning Mann is living in Upton, MA and has all of her children in the area. Susan and Hank are living in a 1750 farmhouse and between them, they have nine grandchildren. Susan has a part-time job in a classic sports clothes shop in Wellesley. Carolyn Cannady Evans and Hervey had a short, sweet trip to Jamaica in January. A second grandson (4th grandchild) was born to second daughter, Anne, and husband, Bill Wallace. Carolyn is saddened, as we all are, by the death of Nancy Lake in April.

Kitty Hart Belew's postcard, instead of the usual and very welcome, yellow legal pages, still managed to tell of her Colonial Dames trip with Margaret Towers Talman to NC's eighteenth-century homes, plus several other items used in this column.

Life in Midland, TX continues to be ideal for Larry Lawrence Simmons and Charles, who had 5 of their 7 children for Christmas in Mexico. And Sally Ayres Shroyer continues to get a kick out of her students in Bethesda, MD, and sharing with Lou the kicks from their children living nearby.

Nancy Frantz Davis was inducted into the Oklahoma Hall of Fame for her contributions to civic, cultural and educational causes. She has served on the National Council of the Humanities and was the first woman ever to serve as Chairman of the Board of Regents of the Univ. of OK. Her other activities included taking two grandchildren, ages 9 and 11, to Washington, DC for a little history indoctrination.

Strengthening our ties with Holland beyond the aforementioned Beth Jansma Gorter, was the marriage of Kay Bryan Edward's son John to Leslie Van Houten last summer. According to the Greensboro, NC News and Record, the wedding was a blend of nuptial festivity, July Fourth activity and the annual Taylor-Edwards birthday party, seasoned with international flavor. This trilogy of celebration was enhanced by an omelet brunch in the garden, a barbeque, and a black-tie rehearsal dinner with seafood en papillote, place cards and menu cards and silver almonds brought by Kay from England. Kay is currently Chairman of the Board of Sacred Heart College in Winston-Salem, and with all this, managed to win a trip to Holland to meet Leslie's parents for her record SBC bulb sales.

A new twist was added to the return of the '49ers cards as Judy Baldwin Waxter's daughter, Susan, returned her mother's card, explaining that she was her mother's news. Susan has been promoted to Vice-President of Sovran Bank, and after three years in Roanoke, VA (which she loved) is back again in Charlottesville, VA where she got her M.B.A. in 1983.

June Eager Finney has all four children married and living in Baltimore. June and Bill are plowing through a second year of working for reform of the liability laws; some headway is being made, but it's tough going through all that governmental red tape. Mary Fran Brown Ballard writes that they are well and happy and she enjoyed holiday messages from Marilyn Hopkins Bamorough, Ann Holmes Bryan, and Sally Strickland Johnson. Sally Legg De Martine is still working hard at painting and became a happy instant grandmother when her son Arthur married a lovely young woman with three sons. Jackie Jacobs Buttram says that renewed life has been put into the Chattanooga Alumnae Club by a visit from SBC President Nenah Fry. Alice Dulaney Sheridan is enjoying the real estate boom in the Jacksonville, FL area. Ann-Barrett Holmes Bryan and Bob's daughter, Lee is back in the U.S. permanently from Honduras. She is in Chicago, managing the Chicago Dance Company while working on her masters degree in integrated arts.

Dot Bottom Duffy has retired as editor of the Daily Press and Times Herald but continues to serve on the boards of the Virginia Nature Conservancy, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, and the Virginia Outdoors Foundation. She urges that any alumnae who are willing to work to keep our beautiful state from looking like Rahway, N.J., please let her know. She and John went to Israel for the recording of his suite from the TV Heritage series, with narrations by Abba Eden.

Our school has been the recipient of two outstanding alumnae gifts this past year. One, the establishment of a scholarship to aid students interested in entering medical school or studies in the biological sciences, given by Libby Trueheart Harris and her daughter, Mary, the latter working on a fellowship in gastro-enterology at Johns Hopkins. And, the other, a room in our new on-campus Inn, affectionately named the Bunny Brown Bedroom, given appropriately by SBC Board member Walter Brown, guess who's husband.

Fritzie Duncombe Millard's daughter, Carter, was married in CA, given away by her 14 years younger brother, Brook. Fritzie had just sent her 90-year-old mother off to NM to throw a birthday party for her 97-year-old sister. With genes like that, Fritzie offered her services as Reunion Chairman for our class in 2019. Fritzie has just finished a year on the Board of Directors of the Junior League of Evanston. She is taking crisis training sessions with the Shelter for Battered Women which is co-sponsored by the League and the YWCA.

The '49ers are interested in each other. We once spent a lot of time together, and the longer we've been out of touch, the sweeter it is to be back in. So don't trash that card next February. Five minutes of jotting down anything — just that you're there — would be of interest to many.

Our '87 question for the '89 questionnaire is, "Do you get fully dressed before or after breakfast?" Only two more years for you to think about this and free-spirited children and emptying garbage! Go to it.

It was wonderful to hear from so many of you. Before I begin, I would like to extend our classes' deepest sympathy to Katty Turner Mears on the death of her husband, Ben, in Sept. 1986 and to Ann Leonard Hodges on the death of her twin daughter, Pam, in an automobile accident in August 1986. Also to Edie Norman Wombwell whose father died and to Sue Allison Bercaw whose mother died during the year.

Katty keeps busy as president of APUA, a statewide preservation organization in VA but always has lots of time for her year old granddaughter. Ann's other twin daughter works for her husband and her son is in business school at TCU. Her youngest daughter made her debut a year ago and their party was a Caribbean cruise for a week. Between fishing trips to Alaska and skiing in Utah, they are finding time to stock cattle on a new ranch. Sue is working on an information retrieval system for the Office of Presidential Libraries and particularly likes working with the archivists. Bill is still at the Pentagon working on various computer related policy problems. Their son, Woodson, continues to control satellites. John teaches at S. Albans in DC and Nancy is halfway to a Ph.D. in history at Penn.

Dickie Wellborn Hopper and David have moved to Wilmot Flat, NH which is between Concord and Hanover and just love it. They are busy skiing, visiting, and getting acquainted with their new community and church. All their children are gone and Dickie's parents have moved to Winston-Salem so they have time for visits with friends, children, and grandchildren — they just welcomed their eighth.

Connie Werly Wakelee and Dave will be joining the Hoppers in NH as they are starting to build their retirement home in Lyme. Meanwhile, Connie is active on the board of the Guilford Handcraft Center and also works in their shop. Connie recently returned from visiting her daughter, Holly, in Denver and her other daughter, Ann, and grandson, Colin, in upstate NY. Bob and I stopped by to see Connie and Dave a year ago and it was wonderful to be with them.

Sallie Wemple Codman is doing real estate these days proclaiming the divine assets of Conn., especially Fairfield and Easton and is loving it. Another realtor but in Winnetka is Midge Chace Powell. Her most recent sale was to her daughter and her husband — their first home. Midge's son is an editor with a trade magazine living at home along with a Burmese student whom they are sponsoring. Their youngest daughter graduated from Skidmore in May. Midge and Bill have travelled to Burma and Thailand, climbed mountains in Malaysia, Borneo and Mt. Kilimanjaro in Tanzania. They also visited South Africa, Costa Rica, Panama and Contadora Is. After 18 years at Northfield Mount Hermon School, Ann Vlerebome Sorenson is leaving to take on a new challenge of working with Central American refugees at Jubilee Partners in Ga.

Flo Pye Apy wrote with her left hand as her right hand and arm were in a cast as a result of a fall. She is still very involved with the regional high school board and is running for the third three-year term. Her oldest son graduated from law school a year ago and he and the girl he plans to marry were both sworn into the NJ Bar before Christmas. He will be associated with a law firm in Newark and she will be an assistant Monmouth County prosecutor. Flo's middle son graduated from Brown in May and her youngest son is a freshman engineering student at Princeton.

Lynn Kerwin Byron is still taking courses at Shepherd College mainly in Shenandoah Valley and architectural history and archeology. When not studying, she doubles as groom and stablehand for their three horses. Her children are in Baltimore, Alexandria, Norfolk and her youngest daughter is a junior at Mt. Holyoke.

Anne Joyce Wyman and Joseph travel between Long Island and their apartment in NY. Their daughter is attending Yale. Jacqueline Lowe Young travels south as both her married sons live in Decatur, GA and her daughter is at UNC at Chapel Hill.

Janie Pieper Meredith and Bill sold their big farm and bought a smaller one closer to Richmond. It is between Cuckoo and Bumpass, VA which she says gets a big laugh from her Yankee family.

Some travelling members of the class include Virginia June Earley Holt and husband, Tad, who travelled to Peru, Argentina, and Brazil including side trips to Macchu Picchu and Iguaçu Falls. Last spring they spent a week in Maui visiting their daughter and her husband who are professional musical entertainers and this summer will be in China for three weeks. They have a log cabin on a lake five miles east of SBC where they are half of the time. Between them they have nine children and two granddaughters. Isabel Grayson Parish and Hav visited Australia and New Zealand in the spring of '86 and then the Amazon River and Macchu Picchu that summer. Oct. '86 saw them in China, Tibet, Nepal, Thailand, Burma and home via Hawaii. They crossed Tibet in a small bus, no amenities, sometimes not even water for drinking or bathing — freezing cold with high winds and snow — quite an experience for a southern girl. Isabel's last son was married in May and his oldest brother, an Episcopal clergyman, performed the ceremony with all his other brothers as groomsmen. Virginia Dunlap Shelton and Tom visited Mexico and England in '86 and also took a sailing trip to New England. Their middle son was married in May which was their first wedding. MA Mellen Root and John and Maggie Graves McClung and David travelled to England in May for two weeks. They visited the Cotswolds, the Cornish and Devon Coasts, the Lake district and London. One highlight was the Chelsea Flower Show which MA had wanted to see ever since "Mrs. Miniver".

Kirk Tucker Clarkson is busy with many interesting projects, chiefly art and environment oriented. Her son was married in Oct. '86 and her daughter had a second baby in May.

Mary Littlejohn Belser is still writing poetry. She is no longer teaching but instead is playing grandmother to her three grandchildren. She does publicity for all the organizations she belongs to and is on the altar guild and vestry of her church. Donna Anderson Mullens teaches Sunday school full-time and is a part-time teacher. All of her family went to Park City, UT a year ago on a ski trip, including her son and his fiancée (they are now married), her daughter and her husband and two children and her other daughter who is an SBC alum and presently a program analyst with Delta Airlines in Atlanta.

Gloria Rawls Askew's husband has retired so they plan to play a lot of golf and travel more. Their daughter finished her surgery residency in NY and is now at Children's Hospital in Okla. City doing two years in pediatric surgery. Their other daughter is teaching PE in Houston.

Our Texas contingent is doing well — Cinnie Moorhead McNair is director of her church's day care center and loves it. She has three grandsons who she wishes lived closer. After raising three children, Tessita Wood O'Daniel has taken up painting and drawing seriously and has become an artist. She saw Jane Westbrook who is living in Troy, NY and is working for Sterling Drugs. Jane and Dorothea Fuller are planning a spring walk through the wildflowers of New England. Dorothea is working for the fund — raising department of RMWC. Tessita also talked to Nancy Morrison Cravens whose youngest daughter is at SBC. Another San Antonian is Ann Phelps Gorman who sold her family's farms in KY a few years ago and now lives in TX. She tutors math for Texas Military Institute and is working hard to get horseracing (parimutual betting) in TX. Nan O'Keefe won her race as Republican Precinct Chairman a year ago and will gear up to run again in March. She is also on a George Bush steering committee in Houston.

Ann Lackey retired in June from the Tulsa public schools after 26 years. She is looking forward to tennis, gardening and whatever comes along. Last year she took a Caribbean cruise and visited her brother in CA.

Kim Green Stone is kept busy with their sideline business of land and livestock. They have 40 acres on the east slope of the Sierras about 8 miles from Lake Tahoe and plan to move there from Carson City this year. Their horses made a nice profit so they will continue to breed pure Crabbet and pure Polish Arabians. Cathy Munds Storek and Ben had a lovely trip to Europe a year ago and while there visited Ben's family in Czechoslovakia. Their daughter, Karen was married in June '86.

From across the seas we heard from Margaret May Iolster whose eldest son is at Penn State studying for a MA in Dairy Science. Both he and his brother graduated as agricultural engineers from the Univ. of Buenos Aires. Her daughter is in her fourth year of medicine. Margaret writes that being a housewife keeps her busy as she runs from church work to garden club to secretary of a local opposition political party. Nancy Goldie McTaggart is leading a quiet life but doing more active grandmothering as she watches her grandson, age 2, while her daughter works part-time. Nancy and Mac visited Scotland and stayed at Jane Keating Taylor and Bob's superb mansion. Said she recognized Jane immediately as she hadn't changed at all. The entire McTaggart family including their two daughters and husbands and children went skiing in Switzerland during the winter. Eleanor Hirsch Baer says that building and moving have enervated her — but they're planning to go to China again in Aug. '87 and travel down the Yangtze River. They finally have a first grandchild, Eric, Julien, born to Ben III and Larisa.

We had a mini SBC reunion aboard the Explorer Starship last January while cruising the Caribbean from Barbados to San Juan. Those seen standing in line for the midnight buffet, after just finishing dinner, were Jane Perry Liles and George, Joan Brophy Tyree and Tom, Kitty Guerrant Fields and Lou, Ann and Bud Stoddard, friends of the Fields and Bob and I. We had a marvelous week of superb food and accommodations, interesting tours of each island, excellent beaches, good shopping and, of course, a wonderful group who thoroughly enjoyed being together. How about a cruise for our 35th? Jane and George welcomed their first grandchild, George Welch Liles, III on April 2nd.

Edie Norman Wombwell is still going wild with the stamp business. Her oldest son is married and living in Louisville. Her second son graduated magna cum laude from Colorado College and her third son is at Northwestern majoring in communications. She and George went on a windjammer cruise in the Bahamas — great adventure complete with crashing into a "wimp" cruise ship in the harbor. They have bought a condo in Aspen but have it rented for a year. Our ever dependable fund agent is chewing her nails over our upcoming 35th reunion and our monetary gift to SBC. Please dig deep — we are such a super class but have never been overly generous in our fund giving. Reunion is May 27-29 — mark your calendars now and plan to come. We always have such a wonderful time

I must end on a sad note — the Class Notes were completed when I learned of Tom Tyree's sudden death on April 22nd. Joan and Tom were with us on our cruise and, although he was not well at the time, he was as always a good sport and fun to be with. Our deepest sympathy to Joan and the boys — we too shall miss our friend.

Reunion will be a memory by the time you read this — I hope someone can add some reunion news to the end. Thanks to all of you who wrote news and special thanks for your many words of appreciation

Two classmates have married and eight or nine have new addresses. We are acquiring children-in-law and grandchildren at a great rate, and some are retiring, or have a spouse who has retired. Traveling is popular; no Great American Novel is being touted; but some research is in progress.

Joan Ault is now Mrs. Dale Vance, living in Mount Airy, MD. Catherine Meacham is now Catherine M. Durgin, and has moved from NYC to Mill Neck, NY. Baba Conway Gwin moved from Oxford, MS to Lawrence, KS; Zan Engh Moore from Houston to Dallas, TX; Joan Harjes Solitt from Edgewater, MD to Annapolis, MD; Thelma Houk McGrory from Gaithersburg, MD to Oak Ridge, TN; Jan Pehl Ettele from Fairfax, VA to Sun City, AZ; and Anne Richardson Worthy from Hilton Head, SC back to Martinsville, VA.

Lee Wittich Morrow and Paul had a winter cruise and expected to be in Atlanta in August for the American Numismatic Ass'n convention. Coins started as a hobby and have become a business. Daughter Ginger and Ken are in Chicago, she in hotel administration. Lee hoped to meet some friends at SBC in the fall Continuing backwards through the alphabet, Cynthia Wilson Ottoway and John have moved from Grosse Pointe Farms, MI to Walloon Lake, MI. John has retired from his Detroit law practice and is relaxing while seeking some activity to pursue. They will also live part-time in village of Golf, FL.

Elizabeth SBC 82 was married June

Class of 1957 at Reunion '87

86 to Tom Casalini, a professional photographer, and stepson John III married in Sept. 86 in Philadelphia, PA. Son Otto is out of the Marines and working in Indianapolis. Daughter Allison and family moved from MT to WY where they bought a ski area. Mike works in Chicago

Anne Wilson Rowe has another granddaughter to enjoy — her Australian family is here all year. They will have another wedding this year, and another grandchild. Anne had just returned from Alumna Board when she found my card.

Carroll Weitzel Rivers has moved to a newly built home just south of Charleston, SC, located on a steeplechase course. Half is lovely open living area and large porch, and half is storage space, presumably for her fox hunting and watercolor gear. They will also spend more time in Cashiers, NC. Mary Webb Miller's year has been full of wedding plans — her son Tommy's in June and her daughter Katherine's in September.

Mary Anne Vandervoort Large and Bob took the two younger girls through New England, New Brunswick, and Quebec province, and found they had to lay down the law regarding their French conversation skills, studied since kindergarten: no food unless they spoke French with all restaurant staff. Elizabeth, 16, went to England Feb.-March with a St. Catherine's School group, while Mary Kathryn, 15, skis and is on the track team. Anne, 20, is a French major at W&L. Mary Anne and Bob also visited AZ in Feb. and decided a dust storm was better than Virginia's icy snow storms. They also planned a San Francisco trip this spring

Carol Turner Crosthwait wrote that she and Bob had just completed the four year Education for Ministry course from Sewanee and highly recommend it. They will teach it together in Waco, TX. All three daughters married within the last two years. Gay is a lawyer in San Francisco; Edna has a masters in nutrition and works at Baylor Hospital in Dallas; and Nancy is banquet manager for a hotel in Johnson City, TN. Carol and Bob celebrated their 30th anniversary in England August 1986.

Barbara Tetzlaff finds San Francisco still a magical place after 12 years there. She is juggling three ventures:

law (estate planning and business, no litigation); doing personal computer consulting; and starting a tracer company getting government refunds for those who are owed them. She hopes for a trip to China and Tibet next year

At our reunion time, Carolyn Swift Fleming expected to be in China for an Oncology Nursing Exchange and present 2 papers, one on symptom management of the terminally ill at home, and I could not decipher the other. Her daughter Alice graduated from Wellesley in 84 and married a lawyer; her son Will was graduated from Carleton in 86; and Ed is at Yale, class of 88

Mary Stoll Cross, in Princeton, NJ, is a professional portrait photographer. She and her husband Theodore wrote and did the photographs for a book on China, Behind the Great Wall. Athenaeum Press, 1979. They are remodeling and reselling historic houses in Nantucket, and have three daughters, Stuart, Polly, and Ann, but some of her card got smudged. One of them clerked for a federal judge of the sixth circuit Court of Appeals, and Ann is applying to graduate schools in film

Lynn and Mary Landon Smith Brugh report no earth-shattering news (few of us do, any more!). Carter and Drew are in Richmond and Norfolk; Lynn IV works for a real estate firm in Duck, NC; Mason was a sophomore at Hampden-Sydney; and Mary Stuart will be at Salem in Winston-Salem, NC this fall.

Chris Smith Lowry and Britt married off daughter Tina in June 86 and son Brink in December 86. After Tina's wedding, Chris spent a week (recuperating?) visiting Suzy Neblett Stephens at their home on Cat Cay. Lowrys bought land in the NC mountains near Lake Lure and hope to build a cottage there soon, and see more of Nancy Shuford Garrison, who is building a summer home nearby at Grandfather Mountain. Nancy has a great job at Century Furniture Co. as VP in charge of advertising, public relations and marketing. She hopes we see their ads! Nancy's youngest, Harley, was to graduate from high school at reunion time. He will be a Jefferson Scholar at UVA—and maybe check out SBC? Nancy's daughter Rebecca graduated from U. Colorado in 86 and works in the field of preventive medicine. Nancy has two older married children but is still awaiting grandchildren.

Dee Robin sends good news and bad news. Her divorce is the latter. The good news is that she has just won two things: (1) the American Academy Prix de Rome Mellon fellowship, so she will be spending this year in Rome doing research for her book on Filelfo, and (2) the Gladys Kriebel Delmas Foundation Fellowship for 8 months work in Venice on Filelfo. I must confess my own ignorance (and curiosity). Filelfo, according to my antique Britannica, was a 15th century Italian humanist scholar with an argumentative disposition

The SB computer tells us that Jane Rather Thiebaud has moved from Switzerland to Bangor, ME. Susan Ragland Lewis wrote from her son Chris's house in Buffalo, NY. He had just become a father. Susan's other son, Jim is in Tampa with Nat'l Bank of NC. Chris works for Seagram's. Jenny is also married and works in NYC as a product/design manager for men's wear at Bloomingdale's. Susan continues doing fundraising, presently for National Rehabilitation Hospital as Director of Development and Corporate Relations, similar to what she previously did at Ford's Theatre. She enjoys living in Georgetown

Jane Pinckney Hanahan and Billy had a wonderful trip to the Far East last winter: Hong Kong, Canton, Indonesia, and Bangkok.

Lainy Newton Peters says Gregg completed work for TV show, Easy Street, so they were planning April trips to Las Vegas, the Florida Keys and the Bahamas. Son, Mark Dickinson, was completing graduate work for his masters at Berkeley. Lainy was busy at home with a new Tibetan Terrier puppy, and doing distant teaching of students and senior citizens at LA county Art Museum

Suzy Neblett Stephens had a new grandson April 15, 1986, born to her son Lee and his wife in Williamsburg where Lee was then in his second year at Wm. & Mary Law School. They wintered in the Bahamas, and keep busy summers at The Tides Inn in Irvington, VA. Marguerite McDaniel Wood took her daughter, Marguerite Powell (16) to look at some colleges over spring break. They came to Sweet Briar and were so impressed by the beauty of the campus — Marguerite had forgotten how beautiful it was. Marguerite had a delightful visit with Pee Wee Brugh and Aileen Laing

Roberta Malone Henderson was very sorry she'd have to miss reunion for their middle son, Ian's, graduation from Kenyon C. They were also planning to leave two days later with Ian (22) and Malcolm (19, Yale freshman) for a three week trip to Italy. Son Wallace (25) was going to England in June for his work with an NYC bank

Roberta does volunteer work, gardens, has a little art business and edits a magazine, but she gave no title

Anne McGrath Lederer says they moved in January to a smaller apartment but have a fabulous view of NYC from the 35th floor. Sloane was to graduate in May from UVA and start a work/study program with Aperture, a quarterly magazine. Andrew was to graduate from St. David's in June and attend Pomfret this fall

Elaine Kimball Carleton has enjoyed life in Louisiana since 1981. She expected to miss reunion because she was finishing the semester teaching high school Latin after the regular teacher had to move away. She enjoys it, but finds it so "daily"! Sam had a two-month fellowship in Rome in summer of 86 so she took his father and their kids, George, 12, and Elizabeth, 15, via Eurail Pass from London to Rome and returned by way of Capri, Vienna, Lucerne, Berne, and Paris—five weeks. In London they stayed with Clare Harrison Greenman, who was a St. Andrew's exchange student at SBC '56-'57

Maybe all our husbands should have to be overseas for a spell. Sydney Graham Brady quit her 11 year job as a trust officer in the leading local bank to accompany Bill on sabbatical from Knox College. They spent 10 months in Florence, one month in Greece, and one in England, mainly at Oxford. They did not see quite all the wonders of the Western world so they would have an excuse to return, but Sydney was job-hunting and fearing she might find one

Ye Editor of this Distinguished Magazine, Nancy Godwin Baldwin, claims to have no news, except we should begin planning for our 35th reunion and all be there for that one! What kind of editor has no news to report?

Anne Frasher Hudson sends word from Fort Worth, TX, that old age has turned her into a jock. She claims to have walked from Pisa to Sienna to Florence last year, eating pasta and going to museums along the way. She spends much time in Aspen, skiing in winter, and hiking, fishing and enjoying music in summer. Elaine Floyd Fisher's daughter, Evangelina, who spent her freshman year at SBC, has been a sophomore this year, '86-'87, at Occidental College. The Fishers enjoyed their visit to SBC to enroll her in the fall of '85. Elaine volunteers in the recovery room at the Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena two days a week.

Equal opportunity has come full circle, it seems. Jane Fitzgerald Treherne-Thomas reports her husband Jeremy will be the first man to chair a National Symphony Ball. They both are board members for the Pittsburgh Symphony, and he has a new job as President and CEO of SMS Engineering in Pittsburgh. They still enjoy summer sojourns to Nantucket.

Babs Falge Openshaw reports Mark

is still in the navy, hoping to be assigned to the Naval Academy as aide to the commandant. The others are all out of the navy and living in the area, and Babs is surprised to find herself goofy about #1 grandchild, a boy. She's revamping and redecorating a house in Annapolis, which she plans to rent furnished until she persuades Jim to move there eventually. They were planning a trip to Loire Valley chateaux by car in early June

No news from Susan Elder Martin, but an article from a Chattanooga paper about her daughter, Sally Martin Crimmins, tells of Sally's diabetes and work with diabetic children; another article from the Chattanooga Times is about daughter, Kerri, who is assistant U.S. attorney for the southern district of NY.

Dot Duncan Hodges's daughter Anne was to be married the end of May, so Dot would miss reunion. (You were supposed to schedule weddings some other time. Never mind what the bride and groom want.) Dot also mentions missing Helen Smith Davenport, with her wonderful joie de vivre and humor. Hodges Taylor Gallery (contemporary southeastern art) keeps Dot rather confined Diane Duffield Wood's message about her son Chip was mostly cancelled by the post office's wavy lines, but he must be a real hunk; he works for American Airlines as a flight attendant based in Dallas, so all ladies in that area should read nametags carefully when they fly. She has one grandchild of each sex, and expects one more in September. Duffy had of course spent much of the year planning the reunion and had talked to a number of classmates in the process. She thanks all of us for contributing or coming to reunion, or preferably both. She still enjoys her bookstore job.

Fran Childress Lee and Lewis had a great trip in August and September a year ago to New Zealand, Australia and China, all of it related to the cattle industry. Their youngest was to graduate in May from Randolph-Macon in Ashland, VA. They have one grandchild two years old. Marie Chapin Plumley's eldest son, Allan III, has recently joined the brokerage firm of Johnston & Lemon in DC. Daughter Carolyn is married and has a baby boy, Michael — their first grandchild. The youngest, Chris, is still in college

Chips Chao Pai was glad for an uneventful year, with David totally recovered from his multiple bypass. They are exercising a lot and were looking forward to warm weather when she wrote. Both were back at work (Chips had a sabbatical) and trying to manage stress better. Ben was to graduate from Duke and Mike was finishing his junior year at Cornell

pungent remarks! She is somewhat ga-ga over a brand new granddaughter. John has finally finished his book, a history of his home town, Ford City, PA, and Jane can find her table and buffet tops again. Their teacher-strike-negotiations lasted 14 months, with Jane on the negotiating team in the midst of the fray, so they were behind in the number of school days and she would have to miss reunion. In the end they reached the lowest settlement in the state after appeals to both the Commonwealth and the State Supreme Court. The local board perceives teachers as altogether useless, and she expected many teachers would circulate resumes. Steve is teaching at St. Luke's School in Greenwich Village, and Tom has been transferred to Charlotte, NC, with Electronic Data Systems. When Jane is not teaching or battling the school board, she is the local church choir director

Another school teacher who cannot make reunion is Bari Baker Hart, who works as a diagnostician for three school districts in East Texas, with May her busiest month. Bill has resumed the practice of law, since the oil business is on the skids. They have one out of college at last and working in Austin, and they expect/hope two to graduate next year. She had seen Jane Best Wehland and Chuck in Dallas where their son works and was to marry in May. Jane and Chuck planned to take a leisurely drive home from Charles' May 9 Dallas wedding, by the southern route, and she wasn't sure she could make reunion. Her mother's ill health was also a factor. Elaine Dies Colmer and Robert celebrated their 30th anniversary Feb. 2 and a week later welcomed a new red-headed grandson in Memphis. After many happy years of working in retailing she is now employed very parttime and enjoying family even more. Susan Smith Friend has been out of the country, but had a lot of "catching up" news. She had remarried seven years ago, lives in Winter Park, FL, and now has five children. Her husband Thomas is an investment banker in Orlando; her son is a hair stylist in NYC and DC doing magazine layouts; older daughter is in a designing firm in Vienna, VA; other daughter was to start vet school in the fall but was working in the intensive care unit at an animal hospital in Boston; stepson finishing at U. FL and entering a Naval air career; stepdaughter at Oldfields School in Glen-coe, MD, doing well and loving riding as Sue did. Sue raises orchids, paints, volunteers at the Audubon Society, and her great love is the Opera Society. She hoped to make reunion

Fritz and I have eased off some on church activities and have been square dancing all over the (central New York) map, plus a long weekend of dancing in Washington, DC. Seeing the tourist stuff, followed by 15 or more hours of dancing in two and a half days, did incredible things to my legs! We have two granddaughters, Lois's U. Rochester graduation the same time as reunion, and Carl's high school graduation to report. Laurie's still in seminary in Chicago, and Lucy's with DuPont, living in Newark, DE. The sixth and last one just got his driver's license so that is another milestone for the bunch. Sorry to miss reunion and hope our next secretary enjoys this as much as I have. Au revoir!

Addendum for class of 1957 notes, by Jane Fitzgerald Treherne-Thomas: Our 30th reunion was a joy and a triumph! A joy for all those members of the class of 57 who returned to campus for a fantastic reunion which included the triumph of winning the Nancy Dowd Burton Award for the "largest unrestricted gift given by a reunion class." We went over the top of our $70,000 goal and gave $78,000 as our reunion gift. Our dear class sponsors, Dr. and Mrs. Rawley (Ann and Jim) joined us for reunion all the way from the University of Nebraska. New class officers were elected at the class picnic: President: Nannette McBurney Crowds, Fund Agent: Cynthia Wilson Ottoway, Secretary: Jane Fitzgerald Treherne-Thomas. More reunion news in the next issue.

Jeanne Bounds Hamilton (Mrs. D. Ross), 130 East End Avenue, New York, NY

Thanks to those of you who wrote; I hope that many more of you will send news for our next issue. As those of us who enjoyed our fantastic 25th reunion found out, renewing old friendships and stirring around the old memories are rewarding activities especially during times of mid-life crisis, teenage traumas, or when contemplating empty-nest syndrome.

Top billing should be given to our newly-weds: Stuart Bohannon married Howell M. Evans in March of 1986, and Miss Em Whaley is now Mrs. Grant Whipple as of March 21, 1987. Miss Em's son Douglas (18) gave her away, and daughter Emily (15) was her maid of honor. Stuart and Howell live in Jacksonville and are enjoying a beautiful condo on the river. They went hunting in the fall with Jeanne Bounds Hamilton and Ross, Catherine Caldwell Cabaniss and Billy, and Judith Atkins Wall and Craig. Stuart is godmother to Jeanne's daughter Blair who is reportedly a beauty and as smart as her momma!

Margaret Storey Abernathy is enjoying the challenge of her nursing career in Atlanta. Her son Andrew (21) is back at W&L after a year off, and daughter Win is at St. Margaret's in Tappahannock, VA, class of '88

Winifred Storey Davis stays busy in Atlanta working in the family business (Storey Theatres) and with her volunteer commitment as Chairman of the Board of the Atlanta Speech School. Her sons are in and out — boarding school, college, jobs.

Nancy Coppedge Lynn, also in Atlanta, and husband Jerry celebrated their 25th anniversary with a two week trip to England where they especially enjoyed the Lake District. Both of her children are out of college; son Worth is working in commercial real estate, and Barbara is in the management training program for the Talbot's clothing chain.

Celia Williams Dunn and Larry are continuing their successful real estate venture — Celia Dunn Realty in Savannah — where Celia is a continuing life member of the Million Dollar Club. Son Laurence is completing his sophomore year in honors pre-med at U. of Ga. Daughter Celia is participating in the American Dance Festival at Duke this summer; she will be a 12th grader at St. Mary's in Raleigh in the fall where my daughter Alice Boggs will be an entering 11th grader. According to Anne Farnam, Larry and Celia were delightful host and hostess during the Savannah Homes and Gardens Tour for 38 members of The Essex Institute, of which Anne is president. Anne is working hard at the Institute to raise 1.2 million within 3 years in order to match a $400,000 challenge grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities Marilyn Dreesman Chuang, who lives in Honolulu, spent Christmas in Hong Kong with her parents-in-law, her children, Katy Mendelson McDonald (SBC '60) and Katy's daughter Courtney (SBC '90). Marilyn also took her children on a Vail ski trip this past winter.

Pat Anderson Warren is serving on the Marin County (CA) School Board, works as administrator to the Marin Co. Commission on the Status of Women, and does volunteer work with the Board of the Novato Youth Center which provides day care. To keep calm, she runs about 25 mi/week with her husky. Husband Rob, bridge manager for the Golden Gate Bridge, is up to his ears in the bridge's 50th birthday celebration. Mark is a sophomore at U.C. Davis (electronic engineering major), and Michael is graduating from high school.

Anne Worboys Buske's daughter Dana was #1 in her middle school class, takes photos for the school newspaper, and is involved in soccer and track. Rachael (9) won a silver medal in science; she also plays soccer and the drums.

Jill Babson Carter writes from NYC that Lissy graduates from Chapin and will go to Dartmouth; Christopher graduates from Dartmouth with honors in English Lit.; and Anna marries a Hampden-Sydney man (David Florence) and they'll spend their honeymoon in India on a work/study program. As all of this happens in June, Jill and Martie expect to be tired and broke by the month's end!

Penny Stanton Meyer is still teaching first grade in VT. Her son David is a freshman at Bowdoin and will spend this fall doing a NOLS semester in Baja. Susanah is a junior at Loomis Chaffee. Penny enjoyed a trip to San Francisco in February.

Paige Wilkerson Pruitt and family have moved to Hilton Head although husband Neil still commutes to their corporate offices in GA. Neil, Jr. is a 7th grader and is working as a "ball boy" at the Family Circle Tennis and Heritage Golf Tournaments. Paige is teaching Sunday School and playing bridge every chance she gets.

Julie Johnson Chapin has moved back to her New England family home and would love SBC visitors. Husband Bill is manager of Moseley Securities. Julie is a Middlebury College junior in Paris. Kim is a freshman at U. of NH and Billy (13) is still in school at home.

Our only class State Senator, Alicia Lang Salisbury (Kansas Senate), has moved from a three-story home of 23 years to one more attuned to her busy schedule and empty nest. Jess graduates from KU in May, and Margaret plans a summer internship with Merrill Lynch after completing her junior year at KU. Alicia and John are headed for a vacation in France and Switzerland in September

Janna Staley Fitzgerald is working part-time in her husband's business in Charlotte and now has her real estate license. She enjoyed sailing on the Chesapeake last fall and is also planning on attending her 30th high school reunion in Indianapolis. Her younger son (17) is participating in an exchange program in Germany

Sara Finnegan Lycett is a medical publisher and was recently elected to the Group Executive of STM, the international scientific, technical, and medical publishers association. Sara, who has been serving on the strategic planning committee for SBC, has also been named to the SBC Board of Overseers.

The Class of '61 is further represented at SBC by Judy Greer Schulz who is currently the president of the Alumnae Association, yet still finds time for piano teaching and decorating for furniture markets. Judy asks us to send her any suggestions for SBC because she thinks our class has "great judgement"! Judy's Cecily

(SBC '85) is at UVA Law School and Garth is a junior at W&L

Willoughby Applegate Ansell writes that she has nothing to report since she is living "a rather animal-oriented reclusive life in Waxhaw, NC." with Sassy Faye and Henry, her horses, and Olson her lab.

Mary Mackenzie Shaw and Jim live in Simsbury, CT, and both are officers at CIGNA. Mary returned to CIGNA's Financial Office after 11 years of raising children. Her daughter Lisa (21) is at SBC, Jimmer (19) is at Carnegie-Mellon's School of Architecture, and Ian (17) is at Watkinson in West Hartford.

Suzanne Seaman Berry writes that she has joined the interior design division of The Second Yard, a fabric and home furnishings store in Charlottesville, VA. She has helped Judy Schulz refurbish the Alumnae House at SBC. Since she's down to one child at home (the others are in college or working), she plans to join Fritz on some of his teaching jaunts to such places as Singapore, Mexico, and the Caymans.

Also in Charlottesville is Susan Cone Scott who says she stays incredibly busy as the single parent of Alexandra (14) and Fredric (12). Although much of her time is spent carpooling to their various activities, she is trying to do some writing. They also spent an enjoyable spring vacation in CA.

Bette Hutchins Sharland, "With glee and some prayer continues to count down the days until she graduates" from high school." She spent the summer investigating possible interesting uses for her future and welcomes suggestions.

Mary Denny Scott Wray and Michael are moving from Dallas to Richmond where Michael will continue to do consulting work in the oil industry. Since Michael has had two more bypass operations, they hope that life in Richmond will be less stressful. Michael's eldest son graduates from law school in June, his daughter is with Time in NYC, and his youngest son is teaching in Boston. As for Mary Denney's, Bagley graduated from UVA and works for Bank of NY, Scott is a junior at UVA, and Jim is a freshman at Rollins. Sally Hamilton Staub is in Charlotte, and she continues to work with Kappa Kappa Gamma alumnae in four states. She and Dick plan to go island-hopping in the Caribbean in April.

Anne Rogers Killefer came to the wedding of Sally and Dick's son Richard in Oct. of '86. She had been a bridesmaid of Richard's mother-in-law. Daughter Dabney is finishing her junior year in architecture at NC State.

Susie Pritchard Pace continues to work in her husband's real estate investment firm, and she has recently obtained her real estate license. Their son is coaching at a local school, and their older daughter graduated Phi Beta Kappa from U. of Richmond where the younger daughter is also a student.

Simone Aubrey Real has a fascinating and unusual job as personal secretary to Joan Kennedy where she does everything from supervising the renovation and redecoration of Mrs. Kennedy's Boston condo to unpacking and organizing the placement of all its contents from dishes to sweaters as well as keeping up with her normal secretarial duties of correspondence and bookkeeping. Last year she even helped make her Christmas cards!

I stay busy juggling the demands of my law practice and the needs of a husband, two teenagers, and elderly relatives. John and the children and I enjoyed a trip to the Virgin Islands in March. Jay (15) is into football and lacrosse. While Alice (17) is excited about going off to St. Mary's next year, her mother has mixed emotions over the beginnings of empty-nest syndrome.

Lou Chapman Hoffman and Don have just been through the college admission process with Don, who decided on Amherst. With Richard a high school sophomore, they'll soon be doing it again. Fran Brackenridge Neumann is coordinator of the Boys' Club drug abuse prevention program in the Pasadena area, and is organizing a conference in November. An enthusiastic member of the Diggers Garden Club, Fran also enjoys her Rottweilers and is "into carting — as in 'my dog pulls me in a cart' — no mean feat!" Susan Robinson Syquia is still working for the Harpursville, NY Teachers' Association and doing volunteer hospital work. Her elder daughter, Rowaine, graduated from Hamilton College in June '86 and is now an analyst at Goldman Sachs & Co. in London; younger daughter, Jennifer, who was a Rotary exchange student in Sweden, is now a freshman at Boston U. Faith Bullis Sebring continues to teach algebra at the Bullis School and coach the girls' softball team. Heather is a junior at Villanova. Clayton will go to Arizona State in the fall, and two sons are still at home. When I (Louise Cobb Boggs) called Caroline Birdsall Sory, they were getting ready to leave for their younger son's graduation from Vanderbilt.

The class extends its sympathy to Susie Venable Jamison whose husband, Tom, died in May.

Thank you for the wonderful turnout and all the interesting news! As we get older, we obviously get better. Many of us have off-spring in college or college-bound.

Laura Haskell Phinzy writes "Come September...if the creek don't rise..." Laura, 19, will be a junior at Princeton, Louise, 17, a senior and Marion, 14, a freshman at the Academy of Richmond County. Her husband, Stewart still enjoys working in real estate. Laura has been working with the American Red Cross in Augusta to develop a new program for business and industry.

When Trudy Dowd Hatch wrote from Seattle, Trey, 17, was looking at colleges on the east coast. Her husband, Ed, is leaving the University of Washington system to go into private practice. After receiving her M.S., Trudy has her own practice in marriage & family therapy. She also keeps young playing the piano and exercising.

Katie Wood Clarke and husband are surprised to be enjoying their "empty nest." Douglas is a junior at Wesleyan, and Christopher a freshman at Davidson.

The empty nest of Dryden Childs March and her husband, Sandy, is often visited by various children: Liz, 15, Morrie, 17, Ted, 21, and Kip, 22, who are at boarding school and college. They keep busy refurbishing a 200-year-old farmhouse in Basking Ridge, New Jersey — their new home for a year.

Belle Williams Smith's daughter, Elizabeth, will be going to Smith in the fall. She, Ware, Little Ware, 7, and Mason, 16, are all fine in Roanoke.

After ten years in London, Jean Inge Cox writes all is well. Virginia will be back on their itinerary since her son, Christopher Leventis will be a freshman at "The University" this fall.

Elvira McMillan Tate writes her family is well. Minnie is completing her freshman year at Connecticut College. Elvira spent her junior year in Barcelona, Spain in the SYA Program. Her sons Clark, 13, and Edward, 10, keep active with many sports.

With daughter, Caroline, a sophomore at W & L, and son, Chris, to be a freshman there this fall. Mary K. Pederson Kyger is also busy at home in Houston with 6-year-old Ross IV. Their travels have taken them to Iceland for salmon fishing.

When Dabney Williams McCoy and family travel to Maine, they enjoy seeing Jane Merkle Borden and her family. Dabney's son, Tim Jr., will be at UNC next fall. Son Chris, 15, is a sophomore at St. Christopher's. Her daughter, Catherine, (3rd grade) takes piano from Sally Twedell Bagley '67. She also wrote that Sallie Mullins was remarried in March and will continue to live in Houston.

From Minneapolis Susan Strong McDonald reports: Louise, her oldest, will graduate from Carleton College in June, son, Angus, is a freshman at Amherst, and youngest, Elizabeth, will complete the 4th grade. Susan was preparing for a three-week printmaking residency at U Cross Foundation in Wyoming. Her paintings will be exhibited at Soho 20 Invitational gallery in NYC in the fall.

Some classmates have changed residences and had exciting travels: Alice Virginia Dodd spent a month hiking in Switzerland last summer. She developed her hiking legs by attending and "surviving" Outward Bound in the North Carolina mountains the summer before.

When Traylor Rucker wrote, she was about to leave for a trip to Hawaii. Her life in New Orleans is good, and she'd love visitors. She was able to contact Alison Flynn Ringdal in Norway. Alison and Frode are well, as are sons, Christian, 13, and Anthony, 11. She ran her own adult education office for two years and now is with a chemical company library.

Bonnie Chapman McClure is still living in Paris on a barge at the Pont Neuf.

The Tilden family left Virginia for the midwest when Payson Jeter Tilden's husband, Roger, was called to be Rector of St. James Episcopal Church in Birmingham, MI last fall. They and sons, Jamie and Paul, have made good transitions. Payson has taken a year off from social services but gives slide programs on flowers, France and churches to local schools and organizations.

Bev Sharp Amberg has a new address — Montgomery, AL. After the St. Louis Globe went out of business last fall, Dick was named publisher of the Montgomery Advertiser and the Alabama Journal on December 1st. Bev, Elizabeth, and Richie will join him in late spring. The Ambergs will also travel to New Zealand, Australia, Fiji and Hawaii this summer.

The 1985 earthquake in Mexico City luckily caused no harm to Mel Freese Cota's family or home. Her husband's office was damaged, and she's been assisting him in his dental practice. Her daughter Victoria, is a junior in high school at home. Second son, Guillermo, spent his senior year in Denver with her brother's family, and Alberto, the oldest, is a freshman at Georgetown. Eileen Stroud Clarke and her family, who live in McLean, VA, have "adopted" him. Eileen's daughter, Stephanie, was accepted early decision at Harvard.

Kay Knopf Kaplan, with youngest son, Tag Stadelman, a high school senior, is starting back as a professional singer. She has been in touch with Hunter Davis '78 for advice. Kay is PTA president and sees a lot of Penn Willets Mullin '66. The Kaplans moved to San Antonio, TX in 1985 and right back to San Rafael, CA in 1987 to their old address.

Kay stayed with Anne Farrell Reinhardt, her husband, and two children in NYC in December 1986. Anne is a very successful free-lance writer for the cosmetics industry.

Our deepest sympathies are extended to Whitney Jester Ranstrom on the death of her aunt, Dorothy Jester, in February. All of us will miss her and remember her wonderful outlook on life and her many contributions to SBC. Whitney's husband, Lee, has left IBM to become president of a small computer software firm. They will move from Boca Raton, FL to San Antonio, TX this summer.

Before leaving the Philippines last year, Sonja Howell Baum witnessed the amazing "bloodless revolution" live on TV. Shortly after Cory took the presidency, our base was barricaded by communists and labor strikers. For 10 days I became a temporary stock clerk, and my son gave stock reports to our ships in the Pacific using a terminal. The Baums are now enjoying the clean air of Albuquerque, NM.

Pyror Hale is a full-time graduate student this year, on leave from Piedmont Va. Community College, on a fellowship sponsored by the Chancellor of the Va. Comm. College System. She hopes to finish her Ph.D. dissertation — on the psychology of moral development in adults. Her husband, Hunter Wood, continues his clinical psychology practice in Charlottesville and Alexandria.

Magda Salvessen is an administrator for Architects/Designers/Planners for Social Responsibility, NY, and teaches a course, "Stories behind the Faces: British Portraiture," at the New School in NYC.

Bunny Sutton Healy writes she's tired but happy as mother of Eben, just 4, and Elizabeth, nearly 3, and has time for a tiny bit of volunteer work.

In May Blair Both received a Masters of Divinity from Trinity Episcopal School for Ministry in Pittsburgh. She will return to North Carolina this summer and be ordained (initially as a deacon for a year, followed by priest the next year). Blair hopes to work as an assistant in a parish in NC.

Dana Wasson Noyes and Ted, her husband of 18 years, have two sons Bradford, 16, and Gregory, 13. She works as a marketing director for a graphics advertising agency in Red Bank, NJ and has volunteer commitments with the Jr. League and local choir.

Sally McGrady Hubbard is working at Rice University, Houston. Her husband, Charles has established his own architectural firm. Anne, 20, and Hayne, 19, are students in Austin.

Tax season overtime had exhausted

Katy Weinrich van Geel, but she is happy with husband, Tyll, and off-spring: Alexandra, 15, and Thomas, 13. She has also been parenting foreign exchange students this year and last.

Anne Butler Hamilton has two children: 11-year-old daughter, Chase and 18-month-old Stewart. She is a writer working for newspapers and magazines, is editor of a regional publication, and has had seven books published. On a recent trip to San Francisco she rediscovered Katy Regan '65 working for the Chronicle.

With family spread out from coast to coast Saralyn McAfee Smith will be visiting Georgia, Indiana and Myrtle Beach this year. Children Laura, 4, and Robbie, 3, keep her busy, but she really keeps fit by walking 4-5 miles each day. Her husband, Hamp, is the asst. director of special education for 17 school districts.

Polly Jose Earl is still working as director of the Preservation Foundation of Palm Beach. Her current project is a half-million dollar restoration of the Spanish-revival style town hall and she has just finished a preservation education program for the local fourth grade; the children loved it. Son, Toby, is in fifth grade. Polly is building a summer home near Hume, VA, on the Rappahannock River — she is having a 19th century log house moved to her land and modernized. Margaret Highlands Gale and William brought their daughter, Elizabeth Brant (Brady) from Cincinnati to look at Sweet Briar in April; their younger daughter, Katie, is 15. Margaret has just published a guide to antique furniture. It was released in conjunction with the Cincinnati Antiques Festival, a benefit for Cincinnati's Convalescent Hospital for Children with which Margaret has worked for many years. Mary K. Lee McDonald went as Sweet Briar's representative on an alumnae tour to China and Tibet in Sept.-Oct., 1986. Her mother Dovie Lee, took the trip too and the group of 20 had a wonderful time. Carol Cole Pelzer, in Charleston, is still enjoying her interior design business which she has had for 10 years. Arthur is 13 and Felix, 15, will be in 10th grade at Woodberry Forest in the fall — wonderful to be traveling back to VA again, says Carol.

Family reunions beckon the Hydes this summer — we will be traveling to Colorado and Maui. I continue to enjoy teaching pre-school and my husband, Steve, has been teaching high school for 23 years. Our son, Mike, will be attending Williams College this fall; daughter Alix, 17, will be a junior and Katie, 13, an 8th grader.

Jean Rushin Brown says you can't worry about turning 40 when your only child is just turning 6. Jean is involved on the PTA Board and enjoys tennis and skiing. She has seen Nancy Trotter on the slopes in VT a couple times. Bertie Zolack Baigent lives outside Syracuse in DeWitt, NY with husband Peter, who is an administrator at Syracuse, Blair (7) and Philip (3). Bertie works for a local firm in personnel. They are planning a summer trip to Yorkshire, England to visit Peter's family. Barb Duffield Erskine remarried last year and gained 2 children the same ages as her two boys (6 & 9). She retired from work since she's pretty busy with community activities and taxi service to baseball, music, riding, etc. David works for Scott Paper so Barbara has enjoyed a couple trips to Mexico and Costa Rica. Kitty Wright Dippel and Skipper took their 2 daughters and son last summer to London and Paris. In Paris, they visited the family with whom Kitty had lived during Junior Year in France. Claudette Harloe Dalton is an anesthesiologist in Charlotte at an orthopedic hospital and at an outpatient clinic. Gordon has moved from Cub to Boy Scouts so Mom doesn't get to do as much. They do spend time in the great outdoors—hiking, gardening, camping, golf and riding. Connie Lane Stanfield is planning to return to Richmond, VA after 10 years in Rapid City, SD. Her son is graduating from high school and her daughter is 16. She is currently a stockbroker with Piper, Jaffray and Hopwood. Atlee Walker Wolf said the big 40 didn't hurt a bit. She's looking into an MA in the linguistics of sign language, which is her newest fascination. She and daughter Jessica do lots together. Cynthia Hays works with Trinity Presbyterian Church in Charlottesville; her special interest is in missions. She especially enjoys meeting international scholars from China, Indonesia and Japan. Vallery Vandegrift Stylianoudis and Steve took their 2 children to Egypt and Israel in June 86 with a cruise to Upper Aswan. She still works with Westinghouse in the controllers dept. and is working on a doctorate in accounting at the Univ. of Pittsburgh. Pam Tipton Newton and husband Carl are renovating an old Victorian home in the historic district of New Bern, NC.

She is kept busy with her 3-year-old son Bret. Cathy Hall Stopher is busy in Louisville, KY doing volunteer work for an antique show for Collegiate School and the Ky. Opera Mercedes Raffle. Plans include a trip to Bermuda over spring break taking Marshall (10) and Charles (8). Anne Moore has completed a masters degree in library science at Kent State. She had a 4.0 average and managed to work full-time and maintain a house and a husband. She's planning a trip to celebrate her 40th this summer.

Sue Scanlan began 87 with a new job with a defense contractor after a decade in the women's movement. Jared received a promotion at the Hannaford Co. so they are celebrating by adding a hot tub. They are planning a trip to Ireland in the fall. With her experience as class secretary Scanlan is great about reporting on other people too. She had a visit last summer from Win Waterman Lundy and part of her family. They trekked through the Washington museums during a major heat wave. She also reported that Melissa Griffith Manning competes in 25- and 50-mile trail rides while raising three under age 7 and freelancing for the local paper. Elizabeth Wyatt is now Director of Corporate Licensing for Merck & Co. She and her husband John Luth are renovating their third townhouse in Brooklyn. Last fall they had a wonderful 3-week vacation in Italy. She is planning to attend her 10th reunion at Harvard B School soon. Maureen Robertson Baggett began a new job this year. She is teaching French in Prince Frederick, MD at the Calverton School. Blair Josephs Rohrer does volunteer work for the local public TV station in Charlotte. The family enjoys their mountain home. Sylvia Wederath had some of her paintings featured at the Wallace Wentworth Gallery in Washington DC in early 1987.

Bryan Alphin Bente reports that CA is nice but she still misses VA. She keeps very busy with a full-time job and two children under 5. She and Paul were involved in the startup of a new full-time care pre-school. Several other of our classmates are in CA. Anne Rhett Taylor Merrill wrote from sunny southern CA in LaJolla. They moved a year ago and love it. She got involved quickly in the Jr. League putting on a fashion show fund raiser. She and Tony had just returned from Los Angeles when she wrote and reported they had dinner with Mary Lee Bell Coffey and Shelby. I then got a card from Mary Lee with the news that Shelby is the new editor of the LA Times. Mary Lee is an attending physician in an LA emergency room. Ali attends boarding school in CO and Charles is in 7th grade. Further north in San Francisco is Elizabeth Lewis who is dividing her work as a psychiatrist and mother of a 2 year old. The challenges of the two jobs are probably similar. She and David had a nice trip to an isolated part of Hawaii in the fall and plan to go to AK this summer. Elizabeth was full of news from some other people. She had seen Bell Quesenberry McIntyre in NY in the fall. She reports Bell is a clothing designer and was featured in Vanity Fair recently. She had talked to Michelle Ruddick who was finishing her studies at Harvard Divinity School and also has a law degree. Elizabeth had a visit from Ronde Kneip Bradley, husband Jim and their 2 girls last summer. Both Ronde and her husband work for a school textbook firm and live in Huntington Bay, Long Is. Another visitor was Marion Sweeney and her family. She lives with her husband Tim and 2-year-old daughter in Eugene, OR. They just finished building a new home on the site of their old one which they tore down. Originally from CA was Sally Dahl who was married to a Frenchman, Jean-Francois Lecomte. They now live outside Paris, but Sally reports they move a lot and she is quite adept at packing bags and/or furniture. She reported the French don't make a big deal about birthdays so she doesn't anticipate much for her 40th. Her trips this year include Normandy, skiing in the Alps, Morocco, Portugal and the States. She is busy raising children, studying creative writing and piano, and visiting museums.

Jane Banks Petrey has moved to Austin, TX. She spent her big 40th in Cancun snorkeling. She keeps busy with McRae and Bank's activities and enjoys tennis and golf when she can. Win Waterman Lundy was planning a trip to the Homestead with her family to ease over the hump into 40. She was trying to coordinate her 3 men's birthdays in April with lots of civic events including the Jr. League and Festival of Trees. Several years ago Fran Robinson Boyer's husband promised her a Cadillac for her 40th, but she won't hold him to it because they are in Switzerland and one wouldn't work on the narrow winding roads. Her children Trey (9) and twins Jodie and Paige (6) attend the International School of Basel. Parke now has to commute daily to Zurich so they're hoping for a transfer back to the States in 88. Peggy Davis Molander, husband Erik and Margot moved from inner-city Baltimore to suburban Jacksonville. They're enjoying the FL weather. She reports that Kim Johnson Smith and Jim were with them for Liz Medaglia's wedding. Peggy's looking forward to being a sustainer for her 40th. Last year I reported on Liz Medaglia becoming engaged in romantic Paris. She and Joe Sinnott were married in Sept. and have bought a house which they moved into in March.

Ellen Hunter Dudley's husband Richard builds homes and Ellen has been keeping his books. They are building a new home for themselves and their 4 children. Ellen feels lots younger than 40. Kathy Blythe Southerland and husband Bill are planning a joint "40" in London this summer with Liza (15) and JJ (11). Had been to DC where they had dinner with Diane Cassidy Lambert and David. Diane is expecting her second in July. Jan Sheets Jones reports on 2 wonderful trips — one to Hawaii without the kids and a family trip to FL. The challenges of "mothering" three (ages 11, 9 & 4), PTO Pres., Scouts, Sunday School, and "wife-ing" keep each day busy and fun. Keithley Rose Miller may be moving from St. Louis due to Dwight's job. Keithley has an interior design business which is going great. Her two children, Gibby (9) and Tony (6) are wonderful! Carol Moseley Tash is president-elect of the PTA and a Deacon in the Presbyterian church in Winston-Salem, NC. She has a daughter Ginny (7) and son Andy (5). Joan Adriance Mickelson stays very busy in Athens, OH. She and Charlie coach basketball and softball, are 4-H advisors, and work with the PTO Board, Compassionate Friends, and Sunday School. When they can find time they love to travel — San Antonio and Galveston, Minnesota, and a repeat of a trip she made 20 years ago (sophomore year) to the Macys Parade. In 66 Joan went with Mary Blake Beeler and Penny Proctor and this time she took her family. They were planning a spring break trip to Disney World and Miami. Joan will be back teaching tennis this summer. She just turned 40 but hasn't decided what she'll be when she grows up.

From the class philosopher, Martha Brewer, came a beautiful letter — and she was bemoaning the loss of her writing skills. Martha, like many of us, regrets her lost idealism but feels she's smarter, more mature, more fun and more satisfied than ever before. As she said, our liberal arts education focuses often on wanting to change things, make them better, make a difference in the world. Her OB-Gyn practice in New Orleans is very busy and she's now chief of the OB-Gyn section of one of the hospitals. She recently saw Josie Winn who is moving back to New Orleans, and reports that Linda Donald is still an architect in D.C. As we know, Hattie Coons Babbitt's husband Bruce is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President. He was here in Cobb County the day after he declared his candidacy. Hattie, if Bruce wins, may we have the 20th reunion at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue? In Atlanta, Betsy Blackwell Laundon's husband Walt threw her a surprise 40th party complete with family, old friends and a male stripper. They also have recently enjoyed a Caribbean cruise. Her plans for the next 40 years focus on surviving her daughters' teenage years and still having a sense of humor left. Carolyn Mapp Rogers keeps busy with her 3 boys and their many activities. She has been involved with the GATE program giving drug education talks and gets a little time for tennis and aerobics for herself. Nancy Wendling Peacock is chairman of the Junior League Tour of Homes, Membership VP for the Museum Members Guild, and committee member or organize a fashion show and an antique show. She plays lots of tennis. Tom continues traveling overseas to Saudi Arabia, Amsterdam, and Cairo. Jenni (11) and Josh (7) keep her busy. Missy Sumner Huggins's catering business is going very well. Her little bit of free time is spent on the tennis court. She had a wonderful 40th birthday luncheon at which I read aloud the letter I received from Missy when we had been assigned as freshman roommates.

Haden Ridley Winborne will be PTA President and on the Junior League Nominating Committee next year.

As for me, my 40th is tomorrow and we moved into a new house over the weekend — so I hope to slide through the birthday unpacking boxes because there is no time to think about turning 40. I changed jobs back in September. People tell me to be careful how I say this — but, I went from one SBC friend's husband to another. Actually, I was working for Nancy Wendling Peacock's husband Tom, and now I'm working for Barbara Johnson Prickett's (68) husband selling group insurance. I was a little overburdened in the fall so I resigned as treasurer-elect of the Junior League but I finished out my stint as asst. chm.-finance for the Festival of Trees. Next year I'm going to be Ways and Means Chairman for the League, then I promised Kent I would go sustaining. He and Ginny (10) hope I will spend a little more time at home then, at least until I get the boxes unpacked. Happy 40th to everybody! Only 2 years and counting until the reunion. Start making plans their 5, 3, and 1-year-old daughters raised their own deer from age 3 days to 3 months on their KY farm. They still visit "Bambi" who now lives in a protected area. The majority of Abby's time is spent picking up after children and feeding them. For sanity's sake she gardens and sews. Rita Anselmo and husband John Whittier expect their second child in July. Melissa is 20 months old and has Rita and John struggling with balancing family and careers. Cindy Bekins has been promoted to relocation director of Allen Young and Associates. Business took her to Tuscon for a conference and pleasure to Sanibel/Captiva Island. Necessity meant the purchase of a new house in suburban Omaha. Anne Billings McDougall, Ed, and Maggie, 5, and Jim, 2, love living close to Disneyworld. Anne has transferred to the Orlando Junior League, and that, church work and involvement with the PR board of a new counseling center in Orlando have filled her life. Ed has been involved with several projects through work as well as teaching two classes, and together he and Anne are gearing up for a Ligonier Study Center conference in January. The McDougalls enjoyed seeing Alumnae Association Director Ann Reams at an alumnae cocktail party last February and met lots of new SBC friends.

Weezie Blakeslee Gilpin and I had a wonderful 24-hour visit together in Mount Pleasant last Memorial Day. Weez is the Director of Counseling at the Walnut Hill School of the Performing Arts, a job that keeps her busy 3½ days a week. She and Bob are still houseparents at Milton Academy and look forward to a summer break at their house on Martha's Vineyard. Alexa, 10, is on Milton's student council, and her brothers Blake and Christopher are 8 and 5. Beth Boatwright Bell and Bryan moved to Cleveland, GA from Thomasville, GA last November. Bryan is president and CEO of First National Bank of White County, Cleveland-Helen, GA. Pascale Bouldard Dutilleul welcomed Cary Davis King and Henry to her home near Paris last year and would love to see more SBC friends. Her 5th child is due in August. Lee Brennan Kidd has grown accustomed to life in New Orleans but still misses Atlanta. Kevin is vice-president and general manager of the Cox Cable TV franchise in Jefferson Parish. Campbell, 9, and Kevin, 7, are into sports. Campbell is also a Cub Scout and won the Pinewood Derby. Walker is 3, and that says it all about his activities!

Buying a duplex in Charlottesville has given Susan Bundy a good reason to buy and plant SBC bulbs. Susan is assistant manager for the Charlottesville, Harrisonburg and Staunton Manpower Temporary Services franchise. That position took her to Milwaukee in April to train for a program for IBM. Another new homeowner is Mary Buxton who has a busy psychotherapy practice in San Jose.

Her mainstays are skiing, running and swimming, and her biggest coup was finishing the San Francisco Half Marathon. Barbara Cain Hegarty retired from medical research when Ryan was born a year ago. Now she is busy with motherhood and loves life in Cary, NC. Son #4, George, was born to Betsy Cann Akers and Scott last year. The Akers moved into a new house a week before George's birth, and the dust is just beginning to settle. Betsy sees Lee Addison Sanford often and reports that Lee had a little boy just after George was born. Scott is in investment banking with Alex Brown. Evelyn Carter Cowles and Reynolds raise thoroughbreds and show hunters in Free Union, VA. That and being secretary of the Farmington Hunt Club fill her hours. Earlier this year Evelyn had lunch with Sally Fieger Moore and her husband. Sally runs the riding program at Ferrum College.

Peggy Cheesewright Garner sends a mix of good and bad news. The bad news is that her sister Julie died last fall, but the good news is that she and John are planning their tenth wedding anniversary celebration. Peggy has been spending a lot of time with her two teenage nieces in San Francisco and saw Lisa Fowler Winslow and her baby daughter in Los Angeles. While together they called another new mom, Jane McFaddin Bryan, in Charleston, SC. Dede Conley is having a great time in her job with a wine wholesaler. Last Christmas she skied in Taos, New Mexico and plans a French trip for summer 1987. Cathy Conner Strobel and Jack had son Christopher John on May 15, 1986.

Emily, 7, is busy with tennis and figure skating and loves the first grade. Susan Craig Smith and Wayne are delighted with their 4½-month-old son Bennett Walker Smith. They moved just before his birth, and the boxes are still there. Susan does some freelance design work from home. Diane Dale Reiling is beginning her tenth year with Flying Tigers, a cargo airline. Chuck is development manager for Tandem Computers, and their "therapy" after working in two busy jobs is house remodeling. Steven, 3, misses the sons of Jane Potts Sutherland and Jennifer Wherry Putney who moved to Atlanta and Denver. Mary Danford and Michael Baker look forward to Michael's summer break from teaching so they can be together with their baby. Baby was due in late April/early May.

Lucy Dennington Kennedy has weathered a rough year. Her husband John died of cancer last July, and to her go our heartfelt sympathies. Her time since his death has been spent settling his estate and overseeing his real estate business. Singing helps keep Lucy busy, and travel has helped immensely. She has planned trips to Vail and Paris and spent a day with Marye Taylor Miller who, she reports, looks great and has a fantastic job. Sue Dern Plank and Elena, 2, are still in Canajoharie, NY, awaiting housing on Dave's base in Japan. To hurry the wait along Sue continues her genealogical work on German families who emigrated to America. Dave left for Japan in October to work at the Science and Technology Center near Tokyo. Lisa Fowler Winslow is another one with both a new baby and a new house. Suzanna is 8 months old; Russell, 5, thinks she's great. Lisa's husband is general counsel for Merrill Lynch Settlement Services. Joan Eltonhead married Richard Bromley, Jr., in April. Joan went on from Sweet Briar to receive her degree in fine arts from Dickinson College, Carlisle, PA and her certification in occupational therapy from the Univ. of Pennsylvania. She is an occupational therapist at Eugenia Hospital; her husband is plant manager of Quaker Lace Co., Philadelphia. Susan Hancock Duke and Roy are busy adding to their apparel lines. Sons Ryan, 12, and Scott, 8, are into all the boy activities known to man.

Other movers and new parents this year are Robin Harmon O'Neil and John. Baby Robin arrived in October and is already a traveler and an artist. She hand-painted a silk scarf for a USC art auction this spring. Chris Hegarty Savage works 3 days a week in the laboratory and spends her other days at home with Clay, 5½, and Brendan, 2½. Pat has a new job as a vice-president with CitiCorp Private Banking and Investments Division in Cleveland. When I was in Baltimore for a conference last fall I had a great time visiting Jill Heptinstall. She is circulation manager for Warfield's and The Daily Record, a job she loves. Most of her winter weekends were spent skiing, and she is considering gardening for the spring. Carter Heyward Morris and two partners began an import business, importing decorative accessories from the Orient. A great fringe benefit is travel. And Hampton began his own law firm, Cushing and Morris, in Atlanta. Heyward is 8, and Wade is 5. Kris Howell will spend her summer in Switzerland working on her dissertation. She hopes to finish soon and get a great job in economics. She is still dating the same man and still riding a lot. She spent time skiing in Aspen. Last summer Elaine Hughey married Robert Smyth at Christ Church in Nashville. She has a new career as a securities analyst for Equitable Securities Corporation in Nashville.

Now that she has adjusted to Southern, CA, Jane Knutson James and family are enjoying its climate and terrain. But to snow ski and swim in the ocean in the same day is still mind boggling for them. Jane is active in her church and has gone back to school to study financial planning. Jane McCutcheon McFadden's 2 older boys, Barclay and Thomas, are into every winter sport imaginable — ice

It's class note time again. I could swear I just finished writing last year's! First the business at hand, and then the fun of reading everyone's news. Our 15th reunion is next spring, and it's not too soon to mark your calendars for May 27-29, 1988. Nan will be writing with more details, so please be forewarned.

Abby Allen Rennekamp, Nick, and hockey, cross country and downhill skiing, and competitive ski-jumping. Jane has joined a ladies ice hockey group, and Big Barclay plays in two ice hockey leagues. Their businesses are growing, and George, 2½, is reaching the age of reason. Alice McInnis Hughes and family are still in Edmond, OK where Alice has a busy OB/GYN practice, and Carl is a trial lawyer. Kenneth, 7, plays tennis, and Sarah Beth, 4, is delightful. Alice and Carl spent a long weekend in CT with Betsy Perry and Neal Sweet. Ann Major Gibb, Ernie, Emily, 8, and David, 5, had a great summer vacation in ME and attended a medical meeting during Norfolk's Harborfest. Emily loves being a Brownie, and David is equally excited about GI Joe. Ann and Ernie welcomed Elizabeth Andrews Watts '74 to the Eastern Shore last summer and spent a weekend last fall with Mary Reid Roach '74. Ann is Sunday School superintendent, volunteers at Emily's school, chairs two international health projects through the medical auxiliary, and sells designer fabrics 4 times a year.

Lisa Marshall Chalmers and David had dinner in NYC with Diane Leslie in February. Lisa and David have planned a trip to Tides Inn with their children and one to Jamaica without them. Painting portraits keeps Lisa busy, and David is going strong in real estate. Marshall is at Westminster, and Elizabeth is at home with Lisa. Chris Mendel Prewitt's 2nd child, Cary was born last September. Whitney is 3. Chris is a pilot in the Air Force and works hard training other pilots. Betsie Meric Gambel has finished her stint as fundraising chairman of 4th grader Gregory's school and has moved on to be editor of the Junior League magazine. During a trip through New England last summer the Gambels saw Weezie Blakeslee Gilpin at the Vineyard. Betsie and Greg have been to Washington, DC twice after campaigning for a successful senatorial candidate. A spring trip took them to Montreal and Quebec; they plan to visit Squam Lake this summer. Meric, 5, will be at Gregory's school next year, and Betsie is looking forward to a year of not teaching. Gregory loves tennis and isn't too old to play with his mother. Laura Montague Cross had her 3rd child, Laura Nelson, last December. This was a real productive year for our class! Sally Moran Lemmer and Joe welcomed Alexander in March. Eric, 4½, is delighted with his role as big brother. Andrea Niles plans to marry William Bird Jones who has a urology practice in Gainesville in July. Andrea has a masters in French from Emory U. and works for the GA Dept. of Natural Resources. After 7 years at one job Laurie Norris Solwyoda has left for a new one in academic planning for the Albany Medical Center. Her doctorate work is progressing, but it probably will take years to complete. Her daughters, 6 and 4, are progressing much faster. To protect her property line Laurie bought 12 acres of land and is delighted with its all tree-no maintenance quality.

Looking forward to a move this summer from Chevy Chase, MD to Dallas are Jane Olmstead Murphy, Paul, Peter, 10, and Moira, 5. Paul will be working with Caltex Petroleum Corporation. Jane has been in touch with Anita Clarendon Ledsinger who lives near Dallas and looks forward to seeing her. (The alumnae office heard from Anita that the Ledsingers are moving to Memphis where Chuck will be corporate vice president for finance of Holiday Corp. They have bought an old house in Memphis and look forward to renovating it. Anita is busy with Leila, 5 and Elise, 2, and jogs 25 miles a week.)

Mary Anne Osborn is now an ordained Episcopal minister and is a chaplain at Hartford Hospital in Hartford, CT. Her passion is working with AIDS victims. When not on call or doing community/church presentations she spends her time with friends or sleeping. As she enters her 3rd Atlanta spring, Scottie O'Toole says she still enjoys both the town and her work as manager at Scientific Atlanta. She saw Carter Hopkins '68 when she brought a group of SBC and Hampden-Sydney students to Atlanta on a job-hunting safari. One of our braver classmates, Stephania Paparozzi Williams, was chosen to be an American Polocrosse Team member to compete in the Northern New Zealand Polocrosse Championships. She has retired from the team and is now teaching polocrosse, a combination of polo and lacrosse. Husband Bruce and sons Richard, 8, and Bruce, Jr., 5, have begun riding. Jean Platt Spencer spent this year managing her brother's restaurant, teaching golf, and working as a landscaper with their garden center. Spencer's Garden Centre is in its 2nd year and is looking forward to a year in the black. David spent his three-month winter vacation as a part-time ski instructor. He and Jean did manage to sneak away from Jessica, 6, and Katie, 4, for a ski vacation at Gray Rock in Canada.

Jane Potts, Bud and Rives, (age 2), are moving this summer from Atlanta to Essex, CT where Bud is taking a new job in the Marine business. Jane is looking forward to seeing SBC friends in NY and New England. Kathy Pretzfelder Steele, now marketing research manager, is in her 14th year with a national insurance company. She met Kristy Alderson in NYC for lunch when she was there for a seminar. Kathy, Dave and their girls, 7 and 4, will spend a family vacation at Kiawah Island in July.

After what seemed like an endless process, Carol Anne Provence Gullivan, Mills, Anne Genevieve, 11, Henry, 6, and Harriet, 4, are moving into their new house. Carol Anne still has her shop, Pineapple Galleries, and Mills enjoys being a defense trial lawyer. They are looking forward to a break at Kiawah this summer. Char Reed-Miller and Bill spent 3 weeks in Barbados, Martinique and Guadeloupe windsurfing and eating. Bill was promoted at Zeiss, and Char has several retainer contracts with major cosmetic and ophthalmic manufacturing companies. Char is a Jack Russell Terrier working judge and still shows her horses. She and Bill had a great time at Jean McKenzie's ('71) wedding last fall. Now that Kim Riccardi Hunter's children are all in school, she is working on her MA in special education. Seth, 11, is in junior high, Hilary, 8, is in 4th grade, and Brandon, 6, is in 1st grade. Kim and Walt enjoyed a respite in Montreal and in Grand Cayman and saw Scottie O'Toole in Atlanta.

We have a prolific writer in our midst! Nancy Richards-Aker's second novel, The Mayfair Season, will be released by Warner Books in November, and Philadelphia Folly and The Lilac Garland will follow in 1988. Nancy's volunteer efforts are directed toward feeding the homeless in the Foggy Bottom area of Washington, DC and helping at 9-year-old Finny's school. Two years in Tempe, AZ have given Susan Rockwell Patten, Chris, 8, and Mollie, 6, enough time to adjust to and enjoy the Southwest. They skied in Flagstaff this year, travelled to Mexico in the spring, and will see CA this summer. Robin Roden finished her first residency program in family practice at UVA and is about to finish her second residency, this time to dermatology at Washington University. She and her husband, George Corrent, will be living in Miami where he is a fellow in corneal surgery at Bascom Palmer Eye Institute. Ginna Rogers Gould, David and 4-year-old Lisa have settled in Annapolis, MD, and Ginna enjoys seeing all the familiar and new SBC faces at her local alumnae club. Ginna is busy with her career of writing and consulting in fitness. Her biweekly column is handled by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate and her monthly column appears in American Health Magazine. She has recently returned from a three-week lecture tour of Japan, her 3rd international consulting trip. Jeanne Schaefer Bingham, Rack and Stacy, 2½, have just moved into their newly built house in Alachua, FL. They are busy planting fruit and nut trees on their 17 acres and building fences for their horses. A third child is slowing Candy Sheffield Nielson down a bit.

Katherine Sheffield was born in April. Though life is hectic, Candy is delighted with her three babies.

The big news in Anne Smith Leamon and Michael's household is the birth of their first child, Carolina Wallace, last summer. Anne now works part-time for Christ Episcopal Church in Alexandria, and Michael works for the Department of the Treasury in Washington. Renee Sterling and Bonnie Damianos Rampone '75 had a grand week at the Dallas Decorative Center choosing furnishings and fabric for Bonnie's new house on Long Island. After a day of heavy decorating they would watch Italian movies all night long. Renee recently sailed around the Lesser Antilles on the Windstar, a completely computerized ship built in Le Havre. Jan Storey Honick spent part of the spring in South America, leaving behind David, 3. Eric's law firm was host to SBC student Mary Zebold for winter term, and Jan had a great time hearing about SBC in 1987. After too many years of silence, it was great to hear from Veronica Stubbs. She completed her degree at American University after leaving SBC at the end of freshman year and is a contract negotiator for NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md. Her son Derrin is a Marine recruit stationed at Parris Island, and after his basic training graduation in June the proud mother is off to Antigua for a vacation. A recent vacation in Aruba proved to Veronica that beach life is for her. Beverley Taylor Haque is an associate professor teaching landscape design at Clemson, and Imtiaz teaches mechanical engineering. Fifteen-month-old Omar teaches patience.

Clement Virgin Durkes moved down the street in Chicago last fall. Frances is a 1st grader, and Harriet is in preschool. Clement and Frances again were supernumeraries at the Chicago Lyric Opera. Rick is an investment banker. Dianne Wood Keyser is still excited about her job at the county health department in Raleigh. Eric, 10, is an enthusiastic baseball player, and Barbara, 7, has begun an acting career as a goat in one school play and an ant in another. Dianne's family spent a quiet vacation in the mountains last summer with Mary Jane Berry and her family. Patricia Wood Wingfield and Greg are living in the Fan District in Richmond. Hall Bryson, 2, provides entertainment for them. Greg is a marketing manager for the state, and Patricia is a systems programmer at Data Systems Corporation. I am always thrilled to get to Debi Ziegler Hopkins' news. Debi practices law about 30 hours a week with a small law firm and is community vice-president for the Junior League. This spring brought her final visit to Sweet Briar as regional chairman, a job that has given her the opportunity to see old friends and to meet new ones on the campus. Life at home with Jordy, 4½, and Walter, 19 months, is wild.

I, Mac Cuthbert Langley, have just finished a year-long adolescent pregnancy project with the Junior League. All is well in Mount Pleasant. Please call me when you're in Charleston even if your children don't have ear infections. They, among other things, keep Johnny away from home a lot. Will, 8, is your basic little boy, and Hibernia, 3, is very proud of her black eye Alfred the dog is wonderful. At least he will listen to me! I do all those family things I'm supposed to do — church, PTA president, piano lessons, helping at Johnny's office, Junior League — and love every minute of it. I count on seeing all of you in May and finding an enthusiastic replacement

I'm excited to be your class secretary again, and enjoyed seeing so many of you at reunion. The editors of the Alumnae Magazine are being more stringent about verbosity than they were 10-5 years ago, due to space limitations, so I'm going to be brief! The following was gleaned from reunion, scrapbook questionnaires and other sources: Shirley Jean Adams Lewis is living in Charlottesville, VA, where she is a part-time registered nurse in the Post-Anesthesia Care Unit of UVA Medical Center. Jane Behringer is in marketing in Richmond, VA; her husband, Steven L. Juett, is in the construction/engineering field. Barbara Bernick Martin has been keeping busy teaching on a consulting basis, doing volunteer work, and planning her wedding! Wendy Bradford is living in Hartford, CT, working for Manufacturer's Hanover, in the mortgage loan department. Toni Bredin married Michael Miller Massie July 12, 1986 in Nantucket; they are living in Washington, VA. Paula Brumm Hennessy and Mark have a son, Robert, 3. Mark is an automobile dealer. Laurie Burrell is in Breckenridge, CO, working as Director of Sales and Marketing for Pioneer Sports and Lodging Service. She keeps busy skiing and with her new dirt bike! Elvira Cash Pecora and Chip moved to Flanders, NJ, last fall. They have a son, Gregory who is "into everything." Barb Clark McLaughlin and Mike are living in Vienna, VA, and made it to reunion. Lyndi Cote is living in Alexandria, VA, teaching at a private school. Farnell Cowan is in Boston, MA, in banking. She also volunteers for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Ann Crossingham Cannon is a homemaker in Concord, NC, with two children, ages 7 and 4. Husband Bill is president of Auld Golf, Inc. Debbie Epperson Sizer is president of

Twin County Broadcasting Corp; she and her husband are running radio station WBOB in Galax, VA. They have three children, ages 10, 6 and 3. Susan Faist Jagger and Paul came to reunion from Goshen, CT. They were expecting their 1st child this fall. Missy Flanigan Clark and David came to reunion from Norfolk, VA. Steve and Becky Frost Good are in Dallas, with children Beverly (4) and Christopher (1). Cathy Goodhart Henson and Carlton had their 3rd daughter, Laura Carlton, May 27, 1986. Mary Greaves married Dr. Charles Hodge, V, last summer. She is assistant manager of Talbot's in Kansas City; he is a pediatric gastroenterologist. Elaine Griffin Bracewell and Brad have 3 children, ages 4, 3 and 1. Brad is an attorney, and Elaine a "domestic engineer." Linda Guardabassi Michael and Doug live in Anchorage, KY. Linda had their 2nd son, Paul Allan, Dec. 10, 1985, and also finds time to do part-time PR work. Peggy Haley Sheehan and Christopher live in Denver, CO, where Peggy is showroom manager/design consultant for the Denver Design Center. Renee Hanson Crowder and Jack are living with son in Falls Church, VA. Glenn King Springer and John live in Columbus, GA, with two daughters, Lillian and Haden (5 and 2). John is an attorney, and Glenn keeps busy with tennis and volunteer work. Debbie Koss McCarthy, David, and children Courtney (7) and Alex (4) are in Chapel Hill, NC, where David is a nuclear engineer, and Debbie is a part-time music teacher. Kristy Judson is a sales rep in commercial and industrial construction materials — the only female one in her part of OH. She spends spare time playing tennis and working for the Junior League of Cleveland. Dr. Phooi-Ching Lai is a lecturer in communications skills at the Nanyang Technological Institute, Singapore. Her husband, Dr. Choon Hin Lai, is an orthopedics surgeon. They have a daughter, Zhenling, born Oct. 15, 1986. Louise Lambert Hunter is a housewife in Greer, SC. She was expecting her 2nd child at the end of March. Debra Marks Bryant and Bill are still in Lynchburg. Debbie is vice president of investments for Central Fidelity Bank. They have two sons, ages 4 and 1. Trice Lewis came to reunion from Richmond, VA. Ebet Little Stevens and Bob bought a house in Gastonia, NC, recently. Ebet brought then 2-month-old Anne Prescott to reunion and left Bob home with 3-yr.-old Elizabeth. Stephanie Maxson is in Alexandria, VA, working for a trade association

Becky Mayer Gutierrez and Merejildo are in Shelburne Falls, MA. They had their 2nd son, Anthony, in March. Becky is a "part-time milker" on the family farm; Mere is in construction work. Kathy McDonald married Patrick Jenevein since the last class notes. Kathy is director of marketing, HPG Home Video; Patrick is president of the Nolan Group. Marian McLellan, from New Orleans, is an artist. One of her works was shown at the reunion alumnae art exhibit. Helen Milner Gordon and John have 3 children, ages 6, 4 and 1. John is a distributor for Harris 3M. Jane Mooney just bought a house in Centreville, VA. She is in banking and also finds time to study for her MBA through the VA Tech program, and do volunteer work. Ellen Newton Banks is a partner in a gift and children's clothing business; she has 2 daughters, ages 4 and 2, and a son, almost a year old. Gay Owens Gates and Bob moved to Turnersville, NJ, after Bob's promotion to operations manager at Middle Atlantic Millwork Co. Gay is in sales with the TMC Group. Frances Redmond is living in Newmarket, England, where she is assistant to a bloodstock agent. Molly Reeb Clark and daughter Nancy (6), live in Norfolk, where Molly is a financial consultant for Merrill Lynch. Molly still plays tennis and is renovating her house. Rich and JoElla Schneider Samp came to reunion from Arlington, VA, where JoElla works as a CPA. JoJo Scott was at reunion; she lives in Alexandria, VA. Angela Scully and husband George Elser live in Washington, DC. They have a daughter, Clara Elspeth Scully Elser, 1. Angela is self-employed as a fundraiser for political and nonprofit groups. Ellen Sellers McDowell and Rex are in Dallas, with their 2 children, Emily (2) and Ginny, born right before reunion. Ellen is owner of The Cooking School; Rex is a consultant. Maggie Sexton Johnson and Tom are in Columbia, SC, where Maggie is an adolescent psychiatric nurse and Tom is a lawyer with the Veterans Administration. They have a son, Daniel, 4. Maggie Shriver lives in Alexandria and works for Merrill Lynch in Washington DC. Marianela Soto is in Cambridge, MA, working as a child psychologist. She has continued with her interests in art and ballet. Ellen Sullivan is in Wilmington, DE, where she is a regulatory specialist in pharmaceuticals. She keeps busy with aerobics, biking, gardening and boyfriend Bob, whom she brought to reunion. Ellyn Tetlow Pannone and Gary built a home in East Greenwich. They have 2 sons, ages 3 and 6 mos. Tracy Thompson Bodkin and Brian live in Hackettstown, NJ. They have 2 children, ages 5 and 2 with whom they enjoyed a trip to Disney World in March, 1987. Linda Uihlein is an artist in Earlsville, VA. She keeps very busy with work and many hobbies. Ellen Wahl married Dr. Edward Skibrak in June. She is treasurer of Vibra Screw in Totowa, NJ, a family business. Edward is a dentist in Cedar Grove, NJ. Tricia Waters is living in Alexandria, VA, and works in Baltimore, Md. as curatorial associate at the Baltimore Museum of Art. She was on an SBC tour of France during reunion. Tricia keeps busy with work (commuting over an hour) and boyfriend, John Neer. Christine Weerasingha Hand and Alex planned a trip to Sri Lanka in March, 1987. They were to be there for 5 weeks and were taking Sebastian (3) and Rachel (10 mos.) to see their grandparents for the first time. Alex and Ellie Weld Tilt are in Greenwich, CT, where Ellie sells real estate and Alex is in corporate finance. Alexandra Carleton Tilt was born March 6, 1987.

Libby White Drbal is a sales rep for MSD AGVET; husband Doug is manager of sales operations for the same company. Judith Widener Baker and Rob live in Blairstown, NJ, and work in Manhattan; she is a film and photo stylist, he is senior real estate asset manager for Mutual of New York. They also have a horse breeding and training business and a daughter, Samantha, who is 2½. Carolyn Williams Seeling and Stephen expected their 1st child when last Carolyn wrote. They are in Columbia, SC. Stella Wright Martin and Tom live in Atlanta, where Stella is a shopping consultant and Tom a tax accountant. They have 2 sons, Everett (3) and George, born in December 1986. Patti Wornom Henry and David are living in Waukegan, IL. Patti is a full-time mother to Chaz (4) and Ashley (1), while David is an attorney in the Army. Vivian Yamaguchi Cohn is an attorney with Bixby, Lechner, Yamaguchi & Potratz, in Chicago, IL. She and husband Stuart have a baby boy: Clayton Andrew. Vivian still rides and competes in local horse shows. Others who also made it to reunion were Cindy Webb, Debi Hubble Wilson and Joan Stinnett Woody, from McLean, Lynchburg and Monroe, VA, respectively. I, Sally Bonham Mohle, in an effort to keep my mind from deteriorating, took classes in Japanese and Russian this year. Pete and I are still in Fairfax, VA, both still on staff at George Mason Univ. Keep sending me your news, and please forgive me if I have to edit it!

Only about half of you responded to my postcard this time, so I'm warning you now — if the response doesn't get better next time, I really will make stuff up about the ones that don't write back.

Lisa Allison Barnhart graduated this spring from Georgia State with an M.S. in Exercise Science. Amy Dewire Andrews is assistant curator of Dumbarton House Museum in Georgetown. She married Sean Monahan, a management consultant for Ernst Whinney in Washington. Vickie Archer is alive and well in Pittsburgh. Elaine Arozarena has been promoted to general manager for Dun and Bradstreet in Venezuela and moved to Caracas, Venezuela this summer. She is the first woman in D&B to receive such a position. She hopes you'll look her up if you visit Venezuela. Browning Augustine is still at Thalhimers in advertising, writing copy for the catalogs. Florence Baldwin Langford works in the finance department of Dillon Reed in Dallas and looks forward to our 10th reunion. Angie Odom wrote to say that Nancy Barwick Jones and husband Clark just had a baby boy named Graham. Harriet Bielitsky is a stockbroker in San Francisco, winning all kinds of sales contests within her firm. Theresa Blane Lange and Allison Roberts planned to join May Carter Phillips for Foxfield this past summer. Mary Bolling's news came through Sarah Martin, who told us Mary is in Richmond, managing her sister's dress shop. Charla Borchers is at the White House as staff assistant to the deputy assistant to the president for Legislative Affairs. I ran into Julie Brooks at the airport going to reunion. She's looking very skinny and is practicing law with Smith & Hulsey in Jacksonville. She had a wonderful week's vacation with Harriet Bielitsky and Trish Moynahan '80 in Hawaii — Harriet had won the trip as one of the top 200 brokers for Dean, Witter in the country! Julie also was planning to go to Foxfield with the Langes and hoped to see lots of SBC'ers there.

Lynn Croft wrote to say Vida Bryan Davis has 3 babies now! Barbara Bush is swinging in D.C./Old Town working as director of Annual Giving for the Madeira School and spending her summers on the Delaware beaches (just like the good ole days on Tar Beach). Annie Callahan Keech quit her job in May and is due to have a baby this month. Sigy Carlen Veasey is halfway done with internal medicine residency. She and Doug keep their sanity by traveling; recently they went to Colorado Springs and the British Virgin Islands. May Carter Phillips is also traveling. After reunion, she and husband moved to Gastonia (May's home town), then went to Africa, India, the Orient, New Zealand and Australia. South Africa was their favorite stop. Stirling Cassidy has a ball in NYC, working as a marketing consultant for investment products and volunteering for St. Luke's/Roosevelt Hospital Center, Grosvenor House, Jr. League and Madeira. Olivia Chaplin didn't write, but Angie Odom says she sees a lot of her. Susan Clay was married in June to Fred Russell, who just graduated from Wharton, where Susan was working in the alumnae affairs office. They moved to Boston, where Fred is working for a Venture Capital firm. Windsor Cleveland Yellen quit modelling and had her 1st baby this summer. She and husband Mitchell are deeply involved in their religious beliefs.

very respectable and worthy endeavor. I have always believed that Sweet Briar has professed values beyond thinking only in terms of one's self. I would like to believe they are doing this still. It would not only mean a lot to many of your graduates, but I think it might well make a difference in the quality of your future students.

I certainly appreciate your consideration of what I've tried to express.

Very sincerely yours,

A Lifelong Love Affair

Little did Lois Ballenger know, when she said "yes" to President Meta Glass's request in October 1927 that she serve as the president's secretary, that she would be embarking upon a lifelong love affair with Sweet Briar College. "Sweet Briar is more my alma mater than my own college. The campus was my home for 53 years, and many of my dearest friends over the years have been Sweet Briar alumnae." It is little surprise, therefore, that Lois has chosen to remember Sweet Briar in her will, as a member of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates.

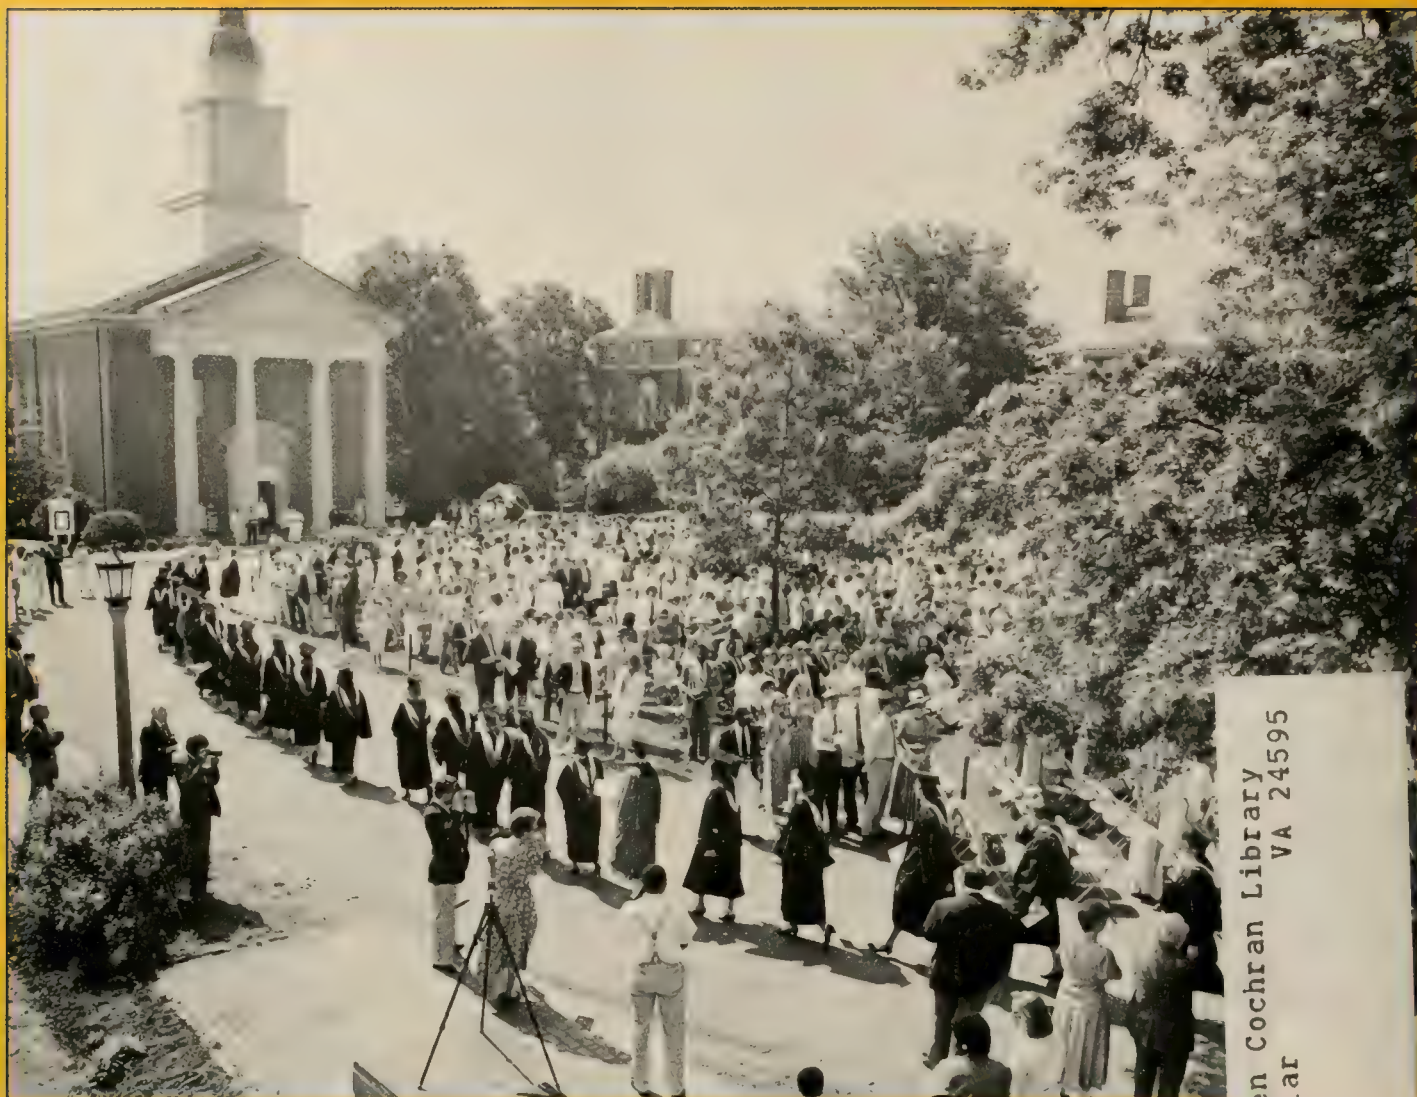

A graduate of the Woman's College of Furman University, Lois was attending Columbia University's graduate School of English when Meta Glass approached a friend at Columbia to ask for recommendations for an outstanding student who might come to Sweet Briar to serve as secretary to the president. In addition to serving as Meta Glass's secretary for 19 of 21 years of her presidency, Lois served as secretary to Martha Lucas Pate and to Anne Gary Pannell. Alumnae from the 1950s and 1960s remember her fondly as the manager of the Boxwood Inn. Many would agree with the sentiments of the Class of 1967 who in their Reunion skit resolutely asserted "but we preferred Miss Ballenger and dear old Boxwood Inn."

A woman of many interests, Lois, who now lives in Lynchburg in an apartment at Westminster-Canterbury, faithfully attends all gatherings of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates. Like Lois Ballenger, each member of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates recognizes, through her membership in this group, the place Sweet Briar has played in her life. In a changing world, Sweet Briar is a constant, both alma mater and home, responding to change but steadfast in an adherence to the importance of academic excellence and the place of a liberal arts education for the young.

For more information about including the College in your will or membership in the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates, please write or call Martha Mansfield Clement '48, Director of Development, Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595 (804/381-6161). Information about preparing your will, as well as a new personal estate inventory booklet, are available upon request as a service of the Planned Giving Committee.

HOLIDAY GREETINGS

In this resplendent season of hope and promise, I wish you and your loved ones a most joyous holiday season. Thank you for your generosity to Sweet Briar College in both word and deed. The College continues to flourish due to the tradition of devotion and concern upheld by those whose lives have been changed by Sweet Briar. The entire Sweet Briar community joins me in the sincere hope that you will enjoy, in great abundance, all that is most meaningful to you throughout the new year.

Sincerely,

The Creation of the Universe

Man is not born to solve the problems of the universe, but to find out where the problems begin, and then to take his stand within the limits of the intelligible.

J. W. von Goethe

BY CARLOS I. CALLE
Associate Professor of Physics
Sweet Briar College

Some thirty thousand years ago, during a cold, dark spring night, a young child, moved perhaps by the pristine beauty of the starry sky, asked his mother in a language that would be incomprehensible to any of us: "Mother, who made the world?"

To wonder how things come about is, of course, a universal human quality. As near as we can tell, human beings have been preoccupied with the origin and nature of the universe for as long as we have been human. Each of us echoes the words of Erwin Schrödinger, "I know not whence I came nor whither I go nor who I am," and seeks the answers.

□ A Dynamic Universe

Today, science has been able to pierce a few of the veils that cloud this question of the origin of the universe with a new and wonderful way of thinking that is firmly anchored in Einstein's theory of general relativity. With it, a picture is beginning to emerge which is one of the great triumphs of the human mind.

The equations in Einstein's masterpiece, his general theory of relativity, are very difficult to solve. In 1919, after two years of work, Einstein himself and independently the physicist Willem de Sitter, obtained solutions to Einstein's field equations, as they came to be known. Something strange happened. The solutions obtained predicted that the universe must have been either expanding or contracting. There were no solutions possible for a static cosmos. Because no observations supported an expanding or contracting universe, Einstein decided to introduce a factor into his equations in an attempt to obtain a static model of the universe. He would later call this the greatest blunder of his life.

During the 1920s the American astronomer Edwin Hubble, continuing the work of another American astronomer, Vesto Slipher, discovered what Einstein's theory had predicted: that all the remote galaxies are moving away from us, and that the farther away they are, the faster they recede. Everywhere he looked, he found galaxies moving away from us. Had all the galaxies decided to move away from us? It seemed as if the earth was in a very special place in the galaxy, at the very center of the universe!

Soon Hubble realized that this was not the case. An analogy should help us understand this. Consider a loaf of raisin bread. While the bread is being baked, the yeast in the dough causes it to rise. This expanding dough carries along the raisins and the distance between them increases. If you select one particular raisin you would notice that as the bread rises all the other raisins move away from that selected raisin. Of course you did not pick a special raisin. It works the same with any one raisin. All raisins move away from each other (see figure 1).

It is the same with the universe. Yes, our galaxy is at the center of the universe. And so are all the other galaxies. They are all moving away from the original center where the big explosion that created the universe took place some 15 billion years ago.

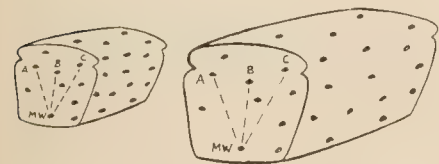

Figure 1. Raisin Bread Analogy of the Expansion of the Universe. Raisins A, B, and C move away from selected raisin MW as the dough rises. MW can be any raisin and the effect will be the same.

□ How Do We Know What the Universe Was Like?

The fact that we can know what the universe was like a hundredth of a decillionth (10^{-35}) of a second after the very moment of creation is a triumph of modern science. If our interpretation of the expansion of the universe is correct, matter and energy were under conditions of very high pressure and very high energy. We can obtain those conditions in the laboratory and study the behavior of matter under those extreme conditions. We can construct theories based on these experimental results. Armed with these theories, we can make predictions about the behavior of matter at still higher energies and pressures. When those energies are achieved in the laboratory, the predictions can be tested.

Today, in our cold universe, we recognize four different interactions that govern everything that takes place in the universe. All the adhesive and frictional forces; the muscular forces; the forces exerted by the moon and the sun on the earth that create the tides; the gravitational forces that control the orbits of the planets around the sun, the satellites around the planets and the moon around the earth; the forces that attract or repel two magnets; the electrostatic forces that manifest themselves when we feel a light shock as we reach for the doorknob after walking across a carpeted room, which also make possible the operation of a photostatic copying machine; all those forces are but different aspects of the four fundamental forces in the universe: gravity, electromagnetism, the strong nuclear force and the weak nuclear interaction (see figure 2).

Figure 2. The Forces of Nature. (a) Gravitational Force: Binding force of the Solar System and Galaxies (b) Electromagnetic Force: Keeps atoms together. It also acts on the protons in the nucleus. (c) Strong Nuclear Force: Keeps nuclei together. (d) Weak Nuclear Force: Responsible for radioactivity.

The strength of the electromagnetic force is determined by the electron, one of the fundamental particles that make up the universe. The force between two electrons, however, depends on how fast they are moving. Each electron is surrounded by a sea of virtual particles of opposite charge, particles that appear out of nothing and disappear almost immediately after being created (figure 3).

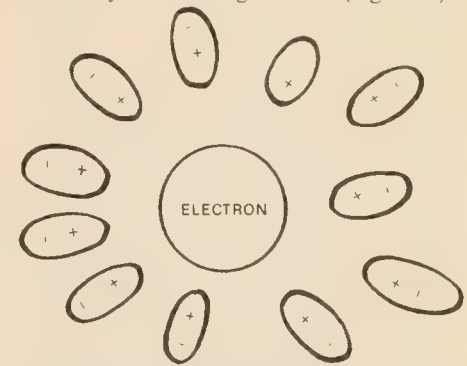

Figure 3. Electron Screening. An electron is surrounded by a cloud of virtual particles of opposite charge (positrons) that appear and disappear continuously.

This cloud of virtual particles shields each electron from the other electrons, reducing the strength of their interaction. However, if an electron approaches another electron with high enough speed, it can penetrate this shield and feel the full strength of the electrical repulsion. The electric force seems stronger to electrons with high energy or equivalently to those at high temperatures.

Exactly the opposite takes place with the strong and weak nuclear forces. At high energies, the interactions decrease in strength. The strong interaction is the force that keeps the nucleus of an atom together. As we know, atoms are electrically neutral. The negative electrons form a cloud around a tiny core or nucleus composed of positively charged protons and neutral neutrons. The protons, having the same positive electric charge, repel each other. The neutrons, being neutral, don't help. It is, therefore, the nuclear force that prevents the nucleus from flying apart.

Neutrons and protons are not fundamental particles, however. They are composed of three smaller particles called quarks. Quarks possess an attribute called color that determines the strength of their interaction. As in the case of the electrons, quarks are also surrounded by a sea of virtual particles that shields them from the other quarks.

The electromagnetic interaction between electric charges is transmitted by means of photons, the particles of light, which are massless and have no electric charge. The strong force between quarks, on the other hand, is transmitted by particles called gluons, which possess mass and also feel the strong force themselves, making this interaction extremely complicated. The gluon surrounds the quark with a cloud of color charge of the same type, thus diluting the quark color charge (figure 4).

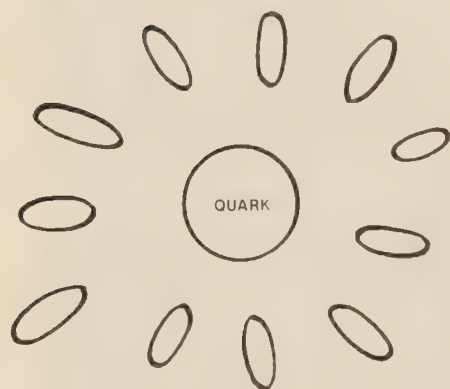

Figure 4. Quark Antiscreening. A quark is surrounded by a cloud of virtual gluons of the same type. As a result, the quark color charge gets diluted.

This weakens the force between the interacting quarks as they get very close to each other. There are two competing phenomena taking place here. One is the screening of the virtual particles which has the same effect as that between interacting electrons. The other is the anti-screening of the gluons just mentioned. When a high energy quark approaches another quark and gets past the screening, the anti-screening of the gluons makes their interaction weaker, exactly the opposite of what takes place between interacting electrons. This property of quarks is called asymptotic freedom, conveying the idea that if the energy were infinite, the quarks should feel no forces and behave as free particles.

The weak nuclear interaction is also mediated by massive particles, the recently discovered W bosons. A similar effect also takes place here. The weak interaction gets weaker as the energy of the interaction increases.

In our cold universe, the four interactions have very different strengths. The strong and weak nuclear forces are stronger than the electromagnetic interaction, and gravity is the weakest of them all. However, as we have just seen, an increase in energy makes the electromagnetic interaction stronger and the strong and weak nuclear interactions weaker. At some point very high in energy these three interactions should have equal strength (figure 5). Theoretical calculations place this energy at about 10^{15} GeV, which corresponds to a temperature of 10^{28} Kelvin. These enormous temperatures only existed for a brief moment after the creation of the universe. In our laboratories we have only achieved energies of about 1000 GeV.

At those very high energies, then, all the forces of nature except gravity were unified. For a few very tiny fractions of a second only gravity and this unified force existed. At energies even higher than that, when the universe was less than 10^{-43} second old, gravity was unified with the other forces and only one superforce existed.

□ The First Moments of the Universe

The picture that modern physics paints of the evolution of the universe is that of complete simplicity from the very moment of creation up to 10^{-43} second. This is an incredibly small interval of time and we are incapable of imagining it. Physicists are making great progress towards the understanding of this small period in the life of the universe. The main difficulty lies with the fact that the universe during that extremely brief time was a microscopic object, subject to the laws of quantum mechanics, the theory of the microscopic world, and this means that the theory of gravity must be combined with quantum mechanics before a complete understanding can be achieved. At the present, we lack a theory of quantum gravity.

At the 10^{-43} second mark the complete symmetry is broken and the superforce is split into gravity and the GUT force.

This period in the life of the universe is known as the GUT era, since the Grand Unified Theory of physics attempts to explain the behavior of matter under these conditions. The next important landmark takes place when the universe is 10^{-35} second old as the strong color force becomes distinct and the grand unification symmetry is broken at an energy of 10^{15} GeV, which corresponds to a temperature of 10^{28} K.

During the next period in the life of the universe only three forces exist: gravity, the strong color force, and the electroweak force. The electroweak unification theory, formulated by Steven Weinberg and Abdus Salam during the 1960s, unifies the weak nuclear force and the electromagnetic interaction. It predicted the existence of the W bosons, the particles that mediate the weak interaction. These particles were obtained experimentally by a team led by Carlo Rubbia in 1983 with the proton-antiproton collider at the particle accelerator in CERN, the European high energy physics laboratory. Weinberg and Salam shared the Nobel Prize in physics in 1979. Carlo Rubbia won the Nobel Prize in 1984.

At 10^{-12} second the universe has cooled down to 10^{16} K, the electroweak unification breaks, and the electromagnetic and weak interactions appear as distinct forces. These temperatures, corresponding to energies of the order of 1000 GeV, are now possible in the laboratory. From now on, the four forces familiar to us today control everything in the universe. This symmetry-breaking process is illustrated in figure 6.

When the universe is about 10^{-5} second old (one hundredth of a millisecond), the quarks get confined into protons and neutrons. One second after the Big Bang, there are eight protons for every neutron, the present abundance ratio.

One minute after the instant of creation, the expansion of the universe has cooled down so that nuclei can be formed without immediately being shredded to pieces

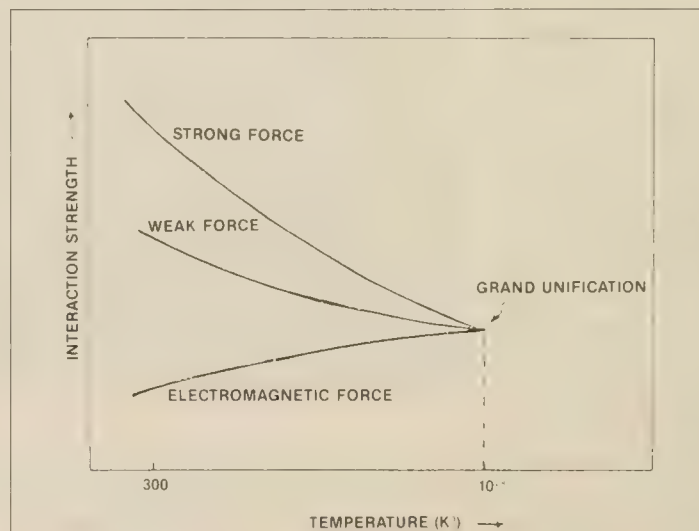

Figure 5. Evolution of the Forces of Nature. Today, the forces have very different strengths. In the past, when the universe was very hot and dense, at a temperature of 10^{28} K, the electromagnetic, weak, and strong forces were one and the same.

TEMPERATURE OF THE UNIVERSETIME FROM
"BIG BANG"

Figure 6. Symmetry Breaking. The universe has evolved from total symmetry through a process of symmetry breaking where the four known forces of nature separated.

again. This lasts for about seven additional minutes and the universe behaves like a giant fusion reactor producing helium from the fusion of hydrogen nuclei. Calculations show that at the end of that era the ratio of hydrogen to helium is 3 to 1, exactly the proportion observed today.

Nothing much happens for the next 100,000 years. Then the universe enters a new phase: the age of the atom. Atoms are electrically neutral and photons, which interact only with charged matter, begin to uncouple. Three hundred thousand years after its birth, the universe becomes transparent. Photons embark now on an independent existence and continue to cool off as the universe expands. We see them today as the 2.7 K background radiation discovered by Penzias and Wilson in 1965.

After the uncoupling of the photons from matter the universe enters the present phase: the era of structure. After one billion years, matter began to clump into galaxies and there gas began to clump into stars. Most of those first generation stars did not live for very long and ended their existences in powerful explosions called supernovas (see cover photograph). These stars spew out carbon, oxygen, silicon and iron. New stars are born out of the matter of the explosion mixed with the surrounding gas in the galaxies. Millions of years later, the protosolar nebula from which our Sun and planet Earth were formed contained the ashes of the early supernova explosions.

On that insignificant planet Earth, which orbits that insignificant star we call Sun, in a medium-size galaxy, one of perhaps 100 billion galaxies that make up the universe, some 15 billion years after the creation of the universe, we appeared, to reflect back upon creation. ♦

To the Editor:

Recent articles on Wheaton College's decision to admit men (e.g., news story, May 28) have cited extensive evidence on the continuing value of the women's college degree, and on the continuing loyalty of alumnae and other supporters. Yet the articles seem to suggest that women's colleges are doomed.

Given the effectiveness of women's colleges, why the dire prophecies? The threat to these institutions, according to several former women's college presidents, comes from a demographic horizon of a dwindling pool of college-age men and women as well as a much smaller pool of women who would consider attending a women's college. In an April 26 Week in Review article you cited a 3 percent figure of college-bound women who said they were interested in a single-sex school and attributed this finding to the Women's College Coalition, an organization of which I am the current chair.

This statement is inaccurate: the study to which it presumably refers, a 1986 survey conducted by a national market research firm, finds that 11 percent of college-bound women would consider a women's college. Since women's colleges can accommodate only 2 percent of the nation's female college students, 11 percent of college-bound women is an ample market on which to draw.

If several college presidents have concluded (at least publicly) that they must "go coed or go under," then those decisions were based on their own institutional circumstances and should not be generalized to include all women's colleges. My college's enrollment is up over last year. And the latest enrollment survey, conducted by the Women's College Coalition for the total group of women's colleges, also indicates a rise in full-time freshman enrollments and in total head count.

The plain and simple fact is that women's colleges have a proven track record in providing an education that works for women.

The most sophisticated longitudinal study of college students nationwide (that conducted by the Cooperative Institutional Research Program) demonstrates that women's colleges have better performance records than any other colleges for equipping women with the confidence and experience to take on leadership roles. Their graduates have better records for getting into medical and other professional schools than do women graduates of other colleges. Their students are two or three times as likely to major in traditionally "male" subjects such as math and science — which has clear implications for later earning power — as women college students nationwide.

In short, women's colleges are unusually skilled at preparing women to become personally and professionally successful after graduation. As long as we have a need for an educational system that produces these results, the future of women's colleges is assured. ♦

Message to All Alumnae Everywhere

FROM ALICE H. LOVE

Director of Admissions and Financial Aid
Sweet Briar College

Now, more than ever, it is important for all alumnae everywhere to realize your value to our admissions effort. I know that you receive many mailings from Sweet Briar, but those of you who have not been involved in the Alumnae Admissions Representative Program may not have heard from the Admissions Office directly.

As you know, the number of high school students is declining rather rapidly in the United States and will continue to decline well into the 1990s. Our population will not regain the 1970's level of college-bound students in the foreseeable future. Obviously this issue is of great concern to colleges and universities, and Sweet Briar is no exception. While we have had a very encouraging experience in recruitment thus far, we would be foolish to ignore the situation. Therefore we are mobilizing every resource available to us to ensure that we can continue to endorse the selective admissions policies we have established and to attract the finest group of young women possible.

Alumnae can assist the admissions effort in many ways, some of them requiring almost no time or energy and some of which provide challenges to one's intellectual, social and organizational skills. In fact you already are serving us, although you may not realize it. Every time you mention your alma mater you have made a statement about Sweet Briar and the kinds of women who attend the College. That service alone is of tremendous significance to us, and I am always quick to urge that whenever you are interviewed for television, radio shows or the press, you please remember to say that you attended Sweet Briar College.

We know that when prospective students and their families come to campus, they are both surprised and delighted with what they find. They find a campus which is not only extraordinarily beautiful but also peopled with friendly, articulate and intellectually motivated young women. My plea to you is that you help us persuade prospective students to visit the campus! The most difficult task we face is convincing young women to consider a women's college. Too many of them don't realize that this is where 100% of all effort is devoted to providing for women a superior education in the best possible environment for personal growth and to assisting them to become successful, well-rounded individuals. By representing the Sweet Briar experience and standing as living proof that Sweet Briar alumnae are successful and respected people, you do more than all the viewbooks, admissions staff members and personal letters can do to dispel any antiquated images of the College and to show it as the superior educational institution which it is.

Our Alumnae Admissions Representative network is being expanded to cover a broader geographic area and I hope that some of you will be able to offer your services to the program. However, we also are looking for the alumna who cannot make a commitment to regular AAR activities but can help us on an occasional or "one-time" basis. As our geographic representation grows (it has grown significantly in the past few years), increasing numbers of students want personal contacts, either at college fairs or in interviews, in areas where there is no alumna club and thus no AAR.

The simplest example of assistance you can give is the referral of the names of promising students in your area. Many of you already do this and we are most appreciative of this very valuable contribution. We are devising a system to track all such referrals so that we may let you know what happens to your candidates in the admissions process. We are even dreaming up an incentive system for referrals — we will let you know when we have a plan! But there are also great personal rewards in being part of a student's delicate transition from high school senior to Sweet Briar freshman.

Below is a clip-out information slip which we hope you will complete and send to us. We now have a full-time staff member, D. Hubble Wilson '77, who is coordinating all alumnae volunteers who wish to assist the admissions office.

Please be assured that you will not be pressured to participate in any activities which do not interest you or for which you have no time.

We have a toll-free number (1-800-537-4300 outside Virginia or 1-800-533-1593 in state) and stand ready to answer your questions and receive your comments. Please do give us a call or come by to tour our glorious new office (in the beautifully renovated Hill House) when you visit the campus.

And thank you for your continuing devotion to Sweet Briar and your dedication to Sweet Briar's strength and well-being today and in the future! ♦

Q: What were your expectations of college? Why did you choose Sweet Briar?

Elizabeth Mason '90
Lexington, VA

A: I wanted to go to an all-women's college. I was really attracted by Sweet Briar's location and its beautiful campus, and I liked the fact that there's a diverse population here. There are people from all over the country, and I wanted a chance to meet a lot of different kinds of people.

I knew there would be a lot of road trips and I've enjoyed the fact that I have friends in all the surrounding colleges. I wanted to make some really close friends because people say your friends in college will be your friends for life. And I found that to be true.

Q: Why did you choose a women's college?

Teresa Pike '87
Atlanta, GA
Major: government/economics

A: The fact that this is a single-sex college was irrelevant; it boiled down to the interest that the people at Sweet Briar showed in me. I applied to five universities, and it obviously did not matter if I came. All they wanted was to satisfy a quota; they didn't care about who I was as an individual. At Sweet Briar I got the feeling that they wanted me, me in particular, to come here. I've never had a second thought in the four years that I've been here. I think it is because Sweet Briar is different from other places. You make it what you want, and you don't necessarily have to fit in. A lot of colleges and universities look for a particular type of student, the ones that they feel work best there. Students feel compelled to conform. At Sweet Briar I never had to do that. All doors are open here, and I don't feel any confining strictures.

As far as social life goes, this sort of situation is perfect for anyone who is concerned with her own education and future. During the week I have five days to study and get myself organized. The other two days of the week, anything goes. It's perfect because there's never the crossing of the social life and the academic. You don't have to do it like that; you can certainly inject social life at any time. But I find that a lot of girls who come here like a definite line between academics and social life.

During her senior year Junie Speight interviewed a cross section of the student body on questions frequently asked by prospective students. The interviews, printed as an information brochure for prospectives, are reprinted here to offer alumnae an "insider's view" of current student life and opinions. While at SBC, Junie was vice president of her senior class, editor of The Brambler and editor of the '85-'86 Sweet Briar News. Originally from New York City, she is pursuing an M.F.A. in creative writing this year at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

And everybody has such different interests — my roommate is a dancer and my best friend rides. I was really pleased with the facilities here: the gym, the pool, the Riding Center and the computer facilities. Here I've never had a problem talking to a professor. They are all really helpful and understanding. I am glad Sweet Briar puts an emphasis on academics.

A: Well, I really like the East Coast. I had never been to Sweet Briar, but I'd heard about it and I wanted a small school. As soon as I arrived at Sweet Briar, I loved it.

It was really a challenge and I've learned a lot. My favorite classes are BASIC (computer programming) and freshman English. Outside of classes, Sweet Briar and W&L are the places to be.

Q: What academic challenges have you encountered?

Susan Arnold '89

Anticipated major: English/creative writing/theatre arts

A: I decided to try to direct the play Letters Home (based on the letters of Sylvia Plath) as an independent study project. I wanted to do this during January Term, to work solely on it, instead of having to take four classes. First I had to go talk with the technical director about dates for the play and the budget, work with the interpretation of the script, run auditions, cast the play (all students outside the theatre department), and get a technical crew who were also all women from Sweet Briar. The College provided publicity for the play and a small budget. A lot of the faculty in the English department were especially helpful in suggesting books, articles, etc. And I got an amazing amount of help from the theatre department, from underclassmen, students from my own class and from the theatre club, Paint and Patches. I've been able to do all this purely by asking for it and have become the first underclassman to produce and direct a show at Sweet Briar. It's been a real learning experience, one I will never forget.

A: As a student at Sweet Briar I have the academic challenge of working one-on-one with professors. They know you and your drawbacks, what areas you can take on more easily, and working together like that you learn a great deal. Sometimes in a big university you get left by yourself, off in the dark. I also learn a lot from girls in my department. Here, if you have a problem, a central concern, you can talk about it, discuss it. Feeling comfortable, feeling that you did something, feeling that you learned something, being motivated — that comes from support from your teachers and fellow students.

Q: After academics, what do you do in your spare time?

Stephanie Wilt '88
New Cumberland, PA
Major: art history

A: After academics, I put most of my time and energy into extra-curricular activities. One is the Sweet Tones . . . which I direct. We have rehearsals twice a week, so I spend time conducting those. I also find music for the group to perform and transpose music that I think would be good in performance. Then there are business things that go along with it, correspondence with other music groups, and little details like going to the bank and depositing money.

Also I'm secretary of student government and that involves a variety of duties that take my time all week long. Every Monday night we have a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Student Government Association, and I take the minutes at that meeting. Then I'll get on a Macintosh somewhere and type up the minutes and xerox them and distribute them.

I also find myself in discussions that are based on something someone's heard in class, or someone may have seen a good movie or read a good book, and we'll all sit around literally for hours and hours. I learn an enormous amount from my friends. That's great! It is very rewarding, the interaction.

Sarah Anderson '89
Spokane, WA
Anticipated major: music

A: When I'm not doing my homework or riding my horse, I really like to jam with friends, whether it's here or somewhere else, just making music. I have a keyboard and I just start playing some chords. I have a friend with a banjo and someone else will sing and someone will start thinking of words — it's definitely not very conventional. During the week I generally try to do more academic things, so it's usually on the weekend, when you've got a lot of time.

Q: Are there ways to structure a major to your personal interests?

Liz Stoeber '87

something that really caught my attention. We read six novels, and one by Malraux I particularly liked. So I decided to delve into it more. I went on the Sweet Briar Junior Year in France and

I wanted to do junior honors. I discussed all this with my professor, who was also my adviser, and I ended up second semester in Paris, after much correspondence with my professor, writing on the subject "Nuances of Death: Eroticism, Fraternity and Murder in the Works of André Malraux."

This year I'm doing a senior honors thesis. I'm doing research now on late-19th, early-20th century French women authors, not for any particular course. I decided on Louise Colet, George Sand, Colette and Simone de Beauvoir, and my topic is "The Redefinition of Women Through the Image of Man as Portrayed in Their Works." In mid-April I will have the final draft finished and it will be sent to an outside reader at the University of Virginia. Then he or she and two selected members in the French department here will challenge what I have written and I'll have to defend it. Needless to say that terrifies me. It will be sort of a final oral exam in French for me.

But then the fun part comes in. Some-time at the beginning of May I will present it, in English this time, to my peers and any professors who would be interested in this subject; then they can ask questions. This will be very informal; I already will have had my grade. This will be just to show everyone what I've been working so hard on and why they haven't seen me for a while.

Q: What academic challenges have you encountered?

Rapti de Silva '88
Colombo, Sri Lanka
Major: English/mathematics

A: Within my English major, especially, I have found it challenging because it is very different from how it's done back home. Especially the class discussions, because you really have to participate. The professors are so encouraging, and I feel I'm working for something. The professors are also helpful after the paper's finished, especially Ms. Mares. She'll give you this mile-long comment about what's wrong with the paper, so it's not like she's brushing you off. It's positive. She's really open, they're all open for questions, even when you're writing the papers. In general, it's what you're willing to put in that's a challenge.

Stacey Sickels '88
Severna Park, MD
Major: English

A: The greatest challenge so far would have to be the last paper that I did for an English course. We were required to do a large project and I put together footnotes notes and bibliography cards. It was the first time I had followed through and done something I was so proud of. I got into class and the professor had xeroxed the paper and handed it to all the students in the class. It was just such a thrill! The paper was on how you can derive a culture from two pages of the Standard Oxford Dictionary. You had to have an understanding of the language and be able to apply some creativity to something that was technical. My professor was great, and he met me in the dining hall for dinner to discuss some questions I had. Writing that paper was terrific because I had never known what I could do.

Q: Is it possible to play on a varsity team if you haven't played in high school?

Monica Mahoney '89
Louisville, KY

A: I would say it depends on the sport and the particular year whether you get a starting position, but anybody's welcome to come out and play. Generally, people have a little high school experience in the sports they try out for, but basically there aren't tryouts to be on the teams, there are tryouts for the positions.

I played hockey and loved it, loved the team, and I made a lot of friends. A lot of the people who play hockey also play lacrosse. I had never played lacrosse but I wanted to be with the team, so I went out. It's the same coach, Ms. Crispen, who's a wonderful coach and a wonderful lady. That particular year we had an excellent team with some All-America players. Toward the end of the year I was starting, which was remarkable. If you go out with a good attitude and try, then there's no telling what will happen.

Q: What is one of the most memorable experiences you've had at Sweet Briar?

Verda Andrews '87
College Park, GA
Major: government/religion

A: My most memorable experience was when I came back at the beginning of the year and was an RA (Resident Adviser). In the RA program I felt I was a part of the community — it made me have a special feeling for Sweet Briar that I'll never forget, and because of that experience I love Sweet Briar more. The closeness we've developed among the staff, particularly the first week when we came back early for training, was special and it meant a lot to me. It continues to mean a lot because students come to me, respect my position — they admire me. People from other dorms come to talk to me, and that makes me feel good about myself.

Q: What do you do to have fun?

Mary Yorke Robison '87
Charlotte, NC
Major: English/creative writing

A: After athletics, I really enjoy going on hikes, or going out to the country because we're in such a beautiful part of Virginia. And there's so much to see and do. I really like going up to Charlottesville and going to some of the neat restaurants. Usually you find people who want to do something out of the ordinary. And there's always lots on the calendar. Not always is it appealing to me, but at least once a week I find something I want to do. My weekends are usually filled up with sports or other Sweet Briar commitments, so on a Thursday night, if there's something going on at the Bistro and I don't want to go to W&L, that's a great way to take a break and then go back to work at 10:30. I also like to go to the other sporting events like the swim meets — and checking out a film and watching it in the library is something I like doing. It's not hard to be creative here and find something to do.

JoAnne Bogolin '88
Saint Francisville, LA
Anticipated major: mathematics/psychology

A: Well, I like to visit my friends a lot. I'll just go over and we'll sit around and talk, or we'll move from room to room. It's great to be with a lot of friends — they're like a support group. I don't do this just with people from my own class; I have friends in different classes. You don't feel that you're just a freshman or just a sophomore, you feel like a student, a part of Sweet Briar.

Rush Hour Superchef!

BY DIANNE STAFFORD
MAYES '58

Thanks to the wonderful encouragement and helpfulness of the late Dr. Joseph Barker, who was for many years the director of Sweet Briar's Junior Year in France Program, I was able to qualify for a junior year abroad. Under the aegis of Smith College I spent six weeks at the Sorbonne and the remainder of the year at the University of Geneva. That year was a launching pad of exhilarating and enriching experiences which have given direction to the rest of my life and, incidentally, guided me into two career ventures.

Because I married shortly after graduation and settled down as the wife of a busy executive and the mother of two sons, I did not think about a career immediately. But the Christmas that we moved into a country home, when I wanted everything to be gloriously festive, it occurred to me to recreate the handsome wreaths and hangings which had so enchanted me in shops and homes that long-ago Christmas in Europe.

To my amazement, that initial home enterprise propelled me into an unexplored world; suddenly I was an amateur entrepreneur, enthusiastically backed by my family. My husband gave me working space in one of his warehouses. I found a corps of dedicated workers and my sons and their friends vied with each other to earn spending money as they packed and crated boxes of our Christmas creations for shipment. I had inadvertently tapped a market lacking in quality Christmas decor and was deluged with orders from hotels, banks, restaurants and department stores. Incorporated as Dèanne Creations, I had a flourishing nationwide custom design Christmas decorations business, supplying wreaths, hangings and giant trees with galaxies of twinkling lights.

As the business grew, I found I was trying to juggle three careers — as a wife, a mother and owner of a business. During the eight intensively busy years before I sold the business, the seed of the idea of Rush Hour Superchef was planted: obviously time-consuming food preparation was a major problem. How could I prepare hearty meals for two teenagers and their hordes of hungry friends or entertain my husband's business acquaintances on the spur of the moment?

That seed took root unexpectedly during a visit to my parents at Hilton Head. My lifelong friend, NBC commentator

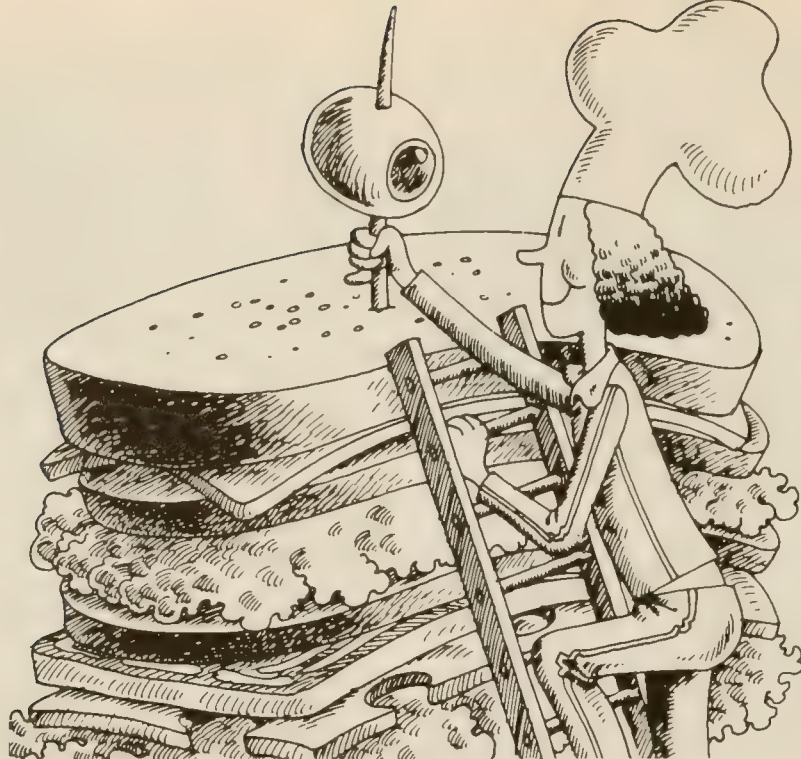

Ann Taylor '58, had come from New York for the weekend. Chatting with my mother and me about the satisfactions and perils of being a career woman, Ann mentioned one of her major problems: "I'd really like to entertain more in my apartment," she said, "but I don't have the time to attempt complicated recipes that take hours to prepare. Why don't you two write a cookbook for people like me?"

We laughed. Even though Mother writes articles on food and party preparations for major magazines, she had never considered co-authoring a cookbook. But the root took hold! After Ann returned to New York we began seriously discussing the pros and cons of designing a book geared to today's lifestyle — a book for the busy, vital person who wants the best but does not like to spend, or cannot spend, hours in the kitchen. This would be fun, we decided. The book would be ethnic in content and complete with step-by-step menus. Directions would be so explicit that even a novice could produce a gastronomical treat in a matter of minutes.

Three years later Rush Hour Superchef became a reality. With our artists in San Francisco, printers in Dallas, Mother in Hilton Head and me in the midwest, Federal Express and Southwestern Bell were so much a part of our lives that it made the monthly utility bills seem like bargains!

Perhaps the most difficult part of the project was testing and retesting each recipe for flavor and precise timing. My father and my husband were the discriminating guinea pigs...crab, filet, clam chowders were warmly greeted, but their willingness to be culinary adventurers balked at the first taste of an unfortunate mixture. The boys were gallant — they didn't mind eating spaghetti six nights in a row in order to decide if a teaspoon more basil should be added or the amount of oregano reduced by one fourth. However, when it came to testing a very delicate iced cucumber soup, I had to turn to the tastebuds of friends who were eager and most helpful.

A fuse ignited when we began to equate good food with happy recollections of people and places. I was back in Zermatt, Switzerland after a long day of skiing, seated at a rustic table in a mountain lodge with a group of students. All were speaking a different language — the one thing we had in common was hunger! A waiter brought a fondue pot, its contents bubbling. Eagerly we dipped the beef into sizzling

Chicken Camille

A real palate pleaser — decidedly different!

Preparation time: 15 minutes Cooking time: 30 minutes

Serves 4

4 chicken breasts
2 8 oz. cartons sour cream
4 oz. crumbled Roquefort cheese

1 clove garlic, crushed
4 T. butter or margarine
salt and pepper (approximately $\frac{1}{8}$ t. per chicken breast)

1. Sprinkle each chicken breast lightly with salt and pepper.
2. Rub skillet with crushed garlic clove and discard.
3. Melt 4T butter over moderately high heat and place chicken breasts in skillet.
4. Brown on both sides in melted butter and remove to baking dish when browned. About 10-12 minutes.
5. While chicken is browning, preheat oven to 350° degrees
6. Mix sour cream and Roquefort together. Pour over chicken breasts.
7. Cover baking dish and bake 30 minutes. DO NOT OVERCOOK or sour cream will separate.
8. Place chicken breasts on individual plates, spooning ample amount of sauce over each. Sprinkle with paprika and garnish with parsley.
9. Pass remaining sauce at table.

butter and oil and then into the assorted sauces. It was my first taste of fondue — absolutely heavenly. Remembering this, one of my favorite chapters was born: “Camaraderie Through Food — Let The Guests Do The Work!” “The best of parties can be the easiest,” begins the text. There are four delicious, simple menus, all concocted in minutes: Fondue Bourguignonne; Cheese Fondue à la Lucerne; Tacos ‘Ole Mexico; Festive Gypsy Salad Bar. All have flavorful accompaniments.

Especially popular is the section called “Just The Two Of Us — 30 Minute Dinners With A Flair”: the Filet of Fish Parmesan is a winner. “VIP Guests Come To Dinner — Impressively Elegant In 60 Minutes Or Less!” has five gourmet menus. The French menu features Brandied Filet de Boeuf, ready in 12 minutes, and ends with a combination of coffee and dessert called Café St. Jacques (preparation time 5-6 minutes). This has been such a hit with my own guests that I serve it for Christmas dinner instead of the traditional plum pudding.

Of course writing a cookbook means marketing a cookbook. The best product in the world will sit in a warehouse accumulating dust if no one knows about it. During the past two years I feel as if I have earned a Ph.D. in “Marketing — Learn It Yourself!” I have crisscrossed the country doing talk shows and cooking demonstrations, boarding planes with 12 cakes, coolers full of iced soups, insulated carrying cases housing cheese molds and enough luggage for three climate changes. Fully airborne, I have prayed that everything arrives in good order and that the iced soups don’t end up in Miami when San Francisco is my destination.

Last fall I was scheduled for a TV demonstration in Dallas. The producer had assured me we had time to cook two recipes, but when I arrived at the station the interviewer insisted that we needed more food on the countertop — for show. The only thing I could offer was a cake meant for a tasting-autograph party the following day. The cake at that point was minus all the decoration which would make it look inviting. I had noticed that the TV station was in the same complex as a bank which had lovely plants growing in the lobby. I ran to the bank, breathlessly explained my plight to a dubious security guard and asked if I might cut a little foliage. Warily, he agreed and those who watched the show reported that the cake looked very tempting on its crystal cake stand surrounded by tiny gardenia blooms and shiny green holly leaves.

Another time I was asked to participate in a cooking festival at a large department store in St. Louis. My assignment was to cook six recipes in less than an hour (After all, the book is called Rush Hour Superchef!). My only concern was over the Bananas Foster flaming properly — I wanted to end on a dazzling note. I had never encountered trouble flaming a dish, but to be certain of a gorgeous flame I added a tiny bit of pure grain alcohol to the rum and banana liqueur mixture, heated it and struck the match. WHAM! It was a “Fourth of July Bananas Foster” with the store’s sprinkling system chirping a warning that it was about to drown my audience. There is no end to the process of self-discovery — I am continually learning!

Rush Hour Superchef is in its second printing with over 200 enthusiastic reviews from major food editors across the country. “Relax!” writes Violet Moore of the Macon, Georgia Telegraph and News, “and romp through 256 pages with cartoons reminiscent of Dr. Seuss... A mother and daughter team, busy as you are ever going to be, have come to your rescue with a fantastic idea and recipe book...even tips on how to turn accessories you already have around the house into striking table and buffet decorations.”

Another food editor writes: “There are hundreds of cookbooks published each year, but there is always room for one more if it answers a changing need in our lifestyle.”

It is gratifying that our book has accomplished the goal we hoped to achieve. And as I move on to new pursuits and dreams, I continue to be grateful that I carry along with me both the sound education and the motivation to meet new challenges which were so firmly implanted in me during my years at SBC. ♦

Ed. Note: Rush Hour Superchef is available through the Sweet Briar Book Shop: $11.95 plus $2.50 p/h.

Hattie Hits the Campaign Trail!

Hattie Babbitt '69

Hattie Coons Babbitt '69 talks about the prospect of being First Lady of the United States with enthusiasm. She is spending most of her time these days working on her husband, Bruce Babbitt's campaign for the Democratic nomination for U. S. President. Hattie is a successful trial lawyer, a partner in the Phoenix law firm of Robbins & Green, and mother of two boys, Christopher, 12 and TJ, 10. On a recent day in September, she had visited Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, Iowa and given six speeches, two newspaper interviews and a radio talk before retiring for the night. She got up next morning at 4:00, flew home to Arizona, and was in her law office by 8:30 a.m. and talking to the Sweet Briar alumnae office by 10:00. How does she handle such a busy schedule?

Hattie said they're used to it, since Bruce was governor of Arizona for nine years, from '78 to '87. When the children were born, they went through their lives cutting out nonessentials. They have never given big dinner parties and have gone without living room curtains for the last few years — not because they don't want them but because Hattie has chosen to go hiking with the family or to the boys' soccer games on Saturday afternoons rather than figure out which curtains would suit. But the campaign has called for bigger adjustments than these. Hattie has cut down considerably on her law practice, something she never thought of doing while Bruce was governor. When her days were spent in Phoenix, she religiously scheduled time with their children into every day; on the campaign trail, that is not always possible but she makes sure she at least talks to them on the telephone every day. If it's like this campaigning, what would it be like in the White House? "There it would be easier," she laughs.

Hattie studied at Sweet Briar from 1965 to '67, then left to spend her junior year at the University of Madrid through the NYU program (Sweet Briar did not have a Junior Year in Spain program then). She spent her senior year at Arizona State University near her husband-to-be and graduated cum laude in Spanish in 1969, the year they were married. She enrolled in law school at ASU the day after their honeymoon, graduated cum laude, and after a stint as law clerk to the Chief Justice of the Arizona Supreme Court, went into private practice as a trial attorney. In 1978 she became a partner in the Phoenix law firm of Robbins & Green, a position she still holds. Bruce earned his B.S. from Notre Dame, his master's in geophysics from Newcastle-on-Tyne, England (which he attended as a prestigious Marshall Scholar), and his J.D. from Harvard. He is the author of an art history book, Color and Light and Hattie were in the Young Republicans together. Barbara Baur Dunlap '68 recalls that Hattie was "very independent, a bit of a maverick. It was very refreshing to see things through her eyes." At a lunch meeting in Phoenix about 10 years ago, Barbara remembers admiring Hattie's efforts to do things as a family even though she was building her own law practice and Bruce was attorney general of Arizona. Barbara was also struck by the very equitable distribution of duties in the Babbitt household — Hattie planned the meals and Bruce did the grocery shopping. Nowadays, on the campaign trail, neither Bruce nor Hattie has time for and starts every campaign meeting by doing so. Children's issues are Babbitt's major focus — particularly the need to provide good-quality daycare to families that can't afford it. In Arizona, Babbitt introduced a system of daycare certificates; the amount is scaled to income and the paper certificate can be used at any certified daycare center. "It started as a way to allow mothers on welfare to work," said Hattie. Bruce Babbitt would like to see this system, and also a health care system that he got going for poor children in Arizona, installed nationwide.

U.S. News and World Report stated recently that since Democratic pollsters have found that children are now the poorest segment of society (one in five is born poor and one in four drops out of school), kids are a "hot new issue" for Democrats on the campaign trail. Hattie points out that, although all the presidential spouses have been concerned with children's issues, her husband is the only actual candidate to make children a major focus of his campaign right from the start, and to have a proven track record in working for their interests. (His 1985 "State of the state" message was devoted entirely to children's issues.)

Hattie finds campaigning "extraordinarily interesting." She has campaigned in the south and in the bellwether states of Iowa and New Hampshire. Iowa, which moved onto the international scene when it chose Jimmy Carter in 1976, is holding its caucus on February 8, a month before the "Super Tuesday" primaries in the south and also before the first presidential primary in N.H. on February 16. Iowa Democrats held a "First Ladies" forum at Drake University in Des Moines on July 26 — the organizer said that many Iowa voters wanted to meet the candidates' wives before making up their minds. Each woman spoke for five minutes about her plans as a presidential spouse. Rather than overlook the nickname, the "Seven Dwarfs," by which the Democratic candidates are widely known, Hattie provided the light touches to the forum (and stole the headlines in the Washington Times and the San Francisco Chronicle) by dubbing the group, "The Fabulous Dwarfettes." She considered the names of presidential spouses of the past, Eleanor, Jacqueline and Rosalynn, then said, "And then I look at us. People with names like Hattie, Kitty, Tipper." (Ex-roommate Pat Schlingmann, remembering Hattie's sense of fun and a and an Arizona history book, A Grand Canyon Anthology.

The courses Hattie remembers best at Sweet Briar are Eleanor Barton's history of art and Loren Oliver's studio art. A strong supporter of women's colleges, she says she did not fully appreciate Sweet Briar at the time but now is very glad she came here. Friends remember her as "a serious student but not a grind. . . lots of fun." Roommate Pat Winton Schlingmann '69 remembers midnight phone calls to Dew dorm from Bruce, who was then with the Office of Economic Opportunity in Washington, and Hattie's excited description of him as "just the sort of man I want to marry." Pat also remembers (— ssh!) that she grocery shopping, which is done by their housekeeper, Cristina.

As chatelaine of the White House, Hattie knows where her strengths would lie: "I'm short on tea-giving skills and long on wanting to make a real contribution in the areas of education, children's issues and the environment." Hattie supports her husband's political stands but, although she has no formal agenda of her own, sees some areas where she could contribute. Noting that the position of First Lady would give her a "bully pulpit," she plans to work toward 100% literacy in the U.S. and would like to develop public/private trusts to preserve the Grand Canyon.

Hattie loves to talk about her husband lark that the two of them perpetrated one evening when they went out on a double date identically dressed, was not surprised to hear about the “fabulous dwarfettes.”)

Iowa and New Hampshire are the only two states where most of the campaigning is done in people's living rooms or in small groups. This is democracy in action. (The London Observer thought there was “something splendid about the sight of rich, powerful men having to shake hands while watching out for cowpats.”) Because the states are small, and the front-runners have not yet emerged, folks in these states hold morning coffees in their homes for presidential candidates the way people in other states and cities do for their city councilors and state representatives. Hattie loved the intimacy of the living room and likened these discussions to “really great political science seminars in college. But when the guy asking the questions is an Iowa farmer it is much more intense, more immediate.” Hattie also spoke to individual classes at Grinnell College and Grand View College in Des Moines, and commented on the excellence of Iowa's colleges.

Hattie enjoyed the intimacy of people's homes in New Hampshire, too, and got very good press when she campaigned there this summer. The Valley News reported the fact that even though she lost her luggage on the trip to N.H., she still was relaxed and confident while telling listeners why they should make her husband president of the U.S. The Milford (N.H.) Cabinet and Wilton Journal ran a long article outlining the main events in Hattie's life and the main points in her talk, while the Lawrence Eagle-Tribune called her “one of a new breed of political wives — accomplished career women with opinions of their own.” On the question of just how opinionated and influential a spouse should be, Hattie, according to the Eagle Tribune, “adroitly maneuvered on this sensitive battlefield of sex and politics.” Hattie acknowledged that after 18 years of marriage “she has shaped her husband's views, particularly on women's issues. . .” but made it clear that she had never meddled in Arizona politics. The Eagle Tribune finished by suggesting that Hattie was going to Iowa and New Hampshire, not as a cheerleader but as part of the advance team.

The New Hampshire press is not the only group that has been analyzing the role of First Lady in this day and age. The Washington Post, in an article on presidential spouses, said that there is more focus than ever on the candidate's wife and that this “reflects a complicated change in society's view of political women.” It pointed out that in the 50s, 60s and even 70s, the presidential spouse's role as a helpmate was clearly defined, but now it is different. “Today's ideal spouse is seen not just as a supportive wife and devoted mother but an independent woman as well.” How much independence the public wants is unclear. Rosalynn Carter and Nancy Reagan both have been sharply criticized for being too independent — Carter for attending Cabinet meetings and Reagan for influencing her husband in the dismissal of former White House chief of staff Donald Regan. But political analyst Norm Ornstein was quoted by the Post as calling Carter and Reagan important transitional figures in public expectations of the political wife — they have “sensitized people to the fact that you elect a team, not just a president and a vice president.”

How does Hattie see herself in the role of First Lady? “It is a very individual thing. Each First Lady from now on will have to find the way that suits her.” Hattie would certainly spend more time promoting causes than giving parties. Although she is planning to be an active First Lady, she would not continue her law practice from the White House. “There are more useful things I could be doing. Washington does not need another lawyer!”

There seems to be no question that with Babbitt, the voters will be electing a team. Said Hattie, “This isn't a career choice one can make individually. Bruce thought about running for a couple of years, and the whole family considered it. The question of whether it could be a positive experience for all four of us figured in Bruce's decision to run.” Asked how much she influenced her husband, Hattie simply said, “It wouldn't be much of a marriage if, after 18 years, we didn't influence one another.”

Hattie is looking forward to coming back for her 20th Reunion in May 1989. Her classmates are hoping it will be held in the White House! ♦

Outstanding Alumna Award, 1987

BY JUDITH GREER
SCHULZ '61
President, Alumnae Association

Each year on Founders' Day the Alumnae Association pays tribute to a graduate alumna who has made an outstanding contribution to the College in a volunteer capacity. This year's recipient, Julia Gray Saunders Michaux '39, has played an active role for many years and has participated in nearly every phase of volunteer work for Sweet Briar.

Julia Gray's broad interests and involvement emerged during her college years. She was a member of Paint and Patches, assistant editor of the Sweet Briar News, president of Chung Mung, president of the Spanish Club and on the Orientation Committee. A constant Dean's List student, she minored in French/Spanish and majored in art; her interest in many phases of art has remained an important part of her busy life.

She has been involved with the College on many levels. In her local club she has served as president, has hosted club meetings and prospective student parties and planned many events, including a visit by the president of the College and an Estate Planning seminar. She sells bulbs, works with the admissions office and is an "information source" for innumerable questions about the College. She has been Reunion chairman for her class, has worked with fund raising activities and is a member of Friends of Art.

Julia Gray served on the Board of the Alumnae Association for a number of years in several capacities. As chairman of her region, she did an excellent job of staying in touch with clubs in her area and in encouraging them to increase club activities. She was never reluctant to express her thoughtful opinions on each issue, and when dissenting from the majority, she did so with tact and clarity. Maintaining high standards in every area has been primary in her mind, whether in the academic area, in the quality of programs sponsored by the College, or in the appearance of campus buildings and grounds. Sweet Briar must always be at the top, and the best. She was active in raising funds for the chapel and has served for years as a member of the Boxwood Circle Committee, which encourages gifts of $1,000 or more annually from alumnae.

Now serving on the Board of Overseers, she is a member of the Buildings and Grounds Committee and was formerly chairman of the Student Affairs Committee. She was a valued member of this past year's Strategic Planning process.

All this work for Sweet Briar has not caused her to neglect her community. She has been active in the Junior League where she showed the same concern for high standards she has displayed in her work for Sweet Briar. She has been president of the Board of the Virginia Museum as well as a faithful docent, a member of the vestry of her church, a member of the Board of Directors of the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts, president of the auxiliary of a local hospital, an involved member of the Garden Club of Virginia, on the board of a home for boys and has worked with the Community Chest and the United Fund.

When elected to Sweet Briar's Board of Overseers, she was quoted as saying: "I feel that the liberal arts education offered by Sweet Briar, with its broad spectrum of subjects, still best prepares the student for participation and leadership in today's complex world. The liberal arts college, however, will be constantly challenged in the '80s by new technologies and the desires and demands of the career-oriented students. The College's curriculum must respond to these challenges if it is to prepare the student for graduate work and the complexities of the real world."

And she has worked to make these ideas a reality. ♦

80 YEARS AGO...

My work — I am an aspiring art historian — often takes me into the files of 19th and early 20th century magazines. And look what I found while browsing in Harper's Monthly Magazine for 1907! Thought it was an interesting thing to take note of in 1987.

BUY BULBS!

1987 Bulb Report

This year 44 clubs, Solos and the alumnae office sold 1,819 bulb orders for a total of $103,330.74. 1987 top-selling clubs were

Greensboro	$7,729.82
Richmond	$7,578.76
Washington	$6,593.95
Solo	$5,433.23
Fairfield Co.	$4,100.89

A total of 34 sellers were bonus winners this year. Seventeen sold between $500 and $749, six sold between $750 and $999.

EXTRA SPECIAL MENTION AND THANKS TO

Greensboro's own Rene Moore, who with unflinching dedication to the Bulb Project and seemingly limitless energy has DONE IT AGAIN! Greensboro is the top-selling club and Rene herself is tops amongst sellers. Another year as a Bloomin' Alumna! More special mention and thanks to this year's Bloomin' Alumnae, those with consistent sales records of $1,000 and more:

Irene Mitchell Moore '42
Greensboro	$3,093.21
Virginia Squibb Flynn '32

AND TO

Solo Club and Chairman, Peggy Ewart Riter '54. With only 27 participants, their 118 orders totaled $5,433.23.

During the Bulb Workshop at Alumnae Council President Nenah Fry drew the name of the winner of the Sweet Briar Sweepstakes — Shirley Hauseman Nordhem '42 is the lucky bulb seller who will take her prize trip to Holland this spring. All alumnae with sales of $500 or more were entered in the Sweet Briar Sweepstakes.

Report of Alumnae Council 1987

By Winnie Leigh Hamlin '58

First Vice President and Director of Clubs

More than 150 alumnae returned to the lovely Sweet Briar campus for an exhilarating Alumnae Council. We enjoyed renewing friendships and seeing innovations: the foundation and framing of the Alumnae Inn and the new admissions office in the renovated Hill House (behind the old refectory). Committee and Alumnae Board meetings, Julia Mills Jacobsen's ('45) "What You Need to Know to Serve on a Board" and workshops for Alumnae Admissions Representatives, Fund Agents, Reunion Gifts and Club Activities were most informative.

At the Club Activities Workshop Alumnae Director Ann Morrison Reams '42 gave stimulating suggestions for clubs and key alumnae. Then three enthusiastic club presidents told of their clubs' activities: Margie McGraw McDonald '60 from Baltimore, Sally Old Kitchen '76 from Tidewater and Carol Beaird Riedlin '80 from Denver, who said that Ninie Laing '57, professor of art history, will speak on "Architecture in the Old Dominion" at the Denver Club's "College for a Day." National Bulb Chairman Sally Bumbaugh '54 had President Nenah Fry draw a name from bulb sellers who sold at least $500 worth of bulbs. Shirley Hauseman Nordhem '42 won the trip to Holland, which should be as delightful as the one reported on by Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80. The alumnae office will begin selling a new product — summer blooming bulbs, such as caladiums and dahlias. Fliers for the summer bloomers will be mailed to all alumnae in January '88.

Alumnae Admissions Representative Chairman Bobo Ryan Hoyt '72 displayed the new large green Sweet Briar banner and colorful posters for AARs to take to high schools for college nights. She introduced Alumnae Admissions Coordinator Hubble Wilson '77 and Director of Admissions and Financial Aid Alice Love, who said that the academically strong freshman class members come from 37 states and six foreign countries and that 47% of the current students receive financial aid. (Thanks to alumnae for gifts and bulb sales which provide many of the scholarships!) Admission statistics show that 60% of the prospective students who visit SBC apply for admission: let's encourage them to visit.

Highlights of Alumnae Council:

□ Student Panel, where Ellyn Palermo, president of student government, and other student leaders talked and answered questions about the College today

□ Update on the State of the College by President Nenah Fry, Dean Robin Bowers, Dean of Student Affairs Bob Barlow, Vice President and Treasurer Tom Connors and Director of the Alumnae Association Ann Reams

□ Cocktails with faculty and administrators in the magnificent Pannell Center Gallery (the former refectory)

□ Faculty Panel in the Wailes Center featuring Susan Beers, associate professor of psychology; Kenneth Grimm, professor of government; Dominique Leveau, associate professor of French; and Susan Piepho, professor of chemistry

□ Alumnae Memorial Service led by Sweet Briar's chaplain, The Reverend Susan Lehman

□ Founders' Day with speaker Erwin Frenkel, editor of The Jerusalem Post, whose topic was "Free Society in the Anchorman Age"

We were thrilled that Julia Gray Saunders Michaux '39 received the Outstanding Alumna Award. Excited about the innovations and state of the College, we hope that each alumna will return for a visit and will bring or encourage a prospective student to visit.

Carolyn Martindale Blouin '30 informed us that the photo of Pop Blackwell on page 26 of the Summer '87 issue is not Pop, but her father Mr. Martindale.

Nominee for the Board of Overseers

The Board of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association submits the name of Helen Murchison Lane '46 to the members of the Association as a candidate for election to the Board of Overseers of Sweet Briar College.

Helen earned her A.B. in philosophy from Sweet Briar in 1946. She is well-known for her work in historical restoration, about which articles have appeared in The Old House Journal, and she has published two calendars about historic structures in Jacksonville. Owner and manager of 21 rental properties, she is listed in many publications including Who's Who of American Women. Helen served Sweet Briar as an admissions representative from '58 to '62, as president of the Jacksonville Alumnae Club, and as Region V Chairman on the Alumnae Association Board from '68 to '70; she also worked on the Reunion Gifts Committee for her 40th reunion in 1986 and is a member of the president's Strategic Planning Facilities Committee. She and her husband, banker Edward W. Lane, Jr., have presented Sweet Briar with the Helen and Edward Lane Endowed Scholarship Fund, a $3000 per year merit award for a student from the greater Jacksonville area. They also donated the publication costs of the book, The Best of Lucifer, with the stipulation that proceeds from sales go to the Lucy Shepherd Crawford Chair of Philosophy.

The Lanes have raised four children: Edward III, Palmer Lane Dorn '73, Anna and Charlie. In her community, Helen serves on the boards of the Cummer Gallery of Art, the Arts Assembly and the Jacksonville Historical Society and is a member of the Landmarks Commission. A past president of the Junior League and the Garden Club, she also served on the boards of the Bartram School, the Symphony and the Visiting Nurse Association and worked with the PTA and Colonial Dames. As a student, Helen won Freshman Honors, was a member of the May Court, the Advisory Council, the Lake Council and the staff of the Briar Patch, and was chairman of the Social Committee.

Other names may be added to the ballot if they are sent to the director of the Alumnae Association, Sweet Briar, VA 24595, accompanied by the signatures of 15 alumnae and written consent of the nominees within two weeks after publication of this name as the nominee. If no additional nominations are made, the director of the Alumnae Association is instructed to cast a ballot to elect the proposed slate. The elected candidate's name will be submitted to the Board of Directors as the nominee from the Association for election at the spring meeting of the Board.

Lentz DeVol 1912-1987

Lentz Clive DeVol, born, raised and educated in Ohio, came East only as a visitor until he accepted a position at Sweet Briar in 1961 to teach physics. He moved into Merrywood with his wife and four small children and remained right on Old Stage Road until his death on June 22, 1987, at the age of 75. His birthplace was Lowell, Ohio; his B.A. degree was from Marietta College; his M.S. from the University of Cincinnati. Graduating during the height of the depression when teaching jobs were nonexistent, he returned to work on the family farm until he was called into the service, where he became a weather forecaster and taught that skill during his tour of duty in the Army Air Corps.

In 1944 he married Ethel Sprankel and soon began his career of teaching physics and math — 10 years at Valparaiso University and five years at Iowa Wesleyan. From 1961 until his retirement in 1977 he taught physics at Sweet Briar. He served as secretary of the faculty in '68-'69 and again in '70-'71. Lentz attended summer institutes which related to his field: "Radiation in the Physical Sciences" at Iowa State University of Science and Technology in 1962; in physics at Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies in 1963; in "Oscillations and Waves" at Dartmouth in 1966; in computer science for college teachers at Penn State University in 1971.

His background of farming made it natural to have a garden. This was possible at Merrywood, but he wanted to possess his own space, which he found next door. It was not easy because every inch between the pines was covered with poison ivy or honeysuckle. Lentz began to work and plan and by 1973 his family moved into its new brick home. Lentz served as his own contractor and did a lot of the building himself. Already there were gardens, individually fenced to keep away the deer or birds or rabbits or specialized enemies, a driveway, a magnolia tree, roses and every kind of special berry, fruit and vegetable. His garden was his pride and joy, his shrine, and he loved to share its bounty.

In 1965 the family joined the Unitarian Church in Lynchburg and contributed much to its life through the years. Lentz served in many capacities including chairman of the Board of Trustees. He was well-known for being out front every Sunday to greet the members as they arrived and call each by name.

One word characterizes Lentz: RELIABLE. You could always count on him to do what he said he would. If he planted a bush, it grew; if he fixed a hinge, it stayed fixed; if he made a commitment of anything, from the classroom to the church, you knew it would be done.

John McClenon, professor of chemistry, in paying tribute to Lentz told of his invaluable role in restoring the property now known as Unitarian House on Court Street. They were apprehensive about undertaking its restoration with only volunteer labor, but they decided that with Lentz as a member, they knew they could. John said, "Lentz taught us all how to be craftsmen. His tools were always sharp; he used the right tool for the right job and he never left a job sloppily done." And so it was with his garden, his teaching and with everything he undertook.

CLASS NOTES

In Avon Park, FL, Jane Pratt Betts is hale and hearty and enjoying her ever-growing family

1922

Aline Morton Burt loves the class news because she loved her year at Sweet Briar. She wishes more classmates would write in, so, in the spirit of "do unto others..." she sends her news which, she says, varies little in the past several years. She has been living in a beautiful retirement residential hotel in Laguna Hills, CA, for the past eight years. Healthy, she uses no cane, walker or wheelchair but drives her car hither and yon and is always busy. Her far-flung family continues to graduate, commence, marry and reproduce — keeps the greeting card industry happy and Aline's checkbook stubs fat

Greetings to you all from our class president, Mort Bachman McCoy. She says it for us all. "The old homestead and I are both gradually falling apart. So part of my time is spent in some doctor's office waiting for him to tell me not to expect too much at my age, or waiting patiently at home for The Man to come fix the dishwasher, the washing machine, the sump pump or what have you. The rest of my time is spent very pleasantly weeding and reading."

We did not hear from Ann Maybank

last year; it was a very hard one for her because of a broken arm and deaths in the family. She seems to be perking on high this year. As does Ellen Newell Bryan on Sea Island, GA, where her husband, Wright, is better following a stroke last August. Her big news is that her granddaughter Ellen B. Tozzer '87, the daughter of Newell Bryan Tozzer '55 is to be married Sept. 5 on Ellen's 83rd birthday. Her first great grand, the granddaughter of Mary Lane Sullivan '58, is one year old. She will represent the Ellen Newell tradition in the class of 2004 Long live the class of 1926!

Ruth Johnston Bowen is now in Lynchburg in the Westminster Canterbury where quite a few Sweet Briarites also reside. She hears from Mary Elizabeth Loughery in Winston-Salem. Virginia Carpenter Ellerton roomed with Wanda Jensch in 1923 and 24 and then left for the gayer halls of U. of Wisconsin which she now very much regrets. Her husband has been in a nursing home for 5½ years with Alzheimers. The highlights of her years are the Christmas and wedding visits to her children, 9 grands and 10 greats, all living in the far west, a goodly distance from her home in Minneapolis. She looks forward to the alumnae magazine, especially news of 1926

Gudie Eskesen Smith and husband Bud are chugging along pretty well. There is bus service door to door from their retirement home in Del Ray, FL, to all sorts of places, dinner theatres, etc. and they love it all. They were in D.C. in May to visit son Tom and hope for ME in August. After a year and a half of dental, foot and back troubles, Dot Keller Iliff is spending the summer disposing of surplus possessions, in preparation for moving into a club-style retirement home. She eagerly awaits November and carefree living at Heritage Club, Apt. 816, 2020 South Munroe Street, Denver, CO, 80210, where she has a marvelous view of the mountains and is nearer to Bambi. Only worry now is selling her house — (sound familiar?)

Louise Fuller Freeman's schedule runs like this: Tacoma to visit sister Margaret Riggs '28, NY for theatre, Minneapolis and San Francisco for opera, Winnipeg for ballet, with short trips to New Orleans etc. Early this fall she will go with a daughter and her 11 year old granddaughter to Vienna, then drive through "Sound of Music" country to Munich. Her attorney son who lives in Fargo has two college children all doing well. "Life has been good to me though I have been living alone since my husband died 23 years ago"

Helen Dunleavy had serious surgery in June. She's feeling great now but cautiously canceled planned August trips. She and Dot Keller attended a recent fun alumnae party in July. She sits on three volunteer boards. She avidly reads all class news in alumnae magazine. Keep it coming! Peg Posey still at same abode, volunteering at her church retirement home and enjoying her grandchildren. One girl has just returned from her Junior Year at Oxford

Lib Rountree Kellerman writes "George and I live rather gently in our lovely spot on the ocean facing Diamond Head. George at 87 golfs three times a week. I teach Sunday School, keep house, care for my orchids and try to keep up with my older son and family of three grandsons who live here and my younger son and family of one grandson and finally a great-granddaughter named Elizabeth. All are exciting and very active. I do not expect to ever come back for the trip is too long and exhausting

It is great hearing from you and passing your news on to the alumnae office. Maybe next year more of you will write. Too bad we only report once a year. I find myself envious of a friend who keeps in closer touch with her college friends through a "Round Robin" letter. Anyone interested contact me and I'll set one up. Each of us would be allowed a few lines except for exceptional news. As for me, time flies. I find my schedule all too full and am thankful for good health I'm afraid I always have been a jack of all trades. Edna Lee and husband Joe Gilchrist braved the horrendous Florida traffic to drive from Naples to Captiva to have lunch and a marvelous talk fest. Till next year, all good wishes.

Another year and more pleasure for me while reading all your cards. Sorry space requires me to radically condense. Betsy Williams Gilmore took time off from tennis and her part-time job to see Liz Copeland Norfleet fly off to Scotland. Emmy Riely LeMaire is still getting reaccustomed to living in NYC. Eunice Watters Coolbaugh and Dick have a black labrador who understands English. Evaline Edmonds Thoma is settled in Sun City, AZ and thinks she may start painting again. Serena Ailes Stevens and Mark are constantly on the move. They recently attended a political 'think tank' seminar in Washington and Mark's 60th Harvard reunion

Gratia Geer Howe's daughter, Nancy Howe Entenmann '56, is active in the alumnae association. Mary Moss Sutliff sent a charming snapshot of her family. It will be preserved in the class scrapbook. Ruth Hasson Smith asks me to convey greetings and blessings to you all. Our student president Alice Leigh Caples has turned her house over to her daughter Allie now lives in Cranbury, NJ. Adelaide Wampler Kundahl was off to the Balkans in '87. Nancy Gaines Jaeger's son is director of admissions at Dartmouth. Nancy lives near by. Eleanor Williams Sloan writes that if there was a retirement village at SBC she would be there. Winogene Springer Yost and Morgan's four children and eight grands celebrated their parents 50th at Cherokee Village, AR. Morgan shows prize-winning cars and Winogene is vice-president of the Arkansas Federation of Garden Clubs. Wilhelmina Rankin Teter enjoyed three courses with excellent professors at Elderhostel, Shenandoah Coll., Winchester, VA. Mary Burks Saltz has not allowed ill health to slow her up. She teaches Sunday School and serves on the Salvation Army administration. She received the first "OTHERS" award given in St. Petersburg, FL

Mona Stone Green and Thornton have built a guest house near Carson City, NV, on daughter Anne's ranch. Betty Orr Miller continues to paint. She returns to Pennsylvania every August. Delma Chambers Glazier lives alone in Baltimore. Bruce Dailey Dawson and Lewis love living in Sun City, AZ. They spent six weeks in Europe last summer. Alice Perkins Clayton and Jim take short trips from San Mateo, CA. Meredith Oakford Johnson gardens in pots at her new duplex. One of her five grandsons will be a crew member on the U.S. Coast Guard's sailing barque Eagle on her voyage to Australia. Dougie Lyon Steadman attended reunion in 1987. She was sorry that there were not more classmates present.

A welcome note from Katryne Blake Moore brought greetings to all of us. Katryne lost Robert, her husband of 57 years, in July '86. She sent an editorial about him from the Chattanooga Times and a tribute written by their son; both will be put in the class scrapbook. Katryne recently looked at a movie taken at Sweet Briar in 1926 — it features Hattie, Tuck, Eleanor, Jane, Eagle, Moss, Tol and Abie Blake. Since Katryne is doing bed and breakfasts for guests of the University of the South and says there is no charge for SBC buddies, let's go and see that movie!

Myra Marshall Brush and Ned attended his 50th at UVA Medical School this year. Sims Masee Rand cruised around the Hawaiian Islands on the USS Constitution and was looking forward to a trip to Canada in August. Liz Stevenson Tate and Winnie West Morriss '28 have established the Wilmer and Pauline Blackwell Fund to perpetuate fox hunting by Sweet Briar students. It is their hope that the fund will grow. Elizabeth Carnes planned to join the SBC cruise to Australia in 1987. Pig Sproul Bush, Carolyn Martindale Blouin, Scottie Gorsline and I make use of the telephone occasionally. I also talk with Kay Graham Seiter. It's fun. Let's keep 1930 in touch. For $5.00 one can order an alumnae directory and find friends

In the 90 degree heat of July, it is difficult to think about news in January. News from you all was welcome and good to know most of us keep busy

Nancy Butzner Leavell returned in June from a 2-week trip to Russia visiting Moscow, Leningrad, and the Caspian Sea. A month later she and a group from St. Paul's Church went to England on a pilgrimage to Coventry, then to Iona, and Edinburgh. Between trips she attended her grandson's graduation from Hotchkiss. Virginia Broun Lawson stopped to see Marion Gwaltney Hall on her way north from Florida. After 55 years, they had a great time catching up. She also saw Cecil Birdsey Fuessle and continued home by Sweet Briar. She spends her summers in Wytheville and enjoys trips with her husband Bob who is on the board of the American Bar Association. Charlotte Lee Fishburne will be going to China in August with her husband who was asked to join a group of "senior" lawyers to represent the U.S. in Peking at an American/China session on trade, investment and economic law. They will go to other cities after a 4-day session

Elizabeth Ogilby Sands still goes to Gloucester, MA in the summer to escape the heat and humidity of MD. Her three children live in CO, Williamsburg, and near her in MD. She still pursues her art (languidly). Becky Strode Lee has 12 grandchildren ages 3-20. She had a wonderful trip to visit her daughter Brownie (SBC '60) in Niger, Africa. Brownie is in charge of Peace Corps volunteers in teaching and has adopted a 3-year-old girl. Marjorie Lasar Hurd works on a library board, a UNA board and does church work. She visited her son David in Houston in June and saw her granddaughter graduate from high school

Jane Morrison Moore and Jim, celebrating their 51st wedding anniversary, had happy memories of their 50th when their 4 children and 12 grandchildren from Memphis, New Bern, Jacksonville, NC and Baltimore gathered at Mid Pines Resort near Pinehurst for a long weekend. Connie Burwell White had a wonderful trip down the Rhine with the Stanford alumni group in the fall of '86 and a 12-day cruise on the Royal Viking in '87 to Southampton, Bordeaux, Cherbourg, Antwerp, Edinburgh and Dublin. In between they went trout fishing in new waders. They go to Scottsdale for 2 months in the winter

Martha Lou Lemmon Stohman's most commendable achievement was to attend a 6-day session in June at Princeton Alumni College on the Constitution. "Starting with a tabula totally rasa, I learned a lot from 14 lectures, a symposium of state supreme court justices, a trip to Phila., slides from PBS, plus a monologue: Thomas Jefferson's Crusade against Ignorance. Prof. Walter Murphy, the director, helped us conclude that interpreters of those 4 pages are the Supreme Court, Congress, and we the people in our choices of candidates or in letters to congressmen." Brava, Martha Lou

Lib Scheuer Maxwell is happy with her choice of Charleston. In Oct. Martha Lou, Dee Howe, Bettina Callaway, Bonnie Stokey and Cecil Fuessle had a mini reunion with Lib. Bonnie Wood Stokey still works at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. She sees Mary Rowe Moore and Dot Hutchison Howe occasionally. Her three boys and their children live nearby. Betty Suttle Briscoe unfortunately fell and broke her leg just as she was setting out for a spring tour of England. She enjoys life in Hilton Head and summer visits from her children and 8 grandchildren. Kitty Means Neely had one more freighter voyage to Australia and New Zealand over Christmas and the New Year. She was looking for an apartment in San Francisco from November to May

Jo Fink Meeks and David are trying to get in as much travel as they can. They had two weeks in Greece in Sept. '86 and a month in Kenya, Zimbabwe, and South Africa in March '87. They stopped to see their son David, his wife, and the newest grandson in Sonoma, CA. They hope to have all their family and some friends for their 50th anniversary in Hawaii where they were married in 1938. Their daughter, son-in-law and two granddaughters live in Oahu. Their oldest daughter from Santa Barbara and daughter and family from Billings, MT plan to join them. Eleanor Alcott Bromley had an interesting trip to Turkey where she climbed "a zillion rough paths to enormous stretches of ruins all on tops of hills." They flew to Italy and visited Assisi and Florence, along with hordes of tourists, and Sicily, which was green and lovely. Then to Malta where she would like to return. Winter was filled with meetings, largely Council on World Affairs. She also saw Helen Bamford in FL and in June attended her granddaughter's graduation from high school

Helen Hanson Bamford spends the winters in New Smyrna Beach, FL and wonders how many other 1934 classmates winter or live here. She is still busy cooking as her children and grandchildren love to visit. The twin grandchildren, boy and girl-aged 4, swim now and love the pool. Elinor Fitch Welch lives in St. Petersburg, FL but goes to SC in the summer. She sees Squibby Flynn who visits in Naples in the winter. Eleanor Cooke Esterly and husband Dan flew to Sydney, Australia, then to New Guinea where they boarded the Illyria to sail the Solomon Sea, visit a number of the islands and fly home from Fiji. Nancy Hotchkiss Bosch also had a Natural History Museum trip on the Illyria to follow the Vikings, having already been to Norway, Sweden, and Denmark to see the midnight sun. In March they spent a lovely week in Granada

Dorothy Hutchinson Howe keeps busy with family and friends. Therese Lamfrom Beck hopes to return for our next reunion. Helen Closson Hendricks reads the alumnae magazine for news of her friends and her daughter's class '66 and granddaughter's, '84. Edith Knox Bogaard, ex '34, graduated from Coe College in Cedar Rapids. She was society editor of the Cedar Rapids Gazette for three years prior to her marriage. Her husband died in '65 but she has kept busy with Episcopal Church and Republican Party volunteer work. Nan Russell Carter is active with tennis, swimming, skiing, and trying to bring up a 15-year-old grandson who is a "Spec. Ed." student. She serves on a school committee evaluating L.D. and handicapped for placement, and was given a 4th Award for work with youth and handicapped. Greenie Lippitt moved from her house in Wilton, CT to a new carriage house with her dog Jill

Our condolences for Judy Daugherty Musser who lost her husband Bill in Oct. '86. She visits her daughter and four grandchildren in Toronto. Grandson Bill is a junior at Harvard, Wendy a freshman. Other two in prep school. Judy spent time in Barbados in the winter. Ruth Billingsley Caughey died in January 1987 of Alzheimer's disease. Our sympathy goes to her husband

Dorothy Prince Oldfield had a wonderful time at her husband's 50th class reunion at William and Mary. They have a new grandson and their oldest granddaughter's husband was sent to Cambridge Univ. in England, where they hope to visit. Mary Lee Ryan Strother had an interesting month in the Netherlands, Belgium, Germany and Italy. Their daughter, Sara, SBC '64, joined them for 10 days. In Feb. they visited her brother in Gilroy, CA then on to HI for three weeks to escape the cold of MI. Cor-delia Penn Cannon had a nice trip to Charlottesville to see her granddaughter, Ashley Christopher, and old friends. Paid their respects to the Lawn, Poe's house and the museum. She and daughter, Claire lunched at Sweet Briar and loaded up with yogurt at the dairy.

Dorothy Turno Gardiner says things are better this year. Her husband was ill last year. Ruth Myers Pleasants and her husband celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in April at the Greenbriar, White Sulphur Springs, W.Va. Their children and spouses hosted the party. They spent most of the summer in the mountains and cruised on the Royal Viking in Sept. to New England, Canada, and Nova Scotia

On my last trip to France, I fell and broke my arm. So in '87, I went to Scotland on a painting trip with the Art Institute of Chicago, then to Oxford with the Oxford Friends of Art for a week and on to Dublin to visit old friends and take in the Dublin Horse Show and its festivities. Keep well, keep me posted, and let's all make it to SBC for our 55th

Our class of 1938 had a 49th "mini" reunion May 21-23, 1987 to prepare for the important time of May 27 to 29 when we will all return to Sweet Briar and celebrate our 50 years of being graduated (imagine!). We assembled on the third floor of Meta Glass (a dorm with elevator). Present were Dolly Nicholson Tate with husband Jack, Dorothy Gipe Clement and John (he is as enthusiastic about #50 as Dottie), Vesta Murray Haselden and Ed, Janice Wiley Adams and George, Janet MacFarlan Bergmann, Frances Bailey Brooke, Cornelia Armfield Cannon, Babbie Derr Chenoweth with Arthur, Billie Heizer Hickenlooper and Bo, Betty Moore Stowers, Brownie Snider, Mollie Talcott Dodson, Sarah Tomlinson Foscue, Pollyanna Shotwell Holloway and her Bob (he discovered the ice machine) and my husband Blair and myself. Conversation was rampant — campus was glorious — dormitory living with a loving husband made us feel slightly immoral (come see for yourself)! We had early morning joggers and late night talkers Highlight of our "mini" was dinner at Sweet Briar House and an inspiring talk by President Nenah E. Fry. We all rose to our feet to applaud and felt highly grateful for our inheritance from SBC.

Marge Thaden Davis summered in their NJ condo to be near daughters Linda (in Newton, MA), Ann (in Darien, CT), and Suzanne in NYC. Marge and Bill cruised through the Panama Canal and up to LA with many stopovers, last May. Lucy Taliaferro Nickerson's daughter Ann gave them a grandchild in November. Son Clark and wife are in Charlotte. Paul is a duplicate bridge enthusiast. Lucy and Charlie are traveling and delighting in his retirement. (Marge Thaden Davis and Lucy T., you have same zip code. Look for each other.) Virginia Guild Colmore was part of a '38 gathering at Janet Forbush Fead's house in Birmingham, MI. Present were Sammy Hamilton Schuck, Betty Hopper Turner, Kitty King Corbett Powell, Helen Walton Andrae and Dottie Gilbert Browne. All seven will celebrate at SBC May 27th then go on to Williamsburg to complete their week together.

Kay Hoyt is a trail guide at the Nature Center which led her to a week's Audubon Workshop in CT — a rugged and fantastic experience. She was in ME in August. Come lead us on birdwalks at SBC in May, Kay! Harriet Daniel Herd recently completed a term on the Texas Commission on Arts and the Texas Art Council. She is on the Fine Arts Advisory Council for Texas Univ. She is senior warden of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity in Midland and parliamentarian of the Diocese of Northwest Texas. (Whew!) Harriet, their 3 children and 6 grands gather at their lakehouse on LBJ near Austin. See you at SBC in May! Jessie Silvers Bennett was married on St. Valentine's Day, 1987, to John T. Thompson — they have been friends for 30 years. Jessie reports exuberantly, "to have the heart of an 18 year old and the body of a 'you know what' is an experience not to be believed!" We rejoice for you both and will meet at our 50th.

Bessie Lee Garbee Siegrist is looking forward to seeing you all in May. She helped husband Joe celebrate his 50th at Virginia Tech in 1986. Becky Kunkle Hogue summers in Murphy, NC. They entertain children and grands with golfing, tubing, picnicking, ruby mining, exploring and volunteering at the library. Lucky the grands don't arrive til after May 27th! Janet MacFarlan Bergmann wrote from Cape Cod she has grandchildren to visit her — plays golf with Barbara Ferguson Hill — both Fergie and Janet are due at our #50. M. J. Miller Hein Raber, ecstatic about her 39th vacation on Maui, had a joyous surprise birthday #70 at her daughter's on Long Island, with 70 of her oldest and dearest buddies. She can bring Jack to SBC in May from

Hilton Head, SC!

Mary Brown-Serman Walke has moved to a 200+ year old house in St. Michael's, MD. It has solar panels on roof and is within reach of theater and concerts in Alexandria, VA. Do drive down in May! Betty Moore Stowers has reservations for May 27th. She is currently on the national board of the Mental Health Association. Nancy McCandlish Prichard recommends a castle and garden tour around the British Isles. With 3 children and 6 grands, she asks why is a month shorter than a 2-hour exam at SBC? (Hasten back.) Carolyn Potter Ryburn desires to reunion with all adorable intellectuals who studied and grew fat with food and knowledge in Grammer — Come!

Janice Wiley Adams and George have exchanged one beautiful Maine setting for another less wild and more convenient. You'll find them in Farmington, ME with part of their garden moved with them. They have promised to join us on campus. Dottie Gipe Clement and John spent a week in August in France visiting a former student who lived with them 16 years ago. (She visits them annually — even on her honeymoon.) Then to southern England accompanied by Suzanna, their daughter who is an award-winning photographer. Grandchild #10 arrived in December.

Frances Bailey Brooke's George celebrated his 50th last year at VMI with 60+ classmates (let us beat VMI). They have been to Alaska, China, Seattle, Victoria, BC and Hawaii in the past two years. Fran's broken hip has mended nicely — traveling is joyous and she's ready for May.

Billy Heizer Hickenlooper says after all these years it is a thrill to have your man in a dorm room with you! (Come try it!) Fritz Hoffman Cordes and Frank visited them in September and in October they absorbed Scotland and England — (you will see them in May.) Molly Talcott Dodson roomed next to us at our "mini" reunion. She is bringing Ann Luck Lancaster and Grif in May. (Trust all Richmond ladies will troop along.) Babbie Derr Chenoweth and Arthur went to China in the fall and are saving their experiences to tell us in May.

Our class pres. Dolly Nicholson and Jack are far from retired as they are involved with volunteers in illiteracy, drop-out prevention programs, adolescent pregnancy, day care, United Way, and retirement centers. Oldest grandchild has finished his freshman year at Davidson. All their family "reunited" at High Hampton in the fall. Vesta Murray Haselden and Eddie cooled off on an Alaskan cruise last August. They are both going to be official greeters as you come through the gates at SBC this May. Brownie Marion Brown Snider brought numerous suitcases to the third floor of Meta Glass because she left SBC to visit Lew Griffith Longstaff (where she talked to Kay Hoyt and Judy Bemis Wills). Flew from NYC to Lisbon and boarded the Argonaut for a cruise along coasts of Portugal, Spain and France — then off to Sussex and Kent, England. (Hope she'll repack for SBC by May.)

Ces Jansen Kendrick has 3 children and 4 grands. Charlie Jr. and Suzie live outside Boston. Clint Kendrick and Mary recently left London for Bedford, NY; Kit and John live in Denver. Ces is going to tell everyone the joys of living in Denver when we hug in May. Ethlyn Biedenharn Swayze's son and daughter live in San Antonio, TX. Lyn lost her husband in 1985. She travels but always heads home to Yazoo, MS. Lucille Sergeant Leonard — Toto — and retired Earl are in Cassville, MO. Ida Todman Pierce and Stewart cruised from Australia last January. Went to Bali, Borneo, Manila and Hong Kong. She sees Alex and Charlie Young twice a year as they drive through Richmond coming and going to FL. Howell Lykes Colton lives the best of two coasts. It is FL in the winter and San Francisco for the opera season and Christmas and hot summer months with her daughter and grands.

Eylese Miller Latham has retired from Hampton City Schools. Her husband has been blest with successful cancer surgery. They spent the holidays with their daughter in Cincinnati and son in Atlanta. Dorothy Tison Campbell spends 3 months in FL to keep in touch with friends and relatives. Summer and fall find her in VT. Total number of grands — 6. Jo Happ Willingham went to France and England last spring. Loves her two grandsons ages 6 and 3 1/2 and will bring snaps of them for you to see in May! Elizabeth Bowley Phillips was at SBC for our 45th (one of three!) and is looking forward to a huge "turn-out" in May. Her two sons are in Seattle. It is joyous they are near as she lost her husband last year.

Pauline Womack Swan and George celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Aug. 9th with 4 children as party planners at their cottage on Higgins Lake, MI. They have put SBC #50 on their May calendar for a second celebration. Denise duPont Zapffe and Carl celebrated their 50th on May 22, 1987. Carl flew children and grands for a champagne supper and orchestra on a paddleboat on Sarasota Bay from 3 p.m. through sunset. Only one of their 8 couldn't come as he had just had a liver transplant but Denise is thankful he is well enough to go back to work now. Denise had a slight stroke in Nov. but feels fine now. She and Carl are expecting their 33rd grandchild in January! Come drive to SBC in May '88, Denise! Janice Weimer Shepherd and Walter and bachelor son Jim took off for England last August. When at home, Janie "sits" 3 grands and loves bridge golf, church and concerts. Isabelle Franke DeGraaf has son Bud and family in Omaha and daughter Jane and family in Spartanburg, SC. Isabelle is coming to our big one!

I write from the mountains of CO where we have come the last 33 summers. We love the fragrant pines, the peaks, the catching of the elusive trout, and rocking and reading (no TV and no telephone). Football season we are in Dallas — Sweet Briar on May 27, 1988. You all come! Please do!

Remember the words to one of the songs from our senior show: "Once long ago when the world was new and we were young and carefree. We wandered off to a mountaintop in a burst of intellectual curiosity." In May, nearly 49 years after that first arrival, 41 of us again gathered on that mountaintop with 17 husbands to celebrate the 4 years we spent together and the 45th anniversary of our graduation. Now in our 60s we are not young but mature (and handsome!). We remain enthusiastic, active, and some are in a period of our lives when we are relatively carefree once more. Now, in most instances, we are retired, with freedom to travel and to pursue interests of our own choosing. We've reared children and have grandchildren to adore and enjoy, for whom we are only occasionally responsible. It is my perception that as we have grown in years, we have grown in character and spirit. We had such a marvelous time — thanks to our class officers (Sally Schall Van Allen, Sudie Clark Hanger, and Si Walke Rogers) and their Reunion committee and to the detailed, caring arrangements of the college administration and most particularly of the alumnae office under Ann Morrison Reams's splendid direction. We were tremendously impressed by the thoughtfulness of the plans for our weekend of comfort and pleasure. Even the weather co-operated! After settling in our 4th floor rooms in the "new" Glass dormitory we adjourned to Helen McMahon's home, where we held our class meeting and picnic. To our immense satisfaction Eugie Burnett Affel agreed to serve as class president for the next 5 years, through our 50th. Si Walke Rogers, who has done such a superb job as fund agent for the past 5 years, agreed to continue! I, Polly Peyton Turner, think it will be a privilege to be in closer touch with all of you as class secretary and to work on plans for the 50th. After the picnic Dorothy Malone Yates' husband, Charlie, treated us to a showing of his slides of past Reunions. Throughout the weekend we perused the scrapbook, visited campus spots of interest (such as the art collection in the former refectory, the new admissions office in the remodeled staff dormitory behind Manson, the pleasantly, appropriately refurbished Sweet Briar House), talked (!!!), and enjoyed one another's company. The Saturday morning presentation ("Sweet Briar Today") brought us up to date and was followed by Alumnae Convocation with class reports and skits. Helen Sanford gave a masterly introduction to our perennial singing of "It's '42" and the gratifying announcement that the class had made a Reunion gift of $75,404 and furthermore that an astounding 89% of the class contributed. Congratulations to Si Walke Rogers, Betty Hanger Lippincott (Reunion Gift Chairman) and their committee! I won't try to describe all festivities, but we enjoyed a special treat Saturday afternoon when the fine college chaplain, Susan Lehman, gave an informal tea for us at her home (formerly the Lancaster's house). President Nenah Frye, clad in shorts, joined us as we sat on the back porch and lawn conversing and soaking up the view. Sunday after lunch in the garden at Sweet Briar House, we departed happy and hoping everyone will be able to come to the 50th!

The scrapbook contains lovely photographs and questionnaires from over 50 of us. Since much of the individual information has been reported in previous columns, I will not repeat that here. Instead, I'll summarize it in a letter to be sent to each of you soon. An informal (unaudited) tally of the questionnaires reveals that a great majority regard marriage/children/family as the most significant part of their lives. Most are married (32) but, sad to say, many have been widowed (16). We extend our deep sympathy to the most recent of these: to Eleanor Ringer Linn whose husband died in February '86, after suffering with Parkinson's for 15 years; to Eddie Syska Peltier whose husband died in May '86; to Alice Williams Mighell who lost her husband in November '86; and to Cynthia Abbot Dougherty on the death of her husband in December '86. Twenty-one professors were named as favorites; the leaders were Doctors Stockholm, Sanford, and Crawford. Leading the wide assortment of courses mentioned both as favorites and most meaningful were classical civ., history of music/music appreciation, and art history. Few of us dream of SBC, but several dreamt of having to take the exam in a course they forgot to attend (Gloria Sanderson Sartor). Of those replying to the weight question, 3 weigh the same, 8 weigh within 5 pounds of their college weight, and 30 weigh more. We have children ranging in number from 0 to 8 (Hauslein), with 3 being the most frequent number (23). Grandchildren vary in number from 0 to 13 (Engl), with 4 being the average (as of July '87). Interests, activities and talents mentioned most were church-connected followed by grandchildren, gardening/garden club, and travel. Many mentioned bridge, tennis, reading. A few spoke of sewing, needlework, knitting, golf, swimming. Nearly everyone did some sort of community service (hospital, Hospice, etc.). Betsy Gilmer Tremain put it well: she called it "normal sixties pursuits".

We came to Reunion from all directions: Bobbie Ripley Furniss from Arizona and Alice Sweney Weed from Minnesota came the greatest distance to what I believe was their 1st Reunion, not permitting their severe arthritis to deter them (although it does prevent Swede's participation in the sports she loves). She uses her talent for homemaking, as a hospital volunteer and a Republican Party worker. Bobbie finds traveling in their motor home most comfortable. Last fall the Furnisses used it to participate in an Elderhostel program. Daphne Withington Adams is also enthusiastic about Elderhostels. She attended one in Nova Scotia while taking her grandson to visit his father. Bobbie's daughter was married in Washington just before Reunion — ideal timing! However, tragically Bobbie was called away in the midst of Reunion because of a beloved niece's death. We do feel great sympathy, Bobbie. Another 1st time "Reuner", Betty Duffield Fajans lives close enough to 4 children to see them often and has built a home in Vermont large enough to accommodate all. From Texas came Helen Sanford and Janet Houston Davis '41, apparently for the 1st Reunion appearance of Janet and her former roommate Eleanor Ringer Linn. Janet says that organization is her greatest talent. She makes annual trips to Europe. Ringer not only indexes books but has a full-time volunteer job in charge of a resale shop. Those who brought their husbands with them to Reunion were Eugie Burnett Affel, Lucy Call Dabney, Eloise English Davies, Gege Moomaw Hall, Sudie Clark Hanger, Betty Hanger Lippincott, Chookie Groves Martin, Renie Mitchell Moore, Dot Myers Morehead, Ann Hauslein Potterfield, Ann Morrison Reams, Stoney Moore Rutherford, Dougie Woods Sprunt, Betsy Gilmer Tremain, Polly Peyton Turner, Sally Schall Van Allen, and Dorothy Malone Yates. Others present from north of Sweet Briar were Daphne Withington Adams, Di Greene Helfrich, Debbie Wood Davis (for her 2nd visit), Grace Bugg Muller-Thym. From farther west came Alice King Harrison, Vive Walker Montgomery, Shirley Hauseman Nordhem, Frannie Caldwell Harris, Dottie Hutchings Donley. From Florida came Jean Hedley Currie, Eddie Syska Peltier, Frannie Meek Rowe. Those from Virginia were Nancy Goldbarth Glaser, Laura Graves Howell, Si Walke Rogers, and Ann Bundy Lewis.

Florence Bagley Witt was unable to attend Reunion because she and Raymond returned that very day from a trip to China. Florence was honored in January by the Chattanooga Club as the winner of its Distinguished Service Award for '86. She was recognized for her many years of outstanding leadership in worthwhile community projects. The citation read: "Florence has exemplified throughout her life dependability, a concern for others, intelligence, integrity and willingness to work that is extraordinary in the community", and we are honored to have her as a class member! In San Diego Pat Brightbill Snyder has given up her business and works part-time while taking classes at City College, hoping to return to the medical field. She has entire responsibility for her ailing mother, but is sustained by her wonderful son who lives with her. Eugie Burnett Affel remains active in real estate, feeling lucky to have her 5 small grandchildren living nearby. Ann Bundy Lewis' husband is retired. She remains active in numerous volunteer capacities. I love her final remark: "I must have left my mind at SBC--haven't seen much of it since."

Lucy Call Dabney and Todd arrived at Reunion from Charlottesville where they had been looking after and chauffeuring daughter Susan's 3 youngsters. Lucy Case Wendelken continues all former activity with Epilepsy, Kansas, Wichita Guidance Center, and finds her talent for dealing with teenagers a far cry from college expectations for her. Betsy Chamberlain, now retired, tutors the illiterate, volunteers for Hospice and hikes and bikes in Marin Co., the vacation paradise where she lives. A beautiful photograph of Nancy Davis Reynold's entire family on the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary shows why she finds life good. Margie Troutman Harbin sent a similar picture of family. Nancy has worked for 25 years as a volunteer at the hospital information desk. Since John has retired they travel a lot, as do Eloise English Davies (her SBC roommate) and Tom. Eloise is writing a book. Betsy Gilmer Tremain is another writer, using her computer to write recollections of her father. Betsy says "Have retired husband. Will travel", and travel they do! 1986 was an SBC year with meetings at Williamsburg and SBC in the fall, in addition to numerous meetings and reunions plus the customary Tremain family beach outing, held this year at Kiawah, and a European trip this fall. Mimi Galloway Duncan also travels and has an aptitude for investing personal funds. Other retired travelers are Florence Gillem Pressly and husband, having taken a western jaunt and a Virgin Islands/Canal cruise. They divide time between Greenville, SC and Banner Elk, NC. Laura Graves Howell protests that artistically she is still a "dud" but lists her main talent as "probably listening", a rare and wonderful contribution. Laura! "Jack of all trades, master of none!" claims Di Greene Helfrich but adds, "I can wiggle my ears." She is an amateur radio operator, woodworker, and sings in the church choir. Our highly successful Class Reunion Gifts Chairman Betty Hanger Lippincott underlines Family. There are such radiant pictures of the reunion given at the Lippincott's' Jamestown home the summer of '86, attended by Helen Sanford, the Orrs (Elsie Diggs), Potterfields, Halls, Hangers, and Tre-mains! Among other activities Shirley Hauseman Nordhem and Alvin spend many weeks sailing Lake Michigan on their 36' Pearson cutter. "Factotum" is the listed occupation of Ann Hauslein Potterfield, but her interests include weaving and the establishment of a weaving studio, and of a food locker as well as assisting with the mentally retarded and much travel. Ann later reported in a note that their family wedding went off smoothly. Helen Ann Littleton Hauslein White '41 and Logan were present. Ann and Tom spent 2 August weeks in Scandinavia.

Jean Hedley Currie's aptitude lies in the direction of crafts and "just living". She likes to vacation in Kennebunkport, ME and when possible, in England. Dotty Hutchings Donley is the only one listing her aptitude as mechanical and architectural drafting. She finds it blissful being loved by "the best wee grandson". Another avid traveller is Rut Jacquot Tempest who, at Reunion time was in Istanbul en route to Vienna via the Black Sea and Danube. She is the 1st woman to be Director of the Scenic Hills Country Club, and is vice-president of their garden club. Eliot Jeffords Townsend and Harold enjoyed an Alaskan trip in '86, and daughter Molly was married in November '86. Alice King Harrison's knack is for "wasting time", but she plays Mah Jongg as well as bridge, and continues her interest in Girl Scouts. Libbie Lewis Lewis would love for a granddaughter to come to SBC for she has fond memories of her year. Another annual European visitor is Margaret Leonard Baker, ideally happy in her 2nd marriage which has brought her 3 step-great-grandchildren! Last year Frannie Meek Rowe took her 3 teenage grandchildren to England. While attending the Royal Norfolk Horseshow and endeavoring to make a right-hand turn from the left lane, Frannie nearly ran down the Queen! Frannie brought an impressive portfolio of her paintings for our Reunion enjoyment. Other diverse aptitudes revealed are: Carolyn Monteith Clarke: working with people; Gege Moomaw Hall: Colonial Dames, Meals on Wheels; Marion Mundy Young: DAR and Historic Preservation; Jeanne Sawyer Stanford: antiques and refinishing furniture; Diana Stout Allen: being a good grandmother; Vive Walker Montgomery: making desserts; Eddie Syska Peltier: smiling. I love that and the fact that en route to Reunion, Eddie wrote: "My life has seemed wonderful and exciting to me, and I feel very lucky to have lived it." Despite chronic back pain which prevents her coming to Reunions Jane Taylor Lowell leads an amazingly active life, much of it devoted to helping others. Mary Ellen Thompson Ela is very happy in her new marriage. The Elas live in a new condo overlooking the water in Madison. She sent greetings to our 45th, hoping to attend the 50th, as did our former president Margaret Preston Moore who had planned for years on being part of the 45th but was prevented by circumstances. Si Walke Rogers delights in her 6 highly intelligent grandsons and the fun they have together, as does Frances Caldwell Harris in her four. Frances' activities and interests are varied: nursing home volunteer, lap swimming, travel, prayer group and religious endeavors as well as ballet, opera, and art museums. The Harris vacation at Naples, FL, and in the NC mountains. Now that her sister has a home at Amelia Island, I hope our paths will cross often. At Reunion our president Sally Schall Van Allen was rejoicing in the arrival in Charlotte of a baby brother for her namesake granddaughter. Sally is an ardent UNC basketball fan (me, too!) Finally here's a quotation from our new president, Eugenia Burnett Affel, who remains active in real estate and has the good fortune to have her 5 small grandchildren living nearby: "There never seems to be time to do everything I'd like!" Most of us agree. Just the same, please do make time to send your news before summer. Our class notes always have to be in the Alumnae Office in July Think 45th reunion in 1991! Mark your calendars now!

Thank you all for many more cards this year. My eyes are red from straining to read all your beautiful, individualized hieroglyphics. (Penmanship!?) It is such fun to peruse all your cards: a day of nostalgia.

Some cards that arrived late last year brought news from Ariana "Arie" Jones Wittke and Charlotte Dinsmoor Olin of trips to Europe. And from Adelaide "Pinkie" Butler O'Neal, retirement from the restaurant business. She is busy with volunteer work. Also, sad news from Martha "Twitter" Titterington Leonard of the death of her husband Byron, and of her illness. We send our best and sincerely hope the rest of '87 brings health and contentment. After 16 years, Bea Dingwell Loos is retiring as Dir. of Primary Day School: she and her husband are packing bags to visit family and friends. Hope we see them. She and Catherine Smart Grier still lunch together each year.

As Pres. of the Va. State Golf Ass., Ann Farr Lewis attends tournaments all over the state. She and husband Bob most enjoyed a golfing trip to Scotland with their grandson, John Good to hear from Sarah "Sally" Bubb Bruch after so long. Wonder if she still has her silver ring? She and John are busy in their insurance business, and have 3 successful children and 2 grandchildren. Mary Holland Hardin writes she has returned to the eastern shore of VA following the death of her husband. She just visited with Julia Jerman Neal, an SBC roommate, and family. Her quote, "She (Julia) looked...so young!"

From Caroline "Rudy" Rudolph Sellers, an enthusiastic note about Montgomery, Alabama's Shakespeare Theater. The brochure is fascinating and she recommends "we all" come down. Rudy and Bertha Lee Toole still keep in touch. Bertha Lee and Bill and extended family of 20 will have their annual beach trip in August. (Yes, that is 20!) It's been travel from Alaska to Florida for Margo Sibley Lewis and husband, sightseeing and golfing. Jean Love Albert is already thinking "Reunion '91", making plans. She and Jack missed a long-awaited visit from Lucy "Cholly" Jones Bendall and Bo, as they were in VA Beach for their daughter's wedding. Cholly did see Polly Pollard Kline

Noma "Candy" Greene Manbeck, now fluent in Spanish after a year's Span. course in 8 weeks at Yale, is spending this summer's energy among 4 grandchildren. They had a lovely holiday with Rosemary "Rosie" Ashby Dashiell and Dave, and a brief visit with Mary "Polly" Vandeventer Saunders and Bob who were en route to No. Ireland. Vacationing in Bermuda was a "delightful interlude" for Elizabeth "Betsy" Gurley Hewson and Tom. Betsy saw Anne Hill Edward briefly in June. Anne was on her way to Nantucket. Leila Fellner Lenagh is off to Portland, OR for the annual Int Calligraphy Conference. This after her son received his PH.D. from Penn State and daughter her M.A. from Johns Hopkins. She is looking forward to a visit from her Holland contingent, bringing 2 grandsons. From Betsy Bromar Townsend, an announcement of her daughter, Audrey's ('78) wedding this September

"Around the world..." came alive for Julia Bristow on a trip to Russia and China. At home in Norfolk she busies herself as a board member of the Friends of the Library of the College of William and Mary, where she graduated. In Connecticut, Betty Ann "Bass" Norris is still involved in real estate. She writes her 3 children are all happily settled away from home, leaving her with a dog and cat. Helen Murchison Lane boasts a lovely new daughter-in-law, and a new granddaughter. The Lanes have journeyed from the South Seas to the pyramids of Egypt. As a straight-A student, Joan Berend Morse Gordon is finishing her work for her B.A. from the U. of Pittsburgh, 42 years after her class. Congratulations! She is also completing and supervising a book written by her late husband, Donald Gordon, Expressionism, Art and Idea, coming out in Nov. Daughter Ann is photo editing in Boston, and son "Fuzzbee" Morse composed and performed scores of two recent Hollywood films. News of another published work comes from Ellen Robbins Red, Early Days on the Bayou — a story gleaned from letters written by her great-grandfather from Texas in 1838. It is in the SBC library. Ellen was visited by Elizabeth "Libba" Fruit Metzenthin and John, who highly recommend her book. "Libba" saw her SBC roommate, Mary Moss Henderson in Shreveport

From Edwina "Wheats" Young Call, "remodeling on the James R. is 'fini' after 2 years, in time for a furnace blow-back on all the new white walls and upholstery!" Oh well, we can all come help those "River Rats" "Wheats" also sees Pat Groesbeck Gordon and Ralph on their easterly treks. From the Heartland area of Kansas we heard from Katherine "Tassie" Brooks Augustine who is much involved with her church and is Kansas Pres. of Colonial Dames. Mildred Reed Hall and husband Edward recently returned from Europe, where he received an honorary doctorate from the U. of Louvain for his work on intercultural communication. They are working on their next project, a book about Americans, Germans, and the French.

My turn! Ken retired in March: life is just as it should be after a 40-year interlude of children, careers, clubs, volunteer work, etc., just the 2 of us. In June we chartered a trawler on the Chesapeake and took our daughter, Coni '75, and her family on a cruise. Next time we will check SBC alumnae addresses before we leave! We stopped to see Elizabeth "Betts" McKeown Scott and Don in Baltimore for a lovely brunch. Funny how we all took the same! Then we had a week visit from Cami '71, our oldest daughter and her family. On 10/1 we leave for 4 weeks in Eng., Scotland, Wales to be one of those "brave souls" (to quote "Wheats") who drive and B and B! Then on to Florida Keys with family and friends, ending with two weeks in St. Croix. Home in time for Christmas in NJ with all our family. So, Happy Holidays to you all. Don't forget — Reunion in 1991!

The Class of '50 is the most enthusiastic group I know. Your cards, read and reread, have given tremendous pleasure. Thank you! Now on with the news

Bill Bailey Fritzinger's grandchildren are doing well. You remember last year her daughter, Laurie Muldoon, brought 4 babies: Tommy, Brian, Caitlyn and Caroline home to Matthew and Michael, then ages 5 and 2. Dorothy Barney Hoover's family has grown. Daughter Dee had her 3rd child in June, naming her Kara Elizabeth. Hap and Anne expected their 2nd child in August. Peter and Cathy have Caitlin, 1½ years. Single daughter Holly is in Tuscon working as assistant manager of the dining room at La Paloma, a Westin Hotel. Dotty and Jack were there in Feb. and were most enthusiastic about their visit. Ann Belser Asher reports her chief time consumers are painting, golf, gardening, reading. She continues as trustee of the Nature Conservancy and the Hospital for Sick Children Foundation but does less and less. Husband Norman is retired; they spent the summer on Nantucket, the fall in Kenya and plan to winter in Antigua and visit England in the spring. Her children are flourishing on their own. Two children are married, 2 still eligible; when she wrote the grandchild count was 3 7/9

Beverly Benson Seamans had a banner year. Grandson Daniel Benson Seamans was born on Valentine's Day. Beverly did a sculpture for the American Cathedral in Paris which was dedicated April 6, '86. The statue, of a 6-year-old boy feeding doves, was titled: A Little Child Shall Lead Them. Bev and husband Danny have travelled a lot and enjoy sailing. Bev keeps busy with her sculpture. Danny handles all the business details for her. Mary Waller Berkeley Fergusson's daughter Molly married in Nov. Molly and husband live in NYC. She commutes to Stamford, CT where she works for General Electric. Sally Ann Bianchi Foster reports that daughter Kate and husband of 1 year (Phil Heinrich) are Peace Corps volunteers in Swaziland, Africa. Kate works in the land development office and Phil in the treasury department, trying to initiate computer controls for the country. Son Andy is a lawyer in Philadelphia doing litigation and enjoying the mental acrobatics of a 1st year lawyer while also managing the softball team, playing golf and enjoying the fair sex. Sally finds it easy to fill retirement days. "Now I read the newspaper the day it arrives, I bake bread (the 3-day rising kind), play tennis at least 2 days a week, sew and knit...I pamper my mother and mother-in-law, and why not? They are 85 and 87 respectively. The bestest of all times is spent with 2 1/2-year-old Sarah whom I adore"

Edith Brooke Robertson has moved back to Norfolk, VA having spent last year at the Miller School near Charlottesville, VA. Frindy Burden Gronen went last summer with 3 children to Lake Michigan in northeastern WI. Her 2 sons live with her. They enjoy a new big screen porch and wooden deck overlooking the back yard in Dubuque, IA. Frindy's #1 hobby is writing letters; she would love to hear from SB classmates. Bookie Coryell Feldman enjoyed a "super year". One highlight was a visit from Mary Dame Stubbs Broad and Doug — they caught up on the last 38 years! Bookie spent 2½ months last winter in the South Pacific visiting Fiji, New Zealand, Australia, and Tahiti. She said it was a once-in-a-lifetime trip and enjoyed every minute of it. A new grandson, Riley John Gough, was welcomed to the family. Grandchild total is 4: 2 boys and 2 girls

Louise Curry Horine and husband Wallace vacationed last summer for 2 weeks in Cola Ratjada, Mallorca with friends. Last winter they saw Elaine Adams Harrison while in FL and report that she has changed very little. B. G. Elmore Gilleland and Guy vacationed in British Columbia and Alberta for 2 weeks of relief from the FL summer heat. B.G., Guy and lawyer daughter Lynn spent an evening with Nancy Storey White and Ed B.G. also saw Bonnie Loyd Crane; they shared memories of their work at the Harvard Business School following graduation from SBC. Barbara Favill Marshall expected her 1st grandchild in October. Barbara and Irl enjoy lots of travelling. Barbara helps with 3 aging parents. Ann Green Nicholson Pangels married Heinz Pangels January 2. Present at the wedding were Ann's 4 daughters: Candy, Kathy, Pattie and Susie, grandson J.J. and Heinz's son Chris, daughter Erika, their spouses and 5 children. Trish Denning Hunt and husband attended the wedding. Ann imports West German hand-glazed ceramic giftware. Heinz is director of engineering at Pfaltz Groff Patricia Halloran Salvadori's daughter Sharon graduated from Bard Col. in June. Margaret works as a legislative assistant for a Cook County Commissioner and is pursuing a PH.D in Medieval English at Loyola U. Robert attends law school. Pat is chairman of a Woman's Club (Arlington Heights, IL) project to fund a program to help senior citizens remain at home with teenage help. Pat also is teaching a Mexican woman to read. She is financial advisor to 1 client at present. Henrietta Hill Hubbard has 5 grandchildren. She continues on the Board of the National Mental Health Association and the Alabama Association. Her latest endeavor is to teach illiterate adults to read, using the Laubach method. Henrietta would be interested to know if any classmates are teaching adults to read. Let us hear from you on this! Henrietta and Charles made their 2nd trip last summer to East Africa, Kenya and Tanzania. Betty Hutchens McCaleb and John take mini-vacations as his construction business doesn't allow time for lengthy trips. On a recent trip to see the Ramses Exhibit in Memphis they ran into Ellen Ramsey '49, serving as a volunteer tour guide. Despite the 38-year lapse they remembered each other

Lucy Kreusler Carey and Earl visited Poland in August. This was a return for Lucy to her "roots" after 40 years! I hope another article will be forthcoming! Lucy taught Earl Polish before they set off. Son David is in law school at the U. of Baltimore and has a part-time job as a law clerk in the Public Defenders Office. Stokie Kyle Kimpel wrote in June while sitting on the floor in her daughter's apartment in Tampa, FL waiting for the movers to deliver furniture. Stokie's daughter and air force pilot husband were due to present Stokie's 1st grandchild in August. Stokie's 2nd grandchild was expected in September, the proud parents, son Tom and wife. Last May Stokie and Helmut visited oldest son Gordon who is on remote assignment in Iceland. Stokie loved the visit, found a whole new world to photograph. Stokie and Helmut enjoy living in New Mexico with its ideal climate

Margaret Lewis Furse retired after 15 years teaching at U. of TX. She and Austen travel a lot. Margaret writes academic books. Soon the Scholar's Press is coming out with her book on the American philosopher, William Ernest Hocking. Margaret has 1 granddaughter in NYC and 3 children scattered in Houston, Charlottesville and San Francisco. Bonnie Loyd Crane divides her time between Boston and FL as her husband, Dave, is working in Tampa and Bonnie's art gallery is in Boston. This divided schedule offers the opportunity to see lots of classmates. In FL she has seen Nell Greening Keen and B.G. Elmore Gilleland and at Tampa's Gasparilla Pirate Celebration she ran into Fran Cone Kirkpatrick. Nancy Day McCammond visited Bonnie at her gallery. Virginia Mann York lives the bohemian life on Long Island, at Water Mill with husband, Albert, a low-profile, representational painter. Ginny's writing project is "The Aquarius Thesis", a "myth of creation". Son

Jonathan Caldwell and wife Amy and children Adam, 10, and Elizabeth, 7, "uphold the counter-culture" in New Mexico. Daughter Kristin Caldwell Shad is the mother of 6-month-old Genevieve

Patricia Owens Purvis reports that Lisanne '78 married last summer. Pat and Tom vacationed for 2 weeks in England; Pat stayed on 2 more weeks to "just drive around and generally wallow in all the splendid past". Ginny Page Love and Bill have a combined family of 5 children and 12 grandchildren. They love CA and traveling. Anne Peyton Cooper's 2 children, Nancy and Jim, are at Kenyon Col. Following Nancy's graduation from Madeira School Anne, Jim and Nancy visited Jim at Oxford where he spent his junior year. Ann Preston Vick lives in Deland, FL but contemplates a move back to VA. Her 15-year-old twin sons are at school in VA, 1 at Woodberry Forest and 1 at Virginia Episcopal School in Lynchburg. Both are doing exceptionally well academically and otherwise. Ann and sons spent last Christmas at Treasure Cay in the Bahamas visiting her sister

Mary Virginia Roberts Mellow and family celebrated the 60th birthday of their family home in St. Louis, MO in which 4 generations of husband Jim's family have lived. Mary and Jim have 4 children; 2 are married. They live in Rochester, NY, Atlanta, GA, NYC and Honolulu. Jim and Mary Virginia escape St. Louis summer heat by going to their cottage on Crystal Lake, MI. Betsy Sawyer Hodges received her Associate Degree in Nursing in '79 and has worked in the hospital at Tequesta, FL ever since. She works on the Telemetry Unit 2 12-hour shifts a week. She loves it. Allen retired from United Technologies 1/87; Betsy says they are very busy. They both take courses at their Episcopal Diocesan School for Ministry. Their 5 children have blessed them with 9 grandchildren, 3 boys and 6 girls ages 14 to 3 months

Lola Steele Shepherd finds life in Coronado, CA great because it gives her the opportunity of seeing pale-faced easterners in the winter. Among them last winter were Betty Todd Landen and Jake, who stayed in Rancho Santa Fe for a 6-week visit to daughter Margie and husband, a marine at Camp Pendleton. Lola, Judy Campbell Campbell and Betty lunched with Diane Dietrich Shepherd and Betty's daughter, Margie. Lola loves winter trips to Badger Pass in Yosemite to ski — "a heaven on earth". Lola flew to VA for the Gold Cup and a reunion with her 2 daughters, 1 from Concord, MA and 1 from Richmond. Lola also enjoyed being with Edith Brooke Robertson while in VA. Mary Dame Stubbs Broad, finding time on her hands following the deaths of her parents, thinks she may have taken on 1 group too many. Recently she has been learning topiary. She is also busy arranging a garden tour for April. She arranged an all-female church service for Father's Day: the gift of the church women to the men.

Nancy Storey White wrote me in Spanish from San Miguel de Allende, Mexico where she and Ed spent 6 weeks last summer studying Spanish. Nancy's new grandson, Michael Edward Sawyer, is the 3rd child of her daughter, Marian. Nancy and Ed have 4 grandchildren. Betty Todd Landen spent the summer bouncing a bubbly new granddaughter, her 1st. If she follows in the footsteps of her mother, Libby Krone '81, her grandmother Betty and her great-grandmother Ruth Todd '22, she will be a member of the SBC class of 2006! Peter Thompson Baker is still working for Merrill Lynch in Pompano Beach, FL as assistant vice president and would love to see anyone from SBC in the area. Jane Tomlinson Myhre has been a widow over a year now and has inherited 8 of her husband's grandchildren and has 2 "for whom I take partial credit". Jane lives in Oslo, Norway.

Sally Webb Lent had a great time on a trip to the Netherlands the summer of '86 when she accompanied her daughter and son-in-law, who led a student exchange group of 20 from 2 high schools in San Francisco. Sally continues her public school teaching in Hyattsville, MD. She is pleased that her nephew Bill Brown and wife and baby live nearby. Mim Wyse Linsky has retired after 16 years as advertising manager of K Mart store in Fitchburg, MA. She looks forward to time for travel and recreation. Daughter Faith, 33, is assistant director of Clark Fund at Clark U. in Worcester, MA. Ned, 29, does Inventory Control at NEC in Baxbarough, MA. Jim, 25, is a news cameraman and editor at channel 9 in Manchester, NH. Dan, 23, married, lives in Vero Beach, FL and sells Canon and Sharp copiers.

Thanks again for writing. Keep in touch!

Nice to hear from Harriette "Lindy" Lineberger Steele. Her 3 sons, Pat, 24, John, 26, and Will, 28, are respectively at the U. of GA, Cleveland Institute of Art, and working for McDonnell Douglas in CA. Lindy is active in church volunteer work. Barbara Ballard Wommack's daughter was in Betty Gene Orr Atkinson's daughter's wedding. She worked for Sen. John Tower in Washington and is a loan officer in Houston. Her brother works in the family lumber business. Barbara enjoyed seeing SBCers at the Natchez Pilgrimage. Also heard from after a long time was Page Croyder Bailey who has been in El Paso for 26 years, teaching for 17. Her boys are 21 and 17, and daughter, Katherine Page, is 13.

Clare Tretter and Jerry Rosegger have 4 children — 2 boys, 2 girls — all married. A year ago the Roseggers travelled to London, Innsbruck (where Jerry lectured at the Univ.), San Mateo, Italy, then to their lodge near Vienna. She also spent 10 days in East Germany, which she found interesting, but sad. Marilynn Clark Leathers is a director and supplier on the international board of the Hotel Sales and Marketing Assoc., from which she received the Certified Sales Executive designation. After her years at SBC, she was a PBK graduate from the U. of Michigan. Jean Gillespie Walker underwent successful lung surgery last year with good recovery and prognosis. They have been in their remodeled double townhouse for a year, but spend a lot of time at Sea Island.

Lynn Carlton McCaffree had sudden serious and successful kidney surgery which caused her to miss daughter, Debbie's, wedding. Lynn practically commuted from D.C. to Baton Rouge last year dealing with her mother's poor health. Betsy and submariner husband are in CT while Debbie and Jack are nearby in Fairfax, VA. Merrill Underwood and Paul Barringer keep homes in Weldon, NC, and Hilton Head, but spend more time at the latter since their older daughter lives there. The younger is in NYC; their son works for them in W.Va. Jeanne Stoddart Barends sent a very nice family picture. She looks terrific! Son is in sports management in CA after a Masters from U. Mass. and Amy lives with them; she works in preschool day care and strings tennis rackets as a sideline. The Barends cruised in the Caribbean and the Orinoco River with Ellie Vorys and George Matchneer last winter. George, retired, is a full time photographer while taking courses Sissy Morris Long and Bill also visited the Barends. Sissy, Peaches Davis Roane, Anne White Connell, Betty Gene Orr Atkinson keep close touch and track of each other's grandchildren.

Cindy Sinclair Rutherford is associate principal of Heights High School in Wichita and enjoys the responsibilities. Bill had a busy year with the huge Gershwin Festival. He has little time left for his sculpture. Young Bill is in major market radio in San Diego and Doug does the "rush hour" on KBAM in Montgomery. The Rutherfords saw Bev Smith Bragg while visiting Doug. The Braggs visited Jan O'Neal and Pres Gould in Santa Barbara on a trip west; the Goulds returned the visit later in Ala. The Braggs vacationed on Mackinac Island. Bev also went on a volunteer mission trip to the Dominican Republic where the group completed work on a church/clinic/hurricane shelter. Jo Nelson Booze has been with the Episcopal Social Ministries for 8 years as Director of the Job Readiness Program for the street men who live in the emergency shelter — very satisfying work. She's also a birdwatcher and gardener. Daughter, Jody, does genetic engineering with plants at VPI and son, Jay, is relief captain on tugboats out of Annapolis. Both are married.

Barbara Chase Webber and Temple have bought a house next door to Vaughan Inge Morrisette and Taylor at Point Clear, AL. The latter had a busy year with the weddings of all 4 children! Vaughan has been elected to the board of trustees of W & L. She is also chairman of the Board of the Mobile Infirmary Medical Center and on the board of the National Congress of Hospital Governing Boards. We're proud to know her! Doreen Booth Hamilton works for the Nature Conservancy. She had lunch with Mary Hill Noble Caperton and Helen Smith Lewis in Charlottesville — they all decided they looked great! She and George were surprised while celebrating their 32nd anniversary at a French restaurant to be seated next to Peggy Jones and Guy Steuart celebrating theirs!

Sally Bumbaugh visited Joan Potter and Henry Bickel this year for the 1st time since SBC. Isn't it neat the way we can pick up where we left off? The Bickels are taking a big step this year — moving to a new house from the one Joan has lived in all her life. Ann May Via and Harold bought a farm near Charlottesville where they spend half their time (with cattle, etc.). Their daughter graduated from SBC in '87. Ruth Sanders and Norm Smith spend a couple of weekends a month in FL to enjoy the weather. Son Ed has opened his dental practice in Randolph, NJ. Liz Helm Lawson had a wonderful trip to Italy with her church choir; they sang in St. Peter's and gave an outdoor concert for the Pope. Joy Parker and Charles Rutledge enjoy traveling the globe. Last year's trip included Seattle, Vancouver, 3 places in Alaska, all the Japanese Islands, Hong Kong and Honolulu! She saw Sissy Morris Long, Jean Gillespie Walker, and Meri Hodges Major this year. Meri took her first trip to England last May. She now owns the whole Major property and spent the rest of the year replacing her furnace, roof, oil tank, and septic system and having a joint in her thumb replaced. The cast was on for 9 painful weeks, some of which she and daughter, Louise, spent in the NC mountains with Joy and Charles Eldredge. And, of course, Belle Air was open for Garden Week. Mary Hill Noble and Bernard Caperton went to San Francisco last fall and to a 'Bed and Breakfast' meeting in Nashville. Daughter, Emily, has returned to U.Va. after a year in Boston. Son Doug is in a doctoral program in folklore at the U. of Penn.

We've had a different type of year than we're used to. An awful lot of time and anguish over various real estate problems has been one of the main things. I've continued to enjoy my nature walks as resident naturalist for Middleton Place, but that and my art season were curtailed when I broke my back in early March in a freak accident with a run-away horse and carriage which overturned. After a spring in bed with lots of help from relatives and friends, I've recuperated almost fully. We spent a nice week with Atlanta friends on a boat in the Bahamas and I've just returned from an unexpected wonderful trip to Sydney and Japan, where I met Bill who was on business around the world. We were wonderfully treated in Japan and had a sentimental day in Yokohama where I found our house from 40 years ago! I was also reminded of Mimi Hitchcock Davis — we met as the only Americans taking the College Boards in 1950 and both heading for SBC! Kyoko Ohara Asakawa and her husband came down from Tokyo to take us out for a lovely dinner and had their driver help us locate the old neighborhood. Kyoko was at SBC with the class of '62 and spent a summer with us 25 years ago. Everything has grown so and is so crowded, westernized, and expensive, that it's hard to recognize, but we had a super visit. All my Japanese phrases came back and I got many compliments on my pronunciation.

Sitting at my typewriter in the sweltering August heat/humidity, I thank all of you who took the time from your busy schedules to write a line or two.

Four faithful correspondents from TX caught me up on news from there. Betty Rae Sivals Davis wrote that life in Midland remains busy. Her son was on the U.S. Shooting Team; when he competed in the USSR in the spring, the whole Davis family went to Russia to cheer him on, then stayed for a tour. B. Rae added some unusual bird species to her life list while there. She has taken up golf, teaches a Bethel Bible course and raises goats! June Neighbors Morton, Fort Worth, recently had dinner with Peggy Arduser Gates (Tulsa, OK) and Carolyn Holmes Dalphon (Dallas); they caught up on each other's families and activities and made plans to return for our 30th Reunion. A newsy card from Sue Rosson Tejml told of her daughter, Tamara's, admission to the Texas bar as a trial lawyer, following in Sue's footsteps. Son Emil is in his senior year at Texas A & M. Sue (Corpus Christi) served on the Texas Supreme Court Commission for Child Support last year; husband Emil manages the Celanese Chemical plant Windy Winter Cocke's 2 sons are in Philadelphia and Boston, giving her good reason to visit there. Daughter Martha enters Stanford as a freshman this fall.

Claire Cannon Christopher's card from Winston-Salem, NC, was brief and to the point: "'Y'all come—reunion '88! SBC or bust! Rah! Rah!'" Be sure to answer Claire and Polly Benson Brown's plea for the Class Reunion Gift; they are co-chairing the committee. Judy Graham Lewis and Jim now call Raleigh, NC, home. Judy works as a nurse for an internist; Jim is on the Bishop's staff as Director of Christian Social Ministries. Judy has enjoyed seeing Margery Scott Johnson '57. Sandra Elder Harper and Tom attended Tom's 30th Dartmouth reunion this spring and had a grand time; Sandra is sure that ours will be equally enjoyable. She divides her time between Burlington, NC, and Cape Cod Jack and Ann McCullough Floyd plan to move from Columbia, SC, to Wachesa Plantation at Murrell's Inlet in Myrtle Beach, SC. Jack has been named manager of the new Merrill-Lynch office there. The Floyds' son, Clark, married 12/86, lives in Columbia and works for Colonial Life; daughter Dinja is in Columbia working for NCR.

Several of our VA classmates wrote interesting notes. Poogie Wyatt Shields is educational coordinator and a member of the adolescent treatment team at Mountain Wood, a center for treatment of alcoholism and all forms of chemical dependency. Poogie still lives at the foot of a mountain near Charlottesville. Son Wyatt will be a freshman at U.Va. this fall. Mary Ellen Samples Edmonds lives in Franklin, where Frank is manager of converter sales for Union Camp Corp.; son Frank, Jr., is a freshman at U.Va and Rice is a junior at Woodberry Forest. Cece Dickson Banner is remodeling a house outside Leesburg, in stages. She continues as an educational consultant, working mostly with independent schools. Son Larry, an '87 graduate of Stanford, will teach at Xian University in China this year; if any of our classmates want to contact him, they should call CeCe. Joan Nelson Bargamin, Richmond, has developed an interest in genealogy; while in England last winter, during a month's tour of Europe, she discovered that Lord Horatio Nelson's brother was her great-great-grandfather. The Bargamins plan to travel in Mexico this fall. Son Paul is working simultaneously on his M.A. and Ph.D at William and Mary, and their other son, a U.Va. graduate, is working in Baltimore. Joan and Louise Dunham Williams see each other often. During the Lynchburg Garden Day Tour this year, Betty Phillips Sanford's house was open.

Marian Martin Mealing, Atlanta, graduated from Georgia State U. in August as a school psychologist and is planning her daughter Mary Hamilton Bell's October wedding. Mary is an '86 graduate of Duke Carter and Nancy Hawbaker Gilbert's sons both work in Chicago for Motorola. John graduated in '86 from VA Tech, in electrical engineering and Steve, from Carnegie Mellon in May '87, with honors in electrical engineering and computer design. Carter, Curator of Fishes at the Florida State Museum of the U. of FL, Gainesville, got a grant to visit natural history museums in Paris, Vienna and London this spring. Although Lee Cooper Van De Velde lives in Philadelphia, she has bought a "dance hall" on Chesapeake Bay which she is slowly restoring. When Penny Meighan Martin and Lynn Prior Harrington visited her recently, she put them to work painting the bottom of a boat and planting SBC bulbs. Coopie said, "Warning! Come to visit but be prepared to work!" Jean Lindsay De Streel and Quentin have moved into a smaller house in Easton, PA. They like to hike with their Gordon Setter puppy and look forward to lots of snow this winter for cross-country skiing. Their daughter Margaret (Hamilton '89) is spending her junior year in Paris and Giles is a senior at Blair Academy.

A favorable review appeared recently in the New York Times about Mimi Garrard's Dance Theater presentation of "Exchange", a witty dance satire about Wall Street. Mimi's studio is at 155 Wooster St. in New York City. Ruth Mackie Gabay taught 7th grade math last year in Mendham, NJ; she plans to add computers, Logo and Basic, to the curriculum this year. Son Mark, a Lt. j.g. in the navy, is stationed in Charleston, SC; daughter Allison, a Davidson graduate, is in Hartford, CT, with the Travellers' Young John is studying to be an auto mechanic. Ruth plans to attend Reunion in May. Bob and Ruth Frame Salzberg live active lives in West Hartford, CT. They attend balloon rallies and Ruth finally realized her dream of a night flight. Next year Ruth will publish a children's story as well as a series. Bob participates in drag races with his Mopar convertible Son Tom, in Buffalo, NY, works for Otis Elevator; daughter Anne takes a double major in English and P.R. at Boston U. From Wellesley, MA, Adele Scott Caruthers wrote that she is still at Brigham and Women's Hospital as an occupational therapist. Son Bruce will enter Berkely School of Music in Boston this fall after two weeks of touring in the British Isles this summer; Susanna, 19, works in Boston.

I had a wonderful conversation one bleak January afternoon with Lynn Prior Harrington. She called to tell me many tidbits about classmates and their children. Lynn is a partner in her own investment counselling firm, Rieger-Robinson-Harrington, in NYC. Daughter Dana is in Atlanta with Banker's Trust; Sarah is a student at St. Lawrence College. Prior to Christmas she had a wonderful reunion with Caroline Sauls Shaw, Claire Cannon Christopher, Eleanor St. Clair Thorp, Eleanor Humphrey Schnabel, Lee Cooper Van De Velde, and Penny Meighan Martin. She gleaned lots of news: Sara Thorp is at SBC and Ridgley Thorp is with Chemical Bank; Margaret Campbell, daughter of Mary Johnson Campbell, is with Irving Trust in NYC; and Sarah Coughlin, Betsy Worrell Gallagher's daughter, is with Gray Advertising. Claire Christopher's children are at U.Va. and Caroline Shaw's son, Alex, graduated from Avon Old Farms and will attend W & L this fall. Lynn went to Natchez, MS, to visit Ruth Ellen Green Calhoun '57 in her lovely antebellum home. She attended a lecture series, sponsored by the L. O. Crosby, Jr. Foundation, on Natchez before 1830. It was a great SB gathering: Lee Wood Audhuy, who lives in France, was one of the speakers; her mother, Letha Morris Wood '32, also attended; Windy Winter Cocke came and, of course, Lynn Crosby Gammill, from Hattiesburg, was there representing the family for the Foundation.

Mary Lane Bryan Sullivan and John had interesting visitors this year in Cleveland—Julia McCullough Shivers and son Olin visited in June from Atlanta and later in the summer Alice Morris Gaskel ('59) and her daughter Lucy came to stay from Cornwall (England). Mary Lane and John have a granddaughter, Caroline Elizabeth Sullivan, born 6/87, who lives near her great-grandparents Wright and Ellen Newell Bryan ('26) in Clemson, SC. Ethel Ogden Burwell still does Admissions and Student Recruitment for University Liggett School in Grosse Pointe, MI. Armistead, Jr. is a junior there and daughters Ethel ('82) and Lisa ('84) both live and work in Washington, D.C. She and Armistead, Sr. plan a trip to Europe next year to celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary. Through other sources, I learned that Ethel, who is a Sustaining Member of the Junior League of Detroit, received the John F. Kennedy Award for Humanitarianism and Excellence from the Co-Ette club, a Detroit organization. She and the League president received this honor for their work on the 3rd annual Metropolitan Detroit Teen conference, an inter-racial convocation.

Members of the class will be saddened by two untimely deaths. Alice Eller Patterson, her mother and her son were all killed in a tragic house fire in Winston-Salem, NC, on New Year's Day. "Tootie" Williams, husband of Betsy McCutchen Williams, died of a heart attack in January. Our sympathy goes to their families.

The Kuntzes had a busy year too. I have just returned from two weeks in Northern Michigan at my mother's (Martha McBroom Shipman '31) cottage at Columbus Beach Club on Burt Lake. Last October, Eddie and I sneaked away for 10 days to Sea Island, GA—a much needed change. In February, my sister-in-law and I flew to London, spending 6 days there and 2 days driving in the Cotswolds. I am planning another trip to London in November with our youngest daughter, Anne. In April I had a marvelous visit with Hank and Eleanor Humphrey Schnabel. I was in Boston with the garden club for the Museum of Fine Arts' "Art in Bloom" exhibit. Hank braved an April snowstorm of 10" to pick me up and take me back for dinner at their charming home in Hingham. Hump is doing secretarial work in Boston and Hank is with Talbot's. Older daughter Ellie graduated from SBC; Liza is at Bennington. We had a grand visit and talked up a storm. Martha Kuntz Schenck and Don bought a condominium in Alexandria, VA, last fall so I went to help them settle in; Martha is office manager for John Adams and Assoc., a small P.R. firm in Washington and also does some account work. Her husband travels extensively for the State Dept. in diplomatic security. Lee Kuntz Eckerman and Bob live in Clarksville, TN, where Lee works for the district attorney's office handling child support cases and Bob is with the State Patrol. I saw them in MI when they visited Bob's family at their summer home on Grand Traverse Bay. Anne moved from Raleigh, NC, last fall, now lives at home and works as supervisor for the toddler nursery at a local YMCA day care center. She also does some D.J. work at a nightclub in Dayton. I am very involved in St. Paul's Episcopal Church serving as Clerk of the Vestry and as a member of the choir, the Worship and Arts Comm. and the Altar Guild. I attended Diocesan Convention last fall and am a delegate again this year. I co-chaired our garden club flower show in the spring and head a committee on historic gardens for a GCA project this fall; I will attend a regional GCA meeting in Cleveland in October. This is my last year working for Carillon Park; I want to devote more time to

P.R. free-lancing. My other commitment is serving as treasurer for Women in Communication, Inc. (WICI). I try to find time to play a little tennis, do needlepoint and knitting and read.

Please, please, please plan to attend Reunion, May 27-30, '88! Let's make it the best one ever; it will be if 'y'all come!"

I've been back to SBC several times but our 25th Reunion was most special. Forty-five of us made the trip to Paradise and were all pleased to see each other and SBC today. We missed those of you unable to come Puddin Newbury brought her husband of two weeks and Adele Vogel and I brought our husbands of 25 years but Mary Sturr wins the prize. She came all the way from CA with her husband of 4 days on their way to their honeymoon at the Greenbrier. Naturally everyone had to fill Marshall Stuart in on the college antics of his new bride. As the Date House is now the laundromat, we set up camp at the Bistro in the Wailes Center lower level (beer on campus!). Housed in Grammar, we spent much time exploring the campus and catching up on the past 25 years. Our class picnic was at the Boathouse and our class sponsors, Peter and Lydia Daniel, were there looking wonderful as ever. At the picnic Nancy Hudler Keuffel announced that we had reached our reunion gift goal of $62,000. A special thanks to our class challengers Ann Ritchey Baruch, Anne Allen Symonds, Douglas Dockery

Thomas, and Nancy Hudler Keuffel. Thanks also to Mrs. George Blanton, Jr., '36, who contributed to our fund in memory of her daughter Nancy Blanton Siegel, our friend and classmate. Our gift was poetically presented from Babcock stage Saturday morning at Reunion Convocation "We're the Class of '62. Glad to be back, How about You?" The reuning continued through dinner and a Sunday Morning chapel service. Sunday afternoon we once again left Paradise for the real world, vowing to come to the next Reunion and the next and the next

This past 25 years seems to have been for family; perhaps the next 25 will be for self. At present we seem to have a lot of kids in college — but not all of us! Gray Baird McCarroll has recently moved to a farm in Keswick, VA after working many years as a librarian. Martha Baum Sikes is a brand new lawyer, clerking in Cornelia, GA. Anne-Bruce Boxley has climbed Mt. Everest, raised children, written books and is currently an administrative asst. to the Loudoun, VA Soil and Water Conservation Dist Ginger Borah Slaughter has a son at Dartmouth and is the CEO of her own urban planning firm in Atlanta. Patsy Carney Reed also has a son at Dartmouth and with her whole family recently enjoyed a sabbatical in New Zealand. Kitty Carter is now Mrs. Neill Gregory Nelson and has acquired 3 more grown children and 3 grandchildren. Chris Christie can be very proud of the many successes of her 3 children and also of the success of her own firm, J. Christie, Public Relations. Carol D. Wells also has her own business, The Omaha Jewelry Co. in Nebraska. Both she and Mary Sturr Stuart are using their MBA degrees, Mary for Chevron in CA. Douglas Dockery recently married Wilmer J. Thomas, Jr. He is on the board of the Metropolitan Opera. Douglas keeps busy with opera auditions, Carnegie Hall and the study of art history. Anne Dunlap Youmans is a busy travel consultant. Cleveland Youmans is at Mt Holyoke. Louise Durham Purvis has sent all 3 children to Oxford, is a partner in Purvis and Co. and active in Prison Fellowship in Scotland. Fran Early (VP, Marketing for Prudential Home Mortgage) has recently moved to the D.C. area. Parry Ellice Adam is the owner of a consignment shop in Stanton, NJ and has 2 daughters at SBC. Linda Emery Miller has been a leader in special education counseling in Iowa and is currently a consultant

Elizabeth Farmer Owen has been studying art history and volunteering at her local museum. Jean Gantt Nuzum and family have been traveling to France so the children might learn French at an early age. She does part-time social work. Mig Garrity Sturr is teaching theorem painting and stenciling in addition to being a color consultant. She and Dixon met their new brother-in-law at Reunion. Tolise Gathings Norwood is a management analyst at the Government Printing Office in Washington, D.C. Her 2 children are in elementary school. Another government employee is Marilou Green, a service representative for Social Security. She has 2 daughters. Raye Henley Thompson is active in Gardens for Peace which she hopes will become an international organization. Leslie Heye Quarrier is our class yacht broker. Son Sidney just graduated from Vanderbilt and Ian is at the U. of Vermont

Did you know that Nancy Hudler Keuffel, her husband and each of her 3 children were born on different continents? Besides being 1 of our class angels, Nancy works for a friend's import firm marketing fashion accessories. New class president Brooke Hamilton Cressall is a math teacher and has a son at Sewanee. Margaret Innes is a special ed teacher in Warrensburg, MO. Peggy Johnson Curtis, interior designer, has her own firm and should soon be an official ASID. She is recently back from London where she took an extensive course in the decorative arts at Sothebys. Her oldest daughter just graduated magna cum laude from Duke and her 2nd is there now. Peggy wore Chloe Fort's McMullen blouse and madras cummerbund to our class picnic. Chloe wore her own handpainted sweatshirts — yet another of her talents has surfaced!

Virginia Jones Rosenblatt has a son at Harvard and works for Norman Lear Productions as an associate producer of a 2-hour TV film. She and husband were traveling in Israel at the time of Reunion. Addie Kamke Cook is an art muralist and humor writer in Canandaigua, NY where she and her family are restoring an old Victorian house. Loti Kennedy has remarried and acquired extra children, even a daughter-in-law. After many years of running a retail store in Alexandria, VA, Loti is now a full-time sculptor doing life size portraits and small figurines in terra cotta. Mimi Molander has studied belly dancing and business among other things. She owns a gift shop, The Carousel Horse, in St. Paul, MN. I wish I had known this last February when I was in St Paul for the U.S. Women's Curling Championships. Barbara Pearsall Muir might have been with me except that she and Angus and family recently moved to Fredericksburg, VA. Our class is back to 1 curler unless the Muirs start a club in VA. Cameron Muir is at Trinity; Heather is at the College of Wooster

Puddin Newbury Lansing came from FL for Reunion. Son, Richard Coons, Jr., and daughter Anna Coons are both at the U. of Texas. It was fun meeting SBC's vice president and Jocelyn Palmer's husband, Tom Connors. Yet another classmate who has moved back to the Briar Patch. Their 2 daughters graduated from SBC and son Mark is on his way to Hampden-Sydney this fall. Anne Parker Schmalz and Mary Layne Shine Gregg have both made career changes to nursing. Mary Lane in '78 and Anne this past year. Anne's daughter graduated from Oberlin; her son is at Princeton. Mary Layne, "vitality married" for these past 25 years to the same person, has raised 4 interesting, involved children. She is a hematology oncology nurse giving chemotherapy. Betsy Pearson Griffin is Exec. Dir. of the Houston International Protocol Alliance. Daughter Anne is at Bates. Betsy Pringle, working as an artist, has a son at W & L. Eve Pringle Boyd has a son at Chapel Hill and a daughter at W & L. Ann Ritchey Baruch has a son at U. of Pennsylvania and a daughter at Wittenburg. Besides being one of our class angels she has climbed Kilimanjaro. We were saddened to hear of Ann's mother's death in June

Bettye Thomas Chambers has also climbed Kilimanjaro and is now teaching Italian at Georgetown. I'm sure all her degrees are in French, including the Ph.D.! Bruce Watts Krucke '54 writes of seeing Kyoko Ohara Asakawa while on a trip to Japan. Kyoko has 4 children (18, 15, 13, 11). Oldest son Alex is studying at the Hill School in Philadelphia to prepare for college in the U.S. Kyoko is active in a group of English-speaking Japanese women who raise $150,000 a year by selling Japanese prints. This is used for scholarships to send girls to college — especially to the U.S. Susan Rusmisl Ide just received the rank of assistant professor of developmental education and language arts and humanities at Keystone Junior College, Scranton, PA.

You will have to visit the Alumnae House and read the Reunion Scrap Book to find out about Lydia Taylor and all the things she has done since graduation. She and 2 daughters live in Norfolk, VA where she is a judge. Lynne Rynders Welch is a distribution clerk for the U.S. Postal Service. Kate Vickery Stockton has just returned from a pilgrimage to Medugorje, Yugoslavia. One son just graduated from Ole Miss; her daughter is there now. Adele Vogel Harrell is a senior research scientist for the Institute for Social Analysis. Daughter Adele is at Princeton and Evelyn is at North-western. Gracia Dickson Walker Slate is Director of the Annual Fund at Davidson. Mina Walker Wood, president of SBC's Friends of Art, has won a Horticultural Award of Merit, presented at the annual meeting of The Garden Club of Virginia. Daughter Bunny is at UVA. Also there of Mary Belle Scott Rauch is son Ted (Alfred III). Kate Webb Ragsdale is in library administration at the U. of Alabama; her son is at Yale. Macon Winfree Hilton's daughter is at Princeton.

I am now a senior competition and sectional precision judge in figure skating. Curling-wise, because of our national standing, my team was chosen last year to go to the first U.S. Olympic Training Camp for Curling. It was held in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can. last September. And Sew On, Inc. is now 14 years old and ready for another expansion this year. I hope to hear lots of news from you all for inclusion in next year's class notes. Remember: it is not too soon to start planning for our 30th Reunion in 1992.

It was so wonderful to hear from so many of you—keep it up! Don't wait for an official request, or limit yourself to the size of a postcard—WRITE ANYTIME, and Corky or I will see that your news is included in the next update. If you haven't written in a while (or ever—horrors!), we especially want to hear from you. Make it a goal for 1988! Our deadline is August 1!

Meredith Aldrich Moodie and Dunbar live in Vineyard Haven, MA. Daughter Mary Jane is at Barnard. James is ready for college, and Benjamin is a "successful fund raiser for his school class". Judy Baker DeSouza and Nelson continue in Rio. Judy works at the American School and Nelson is with TransBrasil. Son Bolling is a sophomore at Tufts. James goes to a Brazilian school. Judy Barthold DeSimone and Frank's children are also getting to the "leaving the nest" stage—son is a senior in h.s. and daughter just 2 years behind. Mary Pat Behnke Larson and Ron (in Honolulu) have a little one, Michael, about 2. Daughter Tiare is 9. Mary Pat manages at Center of Art; Ron is a mortgage broker. I glimpsed Gracie Butler Johnson at Princeton during reunions, but couldn't find her again—she looked tan and svelte! Mary Anne Calhoun and Tom Farmer's daughter, Manie, is a freshman at SBC this year, and Coon has hopes that Harriet will join her there next year.

Lin Campbell continues as Administrator of the Brooklyn Planned Parenthood of New York Center, in addition to getting a second Master's (in social work), and building her practice of group and individual therapy, primarily with diabetics. Kathy Carroll Matthewson and husband, Dave, are in the international consulting business. Heather is applying to colleges and Carrie is in 9th grade. Carol Clark Panzer wrote for the 1st time in 20-plus years. She and Neal live in Rochester, NY, after 6 years in London. Children are Catherine, 12, and Clark, 9. Nancy Conkle Swann has just served on a committee to merge two private schools, and is serving on the board of the new one. Husband David is chairman of United Way Campaign and the Chamber of Commerce. Son Andrew is 9; Chris is 17 and is a prefect during his senior year at Woodberry Forest. Jeannine Corbett Squires and pathologist husband, Jay, have a daughter who is a senior. Jeanette, and Margaret (9th grade) Jeannine goes to exercise class and coordinates everything. While many of us are getting children off to college.

Bunny Cord and husband Steve Melton have TWO babies! Stephanie Cord Melton was a year old in September, and a son was due in October. Bunny is studying for the Texas bar exam in her "spare" time.

Robin Cutler Maw is learning about timber and agriculture in administering her mother's northern VA estate (her mother died in April), in addition to her job at National Endowment for the Humanities. She and family, including Elizabeth (14) and Carlyn (12) enjoyed a trip to Disneyworld recently. Evie Day Butler and family are in Fort Worth, TX, where big Geoff is head of Fort Worth Country Day School. Son Geoff entered the honors program at U. of CO this fall. Lee is at boarding school (McCallie); and only William (10) is still at home. Ann Dreher teaches theatre and speech at U. of SC while husband Bob Hungerford pursues his acting career. Children Jamie and Lulu Brailsford are at prep schools in MA; Fannie Hungerford is in 4th grade at home. Barbara Dublin Van Cleve is a speech writer for Treasury Secretary James Baker; husband George was Chief Republican Counsel for the House Select Committee Iran/Contra hearings. Daughter Christina Koelb entered UVA as an Echols Scholar in September; William (9), and 6-year-old twins Michael and Elizabeth are thriving. Makanah Dunham Morriss became certified as a scuba diver, as well as taking courses in theology and psychology during her 4-month "sabbatical" last year. Her ministry continues to go well. Husband Bob, Jeff (12), and Sara (10) are busy and thriving. Deanie Finch Hampton and family took a backpacking trip to Pecos Wilderness in July. Son Tom will take a year off between high school and college to mountaineer in CO; daughter Julie is a junior. Marcy Fisher continues as a public housing consultant in Somerville, MA. My family and I loved visiting her when we visited colleges in the Boston area. She lives just up the hill from Tufts, and has seen Judy Baker DeSouza's son.

Peggy Gillmer Myers teaches English and French at E.C. Glass High School, Lynchburg. She also leads a Girl Scout troop, teaches Sunday School and aerobics, is married to Sammy, and mother to Sarah (14), Henry (12), Cinda (9), and Ginny (6). Gloria Graham Carroll is membership coordinator at Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts. Margaret entered Davidson this fall; William is a junior in h.s. Vi Gravure and Mark Patek, daughters (17, 14, 12) and a Standard Poodle puppy are back in the USA after several years in Japan. Vi plans to study more Latin to earn a second teaching certificate, and eventually will go back to teaching. Mark is with IBM in the Real Estate and Construction Division in Stamford, CT. Diana Herran Barrett and husband Bob Vila have 3 children, 11, 8 and 2 ("the ruling princess"). Diana is head of the graduate program in health policy and management at the Harvard School of Public Health. Harriet Horsey Sturges teaches at Louisburg College and is a postulant for Holy Orders as a permanent deacon in the Episcopal Church, while working toward her Master's of Theological Studies at Duke (also 18 hours of graduate French). Son Boyd is at Wake Forest, Richard is a junior at Episcopal High School, and husband, Conrad, keeps everybody on an even keel. Cathie Ireys Gandel and family have been in Japan for 4 years. Matthew and Stephen are 11 and 7; her husband works for an advertising agency. Sally Kaiber Fiedler, Jay, Lee (17) and Julie (15) enjoyed a trip to Hawaii this summer. Sally is leaving the antiques fair business (volunteer) to have more time for family. Harrah Lord Argentine and Jeff live in CA where Harrah is a display artist for Cost Plus Layouts, and is working toward her graphic arts degree at Santa Rosa Junior College. Jeff is an engineer at Hewlett Packard. They enjoy running, biking, tennis and golf together. Lee Mackubin Miller is involved in church, school, and community in Atlanta, and busy renovating their old house. Children Patrick (16), Macon (11), and Anne Lacy (4) will all be in the same school this year. Martha Madden Swanson and husband work at Georgetown; she as Asst. Dir. for Student Activities, he as Asst. to the Dean of Students for Finance. Children Michael and Sarah are 16 and 12. Martha attended the AAUW convention in Houston in June.

Anne Mason Curti is busy with children (Elizabeth, 15, Andrea, 13, and Tate, 8), church, tennis, and is Opera Guild President for CT Grand Opera Co. for Stanford and Bridgeport. Randi Miles and Herb Long spent 3 weeks on the "college tour circuit" with Melissa before putting her on a plane for Sweden, where she was an AFS summer student. Randi is taking math courses toward teaching certification. Son Kent is 14. Susie Moorman Southworth and Gus are also in CT with Hunter (6) and Taylor (2). Gus is a lawyer, and Susie has "stepped down" from full to part-time work at the library. Kathy Mockett lives in Lexington, MA, and is a computer consultant. She and husband John are restoring a 150-year-old house; John is also a computer person. Kathy's girls, Alyson (14) and Amanda (11) are "super sporty". Kathy sings in the church choir and does genealogy research. Sheila Nolan Fuller and Bob were married in May '85, and live in Greenwich, CT with Andy (15) and Allison (12). She says they live a "very ordinary existence", except for travel to the Scottish Highlands (for grouse shooting), Maui the Caribbean, and other places.

Jody Noland Old and Randy (who is Anne Mercer's cousin) are in Annapolis, after 14 years overseas. Katy is at Smith (and going to Florence on Jr. Year Abroad program). Bruce is a freshman at the College of Wooster and Josephine a junior in h.s. Jody calls herself "coordinator and referee" for the family. Janie Patton Browning and Wilson live in Norfolk, where Janie is President of the VA Opera Guild. Son Will graduated from Norfolk Academy; Laura is 15. Andrea Pearson Pennington is Court Referee at the Strickland Youth Center in Mobile, and Al is a lawyer. Kate (7) and Anna (4) do typical "children things". Carole Poer Williams, Bill and Scott 9, (also 3 dogs, 3 cats, 3 horses, 3 fish and 1 lone parakeet) have moved to a house in the foothills south of Denver and are thriving, despite much work to be done on the house. Katie Lou Pritchett Harris has her own real estate company and is doing well. Son Pressley started at Rhodes College this fall. West is 16. Nikki 14. Diana Rediker Slaughter should have earned her karate "Black Stripe" by now, and be 1/2 rank away from her "middle-aged dream" of being a black belt. She also has a corporate business writing firm. Her husband is in the AL State Legislature. They have 2 boys in h.s.

Linda Reynolds is busy and happy in Washington with Kennedy Center and the opera. She was a super-numerary in the world premiere of Gian Carlo Menotti's Goya, and was serenaded by Placido Domingo as a vision of Goya's dead wife. She said she didn't "embarrass her alma mater by falling into the orchestra pit or anything".

Wesie Rivers Robb wrote from the beach at Sullivan's Island, SC, where she is trying to get this old house together; the rest of the family comes and goes. Big Nat commutes from Raleigh on the weekends. "little" Nat (19, 6'2") was in summer classes at Col. of Charleston (in winter at Appalachian). Elizabeth (20) works for a vet (she's in pre-vet at NC State), and Catherine (17) toured Europe as part of the Ambassador Chorale early in the summer. Wesie was equestrian event timer at US Olympic Festival in Raleigh; Elizabeth exercised and groomed horses.

Di Simrell Savory enjoys teaching at a Montessori School in Washington, CT, which her girls Jess (13) and Emily (9) attend. Penny Steketee Sidor and family are in Chicago, where Penny plays tennis, runs the school safety patrol program in a Club Scout den mother, works in the library. Husband Mike is working on his doctorate; Matt and Jeff are into the usual things.

Corky Stevenson's father died in March, and she has been busy settling the estate. She and her mother went to the beach in June, and "Dickens" (who enlivened our 20th Reunion) is still a "dickens".

Corky notes that the CLASS BANNER IS STILL MISSING! If any of you can offer a clue to its whereabouts, let 1 of us know. Susan Sudduth Dodson has formed a 2nd company: Medical Office Management Systems, Inc.; which provides management assistance for clinics, in addition to recommending and installing computer systems. She and daughter Penn enjoyed skiing in Vail last year; Penn is 12 and makes straight A's. Bitsy Taggart Fitzsimmons says their door in Boca Raton is always open! Her Alex is at Princeton; Kate has graduated from William & Mary. She also has 3 step children and three step-grandchildren, and plays lots of tennis! Sally Thomas and Paul Hoffman live in WA. Sally says she has lost weight, gotten glasses, and alternates between having discovered herself and not knowing what she wants to do when she grows up!

Nell Thomson Thomas lost her husband, Marshall, in the summer of '86. She and Eleanor (at UVA) and Edward (14) are adjusting and doing well.

Patty Thornhill Edwards is a full-time mother of four, as well as being a volunteer and part-time consultant at a local art gallery. Daphne is at NC State, Hale at Mt. Vernon, Sally Scott and Roger are 16 and 14. Wing Todd Sigler gets the prize for the oddest "pets". The week before she wrote, she discovered a HUGE bobcat in the yard, and an equally huge rattlesnake the next day. She enjoys teaching and working for the Humane Society; Ed is trying to get a local clinic started. Brooke Tucker loves teaching history at Houston Baptist University, where she is a full professor and received a major award for excellence in teaching in May '86. She also enjoys her friends and travel. Shelley Turner is still in England, but has moved to Cornwall, her "favorite part of the world". She joined Pam Leary Shandrick and friends in Venice in January—canals, Canalettos, and cannelloni! Anne Ward Stern is Director of Development for Oak Knoll School, while Ed is directing and on the road a lot. Robbie and Ward are 9 and 5. Julie Whitehurst Mackinley cites a milestone: her oldest child, Phoebe, has graduated from Norfolk Academy and entered the Rhode Island School of Design.

Penn Willetts Mullin loves getting back to SBC twice a year for the Alum Board. She works as an editor/writer for Houghton Mifflin, and enjoys Brennan (15), Hadley (12), and Lucy (6). Susie Wilson Ashcom's Susan has graduated cum laude from Chapel Hill, and toured Russia with a group from school. Susie quotes Susan as saying Lenin looks leathery, and comments that after 50 years in a glass casket, it is not surprising. Penny Winfree Gooch and Garrett have a son Garrett V. and live in Roanoke, where she works for Norfolk and Western Railroad; he is a CPA. She is on the Vestry and occasionally sings in the church choir. We Helms are fine. I love my public relations job at the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary. Son Pen is busy choosing colleges, doing drama and civic things, and was a KY Governor's Scholar last summer. Ted (12) is doing professional clowning and is president of his class. Nelson, a lawyer, is computerizing the world!

"Age cannot wither nor custom stale her infinite variety..." As I read your notes this summer, I felt that Shakespeare was writing about you, friends of '70!

Kathy Barnes Hendricks plans to temporarily scale down her volunteer activities to watch Nat (5) and Grantland (2.5) grow. She continues to teach cooking and design gardens for people in Atlanta. Sarah Becker has moved to new digs in Alexandria VA. Jerry, Betty Brewer Caughman and David (3) are "happily ensconced in tiny, charming Chester, SC (pop 7000) with all the temptations of Charlotte only 45 min. away (we indulge frequently!)." Jerry is involved in the timberlands management business; Betty has channeled her energies to benefit the arts and the library. She successfully lured 3 nationally acclaimed authors to a Book and Author dinner and is organizing their 1st festival this fall. Barbara Brewster Miller intends to attend our next Reunion, how about the rest of you? Barbara and Winston, a partner in a Louisville law firm, have daughter Pritchett (4) and son Brewster (8.5). Barbara just returned to full-time teaching and rides to the hounds with the Louisville Fox Hunting Club on the weekends. Candace Boker Chang writes from Boston of her new position as Adoption Specialist for the Dept. of Social Services. She has acted as foster parent for 2 teenage girls for 2 years and is retiring from the program for a while to concentrate on her own 2 girls. Candace drolly notes "the joy of having one resident teenager is sufficient" as she relives h.s. with Jeannie.

Grab the rice and join me in wishing joy to our 2 new brides among the C's. Stuart Camblos and Sally Campbell Stuart's husband, Roy Rodwell, is a Duke grad and a founding partner of the first venture capital firm in Research Triangle park. His 2 daughters (16 & 13) and her 3 (13, 8 & 6) caused Stuart to remark "maybe a future SBCer in the bunch!". After a whirlwind 3-week honeymoon in Africa, Vienna, Paris and New York, Stuart has been busy remodeling (clearly a new addition was needed), mothering, and picking up volunteer work that she had to sacrifice when she assumed the role of working single mother. Sally Campbell married Anton (Tony) Wagner in the fall of '87 and added 2 boys, Matthew (13) and Andrew (9) to her daughters, Amy (12) and Stephanie (9). Sally is a public relations account executive with the only employee-owned advertising and public relations agency in New England. Her office is in Portland, ME. She is still singing and is contemplating going back to school in social work. She sees Tracy Savage regularly. Carey Cleveland Swan reports nothing dramatically different, "which I suppose is good because I like the status quo." Carey celebrated her 2nd anniversary in the British Virgin Islands; she is in her 11th year of law practice. "Am still running in the seemingly futile attempt to ward off the ravages of old age and gravity."

Spenser and Stuart Davenport Simrill are settling into their beautiful Victorian rectory in Wyoming, OH. Stuart is making plans to study for her Ph.D. in child development. Ear-mark some money for SBC so you can give Stuart a positive response when she gives you a call. After 2 years in Atlanta, Debra Denemark has moved back to Old Town Alexandria. She is controller for the Federal Networks Division of Northern Telecom and assures us "your tax dollars are spent wisely on telecom equipment." Terri Eoff Walsh shepherded her 3 little ones west to CO for a late summer visit with her folks. After many years as Harrisonburg's Commonwealth Attorney, David decided to return to private practice. Although she missed Haley's Comet, Terri was fascinated by the astronomy course she recently took.

RoseAnn Feldman is married to Marc Braun, a tax lawyer, and lives in Creve Coeur, MO. In July '86 RoseAnn & Marc had 10 lb. Jacob Jonathan Braun. "A real joy and beautiful, too!" RoseAnn left the Public Defender's office and is doing tax work for the St. Louis County Counselor. The year has been a mixed bag for Claudia Forman Ostrander. She was divorced after 18 years of marriage and treated herself to an SBC alumnae trip to France. "What a great group to travel with — mostly SBC (30) of our group of 50. Claudia gave the tour of Paris. Nor-mandy and the Loire Valley rave reviews. Ann Gately's card limped in last, understandable since Gately has been hobbled for 3 months with cast and crutches, the result of a skiing mishap. The experience has given her real empathy for the handicapped. She is teaching at the med school and back to running without the cement sock. Betty Glass Smith spends her days at SOVRAN Bank and nights and weekends chasing around after Ran (5) and Corbin (3.5). Husband Bill is with VEPCO. Betty reports Mardane Rebutentis McLeMores 2 boys now have a sister, Lee (5) and Susan (8) are still a bit young to work with. Frances Gravely Frankstone at her family-owned Italian import firm, Galen (3) swims, Tenley (7.5) rides and Fran Griffith Laserson (no age given) gardens at their beach home in Quogue, NY. Fran notes that "weeding is very therapeutic." Back in NYC Fran serves as treasurer of their co-op's Board which "keeps my fingers in the financial pie."

Mary Beth Halligan Griffin has been teaching self help courses and working as secretary and clerk of the Arthritis Foundation. Garrett loved every minute of kindergarten and Lindsay was busy with dance. Brownies and a host of other activities. Karen Hartnett has been on a deadrun in Dallas since her bank merged with its largest competitor to form the 12th largest bank holding co. in the U.S. Karen's charter in human resources is "to direct personnel activity in the statewide system — I've been busy ever since." Clearly an understatement, but Karen seems to be thriving on the challenge. Laura Hawkins announces the birth of son Owen Bossinger Brady, and a move to Providence, RI. 3 months later Lousie Hayman in Annapolis has a new job. She is in the governor's press office coordinating the public information program for the state. "Good thing it's exhilarating because the hours are hell!" Kessler is off to Hollins in the fall. "Close, but no cigar," sighs Louise. Temporarily escaping moving cartons and paint cans. Artie and Joan Hennessy Wright announced their move from West Hartford to New Canaan, CT. Kristin Herzog is art editor and ad manager for Phi Delta Kappan Magazine in IN. She has given 2 talks in D.C. and is preparing to teach a course at Indiana U. Baird Hunter Campbell and family are taking advantage of all the wonderful summer activities that surround Annapolis. Neal (6) and Clay (4) will be in school, leaving only daughter Parker (2.5) at home. Baird hopes to fill this new found time with hobbies and volunteer activities. Janet Hutchison Karpowicz praises the good life of the pacific Northwest. She assists in Steven's (5) Montessori pre-school and tears after Cindy (3).

Congratulations to Dr. Debbie Jones who has received her Ph.D. in Adult & Higher Education at UNC! Deb is in the Dept. of Psychiatry at Jefferson Medical College in Phila. Her husband, John Engel, is busy. Kim will go to U. of IL this fall and Jill will be a senior in h.s. Page Kjellstrom as Protocol Officer for Chemical Bank is vying with Elizabeth McKee Werlinich for hours logged flying overseas! Page has been to Berlin, visited Jo Prevost Browning in Paris, and watched her first Wimbledon. Stateside she has seen Sydney McCampbell Glass and our other Atlanta based classmates and visited Wallis Wickham in Boston.

Barbara LaLance Kelly is in a new house in Loudonville, NY. Sarah (10) and Rachel (7), Jr. League, Sunday School, and part-time editing keep Barbara busy. Kitty Litchfield Seale squeaked in too late for last year's notes but her news is worth the wait! She is "about to enter Phase II of child-rearing (the terrible teens!)" as Turner, Jr., turns 13 and Kate turns 10. Kitty is director of dance at the Armory Dance Center in Montgomery and was just about to launch her own company, the Alabama Dance Theatre.

'70's first baby of '87 may well be Morgan Stewart Evans, born Jan. 3 to Lucy Lombardi and Stew Evans. Elizabeth (2) adds to the excitement Lucy is brushing up on her German at Berlitz in preparation for a 2½-week hiking trip she and Stew are planning in the Swiss Alps this fall.

Freddie, Sydney McCampbell Glass and their 3 children (11, 7 and 2) are in the throes of adding a new addition and remodeling their home in Atlanta. Sydney teased that Page Kjellstrom knew at least 10 people every place we went!" Norman is in Dallas and Jean McKee Carmichael and the kids will join him as soon as "A. the house sells, B. swim season ends, C. I find a job, D. Tennis team ends, or E. All of the above... hopefully before school starts!" Ian (13) is 5'11" and the 9-yr.-old is 5'6". "they should be right at home in Texas". The other half of the "fly-off", Elizabeth McKee Werlinich travels 50% of the time as director of field marketing for the International Division of Estee Lauder. She plans a "get to know each other again" vacation with "understanding husband, Doug" in Italy this fall.

Two years ago, Tricia Mast and Kenn George returned to Dallas from D.C. where Kenn was asst. secretary at Dept. of Commerce. Kenn is running 23 hospitals as regional VP for American Medical International. Tricia has been "tending her growing flock Elizabeth Frances (almost 1), Kenneth (7), Patrick (4), and Clement (2)." Trips to Mexico, Vail and Spain punctuate a busy life of Jr. League, car-pools, and Parents' Council. Kim Mitchell Bethea is supervisor of data processing for Wisconsin's Dept. of Transportation. Emily (3) excels in swimming and tap, and David is chairman of the Slavic Languages dept. of UW-Madison. Emmy Moravec Holt reports a happy life in Greenville, NC. Bill is a gastroenterologist; Will (10), Lizzy (9) and Emily (6) are bustling with summer projects. Emmy teaches part-time as a learning disabilities specialist.

After reading about the curricula Barbara Offutt Mathieson has put together for her students, it's all I can do not to trek west and enroll at Stanford! Barbara is in her 3rd year of Western Culture seminars wherein she takes 3 groups of 16 freshmen for 5 hours per class through the major texts of European literature and philosophy. Next winter she is designing a course, "Drama and Gender". Barbara is treating Anna-Rose (10) and Skye (6) to the laze-about-swimming summers she enjoyed as a child. Tom and Barbara will spend their 15th anniversary in London seeing theatre and checking on museums. The "Doing it in Style" award goes to Kay Parham Picha who announced a "40th Year Party" set in Feb. '88 on a sailboat in the Virgin Islands with Karen Hartnett, Susan Lykes Mueller, Pam Piffath Still and husbands. Full report and pictures requested! Kay finished her studies for M.ED in Middle School Ed. at UNC-G. Mady (11) and Tom (10) spent a month away in camp while Kay and David housebroke 6-wk.-old golden retriever, Spike, and made plans for the house they will build this fall. Mary Jo Petree Murphy disclosed that Mary Elizabeth's junior high history teacher for the past 2 years has been none other than Katy Warren! Mary Jo's son, 12, goes under Katy's tutelage next year. Her "baby" will be 10 this fall. Mary Elizabeth, 15, has already received her SBC propaganda but Mary Jo fears "she likes being around fellas too much for a women's college." Kathryn Pinner is a museum superintendent/facilities manager in NJ. Kate and husband, Lou Stalsworth, have a 2-yr.-old daughter, Jordan. Kathy Potterfield has added a consulting position to an area nursing home to her already-busy schedule as asst. director of physical therapy at the Charleston Area Medical Center. Like so many of us, Kathy is having major work done on her house.

Betty Rau Schewel received the very prestigious National Brotherhood Citation sponsored by the Lynchburg chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews for her long-term intense participation in and service to her synagogue and her community. Betty organized an exhibit about the Jewish community in Lynchburg for the Bicentennial, and edits SBC's Friends of the Library newsletter. Her next project is a computerized listing of SBC's art collection. Betty and Marc have separated and should have a no-fault divorce by the first of the year. Betty is having a busy summer with her brood (5.5, 9 & 12) and working as a camp counselor for a mixed group of underprivileged and upper middle class kids. In August she hoped to steal a week's visit with Candace Buker Chang in Boston. Jane Richley Rafel has been reveling in a new beach house, right on the water, in Montauk, L.I. Her oldest is going away to boarding school and her babies started Montessori: "We've really got the extremes!"

From Greenville, SC came a newsy note from Mary Scales Lawson, mother of 3 healthy, boisterous children. Jeff's rheumatology practice is burgeoning. Gately, are you interested? During Mary's tenure as president of the Greenville County Museum of Art, membership and revenue DOUBLED! They started an antiques show and collectors' group that travels to different cities to look at art. Mary works part-time in community development for the museum: "It will be great to be paid for something I love doing so much!" If this isn't enough, Mary and a friend have run a small antiques business for the past 2 years. Our Lady in Justice, Kate Schlech, laments a non-newsworthy year. However, Kate and Tracy Savage are among the very few who saw the rare and elusive Ann Tedards during her 6 weeks in Washington where she performed at the Kennedy Center. Ann has returned to Austria, but Kate is hopeful of her return stateside soon. Kate reports that Tracy enjoys her deanship at Foxcroft even if the demands and distance curtail her socializing. Kate has also dragged herself kicking and screaming into the ranks of 1st homeowners. Elizabeth Smith has had enough of house remodeling, so she and Rob are off to Fiji and a host of other untypeable islands in the South Pacific. They will cross the equator twice and international date line 4 times, some time warp! Lydia Starnes Williams, thanks for writing and letting us catch up with you! "Life stays interesting despite the setbacks." Lydia left her computer engineer/consultant job for Exxon in '83 and spent 3 years in Costa Rica and Holland. Her husband died early in '86 and she nearly lost her son to encephalitis. Lydia now lives in Miami, has remarried, and is having a ball sailing their collection of 3 sailboats and 1 antique yacht as well as running the family business with her own computer. Her son is off to college, her daughter in 10th grade. Pat Swinney Kaufman is juggling 3 big events! "Lloyd is making another film (as yet untitled), we are moving into a brownstone, and are eagerly awaiting the birth of our 3rd little girl (also as yet, unnamed)." Lily Hayes (7) and Lisbeth (16 mo.) share the excitement. For obvious reasons, Pat will take the next year off from college counselling.

Sally Taylor loves living on 3 continents. She is Far East Correspondent for Publisher's Weekly and has the only report on the wine trade in China. "No husband, no children though. Am thinking of adopting one or both before time (and energy) run out!" If you plan to sip and bike your way through France & CA make sure you get Sally's Grape Expeditions tour guides. Heather Tully Click proclaims that she and Richard are "entering midlife without a crisis," credit going to Benjamin (4) and Amanda (6.5) as their focal points. Heather works 4-5 days a month to keep her nursing skills current. Richard is with Delta, so Heather is pleased to put down at least semi-permanent roots in Peachtree City. Tauna Urban Durand has moved back to the South where Doug will be teaching in the Business School of U. of SC-Columbia. Tauna will get her elementary school teaching certificate. She wants to take her twins, Rob and Ted (10) up the Blue Ridge to see "where Mommy went to school."

Pam Walker and husband Scott Stafford just returned from a month in Japan and Thailand. They have been hosting a Japanese student for the past 3 years and enjoyed the visit and exercising their nascent language skills. Scott teaches tax law and is associate dean of U. Of AK-Little Rock.

Law School. Pam has been in private practice, traveling extensively regarding her work for labor unions. She has been appointed administrative law judge for the State Pension and Disability Fund of Police and Firemen. Their house is on the National Register and will be open for tour in May, a deadline which Pam feels will give her the needed incentive to finish what has been a "work in progress" for 7 years. Another refugee from the moving crates is Debbie Warren Rommel. She and Ross bought a larger home in Houston for the new puppy, Emily (10), Andy (8), and Sarah Elizabeth (4.5). Wallis Wickham is waxing enthusiastic about her newly created position to do staff development coordination for the Brookline, MA elementary schools. Wallis will continue, part-time, her job as guidance counselor. In addition to her new job, Wallis has a new house and landscaped yard. She expects to see Jessica Holtzer on Martha's Vineyard. Anne Adare Wood has had a wonderful time renovating her home on the Potomac; her garden is a particular pride. Metro DC real estate market booms, Anne Adare frequently gets to work with Alums. Daughter Kimberly starts college this fall.

Gil and I are happily chasing our computer related careers, being chased by our boxer dogs, and chastened by the confusion of home improvement. And so it goes.

Elizabeth Andrews Watts and her family enjoy life in the country on the Eastern shore of VA. Rob (7) and Betsy (5) will be in school all day this fall. She met Jane Frierson at SBC June 5 to bat the ole tennis ball around under Dennis Van Der Meer's supervision—had such a good time she's hoping it will be an annual event. Barbara Ashton Schiller, Scott, and the boys (3 & 6) are fine in Fritch, TX. Scott is with Phillips Petroleum and Barb is "maid/mama" enjoying all the attendant duties of T-ball, soccer, and swimming. They just acquired a boat and anticipate a lot of skiing. (Come on now, Barb, since when can you ski on stock ponds?) She and the boys drove to Six Flags over GA for a day of frolic during a visit to AL and lunched with Liz Camp and Mary Witt. Patricia Barnett Greenberg enjoys teaching a drug prevention course as a Florence, SC Junior Welfare League volunteer to 7th graders. She looks forward to 2 weeks in London, Paris, and the French countryside with her family. She will try to contact Claire Sandifer Tuttle. "Wish someone would visit us We're on I-95!" Ellen Bass Brady and Chuck are busy with sons Chad (9), Aaron (7), Matt (5) and a new business venture, New Day Office Products, in Portsmouth, VA. "So far it is working out very well and keeps us very busy. We sell office furniture and supplies in bulk. Each day truly is a 'new day' full of blessings and opportunities!"

Vicki Bates Roy, Columbia, MD, has begun her 2nd year of pre-med classes. She also volunteers at the hospital 1 day a week. Daniel was program chairman for a successful computer conference held in Washington in spring '87 and rebuilt the kitchen by himself last winter. Marcia Brandenburg Martinson is happy in Weymouth, MA with Terry and the boys (9 & 4 1/2). She has been busy quilting. She took a 1-day class ("Quilt-in-a-Day") and finished a double-sized quilt! Her teacher was featured in the June '86 issue of Family Circle and does seminars around the country on request. Marcia filled 2 classes (40 people) in a week, and had to turn others away. This fall Marcia's hitting the craft show circuit with her quilts. Good luck, Marcia!

Joan Buckley Saunders, Robert, and son Nicholas (Mt. Kisco, NY) announce the birth of Amanda on April 24, 1987. Robert was named regional sales manager; their home is an hour's commute from NYC. Mary Lee Burch Weil is speaking French and teaching jr. and sr. h.s. students the lingo full-time this year. Son Grant starts kindergarten at Children's Hours School (founded by Meredith Moody '66). The family is moving from Geneva, NY to Rochester, NY next spring. Deborah Camalier Walker and Dick announce the 10/5/86 birth of daughter, Jessica Elizabeth Sterns Walker, who was welcomed home (Potomac, MD) by brothers Matthew (5) and Brian (3). Kirk Coleman Lammerding and John, Valencia, CA, had their 2nd son, Derry Kirk, 6/8/87. Their 1st, Patrick John (6 1/2), enjoys little brother. John's veterinary referral practice goes well, and they still love CA after 7 years.

Sheila Connor Kerber (Littleton, CO) had her 3rd little girl, Katherine Elizabeth, in Feb. The summer wasn't as lazy as she had hoped, but lots of fun. Thanks for the picture, Sheila. Wanda Cronin Howell writes from Griffin, GA (my hometown): "Spring '87 has been full of contrasts for me. The Griffin chapter of the American Business Women's Association named me 'Woman of the Year' and I was named to the Board of Directors for Griffin's Vocational Technical School. I married Lee Howell on May 9 in a beautiful ceremony—he is such a blessing in my life!" Her father was unable to attend the wedding due to a heart attack, but is recuperating. Bonnie Chronowski Brophy says this year was a "milestone year" for the Brophys. Jim was named senior vice president of L.F. Rothschild and rang in his 30th at a surprise party Bonnie arranged at the NYAC. They took 2 family trips to Woodstock, VT skiing and to St. Maarten in March after an attack of the chicken pox. Meggie (15 mo.) and Chris (9) keep her running but she still does aerobics and tennis. They are leaving the world of condos behind, moving across town to an older New England colonial built originally for the founder of the Summit Service League (the Jr League of Summit). Laurie Epstein, Lake Forest, IL is preparing for the annual dinner benefit of Ducks Unlimited. She's groomed dogs, cleaned out incinerators, and is embarking on renovating bathrooms (plumbing/tiles/fixtures). "Aerobics keeps me sane." Mary Fantone Davies and Andy, Virginia Beach, VA announce the birth of their "one and only", Kelly Elizabeth Bowersett Davies, 2/18/87 (9 lbs. 4 oz.). She was a "miracle" of the Howard and Georgeanna Jones Institute for Reproductive Medicine in Norfolk, specializing in in vitro fertilization. Mary has left her 13-year career in banking for full-time motherhood. Karen Fennell and Dr. Henry Idema, III married December 27, '86, and relocated from Lake Forest, IL to Grand Haven, MI, where Henry serves as rector of St. John's Episcopal Church. Meghan (4) loves school and camp.

Suzie Fitzgerald Dahl, Winston-Salem, NC is envious of my ability to decipher multitudinous, hastily-written class notes; it sounds as if she's going to volunteer for the honor in '89! At the moment she's busy with Katherine (4 1/2) and Elizabeth (2)—her aerobic child-chasing is challenging—and a serious book study group. "I realize how much smarter they are than I, so I work to stay ahead of them!" Ty is in trial practice with NC's largest firm and loves it. Andy Francis Haruda, Salinas, CA says "Ashleigh is 'terrible' 2-years-old now, doing all those things a 2-year-old does (and mom and dad-neurologist cringe at)—like standing up in the bathtub to play, going down a slide by herself, trying to touch the top of the stove to 'help mommy make dinner.' " JOY!! Andy is working in property management, handling several houses and apartment complexes in CA and OR, and helps out in her husband's office while his staff take vacations. They spent two glorious windy (trade winds arrived when they did) November weeks in their condo in Maui and have been in NY several times to visit family and friends. Mary Shaw Halsey, NYC, and Rob Marks have a baby boy, born in November '86, named Ned (Edward Halsey Marks). Mary Shaw went back to work when Ned was 6 months old to take care of her "other baby", her architecture practice, Sidnam-Halsey Architects. Barb Hansen Smith and Bill announce the Oct. '86 birth of Katherine Spenser. She joins sisters Kelly (6) and Elizabeth (3). Bill graduated from U.Va. Medical School in May; they hope to stay in C'ville for his residency. Cynthia Hardy McCabe and David moved to Louisville, KY in August '86 when David accepted the pastorate at Buechel Presbyterian Church. Cynthia's monogramming business made the trip, to be renamed "The Stitching Post". She has expanded the product line to include towels, linens, clothing. When not stitching she studies with Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, picking up where she left off 4 years ago. Her most important news: a bundle of joy named Caitlin Elizabeth, June 4, '87. She joins brother Brian (9) and sister Tiffany (5).

Wouldn't you love to be a Brownie in Sandra Herring Bloomberg's troop? She's leader for her 8-year-old's group and trying to keep up with son (4) while finishing a Ph.D. dissertation in Computer Science at NC State. She also moved to Chapel Hill and built a house during the past year—I'm nominating Sandy for the Staying Power merit badge..... Brett Sauers has a baby brother (Craig William Sauers) born Oct. 14, '86. Debbie Hooker Sauers and Gary (Silver Spring, MD) are thrilled. Sarah Johnston Knoblauch and family headed for Cape Cod from Cleveland Heights, OH for the summer. She teaches art to children in her basement studio and makes wooden crafts, baskets, and watercolors. Michael is completing an addition to their home whilst studying for his MBA. Kelly will join her next year when she assists in Brendan's Montessori School. Kathy Kavanagh left the museum world on June 1, '87 to become director of development and alumnae relations at Dana Hall School in Wellesley, MA. She's also continuing her consulting work as a partner in the Franklin Group. "It's wonderful to be in the Boston Area." She is the recipient of the CASE "Apple" Award for outstanding teaching at conferences and workshops sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education. The weather behaved beautifully for the March 7, '87 wedding of Linda Kemp Couch and Steve in Toronto, Canada. It was 80! Linda is senior portfolio manager in the capital management group of Folger Nolan Fleming Douglas (a brokerage firm) and Steve is the chief investment officer of the Acacia Group. They live in Springfield, VA. She sees a lot of Cindy Conroy, Sharon Mangus, Nancy Piper, Jody Wharton and Lisa Walker in D.C. She had a great time at Nancy Mortenson's wedding in Oct. '86. Penelope Lagakos Turak says all is well in Philly as the celebration for "We the People 200" goes on. The American art market is keeping the Turaks busy at the Lagakos-Turak Gallery, which opened last year. With the gallery thriving, she and George are working on their house in Wynnewood, PA as they look forward to their 5th anniversary.

Mary Landon Barkley wrote from Waco, TX that Barkley Aerobics is franchising nationwide and she is still trying to get her TV show, "Mind & Body", syndicated. She says, "The future's so bright we need shades!" and sends a HI to Sue-Sue, Kemper, Krecker, Huffman, Hawson, Hannah and the rest of the crew. Karin Lawson Teel has been in Geneva, Switzerland for most of the year, continuing her work as the attorney for the INF phase of the nuclear arms limitation talks. She is enjoying the negotiations, according to husband, Keith, but finding them fairly exhausting (and a bit far from home, I imagine). Alethea Lee, Ossining, NY went down to the 20th-year reunion at Church of the Redeemer in Houston, TX where her grandfather was the first rector. In her own church, an ordination recently was held in which Fleming Rutledge '59 participated (one of the first women to become Episcopal ordained priests). She's still painting and doing original needlepoint. Missy Leib Veghte, Bob and Rox live in South Jersey (near Wilmington) in a brick house c. 1700 which they have restored. She is director of athletics at an independent school nearby and has had undefeated hockey teams for the past 3 years. Rox (7 1/2) is in 3rd grade. While in Cville at the races, she saw Evelyn Carter Cowles '73, Keedie Grones '76, and Kathleen Gray Brittle '75. Eleanor Magruder Harris, Norfolk, VA is running Mom's taxi service for Greg (8) and Ned (4). She and Sandy expect their 3rd boy in October. Fondie Mangum Rittman, and Marc, Chesapeake, VA haven't decided whether children are on the horizon yet, but are staying busy with 2 cats and a dog. In July they took off to visit London, Scotland, and Paris. Fondie changed jobs a year ago; she's a contracts administrator for a Dept. of Defense contracting firm, ManTech Services Corporation. She loves it, but long hours and travel keep her away from the Norfolk SBC luncheons. Jeannie Manning Schmidley, Cleveland, OH says the year has gone quickly. Max (4 1/2) and Will (1 1/2) have become delightful, high-spirited little men. James was promoted to associate professor in the department of neurology at Case Western Reserve U. Two days a week Jeannie is busy as a lawyer and 7 days a week as a Mom—she's enjoying nice changes they've made to their home, and lovely vacations.

Donna MacKenzie Pfohl, Ken, and sons Taylor Madison Pfohl (born 5-6-85) and Christian Bond Pfohl (10-12-86) live in Germantown, TN. Ken is senior corporate real estate manager with Federal Express Corp. Donna stays active with the Germantown Baptist Church, Field and Garden Club, and the David Craig Chapter of the DAR. Ann Stuart McKie Kling and Bill celebrated 1 year of marriage Sept. 6. She says it's been a fun, busy year with Bill starting a marketing consulting business and her work with Neiman-Marcus as toy buyer. May 1 she said good-bye to N-M to become a lady of leisure. She's considering opening her own landscaping business—seasonal color, minimal care, suited to the TX climate. They drove to Epcot via Memphis and had Sunday brunch with Ruthie Willingham Lentz and son David. Edie McRee Whiteman had an active year in Richmond, VA. Dec. 30 her 2nd child, Alexander MacLin Paschall was born. "Luckily he's been an easy #2 so far—sleeping through the night at 1 month!" Edie's work at the Virginia Association of Museums is a challenge; this year she's organizing a 13-state Southeastern museums conference on the theme of museum architecture. After a move last summer, Jaimie is enjoying a spacious backyard and will start kindergarten at St. Christopher's in September. The family took a trip to Martha's Vineyard to visit Mac's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Whiteman. Tana Meier Parselti writes there's not much time between working, mothering and volunteering. Her work, too, is challenging at Frank's Restaurant, their family business. Dan is 10, Dana 6. Summer provides a respite from a heavy volunteer schedule at the children's elementary school. She hoped that summer would give them a chance to recharge batteries!

Beth Meyer Costello, East Longmeadow, MA announced the birth of Stephen (August '86). Brother Phillip (4 1/2) enjoys "helping out" so Beth can have time for church activities and the Women's Club. Elaine Mills (Arlington, VA) has enjoyed marriage to librarian/musician Bob Kline since February '84. (She's keeping her maiden name.) Christopher arrived in September '86 and, baby permitting, she's working on a large publication project for the Smithsonian Institution on the voluminous field notes of prominent anthropologist John P. Harrington. Five volumes of the series are out and #6 should be "hot off the press" by August...3 more to go! Nancy Mortenson married Christopher White Piper in October; they live in Alexandria, VA. Several SBC bridesmaids were on hand: Sharon Mangus, Linda Kemp Couch, Betsy Roberts, Dorothy Lear Mooney '78, Jane Mooney '77, with numerous others in attendance. After a Caribbean cruise, Nancy and Christopher moved into a home in Old Towne c.

1870. Mort will continue to work for the Committee on Small Business, US House of Representatives until the baby is born in Nov. She and Betsy Roberts will co-chair the Cookbook Committee of the Junior League of Washington for the next 2 years. It was a nice surprise to hear from Susie Nagle Hesse, who moved recently from FL to Lexington, KY with Cal and Katherine Brooke (6). Erin Morgan (5) and Lauren Piper (2) Cal took a job with Acco-Babcock as district sales manager, Hoist and Crane Division. Sounds like she's missing that FL sunshine/pool, but not for long with a new venture at hand—importing silk kimonos for sales/redesign. Debbie Pelham Bigum expects a new arrival and enjoys the Langley Air Force Base (Grafton, VA area).

Hannah Pillsbury, Los Angeles, CA, likes all of Sunny Southern California except the high cost of homes. She's at Security Pacific National Bank in the global trading division—fun, hectic and challenging. A quick business trip took her to Tokyo last year. "I'll stick to American food," she noted. She plays tennis weekends and invites any '74'ers in the area to join her.

Jane E. Piper isn't "sitting still" in St. Louis, MO. She visited Sherrie Snead McLeroy in Sherman, TX in Feb. and went to Paris for a week in May to attend the re-enactment of the Spirit of St. Louis landing at Le Bourget. A new wing on her home is almost complete and though she retires as president of Campbell House Foundation on December 31, she will chair the Tower Grove Historic Committee, another house museum, on January 1, '88. Janie Reeb Chadwick and Michael flew South, landing in Coconut Grove, FL where Mike is senior vice president of a hotel company. She's enjoying a sabbatical from work and trying to whip their 50-year-old "Caribbean Colonial" (Pink of course) into shape. Betsy Biggar Hellmuth just visited with daughter Katie. Jan Renne, Costa Mesa, CA says the interior design business is booming. She's concentrating on restaurants and residences in Southern CA and recently stole a few moments to redo her own place. She is involved in two networking groups and recently graduated from the Lifespring leadership program.

Pam Reynolds (Mobile, AL) started an MBA last fall in addition to her full-time duties as a banker. She's still active in the National Association of Bank Women and next year will hold offices at local and state levels and will be on a national committee. This summer she helped her sister Sheila pace the floor waiting for the arrival of niece Jessica and relishes spoiling her rotten. Ah, the doting aunt! Deborah Ryan Cairnes, Richmond, VA writes that Sam (7) and Elizabeth (5) are in school much of the day; she has taken a part-time job at the State Corporation Commission in the legislative and public information office. In March a 4th annual Meta Glass reunion was held with Cindy Craighill Archer, Tom and Cameron (1); Pam Hughes Ganse, Dave and Leah (2); Katherine Vuicich Schinasi, Bill, Carrington (6) and Charles (2) and Mary Minor Satterfield Worrell and Dave, Carter (7), Alice (3) and Mimi (1). Does anyone have a bigger house for next year? Mary Ann Reese Rosenberg, The Woodlands, TX says life is much more pleasant now that Rebecca is 3. "She is very independent and full of questions." She and Bern will go to London for a medical meeting and hope for a little pleasure as well. She looks forward to seeing fellow SBC'ers at the Reunion—May of '89? Despite their hectic schedules, Checka Robbin Delle and Paul (Hempstead, NY) were able to take a vacation to Disneyworld with Paul (6) and Jaclyn (4). Paul is studying full-time for the NY Bar Exam while Checka runs the deli. In August he will work at the Nassau County District Attorney's office.

Congratulations to Julie Shuer, Los Angeles, CA and husband on the birth of Benjamin Shuer Davis May 3, '87. "He doesn't quite sleep through the night, but I have a housekeeper and a fairly helpful husband so we're surviving." She's going back to her practice Winton Smoot Holladay, Washington, D.C. participated in the opening of the National Museum of Women in the Arts in April, and works closely with the education department with docent training and tour planning. She's in a holding pattern with 4 children: 2 boys (5 & 2), 2 girls (9 & 6 1/2). Still tempted when she sees a baby.... Susan Stephens Geyer, Dallas, TX and Mark, working on house plans, hoped to begin building on their lot in late summer. She reports that Leslie Elbert Hill is doing the same. She's busy with Stewart (6), Julia (4) and Edward (3) and looks forward to a vacation with Leslie and family in CO. Edward, healed from his injury, is "growing like a weed." Mark is building his dental practice; Susan volunteers with the Cystic Fibrosis Camp. Jesse Stewart (Boston) is still looking for those resumes at W.R. Grace and Company Last February she and her mother, Eleanor Crumrine Stewart '47, traveled to Panama to study birds. They plan a trip to the Yucatan next winter. Could become habit forming, she says Sandra Taylor Craighead (Richmond, VA) says time flies at United Virginia Bank. She was recently promoted to assistant vice president. She saw Linda Kemp at an affiliate Bank, NS&T and a lot of SBC'ers at Nancy Mortensen's wedding in D.C. She also attended a Richmond SBC/Randy Mac/Hollins/VMI/W&L alum picnic and saw Edie McRee Whiteman, Mary Reid Roach, Maria Jones Tisdale '75 Kathy Telfer Johnson (Ann Arbor, MI) is organizing things for Tom, Courtney (3) and Spooky (Labrador) as they move to a new house on the west side of Ann Arbor. She hopes to visit Mac (Cuthbert) Langley '73 and family in Charleston, SC soon

Liz Thomas Camp (Newnan, GA) is working diligently as GA Congressman Newt Gingrich's congressional administrator/legal researcher. She is listed in the 1977-88 Who's Who of American Women. Bravo, Liz! Cary Thorp Brown (New Rochelle, NY) says baby Fiona Polian Brown, born 6/6/87 is a delight. Big brother Benjamin (3 1/2) likes her sometimes but is much more interested in camp Cary and Tracy are enjoying Westchester County, staying cool under the trees in the Larchmont woods. The summer was just Kids, Kids, and Kids but this fall she'll work on the Junior League house tour. "Country French" is big in Houston, TX, home of Meredith Thompson; her interior design business flourishes. She and JoEllen Lenoir '75 are off to London to study English country homes and gardens. Houston will soon be "stately". She just finished volunteering on the Junior League's hour feature TV program on child abuse, which aired locally, and has taken another placement. She continues as the SBC Houston club's treasurer this year.

Helen W. Travis will be looking out of her large office window at DBB-Needham in NYC when this goes to press. After work she man's a HelpLine—a hot line for people with depression, drug & alcohol problems. In August she vacationed in Tucson, AZ. Cheryl Viar Upchurch is raising 3 daughters and wonders how working mothers do it. (Somebody write her a letter, please.) She plays tennis and volunteers for sanity. Husband Sam is general council for Torchmark Corporation. Christine Weiss Pfeil and Dave welcomed their first child, Richard Lee, in late May. Chris is now a full-time mother with the exception of part-time teaching responsibilities at the Cleveland Museum of Natural History.

BB Wheelock Zavell works for a graphic design firm in San Francisco. When not at work, she's busy with husband, house, and the Junior League. In November she presided as Godmother for Karla Kline Bradshaw's son's baptism in D.C. She saw more SBC'ers than you could shake a stick at, certainly too many to list here. In February she traveled to Southern CA, in May she took in AZ. Ruthie Willingham Lentz wrote, "Life has been fast and furious since David (6) went to spend some time with Jay in California. I'm remembering what it's like to be human again!" She's back in the choir, aerobics and church super club entertaining and also building up her business at J.C. Bradford (stockbrokers) 1-800-238-7110 and traveling. Gabrielle Urbanowicz Wehl and Marvin proudly announce the birth of Marvin Joseph Wehl, III (3/8/87). "After 3 months maternity leave, I'm back with the Bell, Richardson firm, and am busy on both fronts but loving it", said Gabrielle Wendy White and Paul Feinberg married recently after a long courtship and live in Washington, D.C. (Paul was an honorary member of the class of '74 at the '84 reunion.) We hope to see the happy couple here in Detroit soon for some heavy touring and gossiping-remiscing.

Lastly, your editor is bone tired, looking wistfully around for a ghost writer as her term comes to a close. This summer the Boyds were in the Hot North—it was 95 every day of July up until the day we signed the contract for the new AC. Now it is cool and lovely in Detroit; we contemplate fall outings to get more familiar with this most interesting of states—MI. Doug and I enjoy mother and fatherhood more than we ever imagined with son Clayton who will be 1 in September. Doug also relishes the challenge of sales for Union Carbide's Linde Division. Next week we drive 6 hours west to Chicago for a management training seminar. Clayton and I will tour the great art institutions while Daddy learns the ropes. Thursdays I help Paul Haig Jewelers (Rochester, MI) with marketing and advertising (at home). Fridays and Saturdays I am on the premises at Haig's, selling all kinds of interesting custom and estate/antique pieces. I still get a call about once-a-month for that most beautiful and durable of stones—the diamond, and like working with customers, most of them old friends and couples who are about to be engaged. We attended a customer/friend's wedding in Birmingham in August, then drove to Thomaston, GA for Clayton's christening in the church where we married. I guess our biggest news is that we love Detroit!

REUNION '88 is not far away! I can't tell you how sentimental I've been, receiving all your cards and daydreaming about getting together again May 27-29. Many of you said that it doesn't seem possible that it has been 10 whole years....my sentiments exactly. I trust we all look as young as we feel. I've organized us geographically again—it's amazing how spread out we are.

New England: From RI, Robin Jones Eddy writes that she visited the Pacific Northwest last Fall and went to the World's Fair. She loved Victoria and Vancouver. She has seen Maria Rixey Gamper and Mary Goodwin Nolan in Baltimore at her goddaughter, Whitney Weidner's christening (Whitney's mother is Deb Davison!), and Lynn Spilman Williams, on her last Southern Swing. From CT: in Hartford, is Ike Osinga Scully, who has just completed her MBA and is a staff accountant for Price Waterhouse there. In Old Greenwich Ann Maricle Stefano is adjusting from their recent move from D.C. She works as an account executive with Mead Data Corporation. Lauren Place Young is on Nantucket, selling real estate and fixing up her house. Lauren got a great surprise 30th b-day trip to HI

Middle Atlantic: Monica Shaffer and Mary Gearhart are in NYC. Monica is director of marketing and media services at Biedeman and Co. and plans to run her 5th Marathon in November. She mentioned seeing Leith Colton, Barbara Mendelsohn Price and Cecie Garcia-Tunon Lear. Mary gave a great description of her NYC apt. She is pursuing her photography and has been to visit the "Land of Pleasant Living for creative carpentry and river crabbing," helping her parents build a house and do renovations on the Eastern shore. Mimi Borst Quilman moved back to PA after several years in LA: it took a little adjustment getting used to the snow scene again. She saw Toni Bredin '77 at a baby shower for Cathy Calello Staples '79 (who had a daughter, Claire) as well as Meg Richards Wiederseim, and Mary Goodwin Gamper with their baby girls—future dates for Mimi's 2 boys! Yours truly (Cannie Crysler Shafer) is still in the Philadelphia area, teaching, coaching, doing Jr. League and going to the 2 family summer camps—Camp Susquehannock—1 for boys and also 1 for girls. I will send you all brochures in the next few years! Win and I enjoy every minute of Francie....who mimics all silly faces and noises that her parents make at her. Our big trip in '87 was 10 days skiing in Alta, Utah with friends

NJ: Mary Page Stewart saw Maria Rixey Gamper recently. Mary, Bob and Ellie stayed with us in April while attending Mary's grandmother's 90th birthday party. We had fun watching our girls "play". Mary is happy in Chatham and talked Barbara Behrens Peck into moving there. She and husband Jeff are renovating their house and both commute to NYC, where Barbara is doing publishing projects

South: MD: Maria Rixey Gamper's big news is TWINS in October. Missy Powell Adams has just moved from Pittsburgh and is also expecting TWINS in December! (What's in the Balto water???) Barbara Mendelsohn

Price retired from 7 years with Wang and is a "Lady of Leisure" (watch the water, Barbara), riding her horse and working on her new house. She mentioned seeing Becky Dane, Cecie Garcia-Tunon Lear, and Sue Griste Marsha Alice LeBrun is in Gaithersburg and is a new mother and a sales representative for Fila Footwear.

WASHINGTON, D.C.: Carrie Ruda Clark is enjoying her 3 1/2-year-old son and selling real estate. Dorothy Lear married Jane Mooney's ('77) brother this fall

VA: Debbie Snead Shrader (SBC) was promoted to Assistant Director of Development/Director of the Annual Fund. From Lynchburg, Toni Christian Brown and husband run their video store and have #2 child Edie Baird (Great Falls) is involved with archaeological projects for the state of VA. Lynn Spilman Williams (Portsmouth) and David enjoy going to the river for the weekend with dog, Buckwheat. Susie Heitmiller Busch is an assistant division manager of the VA Alcohol Safety Action Program, living in Richmond with new spouse, Steve. SBC was well represented at Susie's wedding! Speaking of Cindy Whitley, she has finished her first year of graduate school at William and Mary, but switched her study to archaeology and has just returned from "an expedition" to the Dutch West Indies! Margaret 'Mo' Moffett Kyle and husband moved into their new house and are both teachers. Cecie Garcia-Tunon Lear wrote of the large SBC contingent at her wedding. She manages a travel agency in the US Dept. of State. Cathy Lumsden is a Navy lieutenant stationed in Norfolk. She is Protocol Officer for the Supreme Allied commander Atlantic (a four-star Admiral and also "double hatted" as the Commander-in-Chief Atlantic), and arranges all official visits and functions for him. The visitors range from ambassadors, heads of state, ministers of defense, members of parliament to admirals and generals from all of the NATO countries. Next summer Cathy enters the Navy post-graduate school in Monterey, CA in the computer science masters program

NC: Liz Perkinson (Winston-Salem) took a spring trip to Mexico with Pat Dean '76 and Cissy Humphrey '76. She is marketing coordinator for the Children's Theater Board and does volunteer work for a children's rehabilitation center. Kathy Jackson Howe, her usual crazy self, is trying things like kayak clinics, sailboarding lessons and ham radio classes in addition to tennis, hiking and trips with Trey (4 1/2) and Khaki (2 1/2)

SC: Suzanne Collins writes from Greenville that her company ("Briar Patch") is moving to bigger quarters, again. She'll have 3 times the space and her retail and wholesale outlet will both double in size. She also has a new NYC showroom; Leslie Kirkby '84 runs it. Karen Lemon Hassett received a surprise when the stork brought her twin girls in January. She was grateful that they had just moved into a 5 bedroom house

TN Drusie Hall (Nashville) is a sales assistant in the international division of the institutional equity sales department of J.C. Bradford and Co. In spare time she is breaking and training a 2-year-old thoroughbred filly and rides 2 other horses for people. She also mentioned that Anne Taylor Quarles Beveridge is in Nashville as is Emily Dick McAlister. Emily sees a lot of her husband's W&L hometown buddies; going to his reunion this year made her very SBC-homesick... (Hang in there, Emily—ours is coming!) She rides and works on her "fixer-upper house"

GA: Libby Freeman Goetz lives in Roswell with husband and 2 children, Ralson (2 1/2) and Lissy (1 1/2). Anne Jarrell Berry (Newnan) has finished building a house....her two children are 3 1/2 and 1 1/2. In Atlanta Ann Yaeger sells computers for AT&T. She had seen Jane Lauderdale Armstrong in CA recently—Jane looked great

FL: From the Sunshine State, Catherine Taylor Moore (Orlando) is an assistant vice president in loan administration for Sun Bank. She saw Liz Day Dalrymple at Sea Island recently and sees Betsy Ryan on her business trips to FL. Leslie Anderson Battle now has her hands full with 2 little girls. Leslie saw Mari Monahan in NYC. She keeps in touch with Ann Ramsey Hill and Anne Baldwin Mann. Anne Baldwin Mann writes from Jacksonville of her 2nd daughter's birth. Dana Dotten is teaching navigation at Jacksonville University and pursuing a masters program at night and "after 8 1/2 years of Navy flying...I finally got shot down by an FA-18 pilot! A November 28 wedding is planned in Summit, NJ. My fiancé, Steven M. Endacott, is attached to Strike Fighter Squadron Fifteen (VFA-15) at NAS Cecil Field in Jacksonville." (I sorta have them pictured like TOP GUN flying off together...)

AL: Dur Springer Oswalt writes that all is well, hot and humid on the Gulf Coast...she is busy with her 2 children and doing things like spending a week at a camp called Rap-a-hope for children with cancer. She also sells Frozfruit, a frozen fruit bar, as a project on the side. Eve Jackson London (Birmingham) says that her 2-year-old, Mitchell, is made up of far more than "frogs and snails and puppy dog tails." She's working on the house and designing party invitations with calligraphy and artwork

TX: Lucy Smith Rogers expressed something in her card that many of us have thought..."Sometimes as I go about my busy life in Houston, when I think back to my experiences at SBC, I wonder if it was really a dream. It seems so long ago and far away." Also in Houston is Michelle Tarride

Frazier, still teaching voice and performing with Opera-to-Go. She is the new coordinator for the program, and will perform with the Houston Grand Opera this fall. She looks forward to seeing "Emily, Missy and Helen at Audrey's wedding." Suzanne Stryker Ullrich (of Houston) and husband Rick spent 2 weeks "bopping from Ireland to London to Paris to Germany". She says they saw SBC and HS friends along the way—had lunch in London with Marianne Hutton Felch '77 and husband. Then at a baby shower for Karen Bowers Lazar she also saw Julie Plautz Bodenstab. (Late news Karen, who lives in Media, PA, had a baby boy, David Peter, Jr., on Aug. 19) The Dallas Gang consists of Lisa Wray Longino who writes of her daughter's birth...the 3rd granddaughter for the Ways...Bridget '79 just had twins! Melanie Bowen Steglich is just settling in Dallas where her husband will begin his dental practice. She's still adjusting to TX after growing up in GA! Anne Simonds Lowe is in Garland—the subscription manager of Beckett Baseball Card Monthly, but intends to retire soon to be a full-time homemaker and mother. She and Rick are adopting their first baby.

Midwest: OH Muffy Hamilton Parsons is still directing Alumni Affairs for the Ohio State University College of Medicine. She and Don bought a house last summer and expect something to fill one of the bedrooms in December. Ann Ramsey Hill (Cincinnati) left Proctor and Gamble to be a full-time mother. Katherine Powell Heller (Cleveland) writes that husband John completed his residency; they'll be off to San Diego in June '88, then Balto in '89. Katherine is expecting a baby in January (and has told her mother babysitting is required for May 27-29, '88). Until then she will continue her medical illustrating...after that she'll probably freelance IL: Karen Kuhlman looks forward to introducing her husband to us next May when they come from Chicago. She plans a December wedding. Carey Johnson Fleming has moved from WV to Chicago; her husband is managing Kemper Lakes, where the '89 USPGA Tournament will be held. She's tired of banking after 7 years and is looking for a new direction. She is riding again and announces that David III is successfully potty-trained. Another Chicagoite is Anne Riordan Flaherty. Her sister-in-law is Catherine Flaherty '80. Anne works for the US Bankruptcy Court as a staff attorney. One more in Chicago is Anne Steele, mother to almost-2-year-old son Kip. She works for Morgan Stanley, managing restricted stock area.

KS: Leigh McDonald Forrester moved to Kansas City where husband is with Wang. Leigh is trying to childproof the new house to 1-year-old son lan

MO: Three cards from St. Louis came from Dudie Hiemenz DiLeo, who has 2 children, boy and girl; Ann Key Lucas says she's "still" at Knights Ltd., married to Jimbo, has her dog named Crawdad and not receiving letters from roomies...but that, bar major disaster" she'll be at Reunion. Cathy Mellow Goltermann is a flight service manager for TWA. She and husband take outrageous trips. They have been surfing in Hawaii, skiing and touring through Europe and basking in the Caribbean. (I'm waiting for the day that I see Cathy on a flight!) She also said she'd seen roomie Kathy Bertrand

Mountain and Pacific: AZ Debbie Dalton Yeskey finished her MPA at Penn State before she and husband moved to Phoenix. He is a staff physician at Phoenix General; Debbie is job hunting

CO: Betsy Moore Rice lives in Denver, has a 3 1/2 year-old daughter and #2 due soon. She works as a clinical therapist at a community mental health center. Carol Cordell Mullins, also in Denver, works on the staff of the Colorado Attorney General

CA Hunter Davis remains under contract to a record company in Oakland. She's on the road 6 months of the year...her last album "Harmony" was released in Spring '86. Lee Carollo Plorsich came back to SBC last Founders' Day to receive the Gager Award. She teaches h.s. chemistry. During the summer she worked as an industrial-chemist at IBM, working on polymers for disk coatings! As usual, Lee is up to all sorts of other things: riding, the French horn, aerobics and ballroom dancing. She anticipates her 5-year-old son going to kindergarten this fall. Deb Davison Weidner may be Vanna White's replacement any day. She and Doug and 2 children love CA life. Deb says, "'the beach, the surf, the sun and yes—Hollywood.'" She takes an acting class! Jane Lauderdale

Armstrong is in San Francisco, working in the advertising department of US Sprint. She and Mike came East to his W&L 10th this spring and had such a good time that they are packed to come for May '88 already. Laura Farmer Gebhardt moved to N. San Diego Co. last year. Her family has also "gone Californian"—her husband is into his boogie board and her 5-year-old son enjoys the beach and riding his bike all year round. Laura works for Old Stone of California—a division of Old Stone Bank of Providence. RI and rides her horse as much as possible. Susan Negaard Birch reports from L.A. that she works for Travenol Labs as a purchasing manager. She often hears from Maggie Laurent Gordy, who is enjoying #2 child

AK: Katie Renaud Baldwin teaches preschool in Petersburg. She visited her family in MI this June and saw Martha Miller as well. Katie's daughter is now 1-year-old

Europe: GREECE Donna Mihalik Gelogolis wrote while on a visit to the states. Her husband's landscaping business is growing! She plans some teaching or writing in future

ENGLAND: Suse Hudson Fitzgerald has 2 boys, ages 7 and 2. Husband Rus is a foreign service officer; they leave in August for 2 years at their first post, in London.

PLEASE PLAN TO COME TO RE-UNION...it's going to be fun and almost everyone who did write said they'd be there!!! There will be more info about Reunion coming soon. Stand by BUT make your travel plans now. Make those far away "dreams" real again

We had around a crowd of 50 at our reunion (being that it was a pleasant easygoing affair it was hard to get an accurate head count). I know Alice Dixon was there because she drove me. Michelle Martinez, and Dorinda Davis down to SBC. She looks as good as ever, especially now that she is a new home-owner. She's been busy painting and landscaping (with SBC bulbs), besides selling drugs for Carter Wallace. Alice documented the reunion with a mountain of photos, so if you want some, I'm sure she'd give you a good price and enjoy hearing from you Dorinda Davis is in Tuscaloosa getting an M.A. in the counseling program at the U. of Ala. She analyzed us all reunion weekend and is now considering going on for a Ph.D. Over the summer she counseled undergraduate students and partied throughout the southeastern states.

Michelle Martinez has moved to L.A. Not quite the Beverly Hillbilly, Michelle is the regional sales coordinator for Benetton Cosmetic's new fragrance, Colors de Benetton, and she handles most of the western U.S. as well as AK and HI. More than likely she'll be coming to your town soon, so you'd better buy some of her perfume, especially if you want her to be able to eat at Spago. Betty Bell Liles is working for Jock at Liles Construction Company; they are both taking care of George Welch Liles, III, who arrived in April. Marie Engel has bought a townhouse in Alexandria, VA. Maria is in her fifth year with the Chronicle of Higher Education as an accounting associate. She says the work is so-so, but the company has an attractive profit-sharing plan. Charlotte Prassel working as a corporate paralegal with Fox, Rothschild. She sees Sharon Beard often as they shared a beach house at the Jersey shore for the summer. Louanne Woody is in her second year of teaching math at Brookville High School and is really enjoying teaching. Nancy Palermo attends medical school at the Univ. of Southern Florida College of Medicine. Elizabeth Parsons was married on January 26, 1987 to Robert Romo in Dallas, TX where they are living.

Tricia Pauling is earning her master's in chemical engineering at UVA. Stephanie Pesakoff is office manager for an architect and interior design firm in NYC and lives with Joan Collins ('85), Lewis LaGrone ('85) and Patty Baird ('85). Julia Pesek is assistant advertising manager for Format magazine at the Advertising Federation of Minnesota and does some modeling on the side. Desiree Petrus is in law school and clerking at a large firm in PA. She was recently appointed assistant to the Night Prosecutor and is really excited about this accomplishment. Melinda Phillips was married on June 6, 1987 to Matthew Waterbury (W&L) with a large SBC group in attendance. She finished a retail management trainee program with Central Fidelity and is a product manager. They will be moving to AZ before the end of the year.

Tracy Pryba is earning her master's in biology at Univ. of Richmond. Nancy Ray is an auditor for NS&T Bank in Washington, DC and lives in McLean, VA. Leigh Ringler is in PA, working for two professional athletes and modeling for the Claro Agency. Elizabeth Rundlett lives in NYC and works for Conde Nast Publications. Amy Simmons lives in the East Village of NYC and is a credit analyst at Chase Manhattan Bank in the corporate sector. Ashley Simmons was married to Edgar Bright on June 27, 1987 in New Orleans with Elizabeth Sheehan and Meme Boulware as bridesmaids. Ashley and her husband live in Boulder, CO. Jessica Sinott recently ran on the ballot in Summit, NJ as the Republican candidate for Female Member of the County Committee!! Deirdre Smith and Mark Moran (H-SC '86) were married on July 26, 1986 and are living in State College, PA where Deirdre is an optometric technician. Anne Smith is at the American College for the Applied Arts earning a degree in fashion merchandising and is currently studying in London. Elizabeth Stevens was a sales manager for This End Up furniture co. in Richmond but has recently moved to NYC. She is not looking forward to "pounding the pavement" again.

Quinci Stevenson was married to Willard Velie in October 1986 and is living in FL. Anne Toxey is working towards her architectural degree at U Texas in Austin and is really enjoying her studies. Beth Ann Trapold is at the Madeira School in McLean, VA as the director of publications/assistant director of development. She sees a lot of Bip Leopold and Beth Doyle. Paula Veale is with the Ad Council in NYC and sees Stephanie Pesakoff often. Bella Viguerie is a receptionist at a law firm in Washington, DC where she is living and loving the DC life! Jeremey Weithas graduated from NYU and is living in NYC and working for Benetton as the assistant to the director of public relations. She sees a lot of Elizabeth Haynie and Anne Corte with whom she shared a summer house this past year. Julie Weyand was married to Stephen Watson on September 5, 1987 and lives in Richmond, VA where Stephen practices law and Julie works for a bank. Beth Wharton works on Capitol Hill for Congressman Ron Marlenee from MT and lives in northern VA. Jesse White has been working for The Rectory School in CT as a teacher for the language disabled and spent the summer in the Bahamas working for a family with a language-disabled child. Leigh Ann White lives in Washington, DC and works for a health policy consulting firm. She takes sociology classes in her spare time. Alycia Wilcoxson works for Jones & Assoc., PC as a paralegal in Atlanta and teaches and performs dance in her free time. Valerie Winborne is getting her masters in dance therapy at NYU and working with numerous dance groups in the city.

Vicky Wolf works at Pardoe Real Estate Inc. in Washington, DC. Elizabeth Wood graduated from William & Mary, traveled throughout Europe and is now working for the Republican National Committee in Washington, DC. Cornelia Woodworth is an electrical engineer for Raytheon Corp. in Boston. Many of the people in her office are around the same age which makes it a lot of fun. Rebecca Young is selling residential real estate in Washington, DC and finds the work busy but very exciting. As for me, I am a marketing representative for IBM in their Federal Marketing Division and currently have the CIA for an account....it's an exciting place to be right now and I'm really enjoying it. I'm living in Alexandria, VA and always seem to run into other SBC alums.

Thank you all for replying....it was GREAT to hear from you. A few of you mentioned getting new addresses...due to space constraints in the magazine we cannot print them all but you can contact either the alumnae office or me for the most current addresses. I look forward to hearing from you all again.

Reunion.

"The class of 1937 was the smallest in Sweet Briar's history. It was the bottom of the Depression and a good many of us had to drop out before graduation because the funds just weren't there.

"Besides being the smallest, we were probably the most inactive class. We were never in the class notes and rarely turned up at reunions. But I think as time went by, each of us realized how much more worthwhile our lives had become thanks to those years in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. It was there we found a true introduction to the life of the mind. In 1987, that realization compelled us to regroup in time for our 50th Reunion and return with a 'whopper' of a gift."

Nancy Nalle Genung '37 graduated magna cum laude from Sweet Briar with a degree in history. She was president of the student government, a member of Tau Phi, and at her graduation was presented with the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award "in recognition of fine spiritual qualities practically applied to daily living." Those qualities came to the fore in 1986 when Nancy, acting as the 50th Reunion Gifts Chairman, inspired her classmates to raise a record $238,193 in restricted and unrestricted gifts. Among the leadership contributors was Nancy's husband, Alfred G. Genung, a 1931 Princeton graduate.

"Al decided to become a 'challenger' and match my reunion gift. He did it in part to help my campaign but he also wanted to back Sweet Briar. He had fallen in love with the campus and was very impressed by the commitment of everyone involved with the College.

"We put an equal amount of stock into the Pooled Income Fund which generates income plus a good many tax benefits. So our gift to Sweet Briar turned out to be a smart investment for us as well."

Gifts to Sweet Briar's Pooled Income Fund provide a charitable tax deduction for the donor, income over the lives of one or more beneficiaries, and valuable support for the College's permanent endowment. For more information about Sweet Briar's Pooled Income Fund and Charitable Gift Annuities, please write or call Martha Mansfield Clement '48, Director of Development, Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595 (804/381-6161).

HAPPY-NEW-YEAR HAPPY NEW PROJECT: SUMMER BLOOMERS!

Sweet Briar's National Bulb Committee and the Alumnae Office celebrated the arrival of 1988 by beginning a new, additional bulb selling program (see cover).

Brochures featuring the beautiful collections of summer blooming bulbs were sent to alumnae while winter was still in force; by now many of you probably are awaiting your orders.

This new summer project is the third separate fund-raising effort in the bulb program; alumnae sellers work for the spring bulb campaign; the Washington, D.C. Club works on its amaryllis project and the Alumnae Office will handle the summer bulb orders. The summer project will benefit two special alumnae scholarships this year: the Alumnae Daughter Scholarship and the Harold B. Whiteman Scholarship.

Summer bulbs may be ordered until March 31

Bulbs will be shipped for proper planting time

All bulbs are top quality

All bulbs are guaranteed: non-bloomers will be replaced

Toll free # for questions, problems:

A Haven for Creative Artists

BY ELIZABETH GAWTHROP
RIELY '67

The black and white Holstein-Friesians grazed contentedly on the hillside of the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts. "These cows have been painted many times over by artists from the city," said Bill Smart, director of the center. A story circulates that one artist from Manhattan, surrounded by encroaching cattle, had to be rescued from a treetop.

The Virginia Center for the Creative Arts, more affectionately known as the VCCA, is set on Mt. San Angelo's 450-acre estate directly across from the entrance to Sweet Briar College. Originally established in 1971, it is a relative newcomer to artists' colonies. MacDowell and Yaddo have gained renown from famous writers, composers, sculptors and painters such as Eudora Welty, Leonard Bernstein and Saul Bellow, for work done there decades ago. The VCCA extends its hospitality to many creative artists each year, some of them well known and others struggling to make their reputations. They often come from cities to the center's bucolic setting, seeking respite from the hurly-burly of urban life and to finish commissions on time.

Judy Gordon, a recent fellow from Chicago, thinks that the quality of her work is better here. Trees are finding their way into her gouaches, she said while eating a box lunch under some tall and shady specimens. A group of fellows were gathered around the picnic table just outside their studios. Any of the 24 artists in residence throughout the year is welcome to join them for lunch—just as anyone is welcome to continue working uninterrupted. The golden rule is not to break in on someone at work without invitation.

Gordon was visiting the VCCA with her husband, Tony Phillips, another artist, for the second time. They have toured a number of the retreats, in fact, and discuss them as vacationers compare resorts. She believes that women especially appreciate being taken care of here—having their meals prepared for them, enjoying freedom from domestic duties, indeed, having virtually no responsibilities whatsoever except to their work. Bill Smart remarked that except to respect privacy, nothing is expected of anyone. A fellow could just ruminate like the cows, but somehow that isn't a problem, he said in his relaxed and affable manner. Artists tend to be remarkably productive during their visits.

Lynn Havel, also chatting over the ham sandwiches made for them, had just arrived from Kansas the night before, and his paintings were being hung in the barn for exhibition. Larry Bell, a Boston composer, was trying to complete his chamber setting of Edgar Allan Poe's story, "The Black Cat," scored for cello and piano with narrator. Mame Willey, a writer from Cambridge, had just finished her lunch and was walking down the road with wild roses rambling over the fences on either side.

The VCCA began life in 1971, established by writers Nancy Hale, Elizabeth Langhorne and Edie Newcomb, with generous help from the National Endowment for the Arts and more recently from the personal interest and involvement of Julia Sadler de Coligny '34 and the support of the Virginia Commission for the Arts. Smart had enjoyed two fellowships in the early years, when it was located in and around Charlottesville. He understood from his own experience the need for creative artists to escape what the rest of the world calls "you know, real work," he says drily—the lawn, a squeaking door, growing children who clamor for attention.

But as the VCCA was floundering for lack of financial support and a permanent home, Smart, who is professor of English at Sweet Briar, was appointed director in 1975. Tentative plans to move the colony to Sweet Briar's campus for the summer of 1976 proved successful. The Sweet Briar community found that the VCCA's free spirits weren't so wild after all; in fact they brought a measure of creative energy to the artistically isolated community. The fellows, on the other hand, discovered that they could maintain their privacy yet enjoy the library and facilities of the College. On occasion they might even want to share their work with students or faculty. More than a few of them have taught at Sweet Briar. No other artists' colony has a connection with a college or university.

In January of 1978 the VCCA moved into Mt. San Angelo. The elegant mansion, built on a grand scale in 1870, had a pillared portico and neoclassical architecture straight out of Gone With The Wind. But in 1979, as renovation of the studios in the old barn neared completion and work on the mansion began, a fire broke out and destroyed the house in a few short hours. "We only missed dinner that night," said Smart, whose resourcefulness has proved itself on many occasions.

In retrospect the fire was a blessing in disguise. The antiquated mansion had many problems, including a formidable heating bill and only nine very unequal bedrooms. The insurance money enabled the center to rebuild a practical modern residence where each of 22 identical rooms (two are for married couples) looks out onto the Blue Ridge foothills. The lawn has formal boxwood hedges, mature trees including the largest copper beech in Virginia, and since 1986 a three-part sculpture called Soundings by former fellow Nancy Driscoll.

Until the new passive solar residence was finished, fellows lived and worked in their studios nearby, in the converted

Normandy-style barn built during the 1930s. For 40 years the handsome field-stone barn, with its sprawling layout and many cupolas, accommodated dairy cattle. It now provides 24 soundproof studios for 13 writers, eight visual artists and three composers. The large central area, where Lynn Havel was working with the resident carpenter, holds exhibitions. The permanent art collection, part of which has twice toured Virginia museums, hangs in the labyrinthine corridors of the barn as well as in the offices and residence.

The studios, with views of pastoral landscape in several directions, are furnished sparsely with a large desk and essential furniture. When Smart's tour revealed brilliant Bolivian flags in red, yellow and green on the bed of each room, he admitted finding them in a surplus store for $4 apiece. "We have a fellow from Bolivia coming here soon," he remembered, "so I guess we'll have to take them out for six weeks."

Smart realizes that the sooner he can meet each fellow's particular needs, the sooner his staff can attend to other matters. His own studio, as opposed to office, is the one-time corn crib, separate from the barn yet within easy reach. Here is where he does his own writing. Yet two years ago, to escape the demands of teaching, administration and needy artists, he went to the American Academy in Rome for a sabbatical year (Ed. note: see "Rome, 1985," Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine, Summer 1986)—hence the maps of Italy covering the walls of his inner sanctum.

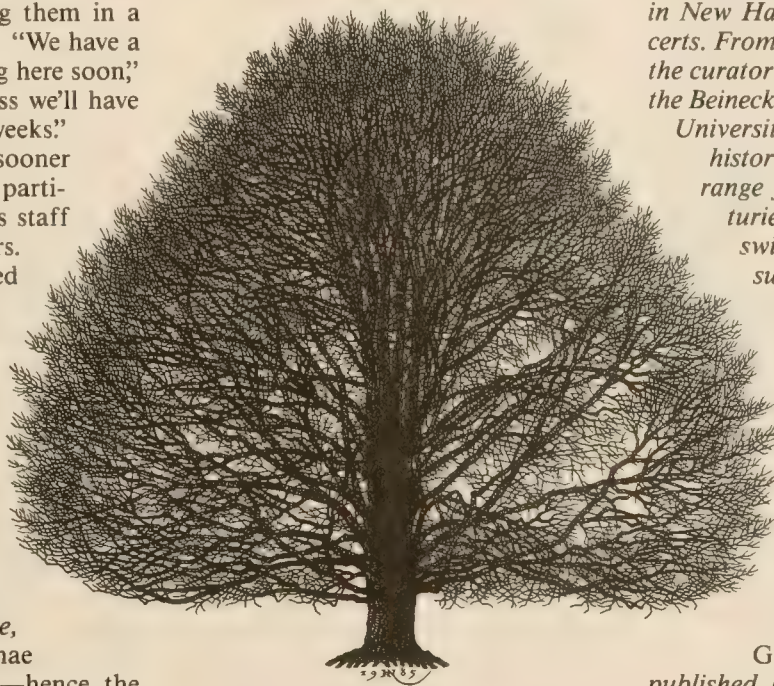

The courtyard of the barn holds sculpture by past fellows interspersed with objects trouvés: a classical stone urn from a Mt. San Angelo garden, troughs from the barn and an old gravestone cut with the striking symbol of a suicide that turned up on the former plantation. With typical skill, Smart has combined these disparate pieces of sculpture imaginatively yet appropriately.

Smart fills his administrative office, separate from the residence and studios, with books, records, artwork and the framed $1 check that the VCCA pays Sweet Briar every year for rent—a good deal for both of them, he comments. Here he oversees day-to-day operations. The center, which welcomes fellows every day of the year including Christmas, with five weeks an average stay, must constantly seek financial support, both public and private. He is a perpetual fundraiser: fellows pay $15 a day or more if they can afford it, but each day costs the center $70.

Smart also oversees applicants. Prospective fellows send samples of their work for review by panelists who are professional artists themselves and often former fellows. For summer, when applicants may be freed from teaching and other jobs to support themselves and their families, the VCCA receives five applications for every place.

The VCCA publishes a series of books, including an anthology of poetry, stories and essays by former fellows. Jacques Hnizdovsky, who visited each year from 1978 until his death in 1985, made a woodcut of the copper beech that is the colophon for the VCCA's books. His woodcut of a black and white cow is another favorite, although by no means the only representation of those bovine creatures that dot the peaceful hillsides.

The center, Smart says, will be proud of those artists who become famous for work they did here at the beginning of their careers. But most of them, he adds, will have enriched the lives of the rest of us without recognition. As for Smart, the colony is his achievement. Whatever novels he may have sacrificed to shape the colony, he finds satisfaction in his magnum opus. As any artist feels toward his creation, he says quite simply, "I hope that it will outlive me." ♦

A shortened version of "A Haven for Creative Artists" appeared in the November 8, 1987 edition of The Boston Sunday Globe.

At Sweet Briar Beth Riely was a house president, member of the varsity hockey team and choir and for two years director of the Sweet Tones. After graduating with a major in music (voice), she earned a Master of Music degree in voice from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. She has taught music at the Shipley School, Bryn Mawr, PA and Grammar-Day Prospect Hill School in New Haven, CT, while giving concerts. From 1971-80 she was assistant to the curator of the Osborn Collection in the Beinecke Rare Book Library of Yale University, whose English literary, historical and musical manuscripts range from the 17th to 20th centuries. In 1980 Beth decided to switch hobby and career, pursuing her interest in food professionally. Although she still sings for pleasure, she writes free-lance food features for newspapers such as The Boston Globe, The New York Times and The Christian Science Monitor, and for magazines such as Bon Appétit, Gourmet, COOK'S, Travel & Leisure, Connoisseur and the Journal of Gastronomy. Van Nostrand published her first book, The Chef's Companion: A Concise Dictionary of Culinary Terms, in 1986. Beth's husband, John Riely, is a professor of English at Boston University, specializing in the 18th century, and they have two sons, Christopher and Andrew, ages 12 and 4. Beth is the daughter of Elizabeth Campbell Gavthrop '39; John's aunt, Emmy Riely Lemaire, graduated from SBC in 1930.

Wacht! Euch zum Streit

BY SARA RUHLE
KYLE '75

Seventeenth-century German music has always been a passion of mine. From my days at Sweet Briar in the mid-'70s, I have devoted my academic and professional life to the study and performance of this delightfully unpredictable music. The generations before Bach, including such composers as Samuel Scheidt, Dietrich Buxtehude and Matthias Weckmann, offer a wealth of music that is little known by the typical concertgoer, who is, on the other hand, quite familiar with the music of Bach, Handel and Vivaldi—all representatives of the late Baroque, the early 18th century. My interests in 17th-century German music focus on the organ music and sacred vocal music of the latter half of the century.

Almost 10 years ago I stumbled upon an extraordinary work that sums up the cultural and historical milieu of this era. But first, a bit of background. After graduating in music (organ performance) from Sweet Briar in 1975, I went straight to graduate school in musicology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. There I began to explore the history of music before 1800—the Middle Ages, the Renaissance and the early Baroque. I approached 17th-century North German organ music from a scholarly perspective. This complemented the performance viewpoint and experience that I had worked on so intensely at Sweet Briar. For Ph.D. study I decided to explore genres of sacred vocal music from my chosen period.

The vocal music is much less performed and studied in this country than the keyboard music, which is accessible to the average organist and harpsichordist. In vocal music the text is always a problem. Not only is the German language a barrier to most Americans, but the quality of many nonbiblical texts is simply not great. (The 17th century was definitely a valley in the history of German literature.) The music itself is charming, although some people fear its flowing form, which emerges from the textual structure, as well as its mingling of modal and more modern tonal harmonies. That is to say, the music is not as simple for modern ears to understand as is a Mozart opera. These and other perceived difficulties—perhaps even the strong ties to the Lutheran church—cause many English-speaking performers and even scholars to shy away from learning more than mere tokens of sacred vocal music from 17th-century Germany.

Not surprisingly, German scholars have always embraced the freshness and great expressiveness of this music and have made excellent representatives of the period available in modern editions. Of course much music remains to be published and, unfortunately, a tremendous number of manuscripts and scores have been lost over the years.

The student of this period does not have an easy road to travel, but I can testify that the journey will be a fascinating one. While searching for a dissertation topic, I came upon a single large work that had been widely discussed, argued over and even printed in a distorted version; but it had never really been studied. I decided to tackle a comprehensive study of this problematic composition.

The work in question is the earliest surviving German oratorio. Dating from the early 1680s, it is a reflective drama, unstaged, in three acts (performance time: approximately three hours). The subject is man's struggle against the temptations of worldly values and his contemplation of the final judgment by God. This oratorio is similar in musical style to the early German opera of the period, although it includes biblical quotations and church chorales as well as poetry. Early German operas were occasionally based on biblical stories, but the librettos did not draw directly on the Bible or hymns. Rather, the scriptural passage was used merely as the central idea for the opera. We know that other German oratorios were performed around 1680 and later. A few librettos have survived or at least been described. However, since no other music exists, this lone oratorio is a critical link in the history of the genre oratorio. As such it merits special attention.

Alas, this work is riddled with thorny problems and uncertainties. It is transmitted anonymously in a manuscript housed in the Düben Collection at Uppsala University in Sweden. There is no title page, so we call it by the first line of text, Wacht! Euch zum Streit gefasset macht (Awake! Prepare yourselves to fight). The manuscript was never used in a performance, for a few instrumental passages are incomplete and some blatant scribal errors remain uncorrected. (Overall, the manuscript is in very good condition.) No date is given, although watermark analysis assures us that it could not have been copied later than 1686 and thus was surely composed at least a year or two before this Swedish copy was made. These minor problems create many topics for exhaustive discussion, yet they pale when compared to the question of who composed the work.

The most obvious answer is Dietrich Buxtehude (ca. 1637-1707), who was well known for directing a series of evening concerts held during Advent at his church, St. Mary's, in Lübeck (on the Baltic Sea in North Germany). These concerts, called Abendmusiken (evening musics), were funded by the merchants of the city and were not part of church services. However, they did follow the regular Sunday evening Vespers service. Oratorios were performed serially, one part (or act) each Sunday. In 1678 the oratorio was in two parts; by 1690 Buxtehude had established the tradition of a five-part oratorio. The three acts of Wacht! Euch zum Streit, if performed around 1682 or 1683, would certainly have been in keeping with the oratorio's development in Lübeck. Based on this brief description of Buxtehude's famous concerts, he is the most likely composer of Wacht! Euch zum Streit. The problem arises when scholars focus on the question of attribution and become so involved in arguing for or against Buxtehude that the work itself is slighted. In my dissertation I set out to correct that slight.

I made a comprehensive study of Wacht! Euch zum Streit that included discussions of the manuscript, the numerous scholarly arguments concerning Buxtehude as author, the historical context, the libretto and the musical style. My findings cannot confirm Buxtehude as the composer, but he remains the likeliest candidate. I also edited a sizable portion of the manuscript that had been omitted from a modern edition published in 1939. The result was a complete picture of Wacht! Euch zum Streit. While many of the questions have no answers, at least all avenues of investigation have now been explored. Even more important, the entire oratorio is available for performance and study.

When I accomplished my task in 1982, I had no delusions of a gala performance. Such undertakings are not only expensive but exceedingly difficult to organize. Getting together the correct combination of singers and instrumentalists is particularly challenging for performances of 17th-century music because the scoring is far from standard. Works were typically written for the forces at hand, not for the set ensembles we find in later music. So when in 1986 I was informed that Wacht! Euch zum Streit would provide the central event of a conference on 17th-century German music, I was ecstatic.

The Westfield Center for Early Keyboard Studies in Massachusetts was planning to hold a celebration of Buxtehude's 350th birthday at Wellesley College in June of 1987. The celebration was to include the first modern performance of Wacht! Euch zum Streit, to take place over three evenings; a number of small concerts and organ recitals featuring the music of Buxtehude and other German composers of the century; and a scholarly conference focusing on German music from the early 1600s through Buxtehude. Eminent scholars from Germany and the U.S. would participate along with performers from Germany. The Hannover Boys' Choir and Fiori musicali (from Bremen, an excellent early music ensemble that performs on original instruments) would perform the oratorio. I was asked to present my opinion on the attribution to Buxtehude and then to lead a discussion on the subject. I also offered the edition from my dissertation to be used as part of the complete performing edition. Finally, I offered the libretto and my translation for the concert programs.

When time for the conference arrived, I had feelings of excitement mixed with fears that my work would be crucified and a reluctance to resurrect the many details of a project so long completed. Yet I knew that here was my chance to truly complete my dissertation project. I had a forum of the best minds in the field and I was prepared to find out just what they thought about Wacht! Euch zum Streit and my study of it.

I am thankful to say that my years of work paid off handsomely. Not only was my scholarship deemed sound, but the performance was impressive to all. For me, hearing this music at long last was a very beautiful and deeply meaningful experience. After more than 12 years my work in 17th-century German music had matured. Those initial flirtations with German music before Bach at Sweet Briar were certainly the beginning and the impetus of a fulfilling course of study that will, I hope, continue for years to come. ♦

Sweet Briar Professor Allen Huszti, chairman of the department of music, was in attendance for Sara Ruhle's presentation at the Westfield Center for Early Keyboard Studies Conference and wrote to President Fry: "Sara presented a paper at the conference which was scholarly, interesting and met with great enthusiasm from the assembled group of musicologists (including Christoph Wolff, the Harvard Bach scholar who surprised the world in 1985 with the discovery of the Yale Collection chorale preludes). . . I strongly believe that Sweet Briar College has much to be proud of in Sara Ruhle Kyle and I don't think that any event in my experience at the College has moved me to such an extent as this experience. I was proud of Sweet Briar as an institution and of Sara as a student trained in that institution."

Sara currently lives in Hillsborough, NC with her husband and two sons, Richard, two and Peter, three months.

...what the women of Sweet Briar gave me, I shall never forget.

While reading Richard B. Sewall's The Life of Emily Dickinson recently, I came upon six pages describing the "founder and guiding spirit" of Mount Holyoke, Mary Lyon. As I read Professor Sewall's sympathetic, imaginative account of this extraordinary woman, my own memories and impressions of generations of Sweet Briar professors and administrators flooded my consciousness for the first time in some years.

When I was a student (1955-59), I did not fully realize what I was imbibing until, during my senior year, I read Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman's ('34) The Story of Sweet Briar College. Prior to that time I had been aware of certain aspects of campus life that impressed me: for instance, the daily sight of Miss Eleanor Barton, professor of history of art, seated at her desk on the first floor of Academic for hours on end, always with the window open during good weather, never looking up to see who was passing on the arcade, always fixed in pure concentration on her scholarly work. I never tired of seeing her there, but at the time I was not able to comprehend completely what it was that attracted me to that scene.

It is now 28 years since I read Mrs. Stohlman's book. I have forgotten many of the wonderful things in it, but I remember its dominant feature: the portrayal of Mary K. Benedict. It seemed to me then that I had never read a more heroic tale than that of Miss Benedict's struggle against staggering odds to build a college that would be, so far from the "finishing school" of the annoyingly persistent legend, a first-rate academic institution from its inception.

Miss Benedict, like many bright, bookish women of achievement, was thought by many to be aloof, intimidating, lacking in personal graces. Mary Lyon, similarly if not identically, had an undeserved reputation for rigidity and harshness. Society is quicker to admire single-mindedness in men than in professional women. I recall, however, from my earliest childhood, hearing my aunt Mary V. Parker '11 speak frequently of Miss Benedict with deepest reverence and affection. Miss Lyon, too, inspired devotion. Looking back today, it pleases me to think that Eleanor Barton—another intimidating figure, some might have said, but warmly supportive of many students—had her office in the building which is now called Benedict.

I am thinking of a type of woman, not so often seen today, that made many of the women's colleges of America great. I do not want to imply that they were all alike, nor do I intend to romanticize them. More often than not, they kept their inner lives well hidden; no doubt they had their share of doubts, neuroses, frustrations, compulsions—as men do. But in their intellectual vigor, their fierce dedication, their tenacious fidelity to a sometimes lonely cause, their simply styled but intensely lived lives, they put many present-day career women to shame.

They were committed to the pursuit of learning and to the building of character in their colleges. These two aims were equally yoked. Today we smile, even sneer at the quaint language once used to rally and inspire the "young ladies." We feel so modern and lofty in our relief that the rigidities of old have been loosened, the rules relaxed, the concept of in loco parentis demolished. What we have lost, however, is the ideal of teaching as a noble and ennobling profession. We no longer expect faculty to set an example in their personal lives. The whole concept of "character" is alien. The phrase from the Sweet Briar Handbook of my day, "good taste and good judgment," seems risible now, as much as Emily Dickinson's hated "Dimity Convictions."

But when I think of faculty and administrators like Eleanor Barton, Mary J. Pearl, Catherine Sims, Lysbeth Muncy, Martha von Briesen '31, Ethel and Sarah T. Ramage, and scores of others, though I am not thinking of women without faults, I nevertheless think of women whose whole lives were devoted to the idea of a college as a place in which young women could develop their best selves, mind and spirit. I am thinking of women who, I believe, considered it just as important to display rectitude in their lives as competence in the classroom or professionalism in the office.

Most of these women were single. If they had love lives, disappointed or otherwise, they did not say so. In fact, it is remarkable to me how little speculation and gossip about them there was, all things considered. I am reminded of what Sigmund Freud's archivist K. R. Eissler said about Anna Freud—"I had the feeling of a great personality, not an old maid." (Miss Sparrow said of Miss Benedict, "she radiated serenity, power. Here was a great soul!")

Today women of ability tend to be oriented toward business and law, as these fields open up to them. Teaching and college administration no longer attract large numbers of the intellectual elite from the graduating classes, either women or men. It is cause for serious alarm, not only because the ranks of college faculties will no longer be made up of the best and the brightest, but also because it will be thought that money and worldly prestige count for more than the satisfaction of a life lived in the service of an academic community.

I stress "community". I am not unaware of the ugly rivalries and jealousies that plague faculties everywhere; however, I believe that there was an era of large-souled, intellectual women of great personal integrity who created an exceptional atmosphere in American women's colleges. After living in New York for 18 years, I have come to notice that there is an esprit, a commitment to intellectual values, a sense of the self as part of a wider society and a confident womanliness that distinguishes Seven Sister graduates from today's young Ivy League women. I can't prove it, but it seems to me that there was something about the all-female colleges that produced a superior breed of women. It has become almost a joke between my husband and me that four out of five impressive women we meet seem to turn out to be graduates of women's colleges.

I am speaking primarily of graduates up through the mid-70s. It remains to be seen whether this can last. Certainly the numbers of Mary Lyonses and Mary K. Benedicts are dwindling rapidly. But what the women of Sweet Briar gave me I shall never forget.

When I was editor of the Sweet Briar yearbook in 1958, I chose a photograph to fill a full page at the head of the faculty/administration section. It shows Dean Hosken, Sarah Ramage, Lysbeth Muncy and Eleanor Barton standing together. They are holding teacups; they are wearing tweed suits and "sensible shoes." None of them is looking into the camera; they are sharing a joke among themselves. It is the vivid look of camaraderie and joy on their countenances that arrested me then and still gladdens me today. I have recently had this photograph reproduced so that I could frame it and put it on the wall in my office, where it reminds me each day of the values they taught me to cherish: intellectual passion, strength of character, confidence about vocation, love of the human community and the conviction that the life of the mind is exhilarating enough to fill the empty spaces in my restless psyche and give its longing a worthy focus to sustain me, from now to kingdom come.

Fleming Rutledge, one of the first women to be regularly ordained a priest in the Episcopal Church, has been in the parish ministry for 13 years. She currently serves as assistant minister on the staff at Grace Church in New York City, a parish internationally known for its preaching in the evangelical and Reformed tradition. Before going to Grace Church, she served for six years at Christ's Church, Rye, NY, where she was associate rector, taught numerous classes and developed an extensive youth ministry. She has published a number of articles and reviews and is widely known as a conference speaker, Biblical preacher and leader in evangelical renewal. She received an M.Div. from Union Theological Seminary, New York in 1975. A member of Phi Beta Kappa at Sweet Briar College, she graduated magna cum laude with highest honors in English in 1959. She is married to R.E. Rutledge, Jr., an executive with the firm of Arthur Andersen; the Rutledges have two grown daughters.

She notes that "I have named women who were known to me personally, or who taught subjects that I studied, or with whom I worked. There are scores of other splendid women who might equally well be mentioned."

Putting Our Heads Together: Women Talking to Women

BY VIRGINIA LOHNER

Assistant Dean
Sweet Briar College

Last spring a group of us interested in exploring the potentially synergistic relationship between the new research on women and study of the liberal arts and sciences at Sweet Briar College joined forces in an enthusiastic session. The consensus after this initial meeting was that we needed more such informal occasions to consider this dynamic synthesis. As we projected the sorts of sessions people seemed to want, we recognized in Chaplain Lehman's successful weekly "Current Events Over Dinner" series a format for the kinds of candid discussions we were seeking. With President Nenah Fry, Professors Judith Evans Grubbs (classical studies), Marcia Robertson (English) and Joanne Rosinski (biology), as well as Dr. Martha Barry (counseling psychologist) agreeing to be presenters in this series, we had the means of drawing an interested audience of students, faculty, staff and other members of the Sweet Briar community. My role in opening the series was to set the stage for some of the many issues we might want to spotlight in the course of these discussions.

I chose my title for several reasons. First because it conveys a sense of purpose in gathering to share thoughts about women's lives. Then, because it suggests the heart of my task-oriented argument.

Many things can be said about what it means when women talk to women. We women have been talking to each other for ages, so this activity isn't novel. Then again, it is more unusual than it may seem. When women talk these days, we are constantly discovering and sharing knowledge that can change our lives. For example, how powerful it is to discover that a problem individually attributed to personal failure or inadequacy is shared by other women. It is exhilarating to realize how much we have in common and yet recognize and appreciate how different we are from one another.

We can begin by emphasizing the significance of women talking to women at the personal level, but we must not stop there. We also need to consider more extended implications of women talking to women. If, as a result, we gain strength and knowledge we can use, perhaps we will conclude that the new scholarship on women is something we want to, indeed must, share with our students. Purposefully, women talking to women frequently meet in public arenas these days. In many college and university settings this public dimension is called women's studies. The field of women's studies is an area of keen interest to me; I'd like to share some thoughts on why it has the potential to make our students more confident women and more engaged learners. We women are confident when we have a healthy understanding of who we are and what we want to do, become, make of our lives. The more we learn/teach about ourselves/each other, the more likely it is we will thrive. By putting our heads together, we can encourage women to be smart risk takers, to be uppity, to dare. Women talking to women know we live in relation to others. But before we can affirm anyone else, we have to be able to affirm ourselves and our experience as women. Then our engagement in learning can be a passion that sustains and delights us, defining our sense of purpose through the definition we give our lives.

To support my argument that women more readily develop intellectual potential when our experience is validated and integrated into the learning process, I want to touch upon language as a shaping force in our culture, the power we derive from knowing our history, fighting violence against women and children, the politics of “women’s issues” and the tradition of women’s education as a potent catalyst for change.

□ Women talking to women use language that upon closer scrutiny is not infrequently misogynist. Test # 1: Take a quick count of terms in our language used to refer negatively to women. Now, a comparison/contrast is in order. Can we come up with anything like this degree of contempt-laden language when referring to men? Test # 2: Why were 19th-century woman suffrage advocates so opposed to including the word man in the 14th amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America? Test # 3: Are expressions like mankind, chairman, freshman, upperclassman, underclassman, fellowship, one-man show, craftsman, God the father, forefathers, etc. free of prejudice? Are they inclusive or exclusive where women are concerned? Is man the measure of all things? Can we be mindful of all the people on this earth if we allow language to blithely omit more than half the world’s population? Isn’t it interesting to observe that the terms woman/women are truly inclusive? Such inclusive language helps bridge differences between persons of one gender or the other, one race or another, one nation or another. Language as a fundamental human elaboration conveying our sense of culture from one generation to the next is a marvelous tool. Yet it is never adequate to the task. That’s why when someone argues that he is generic, i.e. gender neutral, or that insisting on s/he variations is ridiculous, we need to critically examine this voice and the biases it fails to acknowledge.

Of course, men aren’t alone in expressing contempt for women through the use of misogynist language. A recent example is a denigrating evaluation of the following statement: “Women of today are challenged with unprecedented opportunities but hindered by discriminatory attitudes and practices?” Is this statement valid; is it factual? Can we support it with concrete evidence? Is it scolding to make such a statement? Who scolds? Whose voice gets shrill? We women need to pay attention to what we say. We need to question what all too often we accept without thorough reexamination. We need to consider whether reaffirming the status quo of received opinion is more important than our loyalty to each other. If we can’t affirm our worth, why would anyone else?

In our contemporary society with its information explosion, there are many texts to read and we are all—whether literate or not—readers of texts and subtexts. We can and do recognize the power of nonverbal language to shape our sense of reality. Images too are “texts,” and the persuasive power of the

Until we are prepared to open the gates and allow women students access to what they need to know in order to value themselves and their potential to learn, we will be frustrated gatekeepers always decrying wasted potential and lack of vital curiosity about what it means to be fully alive.

messages they convey—especially where women are concerned—demand our heightened critical awareness. Long before media bashing became fashionable, women were scrutinizing the role played by the media in shaping our conceptions of women and mystifying our understanding of what the women challenging the status quo were trying to accomplish. With the 1987 Miss America Pageant a recent memory, let us dispel a media myth dating from 1968: women protesters at the pageant did not burn their bras. That media ploy has lived on to become a ridiculous and commonly repeated distortion of the facts. We women can put our heads together by understanding how lack of such knowledge about ourselves leaves us fragmented and thus undermines our confidence. By focusing more intently on how language—the powerful, provocative and often playful tool that it is—shapes our relationships to self and others, we can continue discovering how to put our heads (back) together both literally and figuratively.

□ Women talking to women about her story as opposed to his story might echo the title of James Agee’s and Walker Evans’ classic study of the rural South during the Depression: Let us now praise famous women. I prefer to use “feminist” instead of “famous,” primarily because the former includes all the uncommon common women who have left us a rich legacy. This legacy creates vital links between our past, our present and our future. Feminism is the inheritance of all educated women. Without its sustaining power to make visible and articulate what we might otherwise overlook and fail to relate, we wouldn’t be here at Sweet Briar College engaged in educating women.

Here’s a problem which feminist research, analysis and theory are trying to help resolve: how do women pass along experience from one generation to the next so that we aren’t obliged to learn by making the same mistakes again and again? Some ready examples come to mind: women in the Abolition movement, women in the home front effort needed to win WWII, women in the Civil Rights movement.

In each of these instances, women were central players who lost out when men intent on reaffirming the status quo determined to block women’s aspirations by withholding the right to vote, the right to work, the right to share in decision making. Women in the more recent Civil Rights and anti-war movements finally turned their backs on male chauvinists and reestablished a women’s movement that continues to manifest itself today in every facet of women’s lives.

Why must women study the past? There are many answers, but foremost we need to learn we have a history of which to be proud. We can find role models in the past: remarkable women who overcame prodigious obstacles to achieve their purposes. Even though the problems we face today are different in some ways, their examples of courage, audacity, strength and vision inspire us to higher achievement and fuller commitment of ourselves to leadership roles.

□ Putting our heads together with the help of historical information and analysis we can begin to understand why violence against women (and children) is an especially disturbing issue. According to the Victorian doctrine of separate spheres which held that men alone belonged in the public domain, women's security has depended upon male protection. More or less restricted to the private home, middle-class women paid a high price for their supposed security. Feminists have long challenged this arbitrary distinction between public and private domains because we have been quick to recognize the fundamental insecurity of women in a patriarchal dictatorship, whether public or private, however benevolent and paternalist. Women who "trespass"—still today—know we are vulnerable and must take precautions to assure our safety. But the vulnerability of women and children in the privacy of the home has long gone unacknowledged—except by women. The cliché "A man's home is his castle" suggests how the exemplary citizen could become a monster behind closed doors. Emphasis on the continuity rather than the discontinuity of public and private lives has been a constant theme in the feminist analysis of society. When women see such boundary lines now, they are marked for further scrutiny; they no longer hold the power to block access and turn us away from the projects we have in mind.

Today we know that 1/3 of all women murdered are murdered by their husbands or boyfriends and that wife battering is a fact for from two to six million women a year in this country alone, and that these figures are conservative (Iris #16,70). We know too that far too many men and women continue to see rape as the price a woman must risk paying when a man gets "turned on" (Iris #16,69). Women, as in Victorian times, are still too often described and self-described as "hating sex." Finally confident perhaps in our sexual maturity, we older women should be talking more to younger women about what constitutes

"good sex." We should also be sharing self-defense information with our students and each other, because Sweet Briar is a haven which may lull us into believing we can lower much needed defenses. We owe the women who have been attacked, more often than not by someone we thought we could trust, and the children who have been sexually abused, more often than not by someone we thought we could trust, our outrage and action. We owe the women who refuse to be portrayed as victims—that is passive, and unable to take care of ourselves—our respect and support. You may have read recently about testimony making a case for psychological self-defense when women have killed the battering husband or lover even though

With more than 50% of the world's population, with more than 50% of this country's population, with more than 50% of the American college and university populations now female, we are definitely not talking from a minority position.

the battering wasn't in process at the time of the killing. Here is evidence that laws defining self-defense require rethinking to challenge assumptions that put women at a distinct disadvantage. As our justice system strives to do a better job responding to the particular dilemmas of women in a society defined by man-made laws, we can expect important perceptual changes to occur.

A final note on violence and women. We women inflict violence on ourselves, too. For instance, as anorexics and bulimics. We need to talk with each other about these issues as well. A woman by the name of Lois Wyse has said, "Men are taught to apologize for their weaknesses; women for their strengths" (Iris #16,72). Women with high self-esteem, with a good sense of self-worth, with self-respect and healthy self-acceptance are women who are far less likely to want to hurt ourselves. We women need to build our shared strength by talking about the factors in our society which work against such positive self-imaging.

Women talking to women can help us guard against violence being done to women's aspirations for leadership roles. During the Renaissance, man was the measure of all things. Historian Joan Kelly asked rhetorically if women had had a Renaissance. She concluded that the glorification of man which typified the Renaissance cost women many of the rights—political and social—they had been able to accumulate up until that time.

□ Women in the 1970s played tongue-in-cheek with Leonardo's "Canon of True Proportion" which has been appropriated these days as the Manpower, Inc. logo. But mere substitution didn't satisfy. The circle of power had/has to be opened to allow other voices with other colorations to be heard. Women here and abroad made long, hard fights to win the vote. In the U.S., it took millions of dollars, more than 50 state referenda, 480 campaigns aimed at legislatures, 47 state constitutional campaigns, 30 presidential platform campaigns and 19 lobbying campaigns with 19 successive Congresses before the 19th amendment became the law of the land.

As Judith Nies further points out, on August 26, 1920, American women finally gained a right immigrant men received the moment they took out naturalization papers (90-91). Since 1920, women's increasingly active and focused use of this hard won right has moved us closer to breaking through the hermetic seal on this circle of power.

At issue now is what constitutes "women's issues"? While some male politicians have used the red herring of "mere women's issues" as a lever to keep women out of the major political arenas by trying to imply that diapers, detergents and dinners form women's primary concerns, women have long recognized that "women's issues" are the most basic issues of all: everything from life to death, from planned parenthood to nuclear disarmament. With more than 50% of the world's population, with more than 50% of this country's population, with more than 50% of the American college and university populations now female, we are definitely not talking from a minority position. We are talking human issues and we need to speak in and listen to the voices of the long-silenced majority. Advocating neither tyranny of the majority nor of the minority, women talking to women and to men need to be heard and to hold ourselves accountable for the quality of political leadership we can offer. Women students on campuses like our own need to understand what is expected of engaged and responsible citizens. Only then will they be prepared to make the kinds of sensitive and life-affirming decisions needed to assure the health and well-being of this nation and this world.

□ Judith Nies argues that "tradition means process. It is the means by which one generation passes its ideas and beliefs on to the next" (xi). Perhaps nowhere else is the process of American women's passing on an inheritance as strongly marked as in the tradition of women's education. Elizabeth Cady Stanton warned long ago that "self development is a higher duty than SELF-SACRIFICE. The thing which most retards and militates against women's self development is self-sacrifice." Perhaps one of the reasons why women have been more susceptible to self-sacrifice than is healthy is that affirming our sense of self has always been problematic. We have been like onions peeled back layer by layer to reveal no center. Despite Yeats' prophetic warning, "the center will not hold;" we must still posit/acknowledge a self/a center before we can begin to weigh its claims for relevancy.

Assuming we have achieved a consciousness/an awareness of "self;" we are ready to incorporate ideas that dynamically reinterpret the act of centering. That is, to reinforce our sense that if a stable, essential center is no longer conceivable, to avoid paralysis we must be able to keep our balance amidst multiple centers. For example, Nies defines tradition as a process, a motor of change; others are inclined to define tradition as a braking system, an inhibitor of change. By handling, weighing and considering the paradox suggested by this opposition rather than denying it, we can affirm both positions while recognizing the limitations of each. The dramatic growth of scholarship by and about women seen in the last 20 years is an aspect of women's education that both seizes tradition and defies it. No discipline goes untouched by feminist challenges to unquestioned assumptions stated as "objective truths." Such claims are always value laden. No one knows this better than women who haven't had a whole lot to say about whose values are going to prevail.

A primary generating force behind women's education today is the need to move beyond ways of seeing and interpreting information that inhibit the realization of women's potential. And women are now very sure that what limits our potential limits the potential of everyone else. Until education is allowed to be the revolutionary/evolutionary force it can be, until education is both a bearer of tradition and a braker of tradition, no one will be able to achieve her/his range and depth of knowledge and understanding. Given the shape we're in today and the future we want to guarantee for coming generations, we need all the knowledge and understanding we can develop and share. Women's education must meet this challenge. It's a tradition!

LANGUAGE, HISTORY, VIOLENCE, POLITICS, TRADITION: by putting our heads together literally, figuratively and symbolically, by talking women to women, we are able to consider how we can work together to assure that women's education and the educated women of this and coming generations are being prepared for the world of today and tomorrow. This objective articulates my understanding of the guiding mission of the College. I am convinced that women's studies is necessary to the realization of this mission. For until we are prepared to give our students explicit and studied access to understanding how language, history, violence, politics and tradition impact on their lives, we have no basis for criticizing lack of intellectual eagerness and commitment. Until we are prepared to open the gates and allow women students access to what they need to know in order to value themselves and their potential to learn, we will be frustrated gatekeepers always decrying wasted potential and lack of vital curiosity about what it means to be fully alive. ♦

"When you educate a woman, you educate the world."

A Present to the Newborn

BY EMILY HUNTER
SLINGLUFF '55

A motto of the Feminist Movement? Not quite! These are the words of Anne Gary Pannell, President of Sweet Briar College when I was there in the '50s. She spoke to us as we sat in Manson Hall at Convocation. She said that we, as women, were indeed important. We were being educated and as our thoughts were being molded, so would be those of our families and, thus, the world.

Between thoughts of weekends at the University of Virginia and general thoughts of life at Sweet Briar (those snowy winter nights, those warm spring days), I heard her. Yes: the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.

So what have we come to? Who does rock the cradle? Does it matter? The answer is yes. It matters. More than anything else.

Most thinking people have wondered at some time or other how to help make this world a better place. There are many ways, of course. There are contributions to be made in numerous fields—medicine, technology, teaching, energy conservation—an unending list of endeavors. But the world can be no better than the people in it. How make the people better? Parental influence is the most important influence in a person's life...early parental influence...every single influence in a child's formative years. The parent makes the decisions and allows the influences, in that first year of a child's life, in that second year, in those third and fourth years.

Life is a series of choices for all of us at any age. A young woman can choose whether or not to have a baby and then can choose just about what kind of person that baby will become. A parent can think about and decide what character traits are important and then instill these in the young child. Blaming the child's school or the child's friends or "the times in which we live" is simply removing the responsibility from the shoulders where it rests.

Perhaps many of you Sweet Briar alumnae and family and friends reading this magazine have thought just what I think. Thanks to the strong encouragement of an educator in Norfolk, I have written down these feelings about the importance of a parent in the life of her child, or his child. Maybe inclusion of the father is a new improvement over the idea of the mother's extreme influence; Dr. Anne Pannell and other thinkers from the past undoubtedly would accept the changes that include the father's larger role today in parenting. The rest of those old ideas still stand. The world may have changed, but the values have not. Neither has the reality that the mother of a young child has a job, an important one, a job demanding beyond all others.

As I say in my recently published book, A Present to the Newborn, a mother can make of that job what she chooses. And as for any other job at the same time, that too is her decision. There is only a certain amount of energy in each human being. How a mother uses that energy is her choice; what job or jobs she does and how well she does them is her choice. So is her child's future.

I have written a brief but bold book. I have left out statistics. The style is very simple, so that anyone can read it easily and quickly. The margins are wide, the spaces are large. I wanted that so that the reader, while thoughts are being suggested and questions asked, can mentally fill in the blank spaces.

A Present to the Newborn is not only about the importance of the parent; it is also about the joy of the parent-child relationship. It is not a burden to raise a child. It need not be even a stressful undertaking. The parent, not the child, designs the relationship. . . a master-slave situation or an open, happy one. Why not strive for happiness? It seems to me that if a parent raises a happy child—not a happy-go-lucky child, but one who is truly happy just to be alive—then the world will be better. A happy person will be a productive member of society or, at least, not a detrimental one. Striving to instill true happiness in another person is a worthy goal.

An interesting Sweet Briar touch is that the book's cover features a picture of the granddaughter of classmate Betty Sanford Molster. She is a darling baby and the picture catches a perfect look of impressionability.

I am honored to have the opportunity to write to Sweet Briar alumnae. Memories of college days are strong; Sweet Briar does leave its mark. Every influence in life matters. But the influence that remains strongest comes from the brain of the hand that rocks the cradle. ♦

Jane Hemenway '78: Special Agent With the FBI

BY NOREEN DONNELLY
PARKER

Assistant Editor and Class Notes Editor
Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine

Jane Hemenway '78 spent several days on campus in October talking to students about her career as a special agent with the FBI. She is the third alumna to participate in a special program, established in 1985 by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Czarra, parents of Penny Czarra '75, to bring successful young alumnae in nontraditional fields of endeavor back to campus. Jane, who earned her J.D. from Howard University in 1981, looked every inch the young lawyer in her smart blazer and skirt and elegant high-heeled shoes. It was hard to believe that she doesn't spend most of her time in the courtroom or behind a desk. But as she chatted to us in the alumnae office, started speaking fluent Russian when asked, and drew aside her jacket to show us the 357 magnum Smith and Wesson revolver nestled unobtrusively in its holster against her hip, it became obvious that her career is indeed nontraditional.

"The image of Ephreim Zimbalist, Jr. in The FBI Story has been around a very long time," said Jane. "For some people, it's still a shock to see a woman as a special agent. That can work to our advantage, actually, since no one expects an investigator to be a woman." Jane is one of only 628 women in a force of 8,688 agents. She says she has faced no difficulties on account of being a woman, that the men have accepted her and work with her. She is even known as a "street agent" and that is a great (if unofficial) honor. (" 'Street agent' is FBI slang for an agent who can survive and work in the grossest neighborhoods.")

ment bodies all over the country. All police departments have access to its fingerprint division and its computerized NCIC (National Crime Information Center), in which all details of every crime are entered. This computer system enabled Jane, while working in Milwaukee, to solve a murder that had occurred in Oklahoma; she also counted on the help of concerned social workers and nuns. "The FBI relies absolutely on a citizenry that will support it in its efforts," she emphasized.

The blazer and revolver may have replaced the cloak and dagger but Jane's work still sounds like the stuff of mystery thrillers. Once, on a plane with a terrorist aboard, she felt her life was in danger. (Did she panic? No, she prayed.) Though admitting that at present her place of work is an "off-site" on Manhattan, that she uses her Russian and has spent her share of time lurking around airports in a trenchcoat, unfortunately she couldn't give us details about her work for reasons of security. She is in the foreign counterintelligence department and works to prevent "technology transfers" out of the U.S. She told us that estimates show that a third of all the diplomats sent to this country by the Soviet Union are spies, so counterintelligence efforts to slow the drain of technological information to Russia are badly needed. Jane feels that she is serving her country in a very vital way. She was attracted to FBI work not just through patriotic reasons but because of her interest in law and foreign affairs. After law school, she worked for a firm of private investigators, won a political appointment to the Justice Department and, from there, just "fell into it." She welcomed the challenge and wanted to see if it was something at which she could succeed.

It was not easy. There was a 16-week training course which resembles basic training for the army. Jane took courses in hand-to-hand combat and in the use of weapons and at the end of it, was qualified to shoot a revolver, an M 16 rifle and a shotgun. Some of the tools of her trade that Jane brought to show the Sweet Briar students were her bullet-proof vest, handcuffs (she let them practice handcuffing each other) and her Bianchi shoulder holster, the best on the market, of which she is very proud. Nobody at Sweet Briar realized at first that Bianchi is to shoulder holster as Gucci is to shoe.

Jane thinks that every woman should know a bit about self-defense and about handling a weapon. Most men seem to know about those things (many of them through the military) and that knowledge gives them confidence and a feeling of being in control. Women benefit from these skills in the same way, but most of them still don't want to acquire them. "Women have to pay more attention to physical conditioning," said Jane, who was delighted to see Sweet Briar's new weight room. "There is nothing unfeminine about being strong and healthy."

Competition for jobs as FBI agents is very keen; the bureau wants experts whom they can then train to be agents. Applicants have to be college graduates with three years work experience; those with degrees in law, accounting, engineering and the physical sciences or with a bachelor's degree and fluency in certain languages, can get in without the work experience as long as they are at least 23 years old. Jane found her Sweet Briar degree in German and anthropology to be ideal preparation. "I have Professor Seaman to thank for giving me the idea of going to law school; she emphasized that a law degree would open the door to many exciting careers. And the main reason why I can stand up to superiors (usually older men) and make them listen to me now is because I argued with Professor Horwege all through my four years at Sweet Briar. It was wonderful." Jane's German classes were particularly relevant for her present work, and her facility with that language helped her when she took an intensive course in Russian. But apart from languages, Jane found all her courses at Sweet Briar both rewarding and useful. She reflected that "sometimes at Sweet Briar one feels a bit cut off from the world because it is so peaceful and beautiful here. But I found that everything I learned here, I used in the world outside." She added, "This job allows me to perform a remarkable and much-needed service to my country and is interesting and rewarding. Any Sweet Briar woman would be good at it."

Jane talked to the student body as a whole and met with Professor Seaman's sociology class, several German classes and Professor Gilpatrick's government class. She was impressed by the students' questions: Professor Seaman's students asked how marriage and a family fit in with this career (some of Jane's colleagues have families and they manage but she doesn't know how); the students of German wanted to know how languages can help one to combat crime, and they had a great discussion about

William Sebold whose spy-hostage case from the Second World War is a classic; and the government students asked about constitutional law and wondered how the federal and state jurisdictions worked together. Many students wondered about Jane's social life and she assured them it was fine—she just has to plan ahead to leave time for social activities as she would in any demanding job.

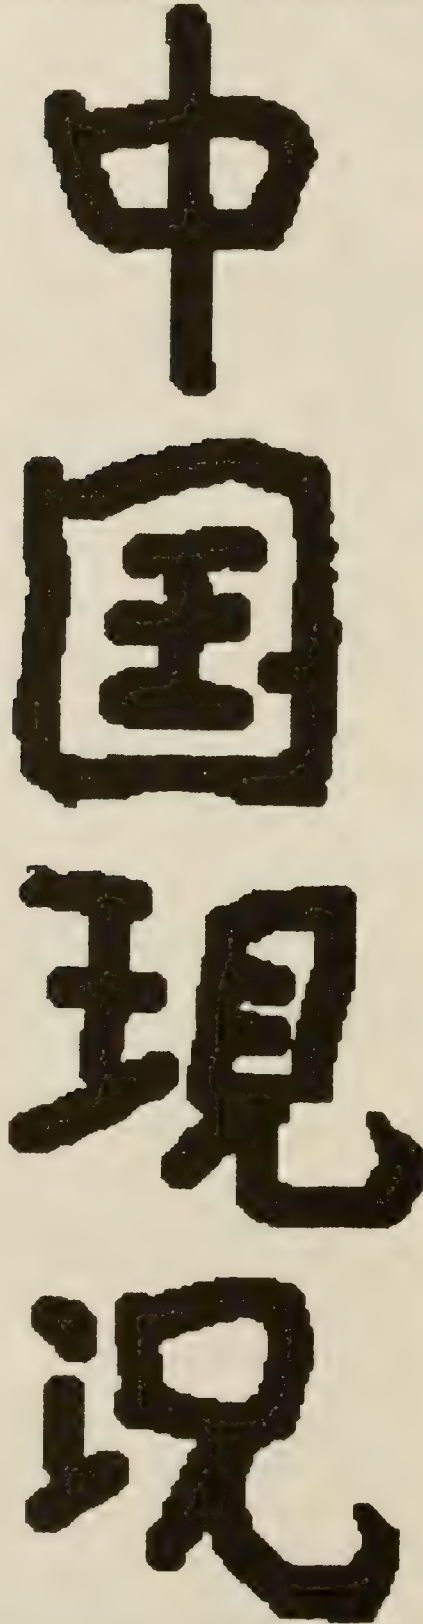

In announcing the appointment of Judge Sessions as the new director of the FBI, President Reagan said that he "still thrills to The FBI Story." One person who isn't watching reruns of The FBI Story, or any other police TV show, for relaxation these days, is Jane. There is just a bit too much truth in them. ♦

China Today

The Winter Forums are a series of Wednesday morning lectures focusing on a theme of general interest to Sweet Briar and the surrounding community. Founded in 1974 to encourage interaction between the College and the community, the series is sponsored by the Alumnae Association.

This year's forums topic was China Today. Kick-off speaker for the series on January 6 was Ann Anagnost, assistant professor in the department of anthropology, Center for East Asian and Pacific Studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Entitled "Production and Reproduction: Contradiction and Control in Post-Mao China", her presentation addressed the point that the goals of China's one-child family collide with the interest of peasant households who need many children to work the land and who are encouraged to prosper under the current economic reforms. She discussed why

China is pursuing two such contradictory policies simultaneously, what impact the policy and popular resistance to it has had on women and how the issues raised by China's birth control policy mirror our own controversies about reproduction and control. Professor Anagnost, who has done research and fieldwork in both the People's Republic of China and Taiwan, has contributed articles to the journal, Modern China.

"Religion in China Today" was the subject of the second lecture, delivered by Robert P. Weller, an anthropologist who lived and worked in mainland China and Taiwan for three years. Chinese religion was discouraged, although not actually forbidden, by the government after the Communist Revolution in 1949, and subsequently diminished. Today it is undergoing a remarkable resurgence that includes revived ancestor worship, rebuilt temples and even new Christian seminaries. Professor Weller explored some of the traditional background of religion in China, the reasons for the current interest in religion and its possible future directions. Currently he heads Duke University's Office of Study Abroad and teaches in the anthropology department; his publications include Unities and Diversities in Chinese Religion and numerous other books and articles on Chinese religion, rural life and revolt.

Sweet Briar's John I. Goulde, assistant professor of religion and specialist in Asian religions and civilizations, was the third speaker. His talk, "Who Are The Scoundrels? Chinese Literature After the Cultural Revolution" dealt with the fact that, although the theme of "the scoundrel" is traditional in Chinese literature, who the scoundrel is varies according to the times. From 1950 to 1980, when literature was dominated by the Communist party, the scoundrel was anyone who deviated from the party rules; only in "underground" literature was the party official (though not the party itself) cast as the villain. Since the end of the Cultural Revolution in the late '70s the government has become more liberal and literature, following the underground movement, has once more taken up the roles of social critic and historical satirist. The talk focused on the "scoundrels" of this recent period. Professor Goulde, who spent a year as a Fulbright Fellow at Seoul National University in Korea, is editing an anthology of sources of Korean traditions.

"Art and Artists in China Today" was the final presentation, delivered by I-Hsiung Ju, professor of art and artist-in-residence at Washington and Lee University. Professor Ju spoke on art activities in general after the death of Mao in 1978, giving emphasis to artists of the younger generation who, for the first time, are beginning to paint in Western style. Slides of many of the works were shown; two of these artists, who were his classmates during World War II, were studied in detail: Huang Yung-yu, who is in the vanguard of the modern art movement in China and Sun Xiao-xiang, a landscape architect who is also a brush painter. Professor Ju, who was born in China and educated in the Philippines, joined the W&L faculty in 1969. In 1978 he was named Distinguished Artist of the Year by the National Museum of History in Taipei. He is the author of Mei-shu Lunwen Ji (Essays on Art), Book of Bamboo, Book of Orchid and Book of Chrysanthemum. ♦

Annual Report of the Vice President and Treasurer

Fiscal year 1986-87 saw a continuation of the strong financial markets which have helped the assets of the College increase during the past several years. The College's endowment fund on June 30, 1987 was valued at $45,000,000, an increase of 12.5% from the June 30, 1986 valuation of $40,000,000. Total assets of the College subsequently increased to $75,548,000 from the previous year's figure of $69,788,000. Total revenues for the College during this same period increased $604,000 or 4.2% and once again expenditures were slightly below budget, which helped the College finish the year with a small surplus. On June 30, 1987 the College was well positioned to face the challenges of an uncertain economy.

The treasurer, the assistant treasurer and the business office spent much of fiscal year 1987 planning for the future financial equilibrium of the College. Working with the Financial Issues and Facilities Planning Committees of the Strategic Planning process, several courses of action were recommended that ensure financial and physical asset stability for the College. Much of the Strategic Planning process in general was devoted to developing programs that will ensure a steady enrollment of highly qualified and motivated students in future years.

Looking ahead to the current fiscal year (1987-88), we can anticipate very challenging times. As this article is written, the stock market has just suffered a major decline and the value of the dollar has been drastically reduced worldwide. There is also some talk of an impending recession. Fortunately, our endowment fund money managers had anticipated a softening in the market and were in the process of changing the mix of our investments when the sudden drop came. Several courses of action recommended by the Financial Issues Planning Committee were also implemented prior to the market's fall and although no one looks forward to financial uncertainty, Sweet Briar is in a better position to withstand that uncertainty than it was several months ago. Rest assured that the treasurer's office and the Investments and Finance Committee of the Board are continually monitoring the financial position of the College and will not hesitate to take whatever action is necessary to ensure a sound financial future for Sweet Briar.

Advantages of a Women's College

BY MARY ELLEN AMES

Former Director of Admissions
Wellesley College
Wellesley, Massachusetts

☐ The faculty and the administration take young women seriously as individuals and scholars.

☐ Young women are encouraged to develop their brains to their utmost potential. They are given individual attention and counseling by faculty deans and administrators. They are encouraged to major in academic areas usually considered the preserves of male scholars — physics, astronomy, economics, biochemistry, math, etc.

☐ By necessity at women's colleges, all of the leadership positions are held by young women. There are, therefore, far more positions available for the same number of young women who in coeducational colleges would not even have an opportunity to fill one-half of the positions available (student government presidents, newspaper and literary magazine editors, class presidents...). By having these opportunities young women acquire administrative and leadership skills which are valuable throughout their lives in paid or volunteer positions. Such skills make them more marketable in the competition for good jobs.

☐ At a women's college no subtle messages are communicated to young women that they can't or shouldn't venture into any area — academic or otherwise — where their interests lie. They tend to speak up in class more often and engage in discussions and debates. Small classes with knowledgeable professors encourage women to learn how to express themselves well orally. They learn assertiveness, confidence in themselves and their abilities.

Seniors "step-singing," October, 1987

☐ A women's college frees a young woman from the pressure of striving for "social success." The campus is not an arena for proving oneself with men in the "dating game;" women are free to be as social as they wish and are equally free to be uninvolved for a period of time. They can be in control of their relationships with men rather than controlled by social customs on a coeducational campus.

☐ Adult role models in a women's college present obvious proof that women can be the heads of departments, the top scholars and the top administrators, and at the same time have families and lead their own lives. These role models say something to the young woman about what she can do with her life if she wants to, and encourage her to take on different roles throughout her life.

☐ Women are nicer to other women in a women's college. Since there is no pressure of competition for the same man, there is a tendency to work for each other. Women form lifelong friendships more often at a women's college and are more supportive of other women.

☐ A woman will be a woman all her life. She will work with women all her life and she will be much happier if she really likes herself for what she can do and likes other women for what they can do. Women's colleges convey these messages better than coeducational institutions.

☐ One graduates with self-knowledge, self-confidence and self-assurance that she can do anything she wants to do.

☐ One often hears the comment that a young woman would do better to attend a coeducational institution if she wants to learn to deal with the "real world." No college represents the real world. But a young woman learns more completely what she can do if she has spent the crucial years (18-22) in the atmosphere of a women's college that encourages and expects her to stretch and grow in any way that her abilities and interests take her. Then she is more than ready for the "real world."

Kathryn Waller '53 Talks About Her Career in the Nonprofit Field

Kathryn Johnson Waller '53 gave an informal presentation to Sweet Briar students and faculty entitled, "Careers in the Nonprofit Sector" on November 11, 1987. Kathryn is the executive director of the Rural Advancement Fund/National Sharecroppers Fund, a nonprofit organization which, she said, "is devoted to the preservation of family farms and a sustainable system of agriculture." She was invited back to campus by Carter Hunter Hopkins '68, the director of career planning, and Chaplain Susan Lehman.

Kathryn grew up, the child of an affluent family in Savannah, GA, wondering why so many others, particularly black families, were poor. Later, as the wife of an Episcopal minister and mother of four children in Charlotte, NC, she came into contact with the poor and, as a volunteer, organized a coalition to solve the problems of the hungry. She wrote her first grant proposal and was amazed when the money came through! Her present job she first took on in 1978. One of her organization's goals is to preserve the family farm, and a staff of 20 provides counseling to the farmers, and those who have been displaced from their farms. Funds for the budget of one million dollars were personally raised by Kathryn and one other full-time staff member. Though admitting that she doesn't get much chance to use the Greek she loved studying under Miss Malz during her one year at Sweet Briar, Kathryn says that the longer she has worked, the more she has respected the liberal arts tradition of her education.

Drawing from personal experience, Kathryn described the rewards (leadership opportunities wide open to women, freedom from strict hierarchical structure, room for creativity, the chance to use all one's talents, emphasis on teamwork) and drawbacks (lower pay, longer hours, lack of job security) of careers in nonprofit organizations. For Kathryn, these drawbacks are outweighed by "the freedom to commit one's life to something one really believes in."

New Vice President for SBC

Sweet Briar welcomed William H. Meadows III when he assumed his duties as Vice President for College Relations on January 18, '88. Mr. Meadows comes to Sweet Briar after 20 years at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, where he most recently served as Executive Director of Alumni Relations.

Mr. Meadows, who earned his B.A. and M.Ed. in Higher Education Administration from Vanderbilt, is active in the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), especially in District III where he is Chairman Elect for the 1989 district conference. He has served on the boards of the Nashville League of Women Voters, the Environmental Action Fund, the Tennessee Environment Council, the Tennessee Sierra Club and the West Nashville United Methodist Church, and was appointed to mayoral commissions on community excellence and transportation. His wife, Sally, a speech pathologist and administrator at the Bill Wilkerson Hearing and Speech Center in Nashville, will move to Sweet Briar in the spring.

Frances Murrell Rickards

January 20, 1988 was a very important day for one of our beloved alumnae, Frances Murrell Rickards. It was her 100th birthday. Her daughter, Murrell Rickards Chadsey '44 and other family members were in Norfolk to help celebrate.

Mrs. Rickards graduated in the class of 1910, Sweet Briar's first graduating class. Thirteen members started out in that class and five completed the academic program. They became known as "The Big Five." They were remarkable women for any era, especially theirs, as they set the pace and ideals which our young women have followed ever since. All lived busy and productive lives. Of the five, three received advanced degrees, all had professional lives, all married and had families, her husband, Everingham Rickards, and her son, Garrett, a captain in the Marines who was killed in the invasion of Okinawa during World War II. These two scholarships have made a Sweet Briar education within the reach of many bright young students.

Mrs. Rickards often said that her four years at Sweet Briar were the happiest of her life. She was a frequent visitor to campus and missed few of her reunions, the last one she attended being her 70th in 1980. It is interesting to speculate on situations and events which she has experienced during her lifetime: the development of the car, airplane, radio, TV, computer and many electronic inventions. She told us how thrilled she was to see Halley's comet in 1910 while she was sitting on the steps of Sweet Briar House, and was all became leaders in their communities and all remained strong supporters of the College. An Outstanding Alumna Award was established in their honor in 1968, and the entire group was here to receive it at that time, 58 years after their graduation. They remained close friends all their lives. They were Eugenia Griffin Burnett, Louise Hooper Ewell, Annie Powell Hodges, Annie Cumnock Miller and Frances Murrell Rickards.

Mrs. Rickards was president of her high school graduation class. She was involved in many activities during her college days, having been president of student government and has maintained her interest in Sweet Briar ever since. She served as fund agent for her class longer than any other alumna has served in this capacity, and her class had a remarkable record of 100% participation. She was a math major. Dr. Eugenia Morenus was her math professor her senior year and became one of her best and lifelong friends. Before Dr. Morenus died, Mrs. Rickards established a scholarship at Sweet Briar named for her. She also established a second scholarship in memory of pleased to live long enough to see it again last year. She kept her interest in astronomy and keeps her globe and a book which Dr. Morenus gave her years ago near the window where she can study and identify planets and stars.

Happy Birthday and best wishes to Mrs. Rickards from all 11,000 Sweet Briar alumnae!

Helen Smith Davenport Endowed Scholarship Fund

A scholarship has been established in memory of Helen Smith Davenport, Class of 1957 by members of the Davenport family. This will provide an opportunity for highly qualified students to study abroad within the Sweet Briar programs (the Junior Year in France, the Junior Year in Spain, Royal Holloway, Oxford, St. Andrews and Heidelberg). It is hoped that this scholarship will encourage global awareness for a Sweet Briar junior. The candidate will be selected by the Honors Committee of the faculty based on grade point average, recommendation by Sweet Briar faculty and presentation of a proposed course of study.

Jeanette Boone 1904-1988

A tribute by Richard C. Rowland, Charles A. Dana Professor of English Emeritus, delivered at the memorial service in Sweet Briar Chapel January 13, 1988

Jeanette Boone, who died Sunday, January 10, was born in Pennsylvania in 1904. She was a member of the Class of 1927 at Sweet Briar, the College's 18th graduating class. It was only four years later that she returned to Sweet Briar as assistant in the registrar's office, and Sweet Briar remained her home for the following 57 years. In 1946 she was given the title of recorder and in that office she served until her retirement in 1970. The meticulous care with which she performed her duties, so central to the smooth functioning of any college, was a lesson to all of us; no computer, even in its "up" periods, has been more dependable than Miss Boone. Any registrar or recorder is bound to look like a tartar upon occasion to students and faculty, for it is her function to see that deadlines are met, that i's are dotted, that t's are crossed. Dan—as she was inevitably known to all of us—never failed in this function. If she ever made an error, I never heard of it. She met resistance; I have heard both students and teachers be rude to her when they were asked to fill out a forgotten form or turn in a late grade; Dan always responded quietly. "Her voice was ever soft, gentle and low, an excellent thing in woman;"—or man, too, King Lear might have added. The voice was part of a reticence and modesty which did not signal any lack of strength.

When she did take up the cudgels it was generally for her favorite cause, that of our natural environment. She loved every bird, tree, flower that grew at Sweet Briar and she did not consent willingly to the destruction of a single one. In her love of animals, she was active in the Humane Society. She was also active in the Lynchburg Bird Club, and for 14 years she chaired the Carry Nature Sanctuary Committee at Sweet Briar. It was fitting that the Nature Center created in the '70s behind Guion to be used as a center for studies in biology and ecology, an undeveloped 10-acre forest of oaks, tulip poplars and hickories containing a small lake, should in 1980 at the happy suggestion of Ernest Edwards, have been named after her and her longtime friend, Gert Prior.

I remember one occasion when two male members of the Sweet Briar community on a hunting vacation had shot a bear. The Lynchburg News had published a photograph of the hunters and their victim which had been posted on the bulletin board in Fletcher. I stopped to look at it and found Dan beside me. "Look at that!" she said. "Those two great big men and that poor bear!" It was, in fact, a very large bear. Ernest Hemingway, William Faulkner and their hunting heroes would have received short shrift from Dan. Just last Wednesday Ann Whitley told me that she had stopped early that day at 1 Woodland Road for news of Dan only to find a large buck crossing the road right in front of the house. One would like to think that he was an emissary from the Carry Nature Sanctuary on a similar errand. Dan fought all her life to preserve our natural habitat in a country which has plundered its forests, polluted its lakes, poisoned its air, and in a county which, opposed to any concept of zoning, has in the 30 years I have lived here allowed a once beautiful highway to deteriorate into seven miles of sleaze.

Dan lived for many years with her mother on Faculty Row. My family lived at the other end of the campus so it was "Nanny" Gemmell who restored buttons and patched trousers for our children, but a whole generation of Faculty Row children grew up under the sharply observant but affectionate eye of "Muddy" Boone. After her death and the death of Helen McMahon's mother, Dan moved into Helen Mac's lovely house on Woodland Road. For 19 years the two of them operated Camp Glen Laurel at Little Switzerland, NC, where many girls learned to love Helen Mac and Dan, and where as counselors a number of Sweet Briar students were taught responsibility and respect for the natural world and for their fellow human beings as a part of it. The friendship of Helen Mac and Dan Boone was a partnership so quietly firm as to be a model for all of us. Our thanks to Helen for the care she gave Dan these last weeks cannot be fully expressed. Our grief at Dan's loss is great but tempered by the memory of that long happy association. No Sweet Briar alumna has been more loyal, more hard-working, more quietly generous to her associates than Dan Boone. We cannot measure what we have gained from these sixty-odd years of Dan's service to us and this institution.

Ann Eckel Aiken Scholarship Established

The Ann Eckel Aiken Scholarship Fund has been established at Sweet Briar College as a memorial by her friends and colleagues. This scholarship is to be awarded annually to a student of high scholastic ability, in need of financial assistance. Preference will be given to Turning Point Students. (The Turning Point program is committed to helping women of nontraditional college age begin or continue their college educations.)

Anne Schutte Nolt celebrated her 95th birthday at the Homestead Villager Health Center in Lancaster PA, where she is a patient. The center's newsletter carried an interesting article about Anne, calling her "a woman born ahead of her time," and telling about her science studies at Sweet Briar and the summer sessions in biology that she attended at Woods Hole Marine Biology Lab in MA. The newsletter also pointed out that as a student, Anne also sketched designs for Christmas cards which were sold to raise funds for the College's endowment. (She has supported Sweet Briar ever since and was the class fund agent for many years.) After graduating, Anne used her skills in research and drawing in her job as research assistant to the head of the biology department at Princeton. In 1923 she married Leroy Hoffman Nolt who served as president of B.B. Martin Lumber Company until his death. The newsletter also reported that Anne feels fortunate, having had a happy life and wonderful marriage, and "she recalls, with great clarity, some delightful memories."

For too many years you have been hearing from this fund agent! Now the alumnae office tells me: "Surely in this 65th Reunion year your class should have some notes in the alumnae magazine — your last chance until 1989." I regret that I have heard from so few, but trust you will be encouraged to let me hear from you all before May.

We have been deeply saddened by word of the death of two classmates. Virginia Stanbery Schneider died on September 13 at her home in Atlanta. Jane Best Wehland '57 wrote of the death of her mother, Jane Lee Best on Nov. 19, after a massive stroke. We send our heartfelt sympathy to their families.

Jane Guignard Curry visits her brother in Little Switzerland, NC, where we spend our summers, so we've had several good visits. Jane is well and active, has good friends and neighbors plus 2 sons and their families who account for her happy life. She went to England last summer with a congenial and much-loved grandson — his first visit and her 29th! Lorna Weber Dowling reports the arrival of her second great grandson, which prompts a Christmas family reunion in Pittsburgh. Lorna has recently moved to a high-rise retirement home at 1600 Texas Street, #1119, Fort Worth, TX 76102-9160.

"Queenie" Wise O'Neal sends warm greetings to all of you and Sweet Briar, "just a large part of my happy memories." She is so proud of Sweet Briar and reads the alumnae magazine with great interest. Remember the Macon girls? Queenie keeps in touch with Fitzallen Kendall Fearing, Beth Hall Hatcher, Martha "Fig" Newton Groover, and Helen Johnston Skinner who lives in Richmond. Queenie has 2 granddaughters in college, one graduating from Mercer Law School this year.

Virginia Thompson McElwee has moved to Yacht Basin Apartments in Clearwater, FL. Phyllis Payne Gathright would like nothing better than to be able to attend the 65th. They had a wonderful time at the 50th. She and Tom are so proud of a second great grandson, one year old now. Helen Quayle Preston, after 2 years at Sweet Briar, has been a loyal alumna to SBC and to Western Reserve. She and Ross are spending this winter in their Canadian home in Bradford, Quebec, after 18 winters in Florida. They look forward to having 16-18 home for Christmas.

Jeannette (Dan) Boone, P.O. Box BB, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

A big cheer for the class of 1927. Thank you for your responses. Always the same faithfuls! Forgive me for using your maiden names. Hilda Harpster asked how many of our classmates survive. In my card file I count 55, but there could be more. Elise Morley had a costly fall but at least she is moving about now. Mary Lib Turner was in Australia and (Tahiti) on Bastille Day, July 14th, and then went to the Soviet Union.

Lib Wood McMullan spent a week in London this fall. Martha Ambrose is adjusting to widowhood, the status of many of us. M. Brown has the tape I purchased of our 60th reunion. If you drop me a line she will pass it on to you. Just let me know who has it last.

Maude Adams has six grands around the country. The Adams play duplicate to keep their wits going. Emily Halsell lives just up the Eastern Shore of Virginia, north of Belle Haven where we have long had an extra home near our daughter. Helen Smyser visited a grandson at Middlebury in VT. She has a granddaughter at Sweet Briar. Having a daughter and granddaughter follow me at the Patch gave me much to be proud of. Jerry Dreisbach speaks of arthritic knees. Now who in 1927 can't! She has toured many unlikely places on the Atlantic coast and often touches base with a daughter in Charlottesville.

Whenever I hear from Madeline Brown, I am back on 2nd floor Grammar across the hall from Dan Boone and Bebe Gilchrist. M. Brown was in one of the end rooms and Ibby Luck at the other end of the hall. Madeline and her used-to-be-naval officer husband are back in Hopkinsville now that Mac is retired. A note from Bebe says they summered in Hampton as usual and are back in Crystal River, FL. Loved Gretchen Orr's response to my request for news — she says she heard that as you grow older you make a lot of friends but they are all doctors. She is happy to have moved back home having missed its snappy fall weather. She will go to Boston to the Andrew Wyeth "Helga" shows.

A nice response from Lib Matthews. We are almost all widows now. Our leader, Emily Jones, has moved into an apartment and was unpacking there when she responded to my plea. A last minute note from Rebecca Manning regrets not making the reunion. A few weeks in England last fall, a ME wedding, and her usual trip from SC to CT and back have occupied her time.

See you next year I hope!

Dorothy Ayres Holt keeps up with Polly Woodward Hill and Eda Bainbridge Kolbe. Saw Martha McBroom Shipman and Harriet Wilson Tarbert in FL. Keeps busy with politics, church and hospital in Hampton, CT. She and Eda took a small cruise in September through the Erie Canal locks to Lake Ontario and to the Saguenay River. Her son lives 10 miles from her and her 2 grandchildren are grown. Hopes to get to Sweet Briar in '88 on her way from FL. Martha von Briesen took a 2-week vacation in WI in July and a 10-day trip to VT in Oct. with Marion Bower Harrison (SBC '48) and her husband Arch, whose older daughter was married in NH Oct. 10th. Martha stayed with Jane Belcher and her sister Barbara who, Martha said, gave her loving care and spoiled her. Jane taught biology at Sweet Briar from 1940-1975. Martha had a brief visit with her oldest niece, Mary von Briesen, a Foreign Service officer back after 3 years in Taiwan, now attending Army War College in Carlisle, PA.

Agnes Cleveland Stackhouse and Glenn spent two weeks in Naples, FL in Jan., saw Hazel Stamps Collins ('32). They went to a Sweet Briar luncheon and saw Eda Bainbridge Kolbe. Jean Cole Anderson in Oct. flew to CA for her grandniece's wedding, then went by train to San Francisco and Seattle. Took her granddaughter Jennifer with her, the same one she took on the SBC Alumnae trip to Alaska 3 yrs. ago, when they went up and back the Inside Passage by big ferry. Jean says she can't get enough of that scenery. In June she attended her grandson Johnny's graduation from Princeton (son of daughter Lovat and John). Winter freezes and summer droughts have "done in" many of her azaleas and trees. She is "still alive but not kicking very high". Virginia Cooke Rea and Fritz celebrated their golden anniversary at the Broadmore in Colorado Springs. Their two daughters and families came from Washington, DC and Salem, OR. Ann's two are in college and Jane and Michael have adopted a ten month old Korean boy. Ginny went white water rafting!

Josephine Gibbs Du Bois is still doing volunteer work at the local hospital, and delivering Meals-on-Wheels. She says synchronized swimming is fun! She returned in Oct. from a wonderful visit with Carolyn Blouin ('30) and Maury in Maine. Jo's daughter and husband went through the Panama Canal in their 40-foot sailboat and on to the Galapagos Islands, Hawaii and Seattle, and plan to go to Alaska in the spring. Gillette Hilton Pritchard wrote that Frank is not too well, so they stay home (Oceanside, CA) and count on visitors from far off places. Mary S. Kelso Treanor's granddaughter, Gail, was married in June. Gail is the daughter of our Class Baby! Mary and Wally are both well and happy and she says Santa Rosa in the center of the wine country is a lovely place to live and their various extended families gather there several times a year. She is hoping to see all of us and Sweet Briar again at our next reunion.

Charlotte Kent Pinckney and Tom live a very happy life at Westminster-Canterbury House in Richmond where they have many nice friends. In Oct. they spent a few days at the Cascades along with friends.

Martha McBroom Shipman, on Dec. 15, 1986, fell and broke her left leg, spent 4 1/2 months in hospital and nursing homes and is still using a walker. Daughter Jane drove her to Martha's cottage in Northern MI, where she stayed a month. Jane's twin girls: Martha Kuntz Scheman and husband both work in Washington, DC and live in Alexandria, VA. Lee Kuntz Eckerman and husband live and work in Clarksville, TN. Anne Kuntz runs a day care center in Dayton, OH. Jane is taking her three girls for a week in London this Nov. Martha's son and wife live in Wilton, CT; their daughter Jane lives and works in NYC and their daughter Meg attends Champlain College in Burlington, VT. Sam Shipman, III, attends school in Wilton. During the long, humid summer, Evelyn Mullen took a 30-hour intensive course in spoken and written ARABIC! In September she and her sister, Priscilla, 84, took a museum tour to Russia and Lithuania. Highlights were the Chagall exhibit at the Pushkin Museum in Moscow, the Armory Museum in the Kremlin, and the Moscow circus. In Nov., Evelyn enjoyed the Friends of the Library meeting at SBC and saw the "book art" exhibit put on by the Friends of Art.

"Whit" Pearsall Smith and Jack took a trip to the western part of the U.S. in May. Drove with their middle son, Fred, and his wife Marilyn. Visited Universal Studios in Hollywood, San Francisco, Yosemite National Park, Yellowstone and Grand Canyon. Whit and Jack have 3 sons, 4 grandsons, 1 granddaughter and now 2 great grandsons, children of the granddaughter. Virginia Quintard Bond writes, "Since stopping last fall to see Toole and Carter Wellford at Sabine Hall - one of the most beautiful historic homes in all of Virginia - life was quiet 'til spring when I went on a National Trust tour to Amsterdam, Bruges and Brussels. The new modern museum in Brussels built 7 stories underground is fabulous and a must on every itinerary." In July she visited friends in Bermuda and had perfect weather the whole 10 days. She still volunteers at the Dedham Women's Exchange and the Historical Society, goes to lectures and exhibits at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and tries to be a good grandmother but says she is a hopeless baby sitter. Mary Frances Riheldaffer Kuhn fills the time of retirement with visits for the church to nursing homes, volunteer work for the hospital auxiliary, reading, bridge and needlepoint. Keeps up with 11 grandchildren. Doesn't plan any more extensive trips except to family. Natalie Roberts

Foster is thankful to be in good health due in part she thinks from keeping busy and walking daily three Boston Terriers. In early June she went on the SBC sponsored Grand Tour of France. Juliet Halliburton Davis (Mrs. Burke Davis '35) was also on the trip. Nat said 5 from the Class of '42 made things lively while they saw the sights of Paris, Normandy and the chateaux of the Loire Valley. Nat is grooming a protege who is a Sweet Briar hopeful.

Anne Toole Rotter Wellford: Our 2,000-acre farm and large flower garden (designed and landscaped in the 1730's) keep us both busy, especially since we have had prolonged droughts for 7 years. Sabine Hall Farm received an award from the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture since it has been in the same family for over 200 years. The Farm also received a Clean Water Award. We are very interested in the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and Carter testified before a State Senate committee in favor of the bill banning phosphates from powdered detergents. The committee unanimously recommended the bill which is now state law. Looking forward to having Carter's immediate family, numbering 15, here for Thanksgiving, as is our custom.

Ruth Schott Benner and Earl spend February in Naples, FL, with spring, summer and fall week-ends at their house and boat at the Lake of the Ozarks, Missouri. Her small heart problem has been corrected and they, their children, grandchildren and 3 great grandchildren are fine. Helen Sim Mellen and Harold took their yearly trek to New England to admire the foliage. Had 5 great weeks in Austria and Switzerland. Going to Bermuda for Christmas. Will keep going as long as their aging bones will let them. Elizabeth Stribling Bell made it through the earthquake in her house in Pasadena. "I was in the tub when the quake started and had a frightful time getting out, then made it to a closet in the hall where I knew I would be safe!" Cynthia Vaughn Price and "Dute" still enjoy traveling - mostly cruises with short trips to mountains, the beach and New York.

"Jessie Hall Myers, Martha McCowen Burnet, Virginia Hall Lindley ('32) and I live close together and get together often." They miss Mary Lynn Carlson King but enjoy having her daughter, Laurinda de Beck back in Greensboro.

Martha von Briesen kindly sent news of Ella Williams Fauber. In Oct. Ella fell in her apartment and cracked her hip and until Nov. 9th was in the hospital and then in the health care center of Westminster-Canterbury in Lynchburg. Now back in her apartment at Westminster-Canterbury using a walker and has aides in attendance. The following from a Lynchburg newspaper, Sunday, November 8, 1987: "Mrs. J. Everette Fauber, Jr., has been honored with the designation of 'member cum specialist' by the Virginia Society of American Institute of Architects, an honor bestowed upon spouses of former members whom the Society holds in esteem. She is the widow of a prominent Lynchburg architect who had a large role in major restoration projects around the state including Colonial Williamsburg and Gunston Hall. He died in April of this year. A retired social worker, Mrs. Fauber is a resident of Westminster-Canterbury. She is a graduate of Sweet Briar College and a member of St. John's Episcopal Church in Lynchburg."

Laura Howe Smith, who lost her husband 8 1/2 years ago, recently moved to MD where most of her relatives live. Polly Swift Calhoun is still plugging away at recording for the blind and working for Hospice. The latter is more time-consuming as we have had to attend lots of meetings on how to care for cancer patients with AIDS as well. Our big news is that 16 of our Eastern family will board a plane Dec. 26 and go to Eugene, OR for a son's wedding. A grandson has just gone to Niger with the Peace Corps."

Grateful thanks to all who sent news. Your classmates do enjoy hearing about you and are eager to read the '31 Class Notes. Only you can make this possible.

Anne Baker Gerhart keeps the "little grey cells" working doing book reviews and a paper on Samuel Butler's Erewhon. She revisited St. Andrews this fall and is off to Australia and New Zealand in late February. In between she sees her 10 grandchildren in order to keep young. Another traveler is Roberta Cope Gerlach who has managed to squeeze in trips to Hawaii's five islands, a cruise in the Caribbean and a drive around Ireland since last fall. She and her husband give slide shows of their trips to senior groups and she provides book talks to convalescent homes too. She claims their coon cat is beautiful and temperamental and always amusing. The Gerlachs are a host family to a Korean couple at M.I.T.

Virginia Cunningham Brooks is a housewife and investor. She's also a traveler having been to the South Pacific and to France so far this year. She has seen Billie Crane Goodfellow (who needs a reminder to write to her class secretary.) Lav Dillon Wintzer's husband, Fritz, our "class husband", died in January '87. Sweet Briar was named as one of the beneficiaries of memorials in his name, a tribute to "his girls." Lav is now living in a cottage at 63 Colesbury Village, Hockessin, DE 19707 and will spend part of the summer at Elkhart Lake, WI.

Alison Dunne Harrison is leaving the sports to her grandchildren these days while she plays bridge and does some gardening. Two of the girls are triathletes, one rides and the fourth swims. Betty Fox Moon sent word to the college that Martha Jane Gipe Earle died in June and that she is remembered through the Fritz Smith (her son) Living Memorial Art Award at DePauw University. Sweet Briar's sponsored trip to New Zealand, Australia and Tasmania gets underway as I write this. Lucy Hoblitzell and Sue Wilson Rutherford will go along. Sue responded to my pleas by reporting knee-high water in her basement which resulted in a very clean and empty basement and a new washer. Her raccoon neighbor woke her by landing with a thud on her air conditioner just outside her bedroom window.

This has been a year of adjustment for Blandina Jones Skilton following the death of her husband shortly before their 50th anniversary. Weddings, graduations, birthday celebrations and family get-togethers have been a help. She will spend Thanksgiving with her #2 son in Santo Domingo. An overnight train trip to Chattanooga from Asheville at the height of the fall colors in the mountains was enjoyed by Alice Laubach. She has recently acquired a small BMW so retirement offers opportunity to get about more.

Jane Lawder has been enjoying Bible study during the last several years and will be in Israel in November covering the major points of interest from Biblical history. She'll make a short stop in Egypt and also Spain before returning to the snow of Colorado. Not so fortunate is Rebecca Marriner who has been house-bound with arthritis. She says she has acquired an exerciser and notes some improvement. Good. She is helped by her sister, practical nurses and a cleaning woman. Frances Poody Morrison Ruddell will go birding on the TX gulf coast and then spend time at a favorite ranch in AZ during the winter before visiting their youngest daughter in Portland, OR. She and Warren celebrate their 50th year together in February. She talked with Ray Adler Cochran and Eleanor Townsend Trotter when in Little Rock for a funeral. Ray and Eleanor do write me before next fall! Judy Peterkin is trying to keep up the minimum respectability of house and yard while remaining active with volunteer responsibilities in her church, Girl Scouts and AAUW. Retired English teacher Marie Schroeder Packard continues her interest in oil painting and traditional rughooking. We were sorry to learn that her husband died in August but glad to know that she is being supported by friends and students from long ago.

If Isabel Scriba can find the time to clear out her "too big" home in Garden City and a "tiny, too small one" at Tavernier in the Florida Keys she says she'll try an apartment, but where, Isabel? She likes living both places and keeps up her interest in a local cultural club and historical society. Alma Simmons Rountrey's children are close enough for her to see her 5 grandchildren - the Rountreys stay home in Altavista, VA and "let the young come to us". A full schedule of volunteer work claims Mary Atmar Smith Johnson in Georgetown, SC - Mental Health Assn. Board, Hospice Board, Chamber of Commerce, canteen and choir at her church. I wonder how her husband likes being called "the oldest unretired man in the world!" Carey Snow Garrison tries to have a family reunion every year, sometimes in HI where they lived 18 years, sometimes in Palo Alto, CA, and this year at Cape Cod. She claims she is slowing down but that travel mileage doesn't bear her out. Another family traveler is Frances Spiller Scott whose doctor son has moved to Birmingham, AL where she hopes to renew Sweet Briar acquaintances. She is busy in historic preservation now that she has retired from her banking role in Fort Worth, TX.

Sue Strassburger Anderson came east in the early fall to show her granddaughter, Maggie the sights of Washington, Williamsburg, Charlottesville and Brandywine. She is regaining stamina and walking energy following leg surgery and obedience to the doctor's orders of no smoking. Helen Wolcott invited Sue, Pat Whitford Allen and me for a gourmet lunch so we could chat, eat, and be grateful for our enduring friendships. Pat's new granddaughter brings her and husband Nick (99% retired from the law) much joy. Her 2 other grandchildren are in college - one spending her junior year in Japan and one a freshman nearby. The Allens spend as much time as possible walking on the beach near their summer home. Helen and I enjoyed a weekend this fall at the Wintergreen resort in the VA mountains just off the Blue Ridge Parkway where Sweet Briar's Board of Overseers was meeting. Plans for the college's future are solid and worthy. Helen and I shared a two bathroom condominium - that's living!

Mary Templeton and her sister Jean have peripatetic feet which keep them in touch with long-time friends such as Ginny Gott Gilbert and Catharine Taylor Manning who is much better following an operation. The sisters have been invited to give a workshop on Title Slides by three of the Golden Horseshoe Photography Clubs. This year they have taken pictures on the Panama Canal and the colorful San Blas gulf and aboard the Newport Clipper Ship from Block Island to Buzzard's Bay. In the winter they get in some cross-country skiing and skating. Mary Frances Willis Kempe enjoys her class of '34 good friends Jane Moore and Nancy Leavell. She says Jane has a great many descendants and she has only 2 grandchildren! I think she is lucky. Rebecca Young Fraser, with her daughter, Becky Jr., spent 3 weeks in England and Wales exploring ancient and Roman ruins. Becky is in the midst of fund raising and planning for a new Work Activities Bldg. for handicapped adults at their Cerebral Palsy Center.

As for me, I tripped and took a headlong dive onto concrete following choir practice so am just now walking properly in my low-heeled shoes. Managed to lose 8 pounds with it all so am trying to regain them in spite of low cholesterol and low fat diet. No travels since my Danube trip but look out 1988. Blessings on all of you who responded. Fie upon you who didn't; I'll expect better treatment during 1988.

Hope you had a swell summer. It was a mighty hot one here in PA. Special Bulletin: Virginia Wellford Farwell feels that she is unable to give her best as Reunion Chairman as her husband, Sumner, is having chemo treatments. We regret losing her, as well as the reason therefor. Be assured, dear Ginger, that you and Sumner will be in our prayers.

Augusta Saul Farrier, our conscientious class president, got on the ball and on the phone. Lottie Lewis Woollen will be chairman, and her cohorts will be Henri Minor Hart, Gracey Luckett Bradley, and Lillian Neely Willis. This quartet was together last year at the Kentucky Derby, where I longed to join them, but Frontier Nursing commitments here forbade. They will be together this year at Pawley's Island, guests of Lottie.

We are in good hands. Augusta was about to be on a PBS documentary on Walter Biggs, New York illustrator, who lived next door to her in Salem. She plans to give one of his water colors to SBC. The beautiful fall weather has wooed her to the tennis court, and she has started a music group. She and Molly Talcott Dodson '38 were about to go to fall alumnae council. Augusta's granddaughter will be the third generation to graduate from W & L. Her grandson is about to graduate from Princeton. I saw Gracey, her daughter Gracey, and 2 handsome grandsons in her eyrie of a condo overlooking a broad expanse of that beautiful Gulf of Mexico. She has several Haitian primitives which she has collected over the years which are so appropriate.

Also saw Betsy Vanderbilt Crampton at Naples, and her daughters, and beautiful grandchildren. Their condo overlooks lake and golf course. Mirabile dictu, in blew Anne Dearstyne Cornwell. She was in England this May with a museum group, visiting gardens and manor houses. Then a family reunion at Mohawk Mansion House of 31, all her children, grandchildren, nephews and nieces. She is going to Australia in November with the Sweet Briar group. Claffy, Eleanor Claffin Williams, who also went with husband Tom to Gracey's wingding at the Derby, had a large one-person show in Boston in March '87. She has been president of the board of the South Shore Art Center for the last 2 years. To their joy, a new Art Center has been built. Jen Moore von Sternberg had a delightful restful cruise around New Zealand, then the South Pacific, with stops in Fiji and American Samoa. This year they'll sail through the Panama Canal on the Royal Viking.

Our sympathy to Sarah Tams Kreker, upon the death of her husband. She had a nice time in Norfolk, despite 90 degrees, for a dinner honoring leadership gift clubs. She sight-saw with Sarah Belk Gambrel. Nancy Gatch Svien still enjoys 4 summer months in Minneapolis, and 8 in Cancun. She is finally and delightfully a grandmother. Her son-in-law is a Tunisian physicist, so granddaughter is Scandarabian! She had a show of water colors in the Cancun gallery, and a fascinating month on the Sea of Cortez, snorkeling sea lions. She had a nice visit with Ann Espach Wechler in Sedona, who reports that Nancy is as beautiful as ever. Jean McKenney Stoddard is busy with the National Cathedral Association. Had a nice trip to Canada last October. Look out for Betty Barnes Bird. She plans to be the very greatest fund agent ever for our 50th. This entails several visits to SBC.

The sailor son of Clarice Bailey Robinson is home from Japan. Their sailor daughter is home from crewing and cooking on luxury sailboats in the Caribbean. Both have new homes nearby; both have new babies. Clarice and Charles had a lovely 76-day trip around the world - Japan, east through Asia and the Levant, ending with a Colonial Dames tour in England. She regretted being unable to translate in situ the cuneiform of the Assyrian kings - tsk, tsk - and a S.B. graduate. After having pneumonia and an emergency appendectomy upon her return from China last year, Ethel Hauber Crowe took it more easily this year in Nova Scotia. Jubilant over daughter Patti's marriage in July, Janet Thorpe is still an enthusiastic weekly guide to the visitors at Lockwood Mansion in Norwalk, CT, a huge 1868 edifice. She visited in Albuquerque, Santa Fe, and Philadelphia. Helen Cary Stewart has another grandbaby, her seventh, all Californians. She is recovering from a total left hip replacement. She was off the walker in only 19 days.

An ecstatic letter from Audrey Seibert Snyder redolent of the woods of ME in the fall. She makes a quilt each year in the long winter of short days. They take long walks by the famous Quoddy head lighthouse. She feels that with the help of the Maine Coast Guard, these lighthouses, endangered species, have done more than anything else to keep the drug pirates at bay. Their books are special friends, and they are ardent environmentalists. She is still involved with the Lubec School as speech therapy consultant. Kay Richards DeLancey and Bob were in Norfolk in April for his WWII Pathfinder Air Force Group reunion. In that she was a Red Cross girl, it was hers, too. Though rainy and miserable (how the weather varies in Norfolk!), they had a swell time with Ann Parks in her gracious and commodious home. This summer they went to Alaska with AARP, somewhat hesitantly. By gum, they went water rafting at Mt. McKinley Park with several octogenarians. She and Bob have a wonderful time in the White Mountains camping with their family. She is making costumes for a church play, plus costuming 15 kindergarteners as birds! Mardie Hodill Smith and Vey were off on a Panama cruise, and were joined by Leila Bond Preston. Mardie had a knee replacement last March, which does not seem to have held her down in that most of her family were with them for 11 weeks this summer. Also, got to the golf course.

Bettina Bell Emmons will move in the summer from Cape Cod, where she has been for 31 years, to Portsmouth, NH. She will be nearer her three daughters. Another winter Neapolitan, she will host the Sweet Briar Day luncheon this year. Florence Swift Dorrance has our 50th on her calendar. They continue to divide their time between Asheville and Tallahassee. She had a 2-week tour this summer with a friend in the Maritime Provinces of Canada. Her husband suffers from Parkinson's.

Anne Benedict Swain sent pictures of their grandsons, Bob and Ned. They are off to Vienna, Venice, and Paris, and will have the Orient Express adventure. Julie Gray Saunders Michaux has been sticking more closely to home since Dick had a heart spell in the winter. But they had a good rest in FL, and a gorgeous 2 weeks in NH, and he is back to horticulture and gentle golf. She is on the board of the Sheltering Arms Hospital, working with public relations and buildings and grounds. One of her big interests is the Virginia Museum of Fine Art - not to mention SBC where she is an alumnae representative to the Board of Overseers.

Good to hear from Shirley Jones Woodard, even tho' she and Bunny have both had 2 years of hospital and operations. They have survived, and are rejoicing the human race. More traveling - Mary Jeff Welles went by train to Colorado for a Welles reunion in the Rockies; thence to visit their son in Seattle, and thence to Vancouver to visit Lucy Gore Stead ('37), and from there by train to Toronto. The scenery was thrilling. She is still having great fun with art lessons and is training for the Literacy Volunteers of America, a splendid aspiration.

Sarah Belk Gambrell has added to her list of volunteer activities being a member of the audit committee of the board of the NC Symphony Society. Marguerite Myers Glenn reports that their cranberry harvest begins Oct. 5 and that they deliver 100% to Ocean Spray. She plans to meet Mardie and Vey Smith in St. Thomas in '89. Jane Holden Walker's permanent address is in Rancho Santa Fe, NM, though they still have their condo in Kauai. They traveled for 6 months in '86, then returned to Kauai to visit 6 couples, all U. Michigan alumni. Jane has been troubled by flu and tore the ligaments in her right ankle; her husband is also ill. May you have good health, Jane. Julie Howe is writing less, has more time to herself and enjoys the Sunday TV. Jean Black Jennings is grandmother of 7. A visit with an 8 yr-old and her 3 yr-old twin sisters in MA is wild but a real treat. They go from Idleyd Park, OR to visit Raja, Mexico, every winter and have signed up to go on the Sweet Briar trip to Patagonia and around Cape Horn in March '88. Jean is a volunteer with Friends of the Library, works with the local museum, still plays tennis and skis on Mt. Bachelor which is only 3 hours away.

Ellie Wallace Price wrote to say that everyone in the Wilmington, DE area was saddened to read of Polly Ridler's death and will miss her. Ellie also misses her good friend from college days, Julia Worthington, who died in '85.

Helen Binns is enjoying her retirement from the VA Dept. of Social Services, where she had been head of the foster care program. Mary Brower Henderson has 5 grandchildren. The youngest lives near them in Winnetka, IL and the rest of the family is in London, Chicago and Denver. The Hendersons spend part of the year in Manchester, VT. When in Chicago, Mary works with Northwestern University's Settlement Boards. Mary Frances Buchanan Flowers has been named honorary president of the Garden Club of Virginia where she has served as president and been actively involved for many years. Tready, Mary Treadway Downs, visited the gray whales on the Baja, then took a week's tour of Nova Scotia and spent 10 days in Seattle with their daughter and family. Finally, a weekend with Yvonne Leggett Dyer and Danny in Darien.

How good to hear from you, Betty Frazier Rinehart, and that your condition is as good as possible (Parkinson's). She was in NC this summer and will return (from St. Petersburg) for the fall colors. She has 3 grandchildren, all going strong.

And now off to la belle France, Channel Islands, first. We take more pills with us when we travel, but we still go. But not before I tell you that our son received a call from the President this morning (September 28th), R.R. ipsum, nominating him for Federal District Judge. I hope his Senate scrutiny won't be so lengthy as Judge Bork's.

Thank you for your cards. Now, how about collecting some excellent pictures of yourselves and families, plus tidbits of news, so we can put together a full scrapbook for Reunion?

I still work for the CT Audubon Society and with retarded children. For fun, I train my cairn terriers in obedience. My little show champion was recently qualified by the American Working Terrier Assoc. for a Certificate of Courage, having proven herself in field trials. Sarah Adams Bush (Ouija) is co-chairing our Reunion with Esther Jett Holland. She and Bob gave each other a 40th anniversary present of a cruise on the Royal Viking to Australia and New Zealand. In July and August they traveled by car to northern MI, WI, Minneapolis, SD and Aspen, CO and in April they went to Montclair, NJ to visit daughter Jeannette and her family. Daughter Louise and family and son Stuart and his wife all live in Dallas.

Brooks Barnes had a marvelous tour through the national parks. She even survived a flight down the Grand Canyon and back out. As class president, she directs us all back to Reunion in May. Nancy Bean Hector tells of two marriages: son, David White to Margaret Stanback in Sept. and the upcoming wedding of daughter, Heyden White, to Nicholas Rostow in Oct. David will live in NY. Heyden will be in DC. Catharine Bracher Leggett Jr., "Skip", weathered a trip to Antarctica and experienced almost balmy weather. She liked the icebergs best, since they didn't smell, like the penguins and seals. Now, Skip and John have just returned from salmon fishing in Canada. Dorothy Campbell Maher (Dotti's son, Christopher, who is interning in Clinical Psych. at Temple Univ. Hospital was married in Aug. Her family had a long awaited reunion of all 29 members including Dotti's 86 yr. old mother.

Mary Carter Richardson had two cruises this year, one to Russia and one to the Caribbean. She is thinking about retirement soon. Mary Carter finds her twin grandchildren, who just started school, fascinating, since they are different in every way. Mary Christian Mulligan (Diddy) has been head of housekeeping at the 104-yr.-old Chalfonte Hotel, Cape May, NJ for many years. The Chalfonte has a fantastic southern cook, 78 yrs., who with her two daughters, does all the cooking. Diddy spends 5 summer months in Cape May and then travels all over the world with a friend during the other months. Elizabeth Corddry Jones (Libby's) husband has retired from architectural practice, and they are both having a glorious time. She is still busy with fine hand book-binding and loving it. Libby enjoys her children and grandchildren. Elizabeth Dickman Smith (Beth) claims that her mobility is somewhat curtailed, since her 92-yr.-old mother-in-law is currently in residence. However, she gets to London as much as possible for walking, theatre, seeing friends and especially her daughter, who is a freelance writer in that city. Beth went to Jacksonville, FL last spring to walk on the beach with Mary Belle Lee Aldridge. She does volunteer work with the Professional Roster, which is a job information clearing house run by volunteers in Princeton. Katherine Doar Jones was recently at SBC, meeting with Esther Jett Holland, Fay Martin Chandler and Charlotte Garber Rudolph to learn how to proceed with Reunion planning. Last summer she had a trip to Switzerland including a barge trip on the Midi Canal in France. Deborah Douglas Adams (Debbie) is enjoying her 5 grandchildren. She hopes to come to Reunion. Clare Eager Matthai just returned from two weeks in Italy. She spent time in both Florence and Venice, both cities with so many beautiful things to see, and yet so different. Clare then enjoyed a week looking at the sights and treasures of Rome. She is now back to the routine civic, domestic and church duties. Clare has been elected to the board of trustees of the House of the Good Shepherd. Mary Love Ferguson Sanders and her husband just returned from a lovely trip to Ireland. She promises to come to Reunion - without fail!

Janice Fitzgerald Wellons is expecting her 5th grandchild. They already have 3 grandsons. Janice is teaching 10 music students. She and Jimmy took a cruise around Britain, visiting many historical islands and cities. A gorgeous fresh flower arrangement, a present from Janice's 3 girls, was delivered to the ship at Leith for Janice's birthday. Annabelle Forsch Prager is having fun talking to 2nd and 3rd graders about childrens' books. Some of her manuscripts are making the rounds and The Surprise Party is being reillustrated by Tomie de Paola in full color for Random House. SBC interns and graduates interested in arts management should call Annabelle, if they are in NYC 212-289-2217. There is part time work with three wonderful childrens' orchestras, founded by Annabelle. These orchestras play all over the city. Last spring they did Peter and the Wolf with James Earl Jones.

Frances Gregg Petersmeyer was at the SBC meeting at lovely Wintergreen Inn. She talked with Esther and "Ping" about our upcoming class Reunion. This is a special Reunion. Come! Wrede has retired as Chairman of the Board of Overseers of SBC. "Gregg" and Wrede are going to Japan, with a particular interest in the International Christian Univ. in Tokyo.

Elizabeth Hall Schwartz (Tish) visited her son, John, in Honduras. Later, she and Sy drove east to visit her sister Ruth Peckham in Asheville, where she saw Ruth Hensley Camblos, then on to GA to visit with Sally Bryan Allen. The latest trip was to the San Miguel Allende section of Mexico. Tish is busy with the Republican Womens' Club and her Episcopal Church Womens' Guild. Rozelia Hazard Potter (Posy) had two super trips last summer: one to New York and New England visiting family and then a wonderful coach tour to the West; Grand Canyon, Bryce, Zion and Las Vegas. Nancy Jameson Glass and Bob took a trip to TN, AL and NC last spring and to Cape Cod in the summer. She is the first woman commander of the Hamburg Power Squadron, a branch of the US Power Squadrons, an organization dedicated to safe boating. She helps teach celestial navigation for squadron members. Esther Jett Holland and husband, Hugh, attended the SBC weekend at Wintergreen, and then Esther stopped at SBC to join Kitty Doar Jones, Fay Martin Chandler and Charlotte Garber Rudolph - members of the Reunion Gifts Committee for our Class Reunion. Ouija Adams Bush agreed to co-chair the committee with Esther. Esther enjoyed seeing Lucy Kiker Jones numerous times on the beach at Virginia Beach, and enjoyed entertaining all her own family together there in Aug. She has 5 grandchildren; the youngest arrived on April 27 and attended his mother's 15th reunion at SBC.

Primrose Johnston Craven (Primmy) is still involved with Girl Scouts, AAUW and CORD, which stands for Cape Organization for Rights of the Disabled. She enjoys long walks on the beaches. The grandchildren visited during the summer. The highlight of their visit was a whale cruise, an awesome sight. Valerie Jones Materne and Bud have built a small convenient solar house on a hill behind their farmhouse. They both are active in the local VNA-Home Supportive Services and other public services. They play tennis, travel occasionally and enjoy 5 children, 9 grandchildren, 3 of whom are in college. Barbara Jones Hale reports two momentous life changes; she retired, and she became a grandmother. Son Tom and his wife, Deb, produced little Sam on Dec. 26, 1986. Son Simon married in Sept. 1986 another Barbara, so now there are two Barbara Hales. Bonnie Key Garrett found that the summer passed quickly at the ranch and driving to CA to visit friends. She and Gavin capped the summer off by having a week "Ranch Camp" for 9 of their grandchildren. In the spring Elizabeth Potter Kinne Hillyer and Bill had a five-week cruise to S. America around Cape Horn, finishing in the Caribbean. In early Dec., just in time for Xmas shopping, they will be taking daughter Elizabeth and husband to Hong Kong for 10 days. Karen Kniskern White (Tookie) is leaving for a month in China with a group of friends. She will retire at the end of the year and then will take a cruise to the Greek Isles before Reunion. They now have 9 going on 10 grandchildren.

Fayette McDowell Willett's current crisis is the imminent possibility of early frost and the necessity of covering the tomato plants immediately. Roscoe and she had a nice visit with "Junk" last summer. The family news is a new grandson, Clay, born in May. Anne McJunkin Briber (Junk) spent the summer in Milwaukee and is now back in Amelia until June, except for 10 days at Xmas, when she will return to Milwaukee to be with offspring. Junk does wood carving, mostly birds, and continues to struggle with her golf. She spent a week this year in northern Wisconsin for the first time in 15 years. Caroline Miller McClintock is well, happy and busy with hospital volunteer work, church activities and golf. All 5 children are happily married, the eldest daughter, Rosemary, in June. Louise Moore Nelson, since Bruce's retirement, does not have as much time for lectures in flower arranging for museums, but she is playing the piano again, and is studying Braille, hoping to become certified this summer. They spend lots of time at Cape Porpoise, ME where their son and daughter and her children join them in August and September. Miriam Packard Sargent (Sandy) has had a wildly busy summer of guests and projects. Before taking off for China, Sandy plans to see her 98-yr.-old dad, her daughter and family and, on the way back, their son and his wife. There was a gala reunion of family and friends for Sandy's mother's 90th birthday in March. They continue their environmental battles especially to protect the integrity of the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem. Nancy Pingree Drake (Ping) and "Em" took five days off, enjoyed the beautiful antiques and gardens at Winterthur and then proceeded to the Boxwood Circle Dinner at Wintergreen, VA. They will be in NYC for an auction of "buses", which has something to do with Em's being head of Westbrook College's Board of Trustees. The 12th grandchild, Virginia Pingree Drake, was born in July. Harriet Pullen Phillips is especially happy this year, because of the birth of their first grandbaby. Husband Orms and she bicycled through Denmark and then a few days in Sweden, enjoying ancient Viking ships, the churches, castles and farmlands. Harriet is still busy with church work and volunteer jobs. Page Ruth Foster spent part of June and July in New England, and found it too chilly after living for years in Hawaii. They saw their daughter in CA, who besides being a writer and editor, is a 10K runner, competing often successfully. Page has a soccer-playing 6 yr. old grandson. One son is international coordinator of the Pacific Campaign to Disarm the Seas. She still tutors (literacy) at the women's prison.

Byrd Smith Hunter and Henry took their annual trip to Atlantic Beach with Carter Hunter Hopkins ('68) and her family in Oct. Byrd had major surgery on both feet in July. The healing process is SLOW. She loves the easier life of retirement. Since the children come home frequently, they are not yet ready to move to a smaller house.

Dorothy Stauber McCarthy (Dot) and Mac are enjoying retirement. They traveled last June to China from Hong Kong aboard the Golden Odyssey and then went inland to Beijing. Next year there will be a trip to Portugal, Spain and France. They have one son and two grandsons in FL and daughter, Bonnie, who is a columnist for the Miami News. The other son and daughter live and work in TX.

Margaret Swindell Dickerman is still working at the newspaper. She enjoys taking trips with good friends and family. Her grandsons are now 15 and 17. Jeanne Turney Benjamin has been living a full life in FL for 9 years. She works at various volunteer jobs interspersed with frequent sorties of golf, plus other fun activities. Life seems in good shape, except for a lack of grandchildren. Elizabeth Weems (Betty) claims she is over-committed in all directions. Her immediate family numbers 24. She and Westfeldt had 3 sons, who have wives and children. Then there are 2 sets of step-sons and their wives and children. Weemsie also fills her life with architecture, gardening, all kinds of causes, U. of Col. affairs and the Col. Music Festival. Her adored job is helping her friend Spike Robinson's jazz tenor sax career, which includes promotion, PR, records and traveling in the U.S. and Europe.

Ruth Willis Leaman (Jody) spends half the year on Lake George, NY and the other half in Cherry Hill, NJ. She gave up teaching, but continues church and hospital work, garden club, DAR, and she is a literacy volunteer. Jody has 7 granddaughters, who spend most of the summer on the lake with them. Louise Woodruff Angst (Weezie) enjoys her home, garden and pool in St. Louis and their condo at Delray Beach. As a GCA judge she has traveled to flower shows and has entered 2 others. Their eldest son, Wordy, lives in Alaska with his wife and two children. They visited the Angsts in FL for Xmas. Son Chuck is a vice president for an international architecture firm as a graphic designer. Marguerite Hume wrote her card from a Red Cross Meeting in Atlanta, where she had a mini-reunion with Mary Carter Richardson and Jane Rice McPherson both from the class of '44. She is going to try to make it back to our big Reunion.

Karin Norris Sibley has 5 children, 4 of whom are married and 9 grandchildren. The one daughter, Elsa, is an artist. Two grandchildren are one year old twins, who looked like ET until their hair grew in. Karin talked to Mary Law Taylor in Santa Barbara, CA and received an art exhibit card from Fay Martin Chandler. Ann Jacobs Pakradooni wrote from "Down Under" while on one of her Floating Fantasy Tour Groups. Three years ago she started her second business - the first, a Fashion Boutique, is still going strong; the second is taking friends and friends of friends throughout the world, mostly on cruises, about 6 trips a year. Ann is busier than ever, enjoying every moment. Dikron, now retired, accompanies her on all her trips.

Virginia White Brinton and Ben recently sold their 50-yr.-old family home to a 1st cousin, and moved to an apartment. While going through the attic, Virginia found her mother's trousseau and other treasures. Virginia looks forward to seeing us at Reunion and is entering her work in the Reunion art exhibit.

Thirty-four of us turned out last May for our 40th reunion. It was a great weekend as we congregated in first-floor Grammer (unchanged after 4 decades) for lots of remember-whens plus catch-ups on what's going on in our lives now. They seem to be filled with children, grandchildren, jobs, community work and, in some cases, retirement. All in all, we remain a pretty active bunch.

Ginger Barron Summer calls Lloyd's retirement the "best thing that ever happened to us." They can enjoy their 7 grandchildren, spend time at their homes in the mountains and at the beach and fish to their hearts' content on their boat on the Tennessee River. Also enjoying this next stage in our lives are Fannie Ulmer Conley, Ginna Walker Christian, Meredith Slane Person and Sammy McMullen Lindsey. Fannie and Delbert play lots of golf and travel 1-95 frequently, north to Philadelphia and south to Palm Beach, to visit their 2 daughters and their families. Ginna and Andy had a wonderful trip to China following his recent retirement. Meredith is learning golf to keep up with Curtis as they travel to various PGA events in this country and abroad. Retirement has given Sammy and Doug the opportunity to fish, hunt and entertain at the 1815 home they have bought near Tappahannock, VA. Meredith and Judy Burnett Halsey joined them there for a few days after reunion last May. Sammy keeps her hand in the professional world teaching Bible classes plus courses at Virginia Theological Seminary.

Nat Hall Chisolm and Dan since retirement divide their time between Palm Beach and Chautauqua, NY. In Palm Beach Nat is active in Hospice, The Lord's Place (which provides food and shelter for the needy) and the Heart Association. In Chautauqua she studies sculpture and computers. Liz Ripley Davey writes that Paul is semi-retired, meaning "his office is upstairs instead of across town." Liz is busy with Meals-on-Wheels, is a docent at the Kent State University Fashion Museum in Kent, OH, and travels with Paul to Rotary functions.

There are still professionals among us. Jane Warner Williams remains a real estate tycoon in Ft. Smith, AR, having made the Million Dollar Club for each of the last 10 years in addition to serving on a number of community boards. Nancy Cofer Stacey is a free-lance interior designer, Ann Colston a potter. Sara Bryan Glascock has joined the sales department of her husband's business in Chattanooga, TN. Jackie Murray Sanner teaches pastels at the Fine Arts School in Tryon, NC, and Aimee Des Pland McGirt teaches Spanish in the Richmond County (NC) schools. LaVonne Wright Labahn has a successful antique business in Sedalia, MO. And Jean Old in January completed her 35th year as a stockbroker with Wheat First Securities in the Norfolk area. Mary Lib Vick Thornhill owns Art Sources in Austin, TX, which locates design and landscape artists for commercial clients. She is also active in U.S. English, a group trying to establish English as our official language. Jean Hazlehurst Cone along with her youngest son owns a nursery business in Germantown, TN.

In other news, Cecil Butler Williams and Ernest enjoyed a trip to England last fall. Ernest received an honorary degree from the University of Alabama last summer following his retirement after many years as a member of the university board of trustees. Carol Blanton McCord toured the Canadian Rockies last summer with a group of Johns Hopkins alumnae. Then in July she and Mac and several of their children traveled on their boat from West River, MD to Martha's Vineyard, stopping along the way to visit Sash Hudgins Rice in NJ and Cindy Converse Ash in CT. Ann Marshall Whitley during the summer traveled to Michigan with her mother but returned to Amherst in time to check out the new SBC freshmen. She reports that they came with "lots of electronic equipment and short skirts." Julie Holt Coyle is publicity chairman and member of the board of the Community Music Association in Charleston, WV and is active in the Colonial Dames.

Virginia Beach seems to be the place to go to keep up with much of the Class of '47. Shirley Levis Johnson, Jackie Murray Sanner, Anne Marshall Ginger, and Sash visited Jean Old at her cottage immediately following reunion. In September, Shirley returned to participate with Jean in a sailing race (which they lost). Also in September Janet Amilon Wagner and Joe turned up at the Cavalier Hotel to celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary. Soon after came a visit with Eleanor (Crummie) Crumrine Stewart, her son and daughter-in-law and their new baby, who had come down from Bethesda, MD. Crummie's son is a potter in Seattle and Crummie is ecstatic over her first grandchild. Jean followed this up with a month's tour of Australia in November. Judy Burnett Halsey helped Nan Hart Stone and Billy celebrate their 40th anniversary last September at a party given by their children and Nan's sister in Richmond. Judy then began getting ready for the wedding of her youngest daughter, Eugenia, who for several years was Chicago correspondent for Cable News Network but has recently moved to the Washington, DC area. Nan retired from teaching 6 years ago but stays busy with Meals-on-Wheels, the Metropolitan Blood Bank and Freedom Hotel, an organization that feeds the street people. Kay (Wizzie) Weisiger Osborne spent the fall planning for the wedding of her daughter Jeanne just after Thanksgiving in Salisbury. Also from Salisbury comes a news clipping from Jean (Wash) Ferrier Ramsay about her granddaughter Susan Saunders, who is a championship high school tennis player. Margaret Ellen (Birdhead) White Van Buren reports that she and Jim still divide their time between Manhattan and their farm in Walton, NY, with frequent jaunts to Philadelphia to visit daughter Katrina, her husband Ed and their 2 children. Son Ted practices law in Missoula, MT, and Matt lives in Columbia, SC.

Mary Kennedy Moore and Sam had a wonderful visit with Nancy Cofer Stacey at Nag's Head in early April. Nancy has a grandchild ready for college and Mary lamented not having one of any age! In March '87, "Wash" Ferrier Ramsay saw Eleanor Potts Snodgrass for the first time in 43 years - they just picked up where they had left off! Wash and Pottsie shared two schools - SBC and National Catholic in Washington. Shirley Gunter Ratliff thinks Joan McCoy Edmonds did a great job of educating the class about the uniqueness of the 40th reunion year. Shirley sent for her transcript from SBC in 1985 and is now very close to attaining a master's degree in counseling - "At 60 years I may never find a job but the process has been a great, exciting experience. Bill took up skiing at age 59 and he too is having a ball!" The Ratliff's have 5 children and 6 grandchildren; 3 more grands were due when Shirley wrote. Cordelia Lambert Stites was sorry to miss Reunion but she had planned a trip to England. Jacqueline Schreck Thompson has 3 children and 3 grands; with husband Lane semi-retired, they are looking forward to more traveling.

All of us extend our deepest sympathy to Sara Ann McMullen Lindsey and her family on the death of her daughter who was killed in an automobile accident January 5, 1987. The Trotters moved back to Raleigh 3 years ago when Jim became legal counsel to our Republican governor. I stay busy as a docent at the NC Museum of Art and working with various local theatre groups. We have a daughter in Salt Lake City, a son in TX and another in Germany and would be grateful to get one of them in the same time zone. We finally got our first grandchild, Olivette's little boy, born last March just in time for reunion. Let's hear it for low airline fares and a strong dollar! I'm looking forward to being class secretary for the next 4 years and the chance to keep in touch with everyone. So please, all of you, don't disappear until the next reunion rolls around but keep those cards and letters coming.

Ann Petesch Hazzard and Rutledge are enjoying their first grandchild, Elizabeth Ann Hazzard, born in August to Diane and Rusty (R.P. Jr.) Hazzard. They live in Arlington, VA as do Ann and Rutledge. Their daughter Ann is in Atlanta and another son Tom is in Philadelphia. Rutledge is working toward his "third retirement". Mary Pease Fleming and Rives had a wonderful New Years' '87 visit with Sue Taylor Lilley and Bob who live in Orlando, FL. Mary and Rives have 4 grandchildren who visit often and a daughter with husband and baby living in their garage apartment while he works on a graduate degree. Mary is making quilts for the babies, giving piano lessons, accompanying ballet classes - and enjoying it all. Seymour Laughon Reynolds sent more news of Mary: two new grandchildren born to daughters Martha and Conway (Seymour's godchild) and another wedding next month.

Audrey Ann Breiting Post reports the arrival of her first grandchild, Myles Laurer Curtis. He, as well as all 5 of her children, live in ME. Audrey is involved with Meals on Wheels, visiting shut-ins, her church Missions Board and the mid-coast branch of the American Association of University Women. Sweet Briar has no alumnae group in ME. Katherine Fretz has been teaching 2nd, 3rd, and 5th grade remedial reading for years and is now teaching severely abused children. She has 5 children: girls ages 32, 31 and 16, and boys ages 26 and 25. Ruth Magee Peterson enjoys being a docent at the St. Louis Zoo. She sings with the St. Louis Community Chorus and plans to retire as their librarian after 9 years service. Walt turned his retirement into a sabatical and now is consulting for another chemical company. They are planning a trip to Kenya in June 1988. Jackie Woods Gorman is semi-retired on the Eastern Shore of MD. She is busier than ever with lots of travel, grandchildren, dogs, gardening and fishing. Ruth Clarkson Costello reported problems with health and hearth in 1985 - but better times in 1986. Her son Mark acts and does commercials in Hollywood.

Skeeter Pierce Clark's life is good. Husband Ed is recovering from heart surgery, she enjoys her work and they are "daffy" over their grandchildren. Janet Broman Dingle has been traveling and renewing old friendships from High School and the Air Force. She saw Billie Herron Goeltz who is a tour guide for the Trapp Family Lodge in Stowe, VT.

Janet writes that retirement is "great". They are off soon to VA and Hilton Head. Martha Staley Marks enjoyed having Kathy Phinizy MacKie visit last summer. She is beginning to feel like a "native" and hopes to have San Francisco classmates visit in OR. She saw Ruthie in June and found her as "exuberant" as ever.

Lynne McCullough Gush has remodeled, reconstructed and redecorated. The tropical plants have a new conservatory and weekend recital guests have more places to sit. Lynne is still busy with tennis and ballet classes, piano students and practice. Mona Wilson Beard teaches a class of "gifted/talented" children in a private school in Honolulu. They have a new and larger house - will be in Hawaii for some time. Etta Craig Dick Shurley and husband Harry enjoy having their 3 daughters living nearby in Rock Hill, SC. One married daughter has 2 girls, the other, 2 boys.

Peg Seaman Bentley is beginning a new job as personal computer specialist at Carnegie Mellon University graduate school. Her older daughter is married with one son and is working on her Ph.D. in Special Ed. Her younger daughter is married with a child on the way and is working in a veterinary clinic. Her son is at Duquesne University majoring in jazz/classical guitar - he and the guitar are living at home! Anna Leslie Coolidge Richardson and husband Lane retired to the "country" after 22 years in Dallas. Their 3 children and 3 grandchildren live in Dallas. They are traveling, cruising and are "avid" stamp collectors. Betty Brawner Bingham runs a travel agency, is secretary for the Chamber of Commerce and serves on the turtle-watch committee, walking the beaches daily and checking on nests and hatchlings. Betty had a wonderful trip to Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Jo Williams Fraser has children venturing forth - 2 in business for themselves and one son getting married. She and Bob have 8 grandchildren (2 hers and 6 his). Jo worked on references for the 3rd edition of Bob's medical book and helps with their radio reading service and the Rehabilitation Center. They had a "breathhtaking" safari to Mala Mala in March and look forward to a trip to Egypt next February. Joan Davis Warren and husband Andy are traveling to Africa, Guatemala and Canada - birding, golfing, and riding. Joan volunteers at the hospital and the university museum. Their grown children Greer, Polly and Michael live in PA and Andrew lives in Orlando.

Katharine Phinizy MacKie has had a great "personal reunion" year. She visited Marcel Staley Marks in Portland, OR on her first trip to the Pacific Coast and also talked to Ruthie. She had 4 days in Milwaukee with Harriet Heiden Kirchhoff and was in MD for her annual visit with Sister Hayden D'Wolf and Jini Louise Coleman Jones is planning a trip to NC and a meeting with Marge Newell Curlee. They will overlap one night on separate visits in the Asheville area - "a nice coincidence for an Oklahoman and a Kentuckian". Angie Vaughan Halliday reports that all children are out of school except Paul who is studying for his doctorate in history at the University of Chicago. Angie is trying to develop a seldom used part of her brain by studying algebra; Bob is developing his interest in watercolor painting.

Susan Taylor Hubbard has a Bed and Breakfast R.S.O. with Ashby Jenkins Willcox. Susan loves bird-watching and is editor of the Cape Henry Audubon Society newsletter. Her oldest, Catty (SBC '85), is home for awhile, her second, Jane, is in Boston and her third, Cluffy, is at Clemson. Mary Street Montague was one of 8 Charlotte citizens to be given an award in Nov. by the Arts and Science Council of Charlotte-Mecklenburg. Mary won the award for Personal Commitment. She has been executive director of Children's Theater of Charlotte since 1979 and has served on boards for the Charlotte Symphony, United Arts Council, and the Nature Museum. Jean Duerson Bade and I do aqua exercises every morning. Jean's son Johnny, wife Emma and 2 children live in CA. Son Craig was married last April in a glamorous TX wedding; he and Katie live in Houston. Daughter Lyle is in Louisville. John is retired as president of an insurance company and is "into" race horses. They enjoy their boat and traveling. Jean and I also travel with "the girls" and have an annual 2 weeks in the sun. We have done FL, Mexico and the Bahamas. My husband Bill is a banker. Our two older boys are married. Kennedy is an attorney with one child and Richmond is in sales and has 2 children. Our youngest son Taylor graduated from Centre College in June and is in a training program in sales. I do church work, hospital work, and knit small sweaters.

Plan for Reunion '91. Love to each of you.

Before I begin, let me express our love and sympathy to Sandy Rhodes

Berglund on the loss of her husband, Don. He died suddenly on August 27th at their home in Crested Butte, CO.

It isn't possible that 12 months have passed since I last attempted this exercise! This year your postcards are filled with weddings, grandchildren, new or altered careers and exotic travels.

In the exciting career department, I just love getting updates from Susan Hayward Collins. She sends me clippings chronicling the success of daughter Suzanne's ('78) accessory business, appropriately called Briar Patch (there are four SBC alums involved in the business!) Best of all are the full color posters which feature Susan modelling many of their products. The business, begun by Suzanne in 1980, "now has 10 full time employees as well as 20 home sewers". The SBC Bookstore carries their fashion accessories, so next time you're on campus be sure to look for them. If in Greenville, SC, stop and browse at the retail boutique which is managed by Susan. A new career is apparently on the horizon for Emily Hunter Slingluff who had a brand new book on the market. Titled A Present to the Newborn, it is about the importance of parental influence, and about enjoying being a parent. Published by Letton Gooch, Inc. in Norfolk, it is available in bookstores in Virginia Beach and Norfolk as well as at Doubleday's main store in New York. It's doing very well so watch for it in your local bookstore.

Phyllis Joyner hasn't changed careers again, but she has relocated her painting studio. She finally found a loft in NYC and has settled in. She wants to hear from any and all when you're in the Big Apple. She and Jane Feltus Welch have been enjoying the city together as Jane continues to expand her theatrical career. She will winter in FL at the Asolo Theatre in Sarasota where she will appear as Lizzie in Philadelphia, Here I Come and as Louisa in Ladies in Retirement. She is there until April, so hurry on down! Not just relocation but a lifestyle upheaval of sorts shifted Dianne Verney Greenway from Greenwich, CT to Newburyport, MA this year. She moved in June but illness delayed the re-establishment of her financial services business. She has recovered completely now, loves her new location and is looking for new clients. Catherine Cage Bruns' brokerage company was bought out and is now Lomos Securities USA. She is a vice president and very excited about a much better growth potential. Ethel Green Banta continues to enjoy the bed and breakfast business in Natchez and confines her travels to the east coast, visiting her children — Kate, in her senior year at Andover; Jim, working on his MBA at Duke; Alice and Ruth, in NYC with Morgan Guaranty. Renis Siner Paton finds her real estate sale and appraisal career busier than ever. She and Sue Lawton Mobley shared a gala commencement weekend at SBC when their daughters, Polly Paton and Anne Mobley graduated. Renis wrote that their twins will graduate from Chatham Hall in 1988, so there might be another Sweet Briarite to join Catherine Cooper, who is a freshman this year. Shirley Suttill Cooper and Tom will spend more time than ever down there as they have taken on a five year commitment on the Parents Board. Shirley says they are pleased with the opportunities available to the students, especially in career counseling.

In another relocation of sorts, Marty Hedeman Buckingham moved her travel agent office into her home, with a computer link to the agency computer. She's really enjoying the freedom this gives her to work on her golf game! Linda married Peter Thomson in October; after the wedding, Marty and Dick took a 2-week trip to Morocco to rest and recover! In the same vein, Mary Boyd Murray Trussell and George were looking forward to Bermuda in October following son Walter's marriage to Aline Maxwell on September 26th. They even won the trip! And after Ellen's wedding to Powell Smith in September, Newell Bryan Tozzer spent Thanksgiving with Sue Lawton Mobley and John. Other recent weddings include: Sue Bernard Odence - son Phillip to Beth Tanner in 1986; Mitzi Streit Halla - son Brian to Johanna Daniels on May 17th; Dianne Verney Greenway - daughter Anna to Steve Gesing on May 23rd; Betty Byrne Gill Ware - son John Chaney to Shea Lurman in May; Lydia Plamp Plattenburg - son Mark in August; Jane Dildy Williams - daughter Ann to Richard Vari on October 10th; and one still to come: Mary Reed Simpson Dauge - daughter Monna in April, 1988.

There are grandchildren too numerous to mention and everyone seems to be enjoying them. Betty Sanford Molster has 3 - "a real treat!" Patty McClay Boggs says, "We love being grandparents. We now know why young people have babies! Our 6 month old grandson spends quite a bit of time with us. It's always nice knowing that he does go home!"

Betty Byrne Gill Ware is serving as a citizen member of a legislative sub-committee studying alternatives for improving waste reduction and recycling efforts. Volunteer work is still keeping Pat Kilmer Norris on her toes. She is busy with the League of Women Voters, Women's Board for Lawrence Hall School in Chicago, the Grove (a National Historic Landmark and Nature Preserve), and her church. She is also a Community Access producer for Cablenet and GVTV. Sue Bernard Odence and Larry recently built a house at Cotuit, Cape Cod. It is a good meeting place between their home in Moorestown, NJ, son Phillip in Lexington, MA and daughter Robin in Wells, ME. Larry is semi-retiring in February. Finally settled in St. Augustine, FL, Lee Fiducia Hartmann reports that her children are still single and, at present, employed! Denice, in Jacksonville, is still in mental health and has been promoted to a supervisory position. Greg is now manager of system sales for Clark and has moved to Lexington, KY, and Eric has taken a "leave" from college and is head announcer at Marineland. Lee doesn't think she's prejudiced but says he is absolutely gorgeous in his smashing white uniform! She and Ruedi occasionally see Mary Burgman Winston and Jim when they are holidaying in the area.

Charlotte Orr Moores reported on the gainful employment of 3 of their progeny — Jack, in the alumni & development office at Vanderbilt; Robert as asst. vice president at Am-south Bank of Atlanta; and Jean as admissions officer at the American College of London, England. Alone at home for the first time in 31 years, Mary Reed Simpson Daugette and Forney are slowly adjusting to the quiet. Daughter Dorsey started at Converse College this fall and loves it. The rest of the clan is not far away in Atlanta (Billy) or Birmingham (Monna and Rush) and there is another grandchild due in January (Beth). On the other hand, Jeanette Kennedy Hancock and Jimmie still have everybody in school — both boys in law school and Katherine working on a masters in social work. Mrs. Robert Lindsey, mother of Jane Lindsey Riddell who died in 1979, sends news of Jane's 3 daughters: Mary graduated from Auburn University's School of Engineering and is a captain in the Air Force; Cathy, Mary's twin, graduated from U. of Alabama and is working for Hewlett Packard in San Jose, CA; and Carol, who graduated in accounting from Spring Hill College, Mobile, AL, works for Jeffrey Steel Co. in Mobile.

In Texas, Suzy Schmid is still painting portraits and enjoying the great outdoors. In Virginia, Peggy West Valentine's long hours working in the garden paid off when their house was open for Garden Week in Richmond. Everything went well and it was really pretty — Virginia in the spring can't be beat! Jane Diddy Williams reports that she and Gretchen Armstrong Redmond had a good visit last fall with Noel Agnew Whamond, a Scottish friend from their days at the University of St. Andrews.

As far as traveling goes, I think you have hit most corners of the globe. A few of your trips have included:

Ginger Champlin Greene and Art to England and Scotland in May — '73 weeks this time — it was fun. Gail Davidson Bzare and her sister, Margery Davidson Rucker ('51) to Scotland and England in June — "Had never been to Scotland — nearly froze my tutu off!" Patty McClay Boggs and Flip to England and Scotland in September — "Methinks I should have paid more attention during English history class!" Frances Bell Shepherd and daughter Margaret to France on a Sweet Briar trip — "Margaret studied at Aix-en-Provence with the Vanderbilt program so she was especially good to have along!" Nancy Anderson Shepard and Paul to Kenya last winter — "What a breathtakingly beautiful place!" Sue Lawton Mobley and John to China and Japan last summer — "China was overwhelming. I've never seen so many smiling people!" Peggy West Valentine and Henry to Squam Lake, NH in August — "Two wonderful weeks!" Lee Fiducia Hartmann and Ruedi to Switzerland in August — "We had beautiful weather and a marvelous time visiting relatives and friends and seeing Ruedi's mother. We were amazed at how expensive things are there." Suzy Schmid into the Pecos Wilderness in NM on a backpacking trip — "It's always successful hiking in the mountains for 10 days when you know you're going to recuperate in Santa Fe!" Mitzi Streit Halla and Roman to New Zealand in November, 1986 — "We had a marvellous 2 weeks," and to China and Tibet last summer — "my fifth time!"

And I had a lovely trip to Montreal, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces in September. Along the way I had a brief but wonderful visit with Didi Stoddard, who was busy housebreaking Pythagoras, an exuberant young basset who probably weighed 75 pounds at six months. Also had a phone visit with Nancy Douthat Goss but alas, not enough time to get together. Otherwise, the only news from the great midwest is the mass "high" created in this stolid, unemotional, Scandinavian stronghold by the incredible, heart-stopping, World Champion, baseball Twins! They made believers and fans of us all — my "homer hankie" is still hanging in the front window!

Thanks for all your cards and letters — I love hearing from you — and don't forget to send your fund checks promptly.

Thanks to all of you who wrote news. There were many mini-reunions of '59ers at weddings and gatherings. Mary Harrison "Cookie" Carle, Betsy Colwill Wieggers, Di Doscher Spurdle, Alice Cary Farmer Brown and Ann Young Bloom gathered for lunch at the Waldorf for a mini-reunion. They must have had a grand time because the card is dated 12/10/86 and I just received it!

Betsy Colwill Wieggers and George bought a new retreat in Vail, CO. Son, Alex, is a freshman at Univ. of CO. Alice Cary Farmer Brown's daughter, Cary, was married in June. Cary's godmother, The Reverend Fleming Parker Rutledge assisted in the ceremony and was fantastic. Other '59ers in attendance were Elsie Prichard Carter and Judy Sorley Chalmers. Alice Cary had lunch with Susan Taylor Montague in October and reports Susan's real estate business is thriving. Glad to hear from Fleming Parker Rutledge that her life is looking brighter after a traumatic 1986. Our deepest sympathy to Fleming on the loss of her father last year. Fleming has recovered from a bad accident and is in her 7th year as assistant minister of Grace Church in Manhattan. Daughter Elizabeth, 21, has returned to a normal life after major surgery, husband Dick has a new career with Arthur Andersen and daughter Heyward was married in April. Judy Sorley Chalmers attended the wedding. Also there were Jackie Hekma Stone and Susan Taylor Montague. Judy's son Douglas, Jr., 23, is executive aide to Pete Dawkins, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate from NJ. Husband Doug and son Christopher, 17, sang with different groups all over Europe this summer. Daughter Cameron, 21, is at Rollins in FL. Judy's goddaughter, Dede Ford (daughter of Linda Knickerbocker Ford) was married in Grosse Pointe Farms, MI, in July. Dede Ulf Mayer was there also. Linda sent a wonderful picture of herself, Judy and Dede. Will find a way to share it with all of you.

Dede Ulf Mayer visited with Judy Sorley Chalmers and Val Stoddard Loring last May and spent time with Gretchen Smith Falk during a trip to the west coast in August. Dede completed her masters in counseling in May. There was a mini-reunion in Richmond last June when Mary Blair Scott Valentine's daughter, Deane, married Terrell Bowers, son of Effie Dwight Bowers ('43). Tabb Thornton Farinholt was there and her daughter, Mary Blair, was in the wedding party. Tabb's son Bart goes to Darden School at UVA to get a MBA and expects to graduate in '89. Mary Blair lives in Bryn Mawr, PA and teaches 1st grade at the Baldwin School. Tabb works at Norfolk Academy and was college counselor to 2 classmate's children, both recognized as National Merit Scholars: Chuck Burgess, son of Liz Chambers Burgess and Cameron Kitchin, son of Virginia MacKethan Kitchin.

Lizora Miller Yonce was at the Valentine wedding and reports it was a great affair. Son, Cliff, is a freshman at UVA where he pledged St. Anthony. Lizora has a small "at home" business and volunteers at the Greenwich Garden Club and the Family Center where she will become president in January. Polly Space Dunn and Lizora plan to meet on Parent's Weekend at UVA where Polly's daughter Elizabeth is a freshman. Daughter, Eleanor, is in 9th grade at a local private school. Jane Jamison Messer is planning for daughter Sarah's wedding November 7th in Indianapolis. Son James, 26, works for a publishing company. Scott is a jr. at Purdue and coaches a 7th grade basketball team. Erna Arnold Westwig is director of guidance for the Addison, NY school system. Son Erile is a freshman at Cornell. Erna stopped to see Jini Jones Dyer on her way back from Boston U. where daughter Karen is a jr. Jini is finishing a year of graduate work to obtain her teaching certificate in French. On a grant from Southern CT State Univ., Jini spent last summer in France at Univ. of Tours doing research on Eleanor of Aquitaine. Daughter Amy is a sr. at Southern Ct. Heather is with the National Trust for Historic Preservation and son, Rusty is a freshman at George Washington Univ. Jini's current avocation is hostess at the 1849 House, a "B & B" in Watertown.

Sue Hight Rountree moved to a new house in Williamsburg after 17 years in the historic section where everything was done for them. Now they're learning electrical work and all the things that go with homeownership. Jeff is at Mary Washington and son Chris is a sophomore at Holderness in Plymouth, NH. Husband Joe is director of publications for Colonial Williamsburg. Sue makes miniature reproductions of historic Williamsburg homes and will be decorating Christmas trees in the actual homes this season. Sue will co-chair the annual meeting of the Garden Club of VA in 1988. Anne Wimbish Kasanin and husband Mark went sailing in the British Virgins last spring and to Hawaii over Labor Day. After the opera season, the Kasanins plan a trip to Sicily in December. Ginny Robinson Harris completed her interior design degree and is helping husband Jerry with the interiors of his model homes in new developments. Daughter Whitney will graduate from SBC in May and son Carter has a job in Atlanta. Ginny's also taking some landscaping courses. Mary Harrison "Cookie" Cook Carle took a month's trip to China with a group, most of whom had grown up there in the 30's as children of missionaries. Daughter Rebecca, 16, spent August in France and boards at Westtown School. Cookie is busy with a computer course and "Learning Theory in Music" at graduate music department of Temple Univ. Sandy La Staiti and Edward Wright Sylvia were married in September '85. Daughter Lisa married in June '86. Son Duncan graduated from Northeastern. Daughter Laurie lives and works in Providence. Sandy's last son, Brendan, is a senior at Brown. After 12 years of teaching and guidance counseling, Sandy took a job as a probation officer which she finds extremely interesting.

Rachel Bok Goldman and Allen are feeling at home in Chicago after 2 years. They bought a weekend home in MI. Rachel is looking forward to their first grandchild by Allen's eldest son and his wife. Allen's youngest is marrying in August. Rachel's sons are single, busy and happy. Rachel forwarded a letter from Nancy Gilles ('64). In part it says, "Your class cracks me up at reunions - they are great! They run through the dorm at midnight carrying flowers; they're never out of breath or old..." After those comments you all better start practicing - we've only got 2 years to go. Jody Armbricht Bauknight has retired from teaching high school Latin. Son Bill, 28, received his Ph.D. in Chemistry and is doing research at Univ. of Iowa. Daughter Johannah, 26, graduated from Mary Baldwin and works in Atlanta. Sarah Jane Murdock Moore and Jim enjoy life in Lynchburg. Jim has retired and assists son Jim at "The Silver Pig" a N. Carolina-style barbecue restaurant which Jim, Jr. opened last year. Sally, their married daughter, is in Portland, OR where her husband is in his residency. Daughter Cathy is an SBC graduate and there are 2 Moores still in high school. Isa Mary Lowe Ziegler spent 3 weeks in France this fall. One child graduated from UC Berkeley, one is at U. of P. and one at home in high school. Marge McCollum Tillman completed her Ph.D. in Educational Psychology and continues to direct and teach in the upper and middle school program at Schenck School.

I was delighted to hear from Betsy Letzerich Boyer, an acquaintance from prep school days, who was at SBC our freshman year. Betsy, widowed in '80, married William E. Boyer in '82 and lives in Houston and Lake Charles, LA. Betsy leads a very active life and both she and Bill have a grandchild. The Boyers plan a trip to Australia and the South Pacific in January. Ann Eagles Carrell wrote of homecoming weekend at Davidson where son, William III, is very active and a member of Kappa Sigma. Davidson runs in the Carrell family; husband Bill celebrated his 30th reunion during homecoming and Bill's brother is the new president of the alumni association. Ann and Bill are still very active members of St. Mark's Church in Louisville. Jane "Puss" Moore Banks is president of College Manor Inc., a domiciliary care facility. Her son, John, is training to take her place so Puss can relax. Daughter Bunny is married and a nursing supervisor in post-surgical intensive care at Johns Hopkins. Another daughter lives on the Eastern Shore of MD and works in the computer industry. Puss and her husband, who has retired, have one child, 15, at home in high school.

Our sympathy to Judy Watts Buchanan on the death of her husband Charlie in July. Judy plans to continue her work at Johns Hopkins. Daughter Julie will graduate in May from Duke and enter Cornell Law School. Son Bill is a junior at Duke and Jack, a freshman at Stanford. Ali Wood Thompson and Travis took a "bed and breakfast" trip to Ireland in Sept. staying at local farmhouses and getting to know the people. Ali is off to Maui soon to do maintenance work on their condominium. Sue Perry Farmer and Jerry came to my 50th and Sue was the official photographer. She did a superb job. At the end of August Sue and Jerry traveled to Hong Kong and went to see son Pete in Toyko. Son Tom is in FL and Sam will graduate from Occidental in June.

Life in CA goes on. Still playing lots of golf and found a group of single golfers which has been wonderful. Daughter Elinor working for an optometrist and doing fine. Went to Chicago for a week in July; my only trip this year. Hope to go to Mexico at the end of the year. Life in the last month has been traumatic with moving out of my condo, and going into a short-term rental since my new place is not ready.

As I begin these class notes, two related thoughts come to mind: first, our 25th Reunion is rapidly approaching and all of you should have your calendars marked; second, it is at Reunion that our new class secretary will be chosen. We have been known to appoint someone who is absent, so if you don't want to succeed me in this challenging job, be sure you are on campus May 27 to 29!

Once again I will share news in alphabetical order by maiden names. Not all of my information came by postcard. The alumnae office sent me an article by Susan Alexander that appeared in the monthly, "Pipe Line Industry." Susan is with Bechtel, Inc. in Houston where she concentrates on pipe line economic and engineering feasibility studies and related computer applications. After majoring in math at Sweet Briar, Susan earned her MBA from the University of Houston.

Katharine Blackford Collins is now committed to full-time coverage of southwestern Wyoming for the Casper Star-Tribune. It is her dream job come true, working in her office at home sending stories via computer modem to Casper. "No specialization on this beat, which includes murders, scandals, cattle drives, cattle rustling, public lands and natural resources." Gail Blanke Cusick is a VP in communications and public relations for Avon, "thoroughly utilizing my English major experience and Yale Drama School training, believe it or not..." Gail and Jim live in New York with daughters Kate, 12 and Abigail, 5, who both attend the Chapin School.

May Bowers Morris's daughter Tina Gregg is a junior at Sweet Briar. Son David is a 10th grader in Charleston. May is a part-time teacher of chemistry and general science and her husband Donald is rector of two Episcopal Churches in SC. May works with Tempe Parker occasionally. Laura Lee Brown Deters saw Cecil Collins Scanlan for the first time in 25 years at Avon Old Farms School where they both have sons enrolled. Laura Lee's daughter is a freshman at Denison with Mandy McCormick Cronin's son.

Pat Calkins Wilder has only one child still at home, Kelly, who is a high school junior. Chris is at Wake Forest and Alan is living and working in Rochester. Pat is still very involved with horse activities and enjoys photography school at RIT. Pat is definitely coming to Reunion so we'll make her the official photographer. Glenda Carlson Goodman also hopes to be at Reunion. She remarried 3 years ago to a professor at SMU and she works with him in his investment research business. Her 3 children are out of the nest now. Two are in college and the youngest is in high school in Singapore.

Lynn Carol Blau has just completed two years as president of the Connecticut Opera Guild and has gone from the volunteer world to the "real" world in commercial interior decorating. Her daughter Betsy is a junior at Georgetown and son Alexander is beginning the college-search. Anne Carter Brothers has had more time since both boys are in college. Much of it has been spent co-chairing our Reunion Gifts Committee along with Nancy Dixon Brown. Anne urges everyone to come back in May to find out how much we have in common!

Ginger Cates Mitchell wrote of a hectic time: they sold their first and only house, packed up 17 years accumulation and moved a few miles away - Ginger all the while recovering from major knee surgery. A trip to Hawaii hastened her "physical and mental rehabilitation." Jennifer is spending a semester in Florence and will return as a junior to U. Ga. Mandy is a senior at St. Mary's in Raleigh and Edward is 13 and "into all that age entails."

Lyn Clark Pegg responded to the challenge of a 25 year retrospect: "... brings to consciousness a bog-gling passage - one 23-year marriage, 2 grown children, over a dozen jobs in 6 different occupations, 10 geographical moves to 5 states, and the blessings of dozens of treasured friends along the way. Life has been rich and full and I'm ready for 25 more such years." Cheri Fitzgerald Burchard's daughter Juliette is a junior at Stony Brook School on Long Island, son Jason loves ice hockey, husband Russ is an Episcopal priest and she is an interior designer.

Stevie Fontaine Keown and family have moved to Chattanooga where Mark is with the CBS TV affiliate. Lee Kucewicz Parham and Kathy Caldwell Patten are her neighbors. Stevie will not be at Reunion since there are two graduations in May: Clarke from McCallie School and Jennifer from UVA. Jennifer will be married in August to David Fletcher of Charlotte. Prue Gay Stuhr encourages everyone to attend Reunion thinking of it as a "come as you are weekend, no need to change." Prue is busy training her second dalmation puppy for obedience trials and shows. Judy Gutches Needham is coming in May, stealing time from a new business in printing. Her daughter Jill is at Sweet Briar, spending part of her junior year in London. Son Mike is a freshman at U. of Texas and Jess is a high school freshman. Judy is doing volunteer work for a home for abused teenagers and chairing a tennis exhibition benefit with Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert.

Sue Jones Cansler, who will also be at Reunion, is working for a computer software company - construction accounting and job casting programs, no less. Sue and Chuck are back in Atlanta where Chuck has his own management consulting firm. Son Chuck is a senior at Georgia Tech. Judy Johnson Varn is also in Atlanta. Their twins have split up for the first time. Lilly is a junior at Westminster and Robert is a new junior at Baylor in Chattanooga-both doing great and starting to think about college. Bob has a new job with Atlanta Capital Management, an investment counseling firm. Lee Kucewicz Parham, who like Stevie Keown, has a son graduating from McCallie, will probably miss Reunion. Those of us with children in college will appreciate what Lee wrote about her older son:

"Carter is a junior at U.T.C. He helped Mercer to achieve their party school status his freshman year - we suggested he could party at home for 1/2 the price!" Lee is president of the Chattanooga Symphony and Opera Association and still runs her Christmas store.

I had a long, lovely letter from Priscilla Langley Pay which I would like to share in full, but space prohibits. Her daughter Sarah is a bilingual secretary working for a finance company in London. Michael, 17, is in the sixth form at a local (Sussex) Public School studying geography, archaeology and business. He does a lot of music and has toured with his school choir and orchestra to Tours and Chartres Cathedral. He has also sung as bass soloist several times in St. Paul's and Canterbury Cathedrals. Andrew is 15 and at Gordonstoun School in Scotland where Priscilla says he spends most of his time climbing, sailing and skiing and fits in academic pursuits when necessary! Priscilla works for husband Tony "on a fairly casual basis as his accounts clerk for both his legal and funeral businesses." Her farming business is down to the odd cow and a few sheep! Priscilla and Tony are definitely planning on being at Reunion. She says "it is a great privilege to belong to Sweet Briar and I look forward to renewing my acquaintance wherever possible."

Anne Leavell Reynolds is looking forward to a chance for catching up with friends at Reunion, school teaching, medical meetings and soccer tournaments willing! Son George is a first year student at UVA, Nancy is a junior at Haward and Stuart a seventh grader. Anne teaches math full-time at Guilford (CT) High School. Keitt Matheson Wood will miss Reunion because daughter Helen will be graduating from SMU. Keitt and Frank were able to attend his 20th medical school reunion this year.

Mandy McCormick Cronin wrote about Peter being a freshman at Denison with Laura Lee's daughter. Son David is a junior at Woodberry Forest. After 10 years of teaching first and second grades in Amherst County, Mandy has become Coordinator of the Gifted and Volunteers programs in Nelson County. She says it is an exciting and challenging change. Mandy is still active with beagle hunting, serving as the National Beagle Club's delegate to the American Kennel Club. Nancy McDowell Fairbanks has a new position as Director of Children's Services at the Community Mental Health Center in Hartford. Her son Ted is a senior at Occidental and twins Kathy and Andy are sophomores at Roanoke College and Wesleyan respectively. Nancy is planning to be at Reunion.

Jean Meyer Aloe took her 10 and 12 year old daughters to Sweet Briar for a visit last spring. She's planning ahead! Jean is active in PTA and works part-time in the business office of a boys school. She hopes to be at Reunion. As does Mary Lou Morton Seilheimer who is chairman of the board of Highland School where son Charles is a 6th grader. He enjoys tennis, soccer and riding. Anne is a freshman at Madeira, president of her class and on the riding team. Mary Lou is also president of the Warrenton Garden Club and her house, Leeton Forest, was open for Garden Week in Virginia last spring.

Lucy Otis Anderson must have been too busy to send me news, but in Priscilla Pay's good letter I learned the following: "We managed to see Lucy and family when she was on her grand tour last summer. She belongs to the Shirley family who were celebrating their 900th anniversary because they are the only family who can be traced straight down the male line to the Domesday Book! They had a hectic schedule but we just managed a visit and went to the Piltown Man Pub. I'm sure it was a most exciting tour culminating with fireworks and banquet at the family seat in Warwickshire." Elizabeth Randolph Lewis's 4th child, 3rd daughter, entered UVA this year. The Lewis's are four for four at THE University. Elizabeth and John have taken a Wilderness Encounter class, are into spelunking and climbing. She is also very involved in church, woman's club and garden club. Elizabeth will be at Reunion. Also Harriet Reese Jensen who will be in this country for daughter Marianne's graduation from Dickinson College. Both of Harriet's boys are in college in Denmark. Harriet and Jorgen, who farm and breed horses and Cairn Terriers, had dinner with Betty and Alvin Cates last year when the Cates were in Copenhagen.

Since Renee Regen Sage cannot be with us for reunion I will share her postcard in full! 'G'day y'all! 25 years!! 2 marriages, 2 children, 2 step-children, several jobs and a new country of residence. I would love to catch up with all the Class of 63 at the reunion. However, I had my trip around the world in 1987 and due to work commitments I will not be able to return in May. I have been living in a suburb of Adelaide, the capital of South Australia, for more than 15 years. I have seen many changes "Down Under" and am quite content living and working and raising children here. My step-son James, 23, has one more year to become qualified as an architect; my son Chris, 22, is in the Australian Army, training in artillery and, he hopes, parachuting. He will be discharged in one year. My step-daughter Toni, 21, has just completed a degree in Economics and Accounting and begins a new job in January. My daughter Amanda, 18, will begin a B.A. course in March, perhaps in archeology. My husband Ed is the director of the Haematology-Oncology Dept. at a large teaching hospital in Adelaide, and enjoys raising ferns as his hobby. I have been working in the field of Special Education - everything from juvenile delinquents in a lock-up setting to behavior-problem teenagers, and now as a Special Ed. support teacher in a local elementary school. My hobby is painting which I am presently doing on silk. South Australia has wonderful food, wines, opals, beaches, a beautiful climate and cosmopolitan atmosphere. I would be happy to show you around if you ever find yourself this far away."

Virginia Schanzer de Laureal, having lived on and off in Dublin, Ireland, for the last 15 years, is now back in New Orleans. Her 2 children are ages 23 and 16. Betty Stanly Cates and Alvin had another exciting year of travel, beginning with a 3-week expedition to the Antarctic, South Georgia and the Falkland Islands aboard the Society Explorer. To make up for the rigors of the expedition they went to Europe in May, the highlight of Denmark being the visit with Harriet and Jorgen. In the fall they took the Orient Express from Zurich to Istanbul. Betty sent me pictures for the Reunion scrapbook but, unfortunately, will be in Australia in May. Perhaps she and Renee can get together for their own mini-reunion.

Allie Stemmons Simon is now vice chairman of the Boards of Directors and Overseers of Sweet Briar. She has spent a busy year heading up the College's strategic planning and I'm sure all of you read the grand report that outlined the results of her hard work. In Allie's travels she has had good visits with Lucy Anderson, Sallie Yon Williams, Lee Parham, Keitt Wood and was part of a gathering that ended up in the wee small hours at my house in October with Sallie, Nancy Brown and Nancy Wood as we began planning for Reunion. Allie said the highlight of her summer was a 7-day Mediterranean cruise on the Sea Goddess - truly the height of luxury.

The alumnae office sent me the following: "We have learned that Brook Conner, son of David and Christine Strous Conner, has been named one of 500 outstanding young American students to become a semifinalist in the U.S. Presidential Scholars Program. The program identifies annually the most distinguished and accomplished graduating high school seniors in the nation. Brook is graduating from St. Albans School in Washington, DC. How proud they must all be!" Robin Swaim Davis shares time between her homes in Memphis and New York, plotting and planning music projects. She re-learned French last year and said that her rigorous Sweet Briar background stood her in good stead.

Susan Terjen Bernard wrote that last May Marta Sweet Colangelo and Betsy Flanders Spencer, the Godmothers, came to Norfolk for daughter Jean's wedding. Susan said they did such a fabulous job they've been signed up to act as Godmothers for four more Norfolk weddings! Susan can fill us in more at Reunion. Nancy Wood lives in southwestern Virginia in the country with lots of dogs and cats.

She is a social worker at a large state hospital and occasionally gets to Lynchburg where we meet. Jane Yardley Page is now Lower School Director of Breck School in Minneapolis where she has served as 3rd and 4th grade teacher, department head, assistant division head and acting Lower School Director.

My family is fine. Son Reed graduates from Bridgewater College this spring and plans to be married the same weekend! Elizabeth is a junior at Davidson. I am still at the Lynchburg Fine Arts Center and Pete is now full-time with the Public Health Department. Our biggest activity this year was adding a wing to our house. Those of you with similar experiences know what that involves. Since Pete and I moved from Sweet Briar to Lynchburg I have had to renege on my invitation to host the Class Picnic. Therefore we (the October mini-reunion group) have made Susan Lehman, the Sweet Briar chaplain, an honorary member of our class. She was a classmate and sorority sister of Lynn Schradin Bischel the year Lynn was at Miami University in OH, so she qualifies. Susan has invited us to have the picnic at Lancaster House where she lives. Since we had our picnic there when Mother lived in Lancaster House we will feel at home. I look forward to seeing each and every one of you then.

The consensus is that Reunion was the greatest fun since 1967 and that 1992 cannot come fast enough. Fall came too fast for many who had vacations to take, kids to ready for school and college (yikes!) and jobs to round things out.
